She said most parents were also dissatisfied with the "impoverished curriculum" of public primary schools.

For some, she said, this meant no science is taught in the lower grades or that the French program is poor and taught by Europeans instead of French-speaking Canadians.

For others it meant that art and music are not seen as an important part of the regular curriculum.

"Most of us feel that art in particular is an important part of learning, by teaching the child to express himself freely."

Only two months old, and still searching for the right degree of chaos, the Free School must, to comply with government regulations for private schools, have 60 per cent of its teachers certified and offer a minimum provincial curriculum.

Beyond that, the school's three teachers—two certified and Mrs. Palmer, a high school graduate—are on their own. The children are free to leave the classroom if they aren't interested by the material being taught.

In the classroom, children and teachers talk freely and as equals. The traditional image of the teacher as an authoritarian figure with a monopoly on knowledge is played down.

"Damn," says a matter-of-fact small voice in art class, held daily in an upstairs room decorated with crayon drawings and the notice that "My mother goes to acting classes."

"Damn. Bill, I need more clay."

Bill is teacher Bill Heald, 27.

The voice belongs to one of the six or eight—the number varies from minute to minute —children who are making clay tablets to tell a tale of ancient Greece and Mesopotamia. Part of the exercise is to create a hieroglyphic alphabet.

"We can all chip in and get some more," another child suggests.

"But I haven't got a penny . . ."

A third child interrupts to ask: "What other animals did the Mesopotamians have besides cattle and horses?" A fourth says: "You know, Bill, this isn't really art, it's history."

Downstairs teacher Barbara Fraser, 22, sits on the floor in the music and geography room reading to two children, the amid a collection of hamsters, potted plants, carefully named leaves and goldfish.

Across the hall in the library two children play with a jigsaw puzzle, while two others listen to a third read from a library book. The notice board informs "anybody who wants to come" that there will be a Romeo and Juliet play practice that day.

"We want the children to learn," Mrs. Palmer said. "But we don't so much teach them as help them to work things out and make sure they get the practice which relates it all to life.

"One thing you have to avoid is the idea that everyone is totally free—that you let the kids in the front door and go to it. That doesn't work—they get bored and they get to fighting.

"There has to be far more co-operation here than in a regularly scheduled school. As one parent says, it's not chaos we want but anarchy, where everyone has total self-responsibility to himself and to the group."

Ray Affleck, a Montreal architect, says he and his wife are "supremely pleased with the human results" they see in their 12-year-old daughter after a few months in the school.

"We have witnessed a very great change in her. Now she seems to leave for school in the morning with great pleasure and coolly, instead of sneaking around with the clock ticking and bells ringing."

Mr. Affleck says his daughter "describes things more—she never used to talk about school at all—and she is beginning to discover things, like how moral things are related to social and historical things."

"The advantages of the school are so far most strongly expressed at the social level, but I would think the advantages will also be good at the academic level. One hopes that in a freer school children will learn the pleasure of learning and of discipline.

"But I think the learning will be very uneven—a child may study math and ignore art or vice versa—and this, I think, is good.

"The industrial notion that a school can turn out a product equally proficient in math, skiing and poetry now is being superseded in our society by a post-industrial emphasis on pluralism and diversity.

"This phenomenon of a free school is pertinent to the changes we are going through."

First-aiders Urged to Report Beatings

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Reporting incidents of "battered babies" to the proper authorities should be a duty of St. John Ambulance brigade first-aiders, Inez Smith of nearby Wolfville told fellow first-aiders at graduation ceremonies at the Nova Scotia Sanatorium here. "You may not want to become involved but don't let a frightened child die," said Mrs. Smith, who led her 20-member graduation class with a mark of 96.

Fruit and Nut Bread from Christmas Leftovers

By MARY MOORE

We were trying to be really helpful, (I hope you have noticed my recent economical recipes.) How could we help you (and ourselves) use up those bits and pieces of left-over fruit cake ingredients that are cluttering pantry shelves?

Fruit breads are always popular with you and most of them freeze well, which is a welcome dividend.

On my shelves I found leftover from my Christmas baking, raisins, coconut and pecans. Other fruits and nuts may be used (see below) and none will sink in this fruit bread batter.

This batter goes together quickly.

FRUIT and NUT BREAD
(9 x 5")

2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
1 tbsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. mace (or nutmeg)
¾ cup any combination raisins, currants, candied peel, glace cherries or pineapple or coconut. (I used raisins and coconut)
½ cup whole or broken walnuts or pecans
2 large eggs
½ tsp. vanilla
¼ cup melted margarine or butter
1 cup milk

Into a large mixing bowl sift the sifted flour with the sugar, baking powder, salt and mace (or nutmeg). Stir in the ¾-cup of combination of dried or glace fruits of your choice. Add nuts. Now without beating them first add eggs, then vanilla and cooled melted margarine or butter and mix to break up eggs. Then add milk and stir only enough to blend ingredients. Do not overstir. Turn into buttered 9 x 5" loaf pan lined on bottom with buttered wax paper. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 60 to 70 min. — time difference depends on whether you use a Pyrex loaf pan or not. If your loaf is baked in a glass pan the baking time is reduced to 58-60 min. Cool on cake rack.* Slices and freezes perfectly.

A real prize for fruit bread hunters.

Ann Landers

Ann Apologizes; Reverses Her Advice

DEAR READERS: Pass the humble pie, or the crow, or whatever you want to call it. Ann Landers has her fork ready. There's nothing like 54 million daily readers to help a girl on her toes.

Every now and then I reverse my advice, usually because the readers have a wiser answer than I was wrong. And so it was in the case of the mother who found a collection of nude pictures in a 7-year-old son's bed. She wrote to say she had cured her 17-year-old son by pasting the nudes on the living room wall and shaming him. "That," she crowed, "ended his career as an art collector."

ANN LANDERS

I thought it was ingenious and amusing, and I said so. Hundreds of readers let me know it wasn't funny. Hundreds more said it was a destructive thing to do to a 17-year-old boy. They said the lad's behavior was normal and Mom should have kept her hot little hands off the pictures and said nothing.

The following letter is a fairly representative example of what made me change my advice.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The mother who discovered pictures of nudes under her son's bed and plastered them on the living room wall was guilty of a cruel and insensitive act. Your applauding her left me disappointed and mystified. I have read your column for several years and I know you are not a cruel and insensitive woman. I can only conclude that you were unthinking in this instance.

It is not easy for a boy to deal with adolescent sex drives. Add to this the problem of a mother who makes him feel guilty and you have a very mixed-up kid.

Here is a mother who, while snooping, no doubt, seized on what she thought was a challenge in the form of "other women." She then displayed her find in a manner calculated to increase his guilt and here his most secret emotions. Because the boy was embarrassed when the pictures down, she thought she had taught him something and "won a victory."

All she did was fill the boy with resentment for her lack of consideration for his private feelings.

Too bad you didn't tell his mother, and all mothers, that collecting girlie pictures is not uncommon, that such pictures are a source of stimulation for immature males and when the boy grows up to be a man he no longer needs his paper dolls. — BEEN THERE.

DEAR BEEN: Thank you for setting me straight. You, of course, are right and I appreciate your letter.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll bet you've heard about lots of married men who lie and say they are single. But have you ever heard of a single man who lies and says he is married? Well, that's my problem.

I met Doug when I was working in this small diner. I really fell for him even though he told me he was married the first night we went out. When I tried to talk about his wife, he always changed the subject. Last week I met a woman who worked in his store. She says Doug is not married and he never has been. What do you make of this? I love the guy and would marry him if he asked. He doesn't know I'm on to his made-up story. What should I do? — RED-HEADED HASH SLINGER.

DEAR RED: Sling the liar out of your life before he makes hash out of you. Doug doesn't consider you a candidate for marriage which is what he tried to say on that very first date.

Rev. C. J. Betts New Pastor At Reserve

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — Due to the absence through illness of the High Rev. K. C. Evans, Bishop of Ontario the induction and institution of Rev. C. J. Betts in Christ Church last Thursday evening was conducted by the Venerable W. L. Simmons, Archdeacon of Ontario and rector of St. Paul's Magdalene Church in Napanee. He was assisted by the Rev. Rural Dean Tett of St. Thomas' Church in Belleville and by Rev. John Neal of St. Mark's Church, Tyendinaga.

Mr. Betts was inducted not only as the rector of the Tyendinaga Parish, but also on petition of the Mohawk Chief and Council of Tyendinaga, as the chaplain of Her Majesty's Loyal Mohawks. This office is unique, dating back to the days of Queen Anne when the Mohawks owned and occupied broad lands in the Mohawk Valley. These lands they forfeited when they lived up to their title "loyal Mohawks," for they fought on the British side during the American Revolution, and were forced to flee as Loyalists, bringing with them the communion silver which Queen Anne had given them.

In his sermon, the Rev. Robert MacRae of Toronto dwelt on the general concern of the church on the native peoples, and applied it to the people of the Tyendinaga Parish. "It must be a joint ministry of priest and people," he affirmed.

In acknowledgment of Mr. Betts as chaplain of the Mohawks, Chief Earl Hill presented him with a crafted and inscribed bronze key.

During the service the wardens presented to Earle J. Brant and Arnold Brant large-sized prayer books, in acknowledgment of their services during the seven months following the death of the Rev. F. F. Downing. Earle Brant is the catechist and senior lay reader of the parish and Arnold Brant is the junior lay reader.

In spite of the bitter cold, the church was filled for the service, with visiting clergymen from various areas, as well as lay people.

A reception was held afterwards in the Guild Hall in the Council House, where Chief Hill and all the members of his council were their native buckskin dress.

ST. MARK'S ACW

MARMORA — St. Mark's ACW church group met at the rectory in Marmora recently. After all the reports were given it was noted that there was a fair bank balance. Projects were card parties, suppers, catering for weddings and anniversary dinners and an auction sale. Flowers and fruit were sent to the sick and shut - ins, other donations were sent to Camp Hyanto and the wardens for expenses.

Mrs. J. Barlow thanked Mrs. Saunders for opening her home.

'Aggressive Nature' Described by Labor Leader's Wife

MONTREAL (CP) — Simone Chartrand, wife of volatile labor leader Michel Chartrand, says she has spent most of her married life explaining her husband's "aggressive public nature" to friends, their seven children and even school authorities.

Mrs. Chartrand's unceasing defense of Michel began in 1941 when she defied her parents to marry him.

"My mother didn't come to our wedding," she said in an interview.

"Our parish priest refused to marry us and my father, who liked Michel, wanted me I was marrying a man who would never sacrifice principle for money and that I would have to give up material things for his causes."

Material possessions were never lacking in Simone's childhood home. As the only daughter of a judge, the late Amedee Monet, she "had everything" and was expected to marry someone in a similar category.

"My only brother was a lawyer and the family expected me to marry a lawyer. Had I married one of those lawyers they wanted me to marry, I suppose today I would be the wife of a cabinet minister. I'm convinced of that."

"But I would have become a snob and had I been giving conferences as I am now there wouldn't have been any union members among the audience.

"I thought of Michel as an extraordinary man and I was not changed my mind even after 28 years of marriage. People consider him infrangible now . . . imagine what he was like at 25!"

Even after their marriage, her family did not give up hope that Michel could be softened.

"My family kept suggesting that Michel should concentrate on trying to make money instead of trying to change the world. They kept asking me why he always had to lose in politics. They even suggested he should move over to the winning side if he wanted to remain in politics."

Her husband's ideals have been questioned by the children too. She said they are curious when Michel's name appears in the newspaper, as has been the case frequently.

Mr. Chartrand, president of the Montreal council of the 225,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, is an avowed socialist who wants French made the working language in Quebec province.

In early December he had a charge of sedition against him dismissed by the courts. It arose from a speech he made in Quebec City during a wave of demonstrations to protest the provincial government's language legislation. The court ruled there was no evidence of sedition.

Mrs. Chartrand herself often thrusts herself into active political work.

She helped organize a group of 150 women who marched on the provincial legislature during Grey Cup weekend to protest the city's anti-demonstration by-law. They were chained together, bounced into a paddy wagon and taken to jail, to be released later on bail.

"I always think of myself as Mrs. Simone Chartrand," she said. "I never hesitate in giving up my identity. Nor did Michel want to expect that. I came in for my share of criticism too, never forget that."

Being her own woman has included a career as a free-lance journalist and taking evening university courses.

"Michel would baby-sit or pay for a sitter. My family and friends criticized me for that. They could not understand why I wasn't content to be a wife and mother".

Brushing away their displeasure, Mrs. Chartrand, now a CEC employee, became even more active politically as her children, now 27, 26, 25, 24, 22, 18 and 15, grew older.

"We can't ask for equality unless we have the qualifications. How else does a housewife become qualified? I learned about civic responsibilities through groups such as La Federation des Femmes, which I founded, and the Voice of Women. If women don't join such groups, they retain the intelligence of minors."

On the other hand, "I think today's woman is so determined to have a 50-50 partnership she sometimes forgets it is up to a woman to be flexible."

"I also try to impress upon them the importance of being friends with a man before marriage. Michel and I were friends first and friends we remain."

Simone has had to exercise tact at various times during the 28 years, both with her children and husband, whose approach to problems is different and more volatile.

"My nature is more conciliatory. It comes of being a woman and bearing children, I think. Yes, we have disagreed in public. I've been at meetings where I have risen to say Mr. Chartrand, I disagree—and Michel was the president.

"His approach is always being described as fiery and I do not consider that an exaggeration. Often I have said to him 'Why didn't you say it in such and such a way' and he replies 'But that would have been Simone Chartrand speaking, not Michel.'"

She laughed when asked about the touchy language situation in Quebec.

"Michel has no animosity against the English as such. He is against the establishment. If the establishment is English, Jewish or French, . . . But I agree his approach at times is terribly potent. At times he sounds fanatical."

All seven of their children have learned to speak English.

"I say bravo to a person who can speak three or four languages. But it was Michel's influence as much as mine that made our children learn English. I think people misunderstand him when he pleads for the right of the majority. He is not denying the rights of the minority.

"I have a horror of prejudice, and none has been tolerated in our house.

"Our basic beliefs are the same. We are socialists. I'm less aggressive and I would take a more conciliatory approach but as he says, I'm Simone, not Michel. I think the difference in temperament was good for our marriage. Wouldn't it have been terrible had we both been that aggressive!"

Newlyweds Honored

A shower party was held Saturday evening Jan. 17 at the River Valley W. I. centre in honor of the newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heasman (nee Judy Cosbey).

Master of ceremonies was Jack Bush, Brian Cosbey contributed several accordion selections.

Johnny Bush gave his school speech; Lisa Morrow and Norman Rosebush each contributed violin selections with Mrs. Philip Cosbey giving piano accompaniment.

Robert Cosbey rendered piano and harmonica - music and John Craighead showed slides of the Heasman wedding and scenic views of his own wedding trip to the Atlantic Coast.

Fred and Judy were given seats of honor and Harold Bush read an address of appreciation. Several gifts were presented by Glenn Bush, Hadley Richardson and John Craighead.

The committee in charge served refreshments afterwards.

Guest Speaker Rev. M. McLeod Speaks on Religion at Meeting

Rev. M. McLeod of Rednecsville gave the address at the first meeting of the new year for the Albert College Guild held at the Manor. Outgoing officers presented reports and the newly-elected officers assumed their duties.

In her closing message Mrs. Hugh McKay thanked her executive for the loyal support and welcomed the incoming president, Mrs. Earl Fleming to the chair.

Mrs. C. Smith made a presentation, to Mrs. McKay and expressed the appreciation of the members for her faithful service to the guild.

Mrs. Smith's theme for the worship service was "Beginnings". The group was reminded of two that should have priority: "Begin the year with God and begin the day in meditation with Him."

Mrs. L. Hudgins introduced Rev. McLeod. The message dealt with "Religion — an important part of life." Mr. McLeod stressed that religion is not an emergency ration. Rather, it must be a daily experience.

On behalf of the guild, Mrs. G. E. Thomas thanked the speaker.

For the social hour Miss Daisy Young and Mrs. Hugh McKay presided at the tea table.

U.C.W. Meeting

DESERONTO UCW

DESERONTO — Officers of the Deseronto United Church Women installed at last Thursday's general meeting are almost the same as those of last year. For the general body the president is Mrs. Rockwell Hawley, secretary is Mrs. R. S. Boyce, treasurer, Mrs. Harold Transue, supply secretary, Mrs. Gladys Gould, and flower convener, Mrs. Sid Browne. Unit leaders were also named.

Mrs. Hawley, in charge of the meeting, spoke of the success of the past year, and attributed it to on - operation. Rev. William Handley before installing the officers, also voiced his appreciation of the work accomplished, and looked ahead to 1970. He especially urged co - operation with other denominations at every opportunity.

Mrs. Transue gave the annual financial report with reference to the annual bazaar and tea.

Mrs. Hawley drew attention to the February 3 meeting of the Bay of Quinte Presbytery which will be held in the Deseronto United Church. There will be afternoon sessions, and the U.C.W. will serve dinner. She also noted that the U.C.W. Presbyterial would be held in Grace Church in Napanee, with an open evening session Wednesday, February 4 and meetings the following day.

Mrs. Thomas Jackson gave a humorous reading from a new book in the public library and all enjoyed an hour of fellowship and a variety of desserts for refreshments.

Moral Attack

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

QUEENSBORO WI

Queensboro branch of the Women's Institute held their Jan. meeting in the WI hall on Wednesday evening, Jan. 14. The meeting began at 6.30 with a potluck supper. Mrs. William Cassidy acted as hostess. There were 13 members and three visitors present.

After the supper Mrs. McMurray, president, took charge. The flower and box committee reported having sent roses to the senior citizens at the two local homes and they also sent candy to patients in hospitals in Kingston. It was decided to buy coat racks for the hall and Mrs. Lockley was to order them. Current events were given by Mrs. K. Cassidy and a reading by Mrs. Declair. Mrs. McMurray introduced the guest speaker, Miss Mary MacEachern, home economist from Stirling who spoke on basic home making programs for Women's Institute members. She also discussed training schools and discussed how the members could help 4-H home making clubs.

The meeting was then closed.

Surveying Goes On

Surveying is another all-weather chore, but increasingly its results are seen in year-round projects, undeterred by winter. Belleville public works team on current project are (left) Bradley Lee, Zane Plumb, Bill Burgess.

Weather No Obstacle

Winter Works at High Level Here

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

It only takes a glance to reveal the Quinte district is in the grip of the bitterest Canadian winter in years.

A slightly long look in the same area also shows how Canadians are coming to grips with their winter.

Winter in the outdoors is no blessing. But, it's not the economic bogey it once was.

Evidence of this can be seen on a variety of outdoor work projects now current in the Belleville area. Some, already under way when the cold closed in, are continuing despite the weathers. Others began with winter.

Because of the city's sudden expansion, Bellevillians can see this phenomenon in full swing for the first time.

The country never really shut down in winter. There was always the need to keep basic services, at least, operating.

But the outdoors that once seemed the exclusive work terrain of utilities' linesmen, railroad crews, hardy survey teams, now has become the bailiwick of more and more labor forces.

Factories apartments, service establishments are in various stages of construction around the city. The projects are continuing, almost oblivious of the bleak surrounding landscape in the grasp of polar-bear temperatures.

Winter unemployment for Ontario is up 27,900 show statistics of the Unemployment Insurance Commission regional offices in Belleville — from 125,600 in December 1968 to 153,548 in December 1969.

Current statistics for the Belleville area were not immediately available.

However, a Canada Manpower official says he has "not seen the usual winter buildup of unemployment" in the city.

The situation "is the best in the last five years," he adds.

There seems to be no substantial surplus on the market this year."

By happy coincidence, the UIC itself is taking up some of the slack, he says. Its new regional offices needs close to 200 casual workers to the end of March.

But, says the Manpower official, the fact that winter no longer means an automatic shutdown in the outdoors also is a major factor.

Winter No Different

Keeping railroads operational in teeth of Canadian winter is essential service. Here, Belleville CN worker William Milks clears snow, ice from line switch. Such necessary tasks once had virtual monopoly on winter work. Now scene is changing, as construction industry challenges weather.

In All Weathers

Public utilities lineman on the job in Belleville yesterday, is symbol of year-round, all-weather service. However, outdoors is not as exclusive for workers as it once was.

Youth Joined Community Through Family Y Work

There once was a youth who watched for water at the Belleville Family "Y" and ended up a councillor and instructor and is there to this day.

That's the story of Brian Hallam, 20, a Grade 13 student at Quinte Secondary who has worked at the Belleville Family YMCA for approximately a year.

And since Brian's unlikely beginning at the organization he has "done a little bit of everything."

At present he is an instructor in speed swimming and trampolining, two classes he is able to teach without endangering his success as a student at Quinte Secondary.

Now he is also a member of the program director's organization at the YMCA.

But it is his beginnings at the "Y" that form an interesting story.

He had been in Belleville only two days, when manpower phoned him with a temporary job. His chore was to locate the drain pipes at the YMCA and learn whether the drains went into the storm cellar or the sewers.

So Brian went witching for the pipes and after a couple of hours of searching he located five pipes joined together in a mass.

He then dug down 15 feet, trying to locate a master shut off valve. Instead he found the stops for the five pipes and completed his job.

At the same time, the YMCA began a day camp session and asked Brian if he would be a councillor. When he consented he became part of the "Y" family.

After his councilling at day camps, he took over charge of Opus Teens, another YMCA activity on a volunteer basis. He also became a lifeguard at the pool.

Then he switched over to controller, but when he started school, could only fit in the trampoline and speed swimming classes.

And but for the use of a witching stick, things might have been different for Brian, a new resident of the city.

"I managed to meet kids," he said. "I met kids from this side of the city and the middle of the city as well as from the west side."

And nothing is as important as "making quite a few friends quickly" when you're a stranger to a new city.

"I still get to meet people, and that's right up my line."

He added that the board should issue a policy statement clearly defining its views on administration of first aid.

"Teachers are concerned greatly about their legal position and liability regarding the application of first aid and possible errors in treatment," the report read. "To an extent, some appear to be disinclined to apply "treatment at all and would prefer to leave it to medically qualified personnel. Others have been told to do nothing but apply green soap."

The consultant noted that in cases of severe arterial bleeding or electrocution "immediate and knowledgeable attention must be given."

Fairman Again Heads Committee

Everett Fairman of Belleville is again chairman of the Advisory Vocational Committee of the Hastings county board of education. His election last night was unanimous.

Ronald Lee, a non - trustee appointee to the committee, was unanimously elected vice-chairman.

One of two standing committees of the board, (the other is the committee for retarded children) the AVC is composed of three trustees and two appointed members representing business and industry.

The committee's function to advise on supplies and equipment in the commercial and technical departments of schools has altered somewhat under county - wide boards of education.

With the principal now considered autonomous within his own school, money for supplies and equipment is given to him in a lump sum, to be allocated by him to those departments proving need.

F. John Follis of Bancroft said some principals "shifted allocations around last year without consulting their department heads and this was a cause of dissension with technical department heads".

After some discussion of the AVC's role under the new system of allocating funds, the committee accepted a definition of its function as outlined by John Forbes of Trenton.

"If, after the money is allocated in bulk to the school, and the principal and his department heads decide on the allocation, the technical department heads still have a kick they can protest to the AVC, which will in turn protest to the board."

Man Hurt In Crash

A two-car crash at the intersection of Highways 62 and 14 west of Foxboro last night sent one man to hospital with face injuries and possible rib fractures.

Police say Johann Nissen, 51, of Codrington, was hurt when his car was struck broadside by an automobile driven by David Watt, 79, of RR 1, Foxboro.

Total damage was estimated at $1,200.

Runacres on Education

Space and Time Keys in School Theory

"Education is changing," stated Hastings County director of education Eric Runacres, guest speaker at the Ameliasburg Township Home and School Association meeting held at Kente School last night. Approximately 40 people heard Mr. Runacres speak on Trends in Education.

"The role of the board of education, superintendents and teachers, parents and the community is undergoing change. The new face of education is recognized as being a composite of theory and its application. The degree to which theory and practice overlap is the measure of success achieved."

Mr. Runacres emphasized that education is continual, beginning with the child's early years, and ideally, continuing as long as he lives. Classroom instruction is much more flexible than in the past and the trend toward flexibility is reflected in the use of classroom time and space. No longer is it rigidly controlled by specific periods of time devoted to specified subjects. Students now use what time is necessary, when it is necessary. Space is being utilized differently; open-space classrooms accommodate different size groups of students, and the key to the new concept is involvement. The curriculum is no longer set rigidly as in the past. Students are encouraged to progress at their own speed and the artificial barriers of grades and the separation of slow learners, above-average and average students is being dropped in favor of helping the student to develop individually, according to his own ability.

"The importance of subject matter is also undergoing change. It is the conceptual aspect rather than the content of subjects that is important. Students are encouraged to explore the concepts rather than the content of subject material.

"It is vitally important that self-discipline be taught. Imposed discipline can never be as successful as self-discipline. When the child is involved, he is too busy learning to develop bad behavioral patterns. When he is interested in what he is learning, he will be involved."

The speaker felt that the main effort of educators should be to build a bridge at both ends of education — between kindergarten and elementary, between elementary and secondary, between secondary and university levels, and ideally, involving the community and the parents. Co-operative teaching methods utilize the individual talents of teachers. Each teacher generally excels at one or two subjects. In group-teaching, these interests and talents are shared to the benefit of the student who can take advantage of the ability of a teacher who excels at science, or of another who excels at math.

"Education should involve the five senses. The student must be encouraged to involve himself in his environment, to experience by discovery.

"I interpret education as having three major components — buildings, staff and students. The buildings are important only in the sense that they are the stage on which the drama takes place. The remaining two components are combined — they are the human elements that bring the play to life."

Following the showing of slides depicting open - classroom teaching, Mr. Runacres answered questions from the floor. In reply to the query: "How can we help Grade 8 graduates to adjust to high school?" Mr. Runacres replied: "I support the K-13 theory, and should the proposed new high school be constructed here at Kente, this problem would be solved."

Mr. Runacres was introduced by John McNeil, director of education for Prince Edward County and was thanked by Mrs. M. Marshall.

The Centennial year awardwinning film A Place to Stand preceded Mr. Runacres on the program, and the new face of Home and School was evident in the refreshments served "coffee house" style during the evening, at tables for four.

Board Safety Policy Sought

Hastings county board of education was asked last night to take immediate action in defining its policies regarding eye protection, footwear and machine guards in technical departments of its secondary schools.

The request was made by the advisory vocational committee after discussion of a report from the safety consultant for the Industrial Accident Prevention Association. The consultant recently surveyed all county schools and reported the safety provisions satisfactory.

But he recommended a uniform policy throughout the county on wearing of safety goggles, hard - soled shoes and use of machine guards.

Prince Edward Board Asked To Hire School Psychologist

PICTON — The possibility of hiring a school psychologist to work with elementary and secondary students in Prince Edward was discussed at last night's meeting of the Prince Edward Board of Education.

Presenting a brief supporting the plan was Lang Richardson, guidance teacher at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute and Mrs. M. Edgar, teacher at Pinecrest Memorial (elementary) School at Bloomfield.

Mr. Richardson said this morning that there is definitely a need for a school psychologist or a co-ordinator of special services in Prince Edward according to statistics he compiled on a survey of its elementary schools and of Prince Edward Collegiate.

He said 80 per cent of the teachers felt they required assistance.

Mr. Richardson explained that the proposed psychologist would work with teachers, students, parents and the general public. If the psychologist worked exclusively with students Mr. Richardson felt "he would be spreading himself too thin."

A psychologist could visit each county school setting up outside referral appointments where necessary and talk with parents. He would assist teachers by screening pupils who in their opinion might benefit from special help.

Although a clinic in Kingston has been very helpful in assisting students and their parents, Mr. Richardson commented that the 40-mile drive into the city caused many families to hesitate in making the necessary weekly trip. He also explained that because the clinic is very busy, only crisis cases can be referred.

If Prince Edward County Board of Education should agree to hire a full time psychologist his salary would range from $18,000 to $20,000 annually.

The guidance teacher pointed out that this sum of money would be less in the long run than the cost of supporting a troubled student with lifetime welfare cheques.

Mr. Richardson commented that school psychologists have already been hired by secondary schools in Frontenac, Lennox and Addington and in Hastings.

After hearing Mr. Richardson, the county board referred the matter to its educational committee for further study.

Western All-Stars Looking To Better Last Year's Tie

ST. LOUIS (CP) — Coaches Claude Ruel and Scotty Bowman adopted a cautious attitude as they prepared their teams for tonight's 23rd annual National Hockey League all-star game.

Neither Ruel, coach of the power-packed East Division all-stars, nor Bowman, of the Western all-stars, would predict the outcome of the contest, to be televised nationally by the CBC starting at 10 p.m. EST.

"It's hard to make predictions for a game like this," said Ruel of the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens. He said he had not worked out any specific game plan or any special combinations of forward lines.

"I'll just mix them up," he said.

Ruel's squad has just one doubtful starter, defenceman Jim Neilson of New York Rangers, who suffered an ankle injury last week.

Neilson said he skated Monday but the ankle was still sore. Another workout this morning was to determine if he felt up to playing. Ruel said he would use Serge Savard from the Canadiens as a replacement if Neilson was unable to start.

Bowman, coach of the West Division St. Louis Blues, nominalized the East all-stars strength when he said:

"We'll pretty much have to play up to our potential to hold our own."

He said he hoped the West could at least do as well this season as last when a goal by Claude Larose of Minnesota North Stars tied the game 3-3 with less than three minutes remaining in Montreal.

Two of Bowman's squad are out of the original lineup.

Goalie Glenn Hall of the Blues is recovering from a groin injury and will not start, Bowman said. The West already had goalies Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers and Jacques Plante from the Blues, so Bowman will use rookie centre Bob Clarke from the Flyers to fill in the lineup.

Also out is defenceman Al Arbour of the Blues with a knee injury. His vacancy will be filled by right winger Gary Sabourin of the Blues with winger Jim Roberts moving back to defence.

A doubtful starter is centre Phil Goyette from the Blues, who is suffering a charleyhorse in his left leg.

GLENN HALL

Another man not making any predictions for tonight's game is veteran right winger Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

"I'm too old to make predictions," said the 41-year-old star of 23 NHL seasons.

Despite his record number of 21 all-star appearances, Howe said he still looks forward to the annual exhibition match.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't."

This is only the second year the all-star game will be an East-West affair. In previous seasons, an all-star team has played the defending Stanley Cup champions in the cup winner's home arena.

Tonight's game is expected to draw a record crowd of 17,000. Last year's game in Montreal drew 16,269 fans.

The game is being held in St. Louis this year at the invitation of the Blues, whose arena organist plans to urge on the West club with his playing.

Norm Kramer said Monday he will play during the game after Ruel denied reports last week which quoted him as saying he objected to Kramer's music.

A reported move by Chicago Black Hawks' president Bill Wirtz to lodge a complaint against Kramer's playing also failed to develop at an NHL governors meeting here.

The governors met briefly Monday afternoon behind closed doors and did not broke any statement on the sessions.

However, a committee of governors—Wirtz, Charles Mulcahy Jr. of Boston Bruins and Bill Putnam from Philadelphia Flyers—met Monday afternoon with a delegation from the NHL Players' Association to discuss changes in their pension agreement.

Alan Eagleson of Toronto, executive director of the players' association, said further meetings with the governors committee would be held today. One of the topics on their agenda will be the mandatory wearing of helmets by all NHL players.

Leading the player's delegation was Red Berenson of the Blues, who was elected Monday to succeed Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs. Lou Angotti of Chicago Black Hawks continues as vice-president.

A crowd of about 900, including about 600 persons from the general public who paid $25 a plate, attended the awards presentation banquet Monday night. The banquet is an annual feature preceding the all-star game at which the league's trophy winners are honored.

Montreal captain Jean Beliveau accepted the Stanley Cup and the Prince of Wales Trophy on behalf of the East Division champions.

NHL president Clarence Campbell presented his Campbell Cup to Arbour of the Blues, who were last season's West Division winners.

Danny Grant of Minnesota North Stars accepted the Calder Trophy as rookie of the year.

Hall and Plante were presented the Vezina Trophy as last season's top goaltenders.

Clay-Marciano Bout Premieres Tonight

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Make-believe boxing makes its debut on the movie screen tonight when about 1,500 theatres in Canada and the United States show a staged film of a fight between former heavyweight champions Rocky Marciano and Cassius Clay.

A computer will determine the outcome.

The match, involving the fight game's only two undefeated heavyweight champions, is the brainchild of Murray Woroner, a Miami television producer.

Only Woroner, a film editor and a sound man know the result. Clay has not been told and Marciano was killed in a plane crash in Iowa Sept. 1,

The filming was done in Miami in August only weeks before Marciano's death. The two fighters sparred for 70 two-minute rounds with an editor condensing the product and makeup men squirting simulated blood and painting phoney bruises.

To maintain secrecy, bonded messengers will deliver a print of the color film to each theatre only an hour before the 10 p.m. EST start.

The producers filmed seven possible endings—a knockout by each, a technical knockout by each, a points decision for each, and a draw.

The idea of the fight resulted from an earlier computerized heavyweight tournament that Woroner produced for audio.

In that one, sold to about 400 radio stations, the career records and other data on what were rated boxing's 16 greatest heavyweight champions were fed into a computer and the boxers paired against each other in an elimination event.

Blow-by-blow accounts were written from the computer's decisions and broadcast like a real fight, with crowd noises and other sound effects added.

Marciano was the winner, outpointing Jack Dempsey in the 15-round final. Clay lost to Jim Jeffries early in the tournament.

Orr and Esposito Lead NHL Statistics

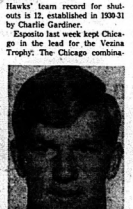
MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League takes a break from its regular schedule tonight to stage its 23rd annual all-star game at St. Louis.



And you can be certain there will be plenty of attention focused on a pair of East Division representatives — goaltender Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks and defenceman Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins.

Esposito, the southpaw Montreal Canadiens allowed to get away in last June's draft, now has the finest shutouts by a goaltender in 15 seasons and the lowest goals-against average by a Chicago goalie in 34 seasons, and is two shutouts away from the all-time Hawk record.

Esposito posted consecutive shutouts for the second time this season last week and allowed only one goal in Chicago's other game.

His performance raised his total shutouts for the season to 10, the most since Terry Sawchuk, with New York Rangers now, had 11 in 1954-55 for Detroit Red Wings. Esposito's average of 1.96 is the best by a Hawk since Mike Karakas registered a 1.92 average in the 44-game, 1935-36 season. The Hawks' team record for shutouts is 12, established in 1930-31 by Charlie Gardiner.

Esposito last week kept Chicago in the lead for the Vezina Trophy. The Chicago combination of Esposito and Denis Dejordy has 88 goals against in 41 games. New York is second with 98 goals against in 42 games, while St. Louis Blues is right behind with 97 goals in 41 games.

BOBBY ORR
Offensive Defenceman

Meanwhile, Phil Esposito is having his troubles overhauling team-mate Orr in the individual scoring race. He shaved one point off Orr's lead last week.

Orr broke two records last week—assists by a defenceman when he got his 51st, and points by a defenceman when he reached 65—to maintain a comfortable lead atop the scoring heap. He has 13 goals and 52 assists and his 65 points is exactly what Esposito had after 42 games last season. Phil finished second up with both the assists and points records with 77 and 126.

Kiner Awaits Decision

NEW YORK (AP) — The next few hours are restless ones for Ralph Kiner, the former home run-hitting hero of Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Every man who plays baseball dreams of being voted some day into the Hall of Fame," the 47-year-old former outfielder, now one of the broadcast voices of the New York Mets, said Monday.

The ballots for 1970 have been cast and are being counted. The result will be announced today in New York. A player must gain 75 per cent of the total to be named.

Kiner and Lou Boudreau, the former shortstop of Cleveland Indians, are the foremost candidates to be added to the list of greats already enshrined in the Hall of Fame Museum at Cooperstown, N.Y.

Boudreau was third and Kiner fourth in the voting last year when Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals and Roy Campanella of the old Brooklyn Dodgers were inducted.

Expos' Mauch Looks For Big Improvement

MONTREAL (CP) — Gene Mauch, Montreal Expos field manager, predicted Monday his club, preparing for its second year in baseball's National League, will win considerably more games in 1970 than it did in its initial season.

Mauch flew in to Montreal's below zero temperatures Sunday night from Los Angeles along with first baseman Ron Fairly.

Fairly, who came to the Expos last June from Los Angeles Dodgers, became the 10th Montreal player to sign his 1970 contract after a brief session Monday with general manager Jim Fanning.

Mauch said he will be disappointed if his club does not win 70 games in 1970, 18 more than it did last season.

"I'm very excited about everything this year," he said. "We wasted so much time last year with experimenting—something we won't need to do this year."

Mauch said his training camp this year will differ from the initial session last season when he assumed the players already were well versed in baseball fundamentals.

The Expos report to West Palm Beach, Fla., in mid-February. Mauch said that it will open with "much more time in the field where they are going to learn the fundamentals."

He said if the season opener "was tomorrow" his starting pitchers likely would be Bill Stoneman, who won 11 and lost 19 and pitched a no-hitter against Philadelphia Phillies April 17, Steve Renko, 6-7, and newcomers Joe Sparma from the American League Detroit Tigers and Jim Britton from Atlanta Braves. All throw from the right side.

Dan McGin and Don Shaw are the only two southpaws on the roster. As backup shortstop to assist Bobby Wine and a catcher who hits more than the left side are still high on Mauch's priority list as additions to the club.

Shortstop Wine took over from Maury Wills in June after the latter departed for Los Angeles Dodgers as part of the same deal that brought Fairly here.

Sports On All Fronts

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin J. Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, accused club owners Monday of refusing to bargain in good faith, and termed as phoney a joint statement made Saturday by the two league presidents: Miller denied that the civil suit brought by outfielder Curt Flood challenging baseball's reserve clause violates a collective bargaining agreement made in 1968. "During the 1968 negotiations," he said, "the players association took the position that the reserve clause was illegal and that it could not agree to use its best efforts to see that the illegal provisions are enforced." Flood, a veteran traded last October by St. Louis Cardinals to Philadelphia Phillies, filed suit in federal court last Friday challenging baseball's reserve clause which binds a player to a club for life or until traded, sold or released. He charged the reserve clause imposed peonage and servitude on players, who are shuttled back and forth like property. A hearing is scheduled today at which the commissioner of baseball, Bowie Kuhn, the presidents of the two major leagues and the 24 major league clubs will be asked to show cause why Flood's request to be declared a free agent should not be granted. Last Saturday, Joe Cronin, president of the American League, and Charles Chub Feeney, president of the National League, issued a joint statement in which they said a victory for Flood in the present suit would destroy the game.

MONTREAL (CP) — Phil Goyette, St. Louis Blues veteran centre, is the National Hockey League's most accurate shooter. Statistics for the first half of this season, released by the league Monday, show Goyette scored 17 goals on 74 shots on goal for a league-leading 23 per cent in 36 games he played in the first half-season. Goyette currently is sidelined by a knee injury for an indefinite period and will miss tonight's annual all-star game in St. Louis. Only one other player surpassed the 20-per-cent mark in shooting accuracy. That was rookie centre Jim Harrison, who started the season with Boston Bruins and was traded to Toronto Maple Leafs Dec. 10. Harrison's combined Boston-Toronto totals show him with nine goals on 44 shots for a runner-up percentage of 20.5. The most frustrated played in the league has to be defenceman Jim Neilson of New York Rangers. Neilson scored only one goal on 113 shots.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Goalie Gerry Desjardins of Los Angeles Kings suffered strained ligaments in his left knee Sunday in a game at Detroit, but should be available for duty when the team returns to action. At first, it was thought Desjardins might have been seriously injured when he did the splits to stop a shot by Garry Unger in the third period. The Red Wings won 3-1. Doctors said all Desjardins needs is a couple of days of rest and the club doesn't see action again until Thursday when the Kings meet Toronto at the Forum.

Collegians Punch In On New Time Clock

The BCI gym offered something old and something new for basketball followers last night. The "old" was a three-game sweep of Madoc, something fairly commonplace at the Collegiate, which has dominated the local basketball scene with the regularity of a Timex watch.

The "new" was the electric scoreboard, that replaced the chalk - and - slate method after 42 years of school activity. The students themselves funded the project through the sale of pens to the general public.

The recent addition saw plenty of use as the Collegiate teams scored almost at will against Centre Hastings.

In the senior game BCI opened up a 49-15 half-time lead and then weathered a brief Madoc surge in the third quarter. The final score of the game was 81-51, as the seniors remained unbeaten. Mike Scarlett scored 24 points to lead the BCI scorers. Dave Wright (17), Mike LeBaron (13) and Brent Gallupe (10) were the other big guns. Carl Griffith had 14 points for Madoc.

The BCI juniors hit the three - figure column as they clobbered their opposition 107-34. The win moved them within two points of Moira in Division II of the league. Scoring was spread evenly between Dave Simonds (22), Jeff Morton (18), Bill Gallupe (13) and Greg Scarlett (11). The unbeaten bantams came close to matching the junior output as they rolled up a 95-16 score. Rick Bell had 18 points for BCI. Peter LeBaron with 14 points and Keith Pierce with 12 were the only high BCI point-getters. Price scored 15 for Madoc.

Mo-Hawks Want Aces for Umbrella

It doesn't take a weather forecaster to tell any Belleville Mo-Hawk fans that when it rains, it pours.

The team's only real slump of the current OHA Senior A schedule hit high C with a pair of weekend losses in Galt and Oakville in which the Mo-Hawks were outscored 10-5.

"Everything's hit at once," says playing-coach Tommy Jones, not an alibi-maker by nature. "We've had the injuries at the same time Dave Rexe and the team have been playing poorly."

The team's defence corps has been the hardest hit, with Lou Kazowski out for three weeks with a hairline ankle fracture and veteran Wayne "Wimer" Brown sidelined another week recovering from a concussion.

Jones himself has been a costly loss to the club's attack. He had 13 goals and 15 assists in his first 26 games but tonight's 8.30 Memorial Arena game with Kingston will be the third in a row he has sat out with a persistent flu bug.

Tonight's game with the Aces isn't really a do-or-die effort. Playing over .500 hockey with the season three-quarters over for the first time in the club's four-year history, the Mo-Hawks are virtually assured of a playoff spot.

Even if seventh-place Owen Sound wins its last two games, the Mo-Hawks would only need four points from their last ten outings to nail down the sixth and final playoff berth.

What tonight's game represents is a chance to keep in the running for one of the top three playoff spots, which carry with them the extra home-game privilege in the first playoff round.

There are currently only five points separating second-place Galt and sixth-place Barrie Flyers. The Mo-Hawks are sitting in fifth spot with 32 points, two behind Kingston and Oakville.

But, as tonight's game with the Aces means much more to the Mo-Hawks than two points, the perennial athletic enemies are 3-3 in their six meetings to date, the last confrontation resulting in a 10-3 win by the Aces over a shorthanded Belleville crew.

A win for the Mo-Hawks would box them into a three-way tie for third with the Aces and Oakville.

Tonight's Belleville battle plan includes the services of National Hockey League veteran Lorne Ferguson and 18-year pro - matured Bob Wilson, who will fill one of the two vital defence gaps if the club has him placed on pro hockey's voluntary retirement list by game-time.

The Mo-Hawks endured their lost weekend—only the third time all season, incidentally, that they have lost two games in a row — with the services of only two regular defencemen — Lionel Botty and Greg Marchen. Both Billy Armour and Lorne O'Donnell moved back to take blueline turns.

Meanwhile, Steve Rexe thinks about as much of Minnesota these days as the people who put Super Bowl money on the Vikings.

Ever since the announcement that the National Hockey League's North Stars were interested in his goal-keeping services, Rexe has watched his goals - against average rise like a thermometer in a sauna bath.

Although he can't be faulted for all of them, the fact remains that Rexe has been beaten for 27 goals in the last three and one - third games he has played. The one - third came Saturday night, when seven Galt goals sent him to the showers after the opening 20 minutes.

DAVEY JONES
'It's Pouring'

Rexe will start against the Aces tonight, with a chance for as much revenge as anyone on the roster.

B's Helped

COBOURG (Special) — Cobourg Cougars reluctantly did Belleville's Ellis Printers an Eastern Ontario Junior B favor last night, absorbing an 11-4 shellacking from Peterborough Don Byes.

The loss left the Cougars two points back of fourth-place Belleville, after 21 games for each club.

Last-place Trenton Golden Hawks with two games in hand over Belleville, will try to close their four-point gap when they play in Kingston tonight against the second-place Frontenacs.

Trenton Tripped

The Food City Novices made the trip to Trenton worthwhile last night, as they handed the home team a 6-1 loss. Bobby Crawford kept up his high scoring as he counted three goals for Belleville. Andy Lupenette scored twice and Peter Hall added the final tally.

Merchants Buy Time in Top Spot

The Merchants held on to their one game lead in the Gas/House League last night as they stopped the cellar - dwelling Mulroney's Sunoco team 7-4. Meanwhile the second - place Mustangs were trampling Marysville 10-0.

Jim Woodcock had two goals and two assists for the Merchants, to pace the scoring. Paul Goodfellow scored twice with Harold Babcock and Wayne McTaggert each drawing a goal and two assists, Bob Lloyd scored the other Merchant goal. The winners were assessed five of the matches' eight penalties.

Mulroney's scorers were Dave Emerson with a goal and two assists and Ted Ford, Paul Ford and Wayne Twiddy, each with a goal.

Gerry Jones, Bob Mulvihill and John Smith each picked up two goals to lead the scoring parade for the Mustangs. Scoring once were Jack O'Neill, Gary Reid, Jim Horwood and Jack Garvin. Paul Smith picked up the Mustang shutout.

Defencemen Bob Elhier and Larry Potter of Belvedere Hotel flank Central Taxi forwards Court Bralley, Terry Casselman and Doug Bolte. While on-the-ice meetings of the two groups aren't usually quite so friendly, they'll combine forces next Thursday as the Quinte League All-Stars play the Ellis Juniors.

All-Stars Face Ellis Juniors

The best of the Quinte Hockey League face a stiff exhibition test next Thursday night, as they face the Ellis Printers of the Eastern Ontario Junior B circuit. The Ellis team seems to be hitting top form after weekend wins over Kingston and Peterborough, and the Quinte All-Stars will have their work cut out for them.

Coach Bill Vesterfelt of the league-leading Belvedere Hotel squad will be behind the bench for the all-stars. Three goalies will share the refereeing chores. At this time it appears as though Larry DiPietro and Dave Hicks of Belvedere, along with one other goaltender, will be manned.

Belvedere will send forwards Larry Stewart, Doug Hallam and Elmer Caine along with defencemen Bob Elhier and Larry Potter.

Second - place Central Taxi have chosen Court Bradley,

Rick Denard, Bruce Symons and Jim McGuire will supply the fire-power from Stinson's, while Duke Doran and Paul Stinson will attempt to stymie the Ellis forwards.

From the Aluminum Star entry, front-liners Bon Foste, Bill Rushlow and Al Ruttan will compete, along with rearguards Harold Bunnett and Bob Chapelle.

The Hotelmen widened their league lead last night by shutting out the second place Total squad 4-0. Larry Marshall, Gary McMillan, Larry Stewart and Doug Hallam scored for Belvedere. Dave Hicks was the goaltender.

Stinson Construction broke a third place tie with Aluminum Star, on the strength of their 4-2 win over the metal makers. Goal scorers for Stinson's were Paul Stinson, Bruce Symons, Jim McGuire and Art Deline. Doug Weese and LeRoy McBrien were the Aluminum Star marksmen.

Welcome to Belleville

A welcoming greeting on behalf of the city is extended Peter Frankland, (left), President of the Federation of Sales and Advertising Clubs, by Mayor J. R. Scott, (centre.) President of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club, Terry McCabe, explains to the mayor that occasion is the third meeting of the year for the organization, to which every club sends representatives to meet and discuss topics that will affect each.

National Sales and AD Holds Meeting in Belleville

Possible effects of Mr. Benson's much publicized White Paper is the main topic on the agenda today as officers and directors of the Federation of Canadian Advertising and Sales Clubs meet at the Hotel Quinte.

Delegates and executive members represent 33 member clubs across Canada — from St. John's Newfoundland, to Vancouver.

According to club officials, one or more resolutions will be thrashed out and forwarded to Mr. Benson, while the national association prepares a full - fledged brief.

High on the agenda is also a possible resolution in answer to the White Paper's threat to limit allowances for legitimate salesmen's expenses for meals and entertainment.

Other areas of discussion will be focused on the association's campaign against "misleading advertising", as well as ways and means in which member clubs can expand their service to the community through business education.

Federation executives will be guests of the Belleville Sales and Advertising Club at its regular dinner meeting at Columbus Hall this evening.

Narcotic Charge Laid

TRENTON — Detective Sid Vickers of the Trenton Police Department said today that charges of possession of narcotic drugs have been laid against a Montreal man following an incident Saturday.

Routine investigation of a minor car accident on Saturday morning on Highway 401 led local police and RCMP investigators to search the hotel room of Paul Donald Henry, 19, Montreal.

The accused will appear in provincial court today.

IAC Moves

First Office Building in Decade

Belleville's first downtown office building in almost a decade is now in operation.

It comes at a time of "pressing need" for such work space believes the realtor responsible for its construction.

The new building, on the west side of Front Street near city hall, is now occupied by Industrial Acceptance Corporation and affiliates.

Constructed on a site emptied by fire, it may not be the last of its kind.

"The demand for downtown retail and office space is strong and we're currently working on another proposal," says J. R. (Ed) McKinney, president of the realty firm of the same name.

The IAC project is one result of the "pressing need for ground floor office space" in the city's commercial core, he adds. It reflects "growing confidence and interest" in the area.

The site, which once housed a barber shop and shoe repair operation, was gutted in January, 1969.

Working with IAC, McKinney Realty was responsible for site selection, architectural style and interior decor. Customer convenience and efficient use of space were the prime requirements in organizing the project, says Mr. McKinney.

A feature of its construction was a curtain-wall front, using heat - reflecting glass that assists air conditioning.

The glass is the same used in the Toronto Dominion Centre.

The ground floor is completely taken over by IAC and affiliates — Merit Insurance, Niagara Finance and Sovereign Life. Some 3,000 square feet are available on the second floor for "compatible businesses."

Manager of IAC in its new premises, is a Bellevillian, Jack McBride.

Wilkes Hastings Warden

Marmora and Lake township reeve John Wilkes, a 10-year veteran of Hastings county council, was elected warden of Hastings for 1970 at a caucus session of council held this morning.

Mr. Wilkes defeated Tweed Reeve Barbara Allen and Tyendinaga Reeve Carman Gibson for the honor. He succeeds Stirling Reeve Donald Rodgers who was 1969 warden.

Mr. Wilkes is the first Marmora and Lake reeve ever to be elected as Hastings county warden. Back in 1879 Thomas Peters of Marmora village served as warden but this was before the village became separated from the township for municipal purposes.

The new warden has served as chairman of the county home committee and also as chairman of the council agricultural and ARDA committees.

Aid to Indian and Eskimo Can't Be Isolated

OTTAWA (CP) — Programs to combat Indian and Eskimo poverty must be part of regional poverty programs, the department of Indian affairs and northern development said today in a brief to the Senate poverty committee.

It also said:

"Our experience as a department has led us to the conclusion that there have been, basically, fatal weaknesses in our approach to this matter: We have been paternalistic, even though it has been bad-willed, we have tackled the problem of poverty in a fragmented and discriminatory rather than an integrated way; and we have misjudged the degree of competence required in human relationships.

But the brief also said that in the last year some useful work has gone into evolving proposals for Indian and Eskimo economic development.

Of most significance for Indians was a proposed Indian Economic Development Fund, to total $50,000,000 in basic funding over a five-year period.

The fund was expected funds would be provided by regular commercial lending institutions, with the federal government acting where necessary as guarantor.

A second proposal is in final stages of completion was an Indian arts and crafts development and marketing program.

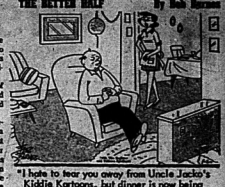
The program is designed to give support in finding markets to Indian artists and craftsmen similar to that now available to Eskimos and to stimulate growth of a "cottage industry" among Indian families living on the more isolated reserves.

The brief said the time is long past when Indian and Eskimo problems can be dealt with in isolation. The special problems relating to Indian groups could not be effectively resolved unless they are considered within the context of the larger society.

The department said there is also a need for relocation of individuals and families willing to do so. But such programs had to be carefully prepared and take account of many complex factors.

The basic problem confronting the majority of Canada's Indians and Eskimos was that their "just and proper aspirations to equality of opportunity" in Canadian society were not adequately fulfilled.

"Many are submerged in a life of poverty from which they cannot escape without a great deal of assistance. They believe the assistance currently being provided is inadequate, and we agree," the brief said.



More than 227,000 men, women and children registered as Indians with less than 100,000 only 10 years ago. Almost 70 per cent lived on reserve lands or in Indian communities.

The rapid population increase constituted a serious threat to the capacity of the reserves as the basis of an economically viable community.

The Eskimo population of Canada was about 14,000 and there were indications it would double in the next 25 years.

While the Indian Act preserved and protected Indian landholding, it worked against Indian people controlling their own land. The legal distinction which set Indians apart from other persons tended to shackle them in the past and segregate them from the larger society.

Hudson Bay Traveller Alive

Snowmobiler Is Safe After Six Days in Tent

WINISK, Ont. (CP) — Guy Chevalier of La Sarre, Que., who spent six days alone in a tiny tent on the shores of Hudson Bay, returned to safety Monday.

"He is in good shape and doesn't have to go to hospital," Rev. Jean Goulet, a Roman Catholic priest in this small Indian village, said in a radio-telephone interview.

He said Chevalier was hungry after spending nearly a week with no food.

Two Indian boys from this village 580 miles north of Timmins found Chevalier, Father Gagnon said. Radio communication was difficult and there were few details available.

Temperatures in the area range between 20 and 40 degrees below zero.

Chevalier was one of four men who left La Sarre Dec. 2 in an attempt to drive two snowmobiles to Alaska. They were stranded when their machines broke down.

Father Gagnon said Mike Hunter Jr. and Albert Kosenchin, two Indian youths, found Chevalier in a tent beside his snowmobile about 35 miles south of here.

They found him at about 5 p.m. Sunday and arrived here about 6 p.m. Monday on their snowmobiles.

The trouble started Jan. 10 when the snowmobile carrying Chevalier and Pierre Robitaille broke down.

They pitched camp while two other members of the expedition, Bernard LaPointe and Robitaille's brother, Noel, set off for Winisk for help.

Their machine also broke down, forcing them to stay in a trapper's cabin for nearly a week. They were found Saturday.

Meanwhile, Pierre Robitaille decided to walk to Winisk and took enough food for one day. When he arrived here Saturday he was almost incoherent after being exposed to 40-below temperatures during his four-day walk.

He was flown to Timmins with frostbite to 70 per cent of his face. He was reported in serious condition.

Hunter and Descarbin set out Sunday, directed by LaPointe.

House Is Still Wrangling Over Bill to Fight Pollution

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons waded through the fourth day of debate Monday on the government's proposed bill to fight water pollution without the measure receiving second reading.

Earlier, the Commons was embroiled in an hour-long procedural wrangle over whether Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca) could place a motion before the House for concurrence in a controversial report by the northern development committee, of which he is vice-chairman.

Donald S. Macdonald, government House leader, argued that this would be an "unfair tactic."

The report urges a fast government assertion that "vessels and submarines passing through Canada's archipelago are and shall be subject to the sovereign control and regulation of Canada."

Liberal spokesmen say the government may not yet be prepared to endorse such a strong position and would have to vote against the bill if it was presented to the House.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux was to give his ruling later today.

Also Monday, Finance Minister Edgar Benson re-introduced a bill passed last session by the Senate governing the operations of investment companies.

The new bill, extensively revised, requires Commons approval and fresh action by the Senate, since the old one died with the end of the last session.

During debate on the proposed water bill, Bud Orange, parliamentary secretary to Energy Minister J. J. Greene, the bill's sponsor, urged opposition MPs to give the measure second reading and send it to a Commons committee for detailed study.

The opposition has threatened to hold up progress of the bill until the government makes a commitment to spend more on pollution.

Mr. Greene had given assurances that any sound recommendations would be incorporated in the measure—known as the Canada water act—during committee study, Mr. Orange said.

The opposition is also demanding a stronger federal role in pollution control and uniform water purity standards for the whole country.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) said the legislation had been drafted out of "a political fear of inaction" on the part of the government and did not come to grips at all with the problem of pollution.

It also "inexcusably ignored" the danger of pollution in Canada's coastal waters.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Moose Jaw) said that if the government had introduced strong anti-pollution legislation, "instead of a wishy-washy bill," all Canadians would have supported it.

He said "very, very strong legislation" would be needed to combat pollution such as that reported in the north Saskatchewan River.

A pulp mill at Prince Albert, Sask., was "completely polluting parts of the north Saskatchewan," he said.

The proposed bill gives the government authority to set up a Crown corporation to build sewage treatment plants where needed, with or without the consent of the provinces concerned.

It also provides fines of up to $5,000 a day for depositing waste, except under prescribed disposal conditions, in regions to be designated as "water quality management areas."

Mr. Skoberg said the government is pushing anti-pollution arguments but has cut funds from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for pollution control.

Many municipalities wanted to do something but were being told no money was coming from Ottawa.

Today the Commons was to debate a Conservative non-confidence motion condemning the government's grain policies.

Keith Penner (L—Thunder Bay) said a joint federal-provincial study of water resources in Northern Ontario has aroused fear among local residents.

He commended the proposed pollution legislation but said the water resources study has aroused concern that a water export deal with the United States will be concluded without the agreement of those most directly involved.

He said that in his efforts to get facts for his constituents, he was able to get only two of eight progress reports prepared for the Ont.-committee—both from provincial officials.

The reports had listed as objectives of the study: Assessment of water resources in the James Bay drainage area and of possible utilization of the water locally or "through diversions."

Walter Carter (PC—St. John's West) said the Fisheries Act has more muscle than the proposed water act.

He saw nothing in the bill that would have altered events in the pollution of parts of Placentia Bay, Nfld, by the Electrical Reduction Co. last year.

Harry Mather (NDP—Surrey) said people "want a war effort" led by the federal government to fight pollution.

Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbiniere) said the bill would be of no use to the anti-pollution measures were financed by borrowing from the Bank of Canada. But as it was, the measures would just add to debt caused by high interest rates.

Seaway Tonnage Down

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Plain Dealer says cargo tonnage moved through the St. Lawrence seaway in 1969 dropped 14.5 per cent to 41,000,000 net tons, compared with a total of 47,853,850 tons the previous year.

The newspaper says the figures were obtained from a reliable source.

Last year's tonnage was the lowest since 1964 when cargoes totalled 39,300,000 tons.

Bulk cargo, chiefly iron ore and grains, totalled 33,950,000 tons in 1969, off 9 per cent from the previous year, the newspaper says.

U.S. Army Is Financing Ontario Water Study

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Jack Stokes, NDP member of the Ontario legislature for Thunder Bay, said Monday United States Army engineers have been financing studies of water levels in the Thunder Bay area for more than a year without the knowledge of the Ontario government.

He said in an interview some 40 northwestern Ontario residents had been solicited and acted for the Corps of Army Engineers during the last 14 months and reported their findings to the U.S. Army in Michigan.

"This is highly irregular when the agency of another government approaches and pays private Canadian citizens to gather information for them," he said.

Mr. Stokes said he was "incensed" that federal authorities don't seem concerned enough to issue a statement on the matter even though Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier had been informed of the situation by letter.

"If the United States is so interested in our water and ice sheets and if it is involved with joint studies of water levels with our country, then studies and information from our country should be supplied by the proper agency and through the proper channels."

Wage Restraint Rejected

TORONTO (CP) — About 300 delegates to the United Auto Workers Canadian council Monday rejected the federal government's call for wage restraint.

The delegates, representing Canadian locals of the UAW whose contract negotiations with the auto companies begin in July, charged that federal anti-inflation methods are "inhumane and undemocratic."

They passed a resolution which said government policies encourage unemployment, allow prices and profits to rise unrestricted and force unions to "intensify their struggle for higher wages to maintain workers' purchasing power."

"We will need real solidarity in the 70s . . . to combat the government's antiquated, reactionary fiscal programs" said Dennis McDermott, UAW Canadian director.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange declined fractionally in light mid-morning trading today. Western oils were steady.

The market dropped sharply Monday after two successive strong sessions.

On index today, industrials were down .29 to 181.91, base metals .51 to 116.65 and golds .14 to 158.47. Western oils picked up .09 to 216.49.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 701,900 shares compared with 890,000 at the same time Monday.

Losses outnumbered gains 167 to 102 with 183 issues unchanged.

Imperial Oil was up ¼ to 21¼. Imperial said Monday oil found by its Atkinson Point well in the Northwest Territories is medium-gravity sweet crude.

Imperial also said drilling and coring at the well have been suspended at a depth of 5,780 feet to permit the well to be cased and to enable testing logs to be run.

Algoma Steel slipped ¼ to 21¾. The company reported annual earnings of 79 cents a share compared with $1.70 in 1968.

Great-West Life dropped 8½ to 120, Seagrams ¾ to 51, Canada Steamship ¾ to 27, Moore up to 35¾ and Canadian Superior Oil ¼ to 36½.

Erie Diversified gained 1 to 13. Four Seasons 1 to 13¼ and Lake Dufault ½ to 27½.

Monday, profit taking sent the market sharply lower in light trading and interrupted a strong two-day advance.

Investors sliced away gains of the last two sessions that followed Imperial Oil's announcement Thursday that oil flowed to the surface of its Atkinson Point well in the Mackenzie River delta in the Northwest Territories.

Oils, which led gains Thursday and Friday, led Monday's decline.

On index, industrials dropped 2.12 to 182.20, western oils 5.50 to 216.49 and base metals .32 to 117.16. Golds picked up .27 to 158.61.

In oils, Canadian Superior dropped 2 to 37, Scurry-Rainbow 1¼ to 25¾, Supertest ordinary ¼ to 41½, Ranger 1¾ to 12¼, Imperial Oil 1¼ to 21¼, Great Plains 1 to 30, Shell 1 to 30¾ and Home B down 1 to 20 1 to 43.

Volume was 3,117,000 shares compared with 4,959,000 Friday. Consumers Glass advanced ¼ to 33¾ on 158 with 247 issues unchanged.

Algoma Steel was unchanged

Deseronto Winter Carnival

DESERONTO — A program of events has been announced for the "Hello Winter '70", Deseronto's first winter carnival which will run Feb. 6 to Feb. 8, 1970.

About 20 events are included in the plans, starting with a "snow queen" beauty contest the night previous to the carnival opening.

The winner will receive a $100 wardrobe and will take part in the carnival's opening and closing ceremonies.

Everything from an icecreord high, a fishing derby, snow shoe race, "firemen challenge", broom hockey game and an elimination snowmobile race is included in the program.

Snowmobile Race Winners

A Stock — Brian Joplin 2 points, Peter Scriver 2, Bob Trotter 1.

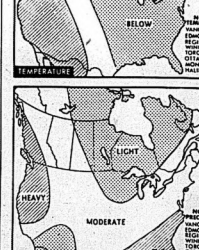
B Stock — Calvin McCoy 3, Reg. Ward 2, Mike Scriver 1.

C Stock — Calvin McCoy 3, Eric Trotter 2, Peter Scriver 1.

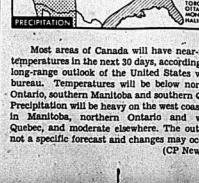
A Modified — Bob Trotter 3, Mike Scriver 2, Peter Scriver 1.

B. Modified — Calvin McCoy 3, Reg. Ward 2, Peter Scriver 1.

C. Modified — Eric Trotter 3, Mike Scriver 2, Peter Scriver 1.



Standing of top five drivers to date are: Calvin McCoy 27 points; Eric Trotter 14; Bob Trotter 8; Bill Ireland 7 and Mike Scriver 6.



Prices Rise

The consumer price index rose to 127.9 in December from 127.4 in November, mainly because of higher food prices, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday. The index, based on 1961 consumer prices equalling 100, was 122.3 in December 1968.

(CP Newsmap)

Most areas of Canada will have near-normal temperatures in the next 30 days, according to the long-range outlook of the United States weather bureau. Temperatures will be below normal in Ontario, southern Manitoba and southern Quebec. Precipitation will be heavy on the west coast, light in Manitoba, northern Ontario and western Quebec, and moderate elsewhere. The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange declined fractionally in light mid-morning trading today. Western oils were steady.

The market dropped sharply Monday after two successive strong sessions.

On index today, industrials were down .29 to 181.91, base metals .51 to 116.65 and golds .14 to 158.47. Western oils picked up .09 to 216.49.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 701,900 shares compared with 890,000 at the same time Monday.

Losses outnumbered gains 167 to 102 with 183 issues unchanged.

Imperial Oil was up ¼ to 21¼. Imperial said Monday oil found by its Atkinson Point well in the Northwest Territories is medium-gravity sweet crude.

Imperial also said drilling and coring at the well have been suspended at a depth of 5,780 feet to permit the well to be cased and to enable testing logs to be run.

Algoma Steel slipped ¼ to 21¾. The company reported annual earnings of 79 cents a share compared with $1.70 in 1968.

Standing Committees Appointed

DESERONTO — At its inaugural meeting last week, the 1970 Deseronto council appointed its standing committees. In each case, the first name is that of the chairman.

The property committee is made up of councillors Dorothy McCullough, Percy Brooks and Ed Gordanier. On the police and fire committee are Councillors Ed Gordanier, Elmer Dickinson and Jack Layfield; streets committee, Councillors Percy Brooks, Jack Hamilton and Ed Gordanier; finance committee, Reeve George Lyons and councillors Jack Layfield and Dorothy McCullough.

The parks and civic improvements committee consists of Councillor Jack Hamilton, Reeve George Lyons and Councillor Percy Brooks. Making up the bylaws and printing committee are Councillors Elmer Dickinson and Dorothy McCullough and Reeve George Lyons, and the industrial and publicity committee consists of Jack Layfield, Peter Dickinson and Jack Hamilton.

Appointments were made, also, to various other boards and committees. Gerald Lott will again represent Deseronto on the Napanee Region Conservation Authority. Mrs. Barbara Armitage, Peter Morris, Miss Beatrice Rickard and Mrs. Ora Sexsmith were appointed to the library board. Gerald Lott and Peter Morris again members of the cemetery board.

The recreation committee will consist of Councillors Dickinson and Hamilton, Mrs. Kay Hood, Mrs. Charles Giffin, Doris Vick, Wayne Brant, Mrs. Norma Pickett, Earl Murphy, Rev. Oscar Simpson and Delmer Wannamaker.

Lawyers Seek to Have Calley Tried Before Civilian Court

FORT BENNING, Ga. (CP) — Lawyers for Lieut. William L. Calley said they planned to introduce a series of motions today to lay the groundwork for having civilian rather than military courts try him on charges of murdering 109 Vietnamese civilians.

Calley faces court martial in the alleged massacre which occurred March 16, 1968, in the village of My Lai.

Today's hearing is on several defence motions, including one to dismiss the charges.

George Latimer, Calley's chief civilian lawyer, said Monday the hearing might last several days.

"Lieut. Calley cannot get a fair trial in the military," Latimer said at a news conference. "His chances are much better in a civilian court where he has the right to grand jury investigation and indictment and the right to trial by jury."

Since the accusations became known, scores of newspaper, magazine and television reporters have sought out every detail available on what happened at My Lai.

Calley and his lawyers argue that the worldwide publicity and statements from high-ranking officials, including President Nixon, have made it impossible for the 26-year-old officer from Miami, Fla., to get a fair trial.

They also will ask for dismissal on grounds of "involuntary servitude" because the charges were brought Sept. 5, 1969, one day before Calley was scheduled to be discharged from the army. The army has refused to release Calley from service until the case is decided.

Most army observers believe it is unlikely that the trial judge will dismiss the charges and think that Calley will face a general court martial, probably in late spring.

If convicted of the charge of premeditated murder he could receive the death penalty or a sentence of life imprisonment.

In a closed hearing Monday on a separate charge of murder, Calley's military defence lawyer, Maj. Kenneth A. Raby, said the government has tape recorded conversations between helicopter gunships which took part in the My Lai action.

The hearing will decide whether Calley will face court martial on the other charge of premeditated murder of one Vietnamese which the army says took place six weeks before the My Lai incident.

Raby was challenging a statement by Capt. Charlie R. Lewellen which had been submitted to the hearing officer, Col. Mack Hopper. The nature of the statement was not disclosed.

"This is the same Charlie R. Lewellen who made the tape recording of conversations from the gunships at My Lai," Raby said.

"He is a potential witness and possible suspect in that case," Raby said.

Lewellen is also Calley's present company commander at Fort Benning.

Calley was a platoon leader in an American Division company which raided My Lai. Three other soldier have been charged in connection with the incident.

Naked Body Many Things

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A young lady, whom I take to be a student at the University of Wisconsin, writes to me, apropos a recent paragraph in which I said that the people who present nudity on the stage and the people who object to it are "both victims of the same fallacy, imagining that a naked body is a sexual object . . ."

Her question: "If a naked body is not a sexual object, what is?" I should tell her, but not within the moralistic confines of a family newspaper. Actually, her attitude is exactly the kind of thing I was writing about — the reduction of the body to object, or merchandise.

A naked body can be, and is, many things to many persons: to the doctor, an anatomical or physiological entity to be restored to wholesome functioning; to the artist, a living piece of form and structure to be captured in pen or oil or clay or stone; to the masseur or masseuse, a complicated network of muscles and tissue and nerve-ends to be rejuvenated; to the photographer, a subtle and striking lovely study in plane and contour and shadow.

And even to the lover, if the naked body is a mere sexual object, or mostly a sexual object, then the "love" is in the loins and cannot outlast such transitory needs. Love must include sex, but the more exclusive it is of other qualities, the faster it tires and dies.

Indeed, the body in terms of a "sexual object" as such is largely a cultural product and an act of the mind. As Ortega put it: "Nine-tenths of that which is attributed to sexuality is the work of our magnificent ability to imagine, which is no longer an instinct, but exactly the opposite: a creation."

This is why, of course, naked bodies on the stage are not erotically stimulating, even in our severely repressed society. After the first moment of shock, they are just bodies, than with no more sexual significance than the naked body of any other species of creature.

For when the cultural taboo is lifted, and the mind can no longer do its imaginative work, then the body ceases to be a mystery (as in most primitive societies) and becomes simply an organism which can be used in many different ways, for protection, for profit, or for pleasure.

It has become largely a sexual object for us because, first it is exploited commercially to an almost pathological degree, and, second, because of our hypocrisy in promoting its desirability while at the same time prohibiting its free functioning. We have managed, in this way, to obtain the worst of both possible worlds — neither moral satisfaction of our Puritan forebears, not the innocent engagements of the primitives, but the frustrations of the former and the promiscuity of the latter. This is why I called us "victims."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 21

Your birthday today: Your career is most important for the coming year. No major crises are promised, but plenty of challenging little problems that enforce increasing competence in your special field of work. Those retired should consider presenting their memoirs for the record and guidance of their successor in this, technical assistance is quite useful. Today's natives go their own way regardless of advice.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Midwest finds your critics gro and con, active and vocal. Pay no attention to either side while you jog in a full day at your regular work.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Everybody seems to be ready with a personal point of view and an argument to support it. There is little point to most of the comment; it's a matter of feeling rather than a sense of what is happening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Hold onto your cash and have fun with the frantic conversations of the day. Everyone has a different idea about what to do, but in the final analysis, most of the suggestions will not be followed out.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Surprises shouldn't be allowed to provoke you into emotional expression. Wait for the whole story before you offer bitter comment.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Avoid casual, critical comment about your colleagues, neighbors. Gossip is rife today. Facts and figures are pessimistic, incorrect, as subjective factors are skipped.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Find out what is causing confusion and try to get it straight early in the day. Discussions go in circles, achieving little but emphasis on long-settled points.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): See that you are neatly attired, day and night. Be philosophic about your current plan alternate courses. Your equilibrium steadies younger colleagues, friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Today may include a definite shift of conditions. Take a good look, be sure you want to stay with the project into the new situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Flaws and shortages must be found before they get any worse. Search for the errors but offer no recriminations — with not necessarily a personal matter, and you need co-operation for corrections.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): This is one day to discourage casual acquaintances, neighbors from meddling in your affairs and home life. Shopping can just as well be deferred another day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): The beginning of a path toward greater heights opens. Inspiration develops gradually, showing life in brighter colors, arousing new and more effective efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your feelings and sympathy involve you in clashes of temperament between others. Pause, think where your own interests lie, act accordingly. Speculative schemes are a dime-a-dozen.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved ... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Know Your Carrier

Are you acquainted with your Intelligencer Carrier? You should be. Ask his name and telephone number and place it in a convenient safe place. Better still jot it down in the Number Finder in your telephone book.

Your Intelligencer Carrier wishes to give you the very best service possible. It is an important part of his training as an independent young businessman to maintain good customer relations.

Occasionally a carrier misses or overlooks delivery to a regular subscriber. We have found that most service errors are unintentional. Sometimes a carrier is ill and finds it necessary to use a substitute carrier to deliver his route.

Should you miss your Intelligencer any evening call your carrier first. Your carrier will appreciate your thoughtfulness in giving him an opportunity to correct his error and protect his profits. Visibility Reduced In Winter

PICTON — The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police is promoting safe winter driving through a bulletin issued this month.

Motorists are told that all good drivers know that all round driving visibility is a basic necessity for safety.

Driving visibility at this time of year is reduced by weather and early darkness. To help offset this hazard police urge motorists to clear car windows of snow, frost, fog or steam and to keep headlights clean and correctly aimed.

Scientist Says Attacks Political

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A medical scientist who has helped develop a new birth control pill says congressional hearings on oral contraceptives are "politically motivated" and the public is being misled.

Dr. Robert B. Greenblatt, 64, chairman of the endocrinology department of the Medical College of Georgia here, said Monday that six of the eight experts called to testify before a Senate monopoly subcommittee were against the pill.

"Why don't they invite some of us who are for the pill?" he said in an interview. "The great silent majority isn't being heard from in this case."

Greenblatt said that in 1900, before the contraceptive pills, 66 out of every 100,000 women developed cancer of the breast while in 1965 the figure was 66.5 in 100,000.

"If the hormone used in the pill caused cancer of the breast, the figure should have doubled or tripled. If women on the pill get cancer, it is just coincidental."

Bishops Asks Talks On Celibacy

UTRECHT (AP) — Holland's eight Roman Catholic bishops called Monday night for church-wide discussion of priestly celibacy and said the Dutch church would press for having married as well as celibate priests.

The bishops said Bernhard Cardinal Alfrink, the Dutch primate, would leave for Rome soon to inform Pope Paul of their position and "consult with him about the interests of the church in The Netherlands."

The Dutch pastoral council, a body of Catholic clergy and laymen, recommended by an overwhelming vote that the church rescind its celibacy rules. Pope Paul in a letter to the Dutch bishops two weeks before had asked them to reaffirm the celibacy concept "with firmness and clarity," but the bishops only abstained on the council's vote.

Judgment Reserved In LaMarsh Libel Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Final testimony in the British Columbia Supreme Court libel suit against former secretary of state Judy LaMarsh centred Monday around a newspaper advertisement for open-line broadcaster Ed Murphy.

Mr. Murphy, 40, with CKWX radio station, alleges that Miss LaMarsh libelled him in her recent book, Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage.

The advertisement was entered in evidence in the third day of the trial after defence counsel Martin Taylor won permission from Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson to introduce it.

The ad reads: "Say what you like . . . Ed Murphy stirs things up."

Mr. Martin said it was intended to suggest dislike for Mr. Murphy.

Shortly after admitting the advertisement into evidence, Mr. Justice Wilson reserved judgment in the case without indicating when a decision would be handed down.

Two Appointed

John Forbes of Trenton and Ronald Lee of Belleville have been re-appointed to the Advisory Vocational Committee of the Hastings county board of education.

Both men, who represent industry on the committee, served last year in the same capacity.

Trustees appointed to the committee are Everett Fairman, James Spry and F. John Follis.

First meeting of the committee for 1970 will be held in the board rooms, 208 Bridge St. East, Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Barn, Holsteins Lost In Fire at Madoc

MADOC — Damage and property loss on the farm of Allan Ketcheson, Concession II in Madoc Township mounted into the thousands of dollars as a result of an early morning fire.

The barn and 49 purebred Holstein cattle were destroyed by the blaze which also gutted two nearly silos.

The cattle and the buildings were partially covered by insurance. An exact estimate on the total damage was not available at the time.

Mercury Expected To Hit 20 Below

Quinte Area Faces Several Cold Days

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Winter 1970 . . . already one of the cruellest in Quinte memory . . . may seal its bitter record tonight.

Before tomorrow temperatures will have touched a crippling new low . . . 20 below zero.

That was the prediction from CFB Trenton weather office today.

And relief won't come early for an area that has been in the deep freeze for almost a month.

In the next five days temperatures could continue to stay as much as 10 degrees below normal.

The bleak prediction for tonight's weather comes after temperatures had warmed briefly yesterday as the district lay under cloud cover.

However the clouds rolled by and colder air moved in. By 10 a.m. today it was still six below at Trenton with a forecast high for the day of five above.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Clear, very cold weather will continue today in areas along the south shores of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay as well as parts of the Niagara Peninsula. Local snowsqualls can be expected. Some cloudiness, a few snowflurries and a slight moderation in temperatures is indicated for Northern Ontario Thursday while the remainder of the province will continue mainly sunny and cold.

Watch on the Moira

Moira River in downtown Belleville, with a record of floods, is under constant surveillance as worst winter in decades shows no sign of unfreezing. Emergency measures co-ordinator Angus Duffy and city police constable Charles Peters make early-morning inspection of Footbridge area. Police maintain round-the-clock check on river levels.

Israeli Force Invades Jordan

From AP-Reuters

An Israeli armored force crossed into Jordan south of the Dead Sea Tuesday night and remained for nearly 20 hours, striking at Arab guerrilla bases, the Israeli military command reported today.

Jordan said there was a major land and air battle.

The Israelis said their force killed five guerrillas and suffered no casualties or damage. Al Fatah, the guerrilla organization, said its men killed two of the raiders and destroyed two Israeli tanks.

It was the largest Israeli penetration of Jordan since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Saudi Arabian forces stationed in the area joined Arab guerrillas and Jordanian army units in battling the Israelis, an Al Fatah communique issued in Damascus said.

Showdown on Prices Coming

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal prices and incomes commission is ready to bring debate about a price-restraint program to a head at a national conference next month.

The commission will seek the agreement of business and the profession in Ottawa Feb. 9 and 10 to a program that would keep price increases below cost increments this year.

If a consensus is reached on a price-restraint formula, federal and provincial governments will be asked to back up the program by providing for legal sanctions to deal with transgressors, commission chairman John Young told a news conference Tuesday.

A week after the meeting, the commission will take the results to the previously-scheduled Feb. 16 conference of federal and provincial heads of government.

They will be asked to adhere to any agreed formula in governmental business dealings and to support the program with "something beyond public opinion" in the way of back-up sanctions. Dr. Young said.

Rape Commonplace

Newsman Sees Famished Biafrans Fight for Food

OWERRI, Nigeria (AP) — The first newspaper men allowed inside fallen Biafra saw famished refugees fighting for food, looting by Nigerian soldiers and heard several first-hand accounts of women being raped by victorious Nigerian troops.

The farther the press party went inside former Biafran territory, the worse the conditions of hunger, homelessness and confusion became.

Everywhere refugees were on the road, teetering all their worldly goods on their heads, hunting lost husbands and children, trying desperately to change their Biafran money into Nigerian pounds to buy what food was available at little impromptu roadside markets.

A young British doctor, working in Nigeria less than two weeks, leaned his head against an ambulance and wept with rage.

"I've had Lugers stuck in both my ears," he sobbed. "My life has been threatened umpteen times by soldiers wanting to steal my trucks and ambulances."

The doctor said he had just returned from an open field where 80 to 100 wounded Biafran soldiers were "lying in their own pus and excrement, waiting for treatment that never arrived."

"They bloody well ought to be dead," he said. "Now I've got to go try and fix them up. Don't go near them unless you've got clothespins on your nose."

The doctor, from Colchester, would only give his name as "Doctor Phil."

Without naming the unit, he said the soldiers on duty in the area of the pediatric hospital at Okporo were "such monsters" he never let the nurses go anywhere without an escort, "especially white ones—the native nurses can always go into the bush if something happens."

"The young girls are afraid to come out of the bush, they are terrified of what will happen," Ibo novelist Cyprian Ekwensi told reporters. "There is now a saying among them: 'Stay in hiding or you will be conscripted into the army.'".

"My sister Bibi was taken off and raped by the soldiers," a university student named Paul Ohagwa said. Two Biafran nurses who would only give their names as Theresa and Caroline said they were raped several times as they passed through roadblocks trying to make their way out of the bush.

In Port Harcourt, recaptured by federal troops 17 months ago and now a state capital, the state governor entertained top brass at his daughter's wedding feast. But just a few miles away, Ibo refugees faced death. About 600 were crammed into the tiny Niger Maternity Home,

Children Dying by Thousands

OWERRI, Nigeria (Reuters) — Children are still dying here today, and thousands more seem inevitably destined to perish, as the Nigerian government tries to make its relief efforts work in former Biafra.

Nine days after the fall of this last capital of the secessionist state, there are children with kwashiorkor (protein deficiency) here who sit crying helplessly in the dust while their parents fight with each other over grains of cornmeal.

The whole civilian population appears to be hungry, and a member of an Austrian Red Cross team said here "plenty are dying, most of them in the bush."

The people here try hopelessly to buy what little food there is with Biafran money, which now is valueless. Thousands throng the market, where there is little more than red peppers for sale.

They say there isn't even cassava, their staple root diet, or yams in the countryside—one of the most densely-peopled regions in Africa. The defeated Ibo, whose leaders formally surrendered Thursday, now are eating cassava leaves to stay alive.

Red, yellow and white blossoms adorn the trees, but there is no sign of the "food in the trees and the ground" referred to last week in Lagos by a member of a military observer team here.

The inhabitants of Owerri say there was no killing by Nigerian troops after the war ended, as they had been led to expect by their exiled former leader, Odumegwu Ojukwu.

There are, however, widespread complaints that soldiers are looting and molesting girls in former Biafran villages, and several soldiers tried to abduct a young wife in view of several foreign correspondents here today.

Col. Impola Ainrinade, the young commandant of Owerri, said: "I don't think it is true there has been general looting and raping. In every war, you will find odd soldiers who behave this way."

He said a Nigerian soldier had been shot two days ago when caught molesting a girl. As he spoke, Nigerian troops were beating back starving Ibos trying to reach relief supplies stored in a compound here.

The four-nation observer team of Sweden, Canada, Poland and Britain—invited by Nigeria during the war to report on complaints of alleged atrocities—be-

No Starvation States Thompson

TORONTO (CP) — Refugees of the Nigerian civil war are not starving, says Robert Thompson, Progressive Conservative MP for Red Deer, Alta.

In a cable from Nigeria, received Tuesday by Rev. William Fitch of Knox Presbyterian Church and World Vision, a relief organization that sponsored his trip, Mr. Thompson said:

"Reports of starving millions have been victory for skilful propagandists. Conditions are under commendable control and no starvation. Resettlement and reconstruction Canada's prime responsibility. Continuing inspection."

Mr. Thompson arrived in Biafra last Thursday, with the permission of the Canadian and Nigerian governments.

"He moved into the heart of the rebel territory," Dr. Fitch said, "and has been free for the last three days to go into every corner."

It's C-c-cold - - But Reactions Differ

The generation gap is showing in these pictures. At left, Mark Hillman, a Grade 1 student in Sarnia, wears a mask for protection against the chill as he makes a toboggan run as an essay assignment. But, right, adults cool off in the snow after baking in the sauna at the Collingwood district ski cabin of Toronto lawyer John Carson. Which is the smarter generation?

No Agreement at Meeting

Tweed Shocker: Separate Board Won't Sell School

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Tweed - Hungerford ratepayers' association's efforts to keep its high school downtown, of today on a development, is dead and forsaken.

Hopes that the Tweed - Hungerford High School Board would, by the Hastings and Prince Edward County separate school Board would, at the request of sale, would be sold back to the Hastings county board of education, were dashed this morning as a senior separate school official declared the separate school board "is definitely committed to retaining the school and it as a senior high school elementary school" said Superintendent.

Some indication that the hoped - for reversal of the previous agreement would be undertaken came last night as Paul Fleming, separate school supporter on the Hastings county board of education, asserted there was no intent on the part of the separate school board to sell the school back to the public county board.

His made the statement at a meeting in Centennial Secondary School between the Tweed-Hungerford "save our school" association and the trustees of the Hastings County Board of Education.

This morning, the senior separate school board official confirmed Mr. Fleming's words by saying "after an intensive study of the Hastings and Prince Edward Separate School Board's mission for 1969, indications are that the board is definitely committed to retain the school".

At the meeting last night, several Tweed ratepayers intimated that the school was originally sold in 1968 with the understanding the separate school board would sell it back for continuing use as a high school.

The original sale was blocked by the department of education. With the transfer of county boards in 1969, negotiations were re-opened, and the Hastings county board of education sold the school to the new county separate school board.

Theme of the Tweed-Hungerford ratepayers' association's presentation was expressed by Rev. Ian Munro, United Church minister in Tweed, who said the trustees: "It is unnecessary to close the school because its mind" on closure and sale of the school this June.

"I have reason to believe that the Hastings board changed its mind about the sale of the school the separate school board is not of its agreement," Mr. Munro stated.

His words were echoed by several separate school supporters on the ratepayers' group, before Mr. Fleming poured cold water on their hopes.

"The separate school people are taking a wait-and-see, hands - off attitude. If the public board wants the school," commented William McCrea of the Tweed group.

"There's no use beating around the bush," interjected Thomas Kelly, a separate school supporter and chairman of Tweed-Hungerford District High School Board in 1968.

We (the former Tweed board) sold the school so that secondary education would continue in Tweed. It gave us a breather."

"The night (the 1968 Tweed-Hungerford High School Board) decided to sell the school, the vote was tied 3-3," Mr. Kelly related. "I was the man with the controlling vote. I turned to the three separate school supporters on the board and told them if the school could be sold back and secondary education continued at the high school I'd cast my vote for the sale. They agreed and I did."

Tweed's position on the school's status was summed up by Reeve Barbara Allen, who claimed the school was "in excess" and "the only way to settle it is to have it construed by a court of law."

Laird Morton, chairman of the "ratepayers" committee, said: "It is the unanimous opinion in the area that the school should remain as a complete secondary school."

His arguments was taken up by Donald Hodgins, vice-chairman of the group who said Tweed is a growing area and the board should take a look at its development."

He said that when the country of regional government and boundary changes in the county, Tweed will be more strategic in the area to become four years time Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc could accommodate and the Tweed school would be needed."

Trustee Donald Williams of Stirling challenged the statement. He noted that Mr. hygius figures show a growth rate of 100 people in Tweed over the last 10 years.

"If 30 or 40 of these people are secondary school students, that's still not a good argument for keeping the school," he said.

"The people of the area are not that interested in the economics of the situation," said Reeve Allen. "There are sociological, psychological and human factors to be taken into consideration. We need the school — you are going to amputate a vital part of our community."

James Clarke, chairman of the county board told her "our decision to close the school was based on similar factors."

"We disagree on what is the greatest good for the greatest number of people," he said.

Mr. Hodgins said he agreed the Tweed-Hungerford school could not continue as a high school with only 500 students. He said 500 to 600 students were needed to make the institution economically viable.

"We don't want a purely academic school," he said. "I believe in equality of educational opportunity. Belleville is overcrowded by 600 pupils. You could but those from north Hawley to Tweed as easily as to Belleville."

Kenneth Little of the Tweed association attempted to obtain a show of hands from trustees on his question, "How many of you might be changed your minds?" but board chairman James Clarke ruled the question out of order.

But before the meeting adjourned on the motion of Reeve Allen, Mr. Clarke promised that the board and its administrators would review all pertinent data on the situation again in the coming months.

Examination Time Again

The gymnasium at Trenton High School is being pressed into academic service this week as students write 1½-hour examinations. The Trenton students have only two sets of exams this year, one in January and the second in June.

Three Area Hospitals Closed to Visitors

Three Quinte area hospitals have been closed to visitors as influenza flourishes in the coldest winter in decades.

Personal effects of the virus have been described as "troublesome" but "quite mild," by Dr. C. R. Link, Hastings and Prince Edward counties health officer.

For reasons unknown, that virus is more active in Prince Edward County, he says.

Its spread has been seriously noted at Trenton, Picton and Campbellford. Hospitals in all three communities have been closed to visitors.

Prince Edward is getting the bug "quite heavily," reports the health officer.

School and industrial absenteeism in the Belleville area was "not too bad" up to yesterday, he added.

Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital moved quickly to reduce any threat to patients.

Hospital administrator William Cooke said that although all beds are filled, only a small percentage of the patients are flu victims. Mr. Cooke noted that the hospital is short - handed this week owing to a high incidence of flu among members of the nursing staff.

At Trenton, visitors were banned this morning until further notice.

Mrs. Clara M. Lowe, acting administrator of Trenton Memorial Hospital, said the move was made by the medical staff to protect patients.

"We'd like to ask for the co-operation and understanding of the public," she said. "This was done in the best interests of proper patient care."

To the west in Campbellford, a hospital spokesman said his institution has been closed to visitors for a week.

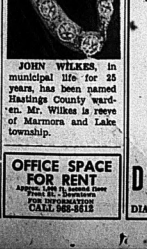
Visiting is restricted to the immediate family of seriously ill patients.

"A more than comfortable" number of the staff is absent due to flu.

But, in Belleville, Trenton, Napanee and Bancroft, hospitals remain open to visitors and the situation is not regarded as serious as far as staffing the institutions are concerned.

In Belleville, assistant administrator William Joy said yesterday "The flu situation has not really reached a serious stage — not to the point of discussing closing of the hospital to visitors. The observable rate of absenteeism among the staff is not much higher than normal."

The kitchen and housekeeping staff at Trenton Memorial Hospital is "really feeling the pinch" of absenteeism due to flu, a spokesman said. "But the nursing unit isn't as badly off", he added.



"We haven't ground to a stop yet," she added, but we've certainly been affected by the bug."

No curtailment of visiting hours is planned, although the spokesman estimated about 30 per cent of the Trenton hospital's staff has been affected by flu at various times during the last two weeks.

The situation is about the same at Lennox and Addington Memorial Hospital in Napanee, where visiting privileges remain on a normal basis.

The hospital in Bancroft is still open to visitors, although in most former years it closed its doors to visitors for about two weeks every January.

"We generally have to ban visitors for two weeks every year if this time due to flu and respiratory diseases in the community," said a spokesman. "But so far the situation here is healthy and the staff all had flu shots a week ago."

JOHN WILKES, in municipal life for 25 years, has been named Hastings County warden. Mr. Wilkes is reeve of Marmora and Lake township.

County Planning Area This Year Goal of Hastings Warden

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Consideration of regional planning and the establishment of a county planning area are two of the most serious problems to face the 1973 Hastings county council.

This was the dates yesterday of the new county warden, Mr. Wilson, reeve of Marmora and Lake township, as he formally accepted his robes of office.

Mr. Wilson was chosen warden of the county over two other applicants, Reeve Howard Allen of Tweed, and Reeve Carman Gibson of Tyendinaga township.

"County councils are at the crossroads," observed Warden Wilson in his inaugural speech, as he referred to the gradual erosion of county responsibilities. He noted that establishment of justice and new courts had been taken over by the province.

"We must look to regional government and to the establishment of a county planning area," he said.

Hopefully a county planning area could be established this year, he said.

Warden Wilson welcomed the many visitors to the inaugural council session.

The new warden, in his address, said he wanted over the reins of office from last year's council head reeve Donald Rikley of Hungerford. In a career in the 20th year of municipal service on this council, he has served as chairman of 14 committees and 11 years as reeve.

He is the first county warden from Marmora and Lake in more than 100 years of county history.

Hastings MLA Clarke T. Rollins described county government as the "grass roots" of all government, stating that in the Ontario Legislature it was easy to spot members who had had experience at the county level.

Referring to regional government, Mr. Rollins expressed the hope that Hastings County would not become an out of government, suggesting that there were no advantages to be gained in the warden by MP Lee Grills who commended briefly on federal matters.

He said the area unemployment office at Kingston was not giving good service and that he was on the phone every day helping claimants. Referring to the hearing of county court officers, Mr. Grills said this was to be expected in the case of many small offices, but he hoped that the matter would be settled soon. He said the department was "going a little beyond their bounds."

Deputy reeve of the county warden Gordon Lloyd also attended the Hastings council inaugural.

The township municipalities and their Hastings county council make representation with Belleville and Trenton to the county school board for an agreement on different school tax due dates than provided in the act.

As an example, the resolution suggested that the board of education agree to 50 per cent of school taxes becoming due on March 31, 25 per cent on Sept. 30 and 25 per cent on Dec. 15.

Tyendinaga reeve Carman Gibson said that Belleville would benefit if the resolution was agreed to by the school board, in that the city would get credit for any forward payments.

All this has written a new chapter in the half-century history of commercial radio.

"Right now in radio we're experiencing a retail explosion," said Mr. Haynes. "More retailers are putting money (in radio advertising) than ever before."

Sound of Success

Success is no sound effect in radio these days — it's a reality. Radio is in new golden age of commercial sales say John Spragge and Cedric Haynes of Radio Sales Bureau.

Sound of the Seventies

Advertisers Told Radio Has Own Niche

Radio specialists in sound effects.

Its effectiveness is marked by another crisp sound which listeners never hear — the ruste of cash.

Last year alone, retailers spent $54,000,000 getting merchandising messages across commercial Canadian radio. "The figure may well jump 10 per cent in 1970.

And the future?

"We're sold in our 51st year and it's a brand new age," John Spragge, director of sales services with the Radio Sales Bureau told Belleville-area last night. "And . . . you ain't heard nothing yet.

With sales bureau president Cedric Haynes, Mr. Spragge was in the city to address the Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

Both men shared the guest speaker's spot and the same theme: Radio, despite the advent of television, the tradition of newspapers, is now solidly entrenched as a communications medium unto itself and is in a new golden age.

"Radio," said Mr. Haynes, "is now an integral part of life in 1970."

Supporting his statement he quoted statistics that show:

Last year 2,000,000 new radios were purchased in Canada — a sales volume worth $100 million.

Eight of 10 cars are radio equipped.

Contrary to wide opinion adults mark up more listening time than teenagers — an average 1 hr's 25 mins. compared to 2 hrs. 15 mins.

Added to this are unique feature of radio itself — its programming flexibility, local flavor, popularity in urban and rural areas, its ability to match the mobility of listeners.

Mr. Spragge reminded his audience — a majority of whom were city businessmen that "radio gives you the last word with drivers on their way to shop."

Manna Funds To Go Towards Debts

PICTON — Operation Manna, a Hebron relief fund drive originated last fall by two Prince Edward County ministers, continues to receive contributions following Sunday's collection in Nigeria. Rev. Robert Jones, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton, who is acting campaign chairman, said yesterday that donations can still be made through an open account at the Canadian Bank of Montreal, Colborne. Cash rounds is served downtown stores and shoppers are continuing to deposit coin and bills. Mr. Jones, with the assistance of Rev. Peter Brouwsel, Anglican Christian Reformed Church, Bloomfield, is spearheading Operation Manna which gained the support of the Prince Edward County Ministerial Association.

Referring to the campaign's success, Mr. Jones revealed that $6,800 was raised in Prince Edward County for disaster in Canada/relief. The money covered the cost of 1½ food flights into Biafra. The collection plates totalled $1,200 on stores combined. more than $450 at last count. All money now received by Operation Manna will be contributed to Canadrelief to assist in paying its outstanding debts.

The Activists

Birds of a feather in the leftist activist stakes are Daniel Cohn-Bendit and Stanley Gray, who got together in Montreal last week after Cohn-Bendit's arrival from Europe.

Cohn-Bendit was the leader of France's May 1968 student revolt which almost toppled the de Gaulle government and Gray is a former McGill University political science professor whose Marxist views and advocacy of French as the working language at McGill led to his expulsion.

This is a free country but there can be no doubt that neither Cohn-Bendit nor Gray are plugging for democracy as we know it. Indeed it would be interesting to know just what is the purpose of Cohn-Bendit's visit, if it is not political — and the chances of that are practically nil.

It may seem a small point, but the report of Cohn-Bendit's arrival noted that he was "whisked away in a small European car by Mr. Gray. . . ." Now university professors do not live on the bread line and can easily afford any of the bigger North American model cars. But at one university in Toronto — York — the great majority of students and faculty, as a protest against war and United States involvement in Vietnam, refuse to drive cars built by U.S. plants or their Canadian affiliates.

Perhaps the same attitude prevails in other universities and Stanley Gray for one has a European model. Each to his own of course, but it does illustrate the political thinking of both students and faculty members. It is a chilling thought that Marxism is the gospel of not a few in these categories and those who are unaware of it, or are uncommitted politically, should beware of this political trend in their midst.

Time for Sport

You have to admit that Canada has one of the healthiest climates in the world. These tingling January days make one feel really alive.

Moreover, you have to hand it to the snowmobiles; used with discretion, with regard for the rights of the general public and for conservation, they have lured thousands of Canadians to the outdoors who ordinarily would not stray far from the warmth of their living-rooms.

While it provides lots of fresh air, sitting or kneeling on a snowmobile seat does not however, provide much exercise for its devotees. Skiing is the answer to that and there is skiing for not to mention an old-fashioned walk.

Looking ahead a bit to spring and summer we hope more Bellevillians will enter the ranks of active sportsmen. Tennis has been gaining in popularity, but not as far from equalling the participation level of other countries; and we are light years away from even seeing an exhibition of the game by someone of the calibre of say Rod Laver or Pancho Gonzales. Still, if more could be induced to take up the game seriously we could reach the stage at least of holding local tournaments.

Meanwhile it is still January and next month a whole carnival is scheduled for Zwick's Island. As we said before, it is hard to beat winter — for sport, exercise and the season's own unique scenic beauty.

Regretting It?

When you are 21 and have inherited a fortune estimated at $26,000,000, it is easy to feel generous and announce you want to give a lot of it away. But New Yorker Michael James Brody Jr. is finding out quickly that members of the public are pretty demanding in such matters. Brody dashed off cheque after cheque before he wearied of the situation and ordered everybody cut off. He rented $400,000 home. The poor boy should have kept his mouth shut; every hoodlum in the United States will be after him now, and he and his new bride likely will need round-the-clock police protection. Such is the price of generosity (or is it naivety?) in those of tender years.

Fair Dealing

What price honesty and fair dealing? Well, a Belleville woman found out recently when she forwarded a money order and, inadvertently, a $10 along with it, to a Boston firm of stamp dealers.

Back came the $10 bill with a friendly note from the U.S. firm, pointing out that "these things do happen." Says the Belleville citizen: "I think the note speaks for itself. I thought maybe it might restore some people's faith in others. I had no idea I had sent this $10 with the money order."

So all's well that ends well!

France on Losing End

Nigeria Target of Three-Power Interest as War Ends

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Slowly shaking off the agony of a brutal war, Nigeria is likely to become the target of a world diplomatic courtship of a size never before seen in an African state.

It is not just a case, in oversimplified terms, of Britain having backed Nigeria, which suppressed support for Biafra, in the search for increased West African influence, while some British newspapers suggest.

It is more of a case of the United States considering just how far the Soviet Union intends to go in pursuit of its African interests, and possible spread of Communist strength.

The speed with which Soviet publications hailed the federal victory over Biafra and charged the West with having worsened the war, indicates, along with Soviet arms supplies, the importance Moscow places on its relations with Nigeria.

Aside from its huge mineral potential, Nigeria is strategically well-placed to play a decisive role in West African affairs. As a result of the war, Nigeria has amassed military strength and experience which might overawe her less-developed French-speaking neighbors.

Some military observers suggest it was the devastating power of the 122-millimetre Soviet guns, brought forward by federal forces which finally broke the back of the Biafran defence. Having made large supplies of armaments available in the federal side, Moscow now emphasizes that the Nigerian government should be able to tell its friends from its enemies.

Whether Mal.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon, the federal leader, will become hypnotized by the Soviet courtship is another matter. Though the war is over, he will require huge amounts of aid for his country's full recovery. One neighbor, President Albert Bongo of Gabon—strongly opposed and supported Biafra—maintains that Communist influence will grow in Lagos and that in the end Gowon may be eliminated by Communist forces.

Some British experts maintain the Communist element in Nigerian affairs is exaggerated and that Africa's preference has shown that leaders can swing rapidly from one side to another. Britain's hand is played the game cautiously in Lagos, hardly surprising since it has been prepping any aid and carefully sidling by Gowon's necessity.

In Paris Le Monde maintains that while Britain adopted a "hypocritical attitude" during the war, the Soviet Union was fooling no one by hailing the federal victory, a defeat of imperialism. As for France itself, the charge no longer could be dismissed that it encouraged Biafra's secessionist endeavor and attempted to satisfy shady political and commercial motives.

Along with other major powers, France had high hopes for a Biafran victory. Even if circumstances show it already pays a major role among former colonies, Paris is determined to maintain that those hopes have been shattered. But this game of political intrigue and diplomatic courtship is not over. Gowon is likely to be overwhelmed by many others as competitors outbid each other for influence in Lagos.

Alberta's mountain playgrounds attract thousands of tourists every year. Here in the heart of the Rockies two horseback riders pause on the slopes overlooking the championship golf course at Banff. In the left background is the Banff Springs hotel.

Baby It's Not That Cold Outside!

Ottawa Journal

It has not been a memorable cold snap by any means (remember when it was 34 below in 1947 — or was it '41?) but it's stuffy enough to be getting some notice. Ten or 15 below is hardly something to get excited about. Toronto or New York might be impressed with those temperatures but not the Ottawa Valley.

Those desperate efforts of the radio announcers to intimidate by calculations of "chill factors" are really admissions that the temperature isn't all that low!

Twenty-five below doesn't need any embellishment. In the old days that would send great cracks shuddering through the house. (Modern homes don't seem to creak under cold, more the pity.) The frost on the windows and queer quality of the morning light would tell the story.

Chill factor — bah! If the cold is not on the thermometer — preferably on the large ones with red mercury which are now hard to find — it doesn't count.

The effort to make it seem and sound colder than the temperature shows is probably an unconscious attempt to make us seem hardier than we really are. We northerners want to boast of our hardships. The reports of colder temperatures in Montana or Colorado make us envious. The only low readings which give any satisfaction are 35 in Miami or 32 in Fort Lauderdale, specially if our friends have chosen that time for their winter vacation.

British Economy on Upswing

Montreal Star

Britain is displaying one of these upsurges in vitality which, surfacing frequently, advises the world never to count out the British as lost, strayed or decadent.

The British have lowered the voting age and the age of legal capacity from 21 to 18. Young people at 18 now may cast ballots, sign binding contracts, make wills, marry without consent — and be sued for default of their debts. Whether many of the newly enfranchised will use their vote, and whether they will believe they owe gratitude to the Tory party which gives the credit for the age-lowering, remains to be tested. The British haven't had the American argument that if young people can be drafted at 18, they should be allowed to vote. But while Americans debate the issue, the British have acted.

Meanwhile, as though to trumpet Britain's economic recovery and the elevation of the pound sterling above par for the first time in nearly two years, the British Government has abolished the ESO (1130) restriction on what a Briton can spend on a vacation abroad. Except for a brief 1947 interlude, the British have been hobbled by monetary travel restrictions ever since World War II with a general election ahead, quite possibly before the year is out. Prime Minister Wilson is emphasizing Britain's markedly improved balance of payments position and its sustained recovery by this happy end to travel tightness. Undoubtedly it perhaps this too will have impact at the polls.

Britain's economic upsurge is indeed noteworthy. The OECD at Paris sees a British payments surplus of $1.4 billion for 1970. Britain should be able to repay more of its heavy international borrowings. Its stronger trading position should ease British entry into the Common Market.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 21, 1970 . . .

Louis XVI of France was guillotined 177 years ago today—in 1793—at the age of 39. Although mentally dull and interested in nothing much besides hunting, Louis was popular and did not lose the loyalty of the Paris mob until the war with Austria, three years after the "revolution" of 1789. The war aroused hatred of Queen Marie Antoinette, an aunt of the Austrian emperor, and the king's enemies were able to use this. During Louis' trial, only 361 of 721 members of the Convention—a majority of one —voted for the king's death.

1519—Panama City was founded.

1854—The first atomic-powered submarine, Nautilus, was launched at Groton, Conn.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—British amphibious troops invaded Ramree Island in the Arakan salient; the Chinese Central news agency reported the recapture of the Burma Road town of Wanting Jan. 20; 6,300 draftees across Canada were reported AWL.

Quebec Liberals Take A Chance on Bourassa

Montreal Gazette

The Quebec Liberal Party has chosen a new leader and in doing so it has taken a chance.

The choice of Robert Bourassa was unanimous but a safe one. He is young at 36, relatively inexperienced in politics and has been in the public eye only a few months. But having said this performance leading up to the convention and everything this last weekend has been impressive. The delegates clearly voted for potential, not only the next few months and years will tell whether they were right.

The challenges Mr. Bourassa now faces are formidable. Usually a new leader of a political party is given a year or more to learn about his job before he must face the electorate. But it is beginning to look more and more as if Mr. Bourassa will have only a few months to acquaint himself with the job before taking to the campaign trail. The task of planning such a campaign must begin soon, if it hasn't already started.

The new leader is off to a good start. He used the last few days of the leadership campaign to prepare the Liberals to fight the National Union. This is what they wanted to hear, and it must have persuaded many last - minute doubters and helped him win by an impressive majority on the first ballot.

But the main thrust of his campaign was a promise to negotiate and solve the complex economic problems facing Quebec. "Prosperity" was the slogan and the message was cleverly spelled out that Quebec — particularly the Quebec Government — could quickly and over a broad front to pull the province out of its present economic slough.

Some advice he received at the beginning of the campaign was that most Quebecers were not preoccupied with economics but other things. He rejected the advice, and it was proved right during the campaign. And if one thing was clear from the tone and atmosphere of the weekend meeting in Quebec City, it was that economics is indeed a major preoccupation with Quebecers.

The Depressing Burden of Poverty

Dependent Families Need More Community Support

Owen Sound Sun Times

Mental depression is one of the biggest threats to those who live on inadequate incomes, particularly mothers of several children. It is true that society, generally speaking, provides such people with sufficient to get along on, at least as far as food, heat and shelter are concerned. Clothing, a spirit, revival at any time for the fairer sex, is another matter for these dependent on such assistance.

Probably the greatest factor in the realm of depression is the trapped feeling which in any very low income mothers of several children feel. It is a situation which no doubt often leads to the breaking point, sometimes resulting in seeking artificial means of release, on occasions actual abandonment.

There's no money for baby sitters. Often there is little if any choice of recreation, either in the home or outside of it. Frequently there are no friends to drop in, and nowhere they could be entertained in reasonable quiet and order if there were. And, quite often, the "kids" suffer.

If mothers in such instances could be provided with an afternoon or evening out each week many problem-situations would be averted. It is a field in which women of the churches might take on a major role, one much more important, perhaps, than engaging staff at missionary efforts or in seeking their own entertainment in one way or another.

Probably the greatest factor in them not doing so is lack of any program, of any direction as to how to go about it. And, of course, the homes into which such volunteer helpers would have to go are far from ideal, could provide a revelation of how the other part of society lives.

Or, perhaps a better plan would be to care for the children within the church facilities, letting certain mothers have their, on certain afternoons they can have freedom from the family ties for a few hours. It could be provided with some relaxation 'n another part of the building, perhaps merely getting help in making over some of the hand-me-down clothing which most of them depend on.

Newspaperman Sees Famished Biafrans Fighting for Food

many of them lying motionless in the hot sun amid vomit, dust and flies.

A group of British construction workers took up a collection to find food for them. They said there is no food daily.

Many of the children could not move and lay gasping as nurse Miss Fleming of Copenhagen tried to feed them.

"God help these children," Londoner Les Archer told reporters.

"Nobody else seems to want to. I cannot believe this is happening."

"The villages are the worst off," said an Irish missionary, Rev. Eamonn McMahon, surrounded by hundreds of refugees begging for Nigerian crumbs in the shell-pocked main square of Owerri.

"They have no food, their money is useless and we have no way of getting anything for them."

The once proud Ibos, who through education and ambition had moved further up the ladder of progress than Nigeria's 200 other tribes, were reduced to begging in tattered, outstretched hands by the roadside, and fighting and cursing at each other when a food bag fell off a truck or broke at a feeding station.

Such scenes were repeated endlessly in the 150-mile tour of the land. For all Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon's good intentions, it did not seem that the Nigerian army and the government relief machinery could begin coping with the problem.

Ull airstrip, except for a few potholes, seemed to be in excellent condition. But it was deserted save for the rusting carcass of an at least six planes bombed in their parking bays in the final federal siege.

"We ought to get 40 planes a night, now we get nothing," said Ekwenti. "It is imperative that the government use the existing relief agencies."

But the government has barred all foreign relief agencies that helped Biafra.

A Nigerian captain in charge of guard detail at the giant army war command at questions of using Uli strip now.

"It was built by the rebels," he said. "We would never think of using it. We will build a bit nie airfield."

At many places along the road Nigerian soldiers were wearing two and three wrist watches and loading furniture and bedding from empty looted ceda trucks. Refugees complained constantly of looting.

"All I have left is these rags you see on my back," said Godfrey Mmeli, standing outside his empty hut in Okporo. "They came, beat up my wife and took everything. Yesterday they wanted to take this one for their pleasure," he added, pointing to his obviously pregnant daughter.

"An officer came and we stopped them, so instead they went across the way and took my neighbor's wife. She had had a baby only 15 days ago."

At one pobt in the trip, on the road between Owerri and Orlu, the International observer's team was making an inspection of the surrendered territories.

A team member said the observers had only so far received "second hand information on rape cases. . . . Our main interest is the question of genocide; you don't wipe out the Ibo race by rape. In fact, quite the contrary."

Although many social workers from the church agencies declared persons pan grata and many of the Irish missionaries had been moved to Port Harcourt and declared under guard, quite a few were still operating in the field and optimistic about staying.

"We want to stay on, we don't feel we've done anything wrong except to stay with our parishioners to help them stay alive," said Father McMahon, adding that his own town of Mbieri had been taken without a shot and that the soldiers were courteous.

Asked about repeated protests to the reporters by refugees about rape and looting, Father McMahon shook his head: "These sort of things happen in war, there's really nothing new in it."

Rev. Thomas Maguire, from Dublin, said the initial chaos had abated, soldiers had returned to their barracks and the Nigerian police had taken over administration of the towns.

As the months dragged on the war had been in the Nigerian police, already had dug his old uniform, dusted it off and then blackballing his way to Port Harcourt with a pass for reassignment to the Owerri hospital.

But with troops pulling back into barracks, the police had an almost impossible job on their hands, especially those who had been barred by from country food areas to help out.

Wherever a food truck arrived, there was a mad and shocking scene of rushing, pushing and screaming. Beggars, like this one, who had been inside Biafra in its dying days and seen the orderly lines at the feeding stations, could scarcely believe these were the same people.

To their shame, several foreign television cameramen helped create scenes of riot for filming by throwing Nigerian money in the air and letting the hungry masses scramble for it.

Sick Children Need Nurses

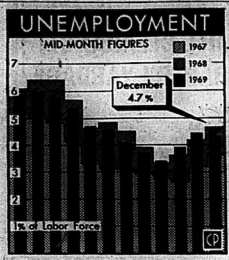
day was visiting Orlu, the last secessionist town to fall to federal forces.

Asked about widespread allegations made here of rape and looting by Nigerian soldiers, Brig.-Gen. John Drewry of Canada said he did not consider it serious.



He said 10 cases of rape at the same time and at the same spot might be worth investigating. But, aside from that, rape was something that sometimes happened in war. On looting, he said: "I don't know if it has been looting or something that has been thrown away."

In a children's hospital a few miles from Uli, once the air lifeline to Biafra, dying children look at visitors with eyes that are imploring, accusing or all-knowing.

There are 900 children in the hospital, with 200 "worse cases" expected from another hospital Thursday, and only three doctors—two of them British—and seven nurses.

Dr. Hermann Mvanerti, a young Nigerian doctor, said the hospital now had enough food.

"What we need are doctors and nurses," she said. "If we had them immediately, we could save the majority of these children."

Cold Ahead

Quiete emergency measures co - ordinator Angus Duffy says the river in the city's commercial downtown area has been looking up during the cold spell.

Yesterday, he said, he phoned Front Street merchants with investors on the city's east bank to check flood - pumping equipment—just in case.

"We don't suggest there's going to be any flooding—but the potential is there," said the co - ordinator.

Yesterday afternoon, the city's works department again tested the river's channel at Victoria Park for slush ice.

Little of the slush — which washes downstream and builds up to block the Moira's free flow — could be found, said a works spokesman.

However, a Moira River Conservation Authority official agreed more water, fed from higher levels in the Quinte uplands, could be washing downstream.

City police are keeping constant vigil on the river — particularly in the Footbridge area — where Mr. Duffy sees signs of higher and higher levels.

Question of Paying Board

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Please state if you think a person earning good money at holiday times and after school shouldn't help out financially. Also, even if they are paying board, I feel everyone should have a few chores to do.

Our boy is 18 and rather immature. He argues and argues about any chore I think he can out-talk us. His excuse all summer was he was paying board. — Puzzled Mother.

Dear Puzzled: When a boy is earning steadily, he most definitely should pay board. This covers out of wages he does anything else.

If he works part time during the school year, you should agree between you as to where the money ought to go. In some homes, a percentage of each pay goes toward clothes or school expenses.

You do nothing but good if you help him get even a faint idea of how money needs management, to prevent it from melting away. I'm sending you the name of a good booklet about this, put out by a finance company.

Certainly he should help with the chores. He is not a mere boarder, but a family member; and shares the jobs as well as the privileges of his home.

* * *

Dear Doris: I have known a certain dear friend since she was five, and had new her when she was seven. Since then we have written to each other for three years. Now her parents decide that I am too old to be friends with her, and have even written saying that all my letters to her would be destroyed.

This has upset me, as there isn't one person I have known for whom I could have so much love. It will be impossible to forget her. I know she feels the same about me as her letters tell me how much I mean to her and express the hope that we will have a lasting friendship.

I am a little over 10 years older than she is. —Miserable.

Dear Miserable: According to my calculations, your girl is 10 and you are over 20. You have really been rocking the cradle in a big way.

Better do what the parents say. Find new friends closer to your own age and leave it to fate whether you ever get together again with your little girl.

* * *

Confidential to Insulted Stepmother: Your husband's children have appallingly bad manners when they come to see you. Yet he may have tried so hard for so long to be both father and mother to these young people that it hurts him when you criticize.

Don't clam up about it — open up communications. Tell him you know how hurt he is: that you love him and can't bear to see him so upset. Get his support in cutting down on these traumatic visits.

When you do invite these ungrateful children, don't include a meal. Don't give them another chance to scorn your cooking.

Ann Landers

Bachelor Wants Agreement in Writing

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been going with an attractive bachelor for seven months. He is considered a good catch, but he is 14 years my senior. (I am 32) and I'm a little uneasy about a man of his financial status who still lives with his mother.

Last night he said, half-joking, "I'll marry you if you agree, in writing, to do these five things." I asked, "What are the five things?" He then whipped out a piece of paper and handed me a pencil. Here is the list of requirements:

(1) I will change the bed linen every night.

(2) I will wear makeup to bed — no hair rollers or face cream.

(3) I will get dressed in the morning — no bathrobes or housecoats at breakfast.

(4) If I snore, I agree to have surgery and get the snore fixed.

(5) I will not speak in the morning until I am spoken to.

His requirements are not unreasonable, but I resent his attitude. What do you think? — PIE FACE.

DEAR PIE: I think you ought to let his mother keep him for another 14 years.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A close friend of mine has a daughter who was always sensitive and never got along well with children her own age. Lila kept to herself mostly or tagged along with her mother.

Last year Lila, who was then 15, attached herself to a kindhearted boy who felt sorry for her. After a while, he saw she was getting too serious and tried to break off with her. Lila kept chasing him and he couldn't escape from her clutches. Now she's gone and got herself pregnant.

The boy is only sixteen and absolutely is out of the question. He is support. His doesn't have anything and neither do his folks.

Lila's mother wants her to keep the baby because she thinks it will help her grow up. I've been asked for my advice and want your views. — NO ANN LANDERS.

DEAR NO: It is impossible for a girl to get herself pregnant. She had to have some help. Even though the boy is only 16, he should not be considered an innocent bystander. A lawyer can decide what his legal responsibilities are.

I hope Lila will give the child up for adoption. She sounds unstable and immature. Urge the mother to take the girl to a counsellor. Both mother and daughter need professional help.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter brought her college roommate home for the holidays. We don't know much about the girl, except that she comes from a wealthy family. I was annoyed at the way our daughter served her friend breakfast in bed, picked up after her, rinsed out her lingerie and acted like a personal maid.

I feel this shows very poor breeding on the part of the guest. No matter what she is accustomed to at home, she shouldn't expect her hostess to wait on her. I think Miss Social Register has a lot to learn. Do you agree? — DISGUSTED MOM.

DEAR MOM: Never mind about Miss Social Register, someone yourself with your daughter's role in this little vignette. Why does she behave like a handmaiden? Where is her dignity and self-esteem? True, the guest should not have used her as bellhop, but the real problem here is your daughter's doormat tendencies.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Leftover Cooked Pork Makes Excellent Soup

By MARY MOORE

Once a year preferably in January or February every Canadian family should have a thick pea soup meal.

I love the stuff but have such a big backlog of new recipes to test I have to disciplise myself.

I discovered this year that my pea soup tests did not have to include smoked ham or bacon. Used leftover cooked pork shoulder meat ground and threw in the bone too, of course. You can use corned beef as the meat in a hearty potful of pea soup if you wish.

CANADIAN PEA SOUP
BYB VERSION

1 lb. green (or yellow) dried split peas
12 cups cold water
2 cups ground leftover roast pork shoulder including rind (and bone)
2 tbsp. minced onion (or 1 tbsp. bottled onion flakes)
¼ cup chopped celery (optional)
¾ hay leaf (no more)
1½ (or 2) tsps. salt

In your soup pot soak the peas overnight in the cold water in a cool place. Two or three hours before mealtime add all of the remaining ingredients and bring to boil. Simmer covered until peas are a puree and pork rind is very tender — about 2 or 3 hrs. Fish out the bone and serve in very large soup plates. For a guest meal a garnish of a few sliced mushrooms is an attractive finish.

We served ours with

CORN MEAL MUFFINS
(9 or 12 medium)

NOTE: This recipe does not call for flour. This is the method used in the Deep South.

1 cup corn meal
1 cup boiling water
¼ cup milk
½ tsp. salt
2 tsps. baking powder
1 tbsp. soft margarine or butter
1 large egg

In mixing bowl soak the corn meal in the boiling water five min. Then add all remaining ingredients and beat just until blended. Spoon into well-buttered muffin tins (preferably Teflon-lined or glass) filling them nearly full and bake at 475 deg. Fahr. about 20 to 25 min. Serve fresh from the oven. Be watchful — do not burn these muffins.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "You're taking a chance when you drive over the speed limit. You're sure to get caught eventually and then you'll lose your licence for a long time. Why don't you use your head and drive sensibly before you get caught?"

When lives are at stake, teen-agers should not have second or third chances, and they should realize this from the minute they get their learners' permits. One instance of reckless use of driving privileges will be suspended immediately.

Father: "Driving a car is a privilege and you know you have to obey the traffic laws. There are good reasons for the rules. If you abuse the privilege or drive recklessly even once, there will be no more driving this year."

Groups Begin Year's Activities

PARENTS WITHOUT PARTNERS

The Bell-Trent Chapter 633 of Parents Without Partners met in King St. United Church on Jan. 15.

Six prospective members were welcomed to the club.

New correspondence was read and discussed. It resulted in having two delegates be elected to attend the International Board of Directors' Ball held at Ten-on-the-Park in Toronto. Also four delegates were appointed to go to Burlington for workshops sponsored by Burlington Chapter on Jan. 25.

After the business meeting was adjourned there was a discussion.

Mrs. Pat Merrill gave a talk and illustrated how "Parents Without Partners" can help the single parents and then how the single parent can help the chapter. This was followed by a question and answer period.

All enjoyed a social half-hour over coffee and cookies.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday, Feb. 5, in the Belleville Recreation Centre.

PRINCE EDWARD-BELLEVILLE LADIES' CLUB

Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club met again in the first meeting of 1970 at the recreation centre on Jan. 14 with an attendance of 21.

The first meeting was opened by president, Mrs. F. Henderson who welcomed all present.

During the business period Mrs. O. White, corresponding secretary reported sending seven Christmas cards to shut-ins. She read a thank-you card from Miss L. Hall and reported a phone call of thanks from Mrs. G. Gorsline. It was also noted that Mrs. F. Cook is a patient in the hospital. The existing executive will carry on for another year: president, Mrs. F. Henderson; 1st vice-president, Mrs. O. White; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. F. Purcell; secretary, Mrs. A. Mitchell; treasurer, Mrs. L. Fox; corresponding secretary, Mrs. O. White and pianist, Mrs. M. Doyle.

Group leaders are no. 1, Mrs. F. Bedell, Mrs. I. Sharpe and Mrs. M. Jewell; no. 2, Mrs. M. Welch, Mrs. E. Moires; no. 3, Mrs. O. White and Mrs. A. Mitchell; no. 4, Mrs. F. Way, Mrs. C. Cunningham. Names were drawn for each group.

In charge of the program were the groups of Mrs. F. Way and Mrs. C. Canning (hats).

Mrs. F. Way gave a talk after which the two program groups served lunch.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Mr. Larry Johnson, newly elected president of the Belleville Horticultural Society opened the January meeting at Tabernacle United Church with a large number in attendance.

Special guest speaker for the evening was Mr. A. J. Griffith. Mr. Griffith presented an interesting slide travelogue on a recent trip to Europe and the British Isles. Some of the highlights of this trip were the beautiful gardens in France, Switzerland and Germany; the formal gardens of England, the different kinds of heather grown in Scotland. The abundance of Bougainvilles and flowering trees in these countries make them most appealing to those interested in horticulture. The speaker was introduced by Mr. Bob Patterson and thanked by Mr. Lance Lessay.

Another interesting feature of the meeting was a talk given on the culture of French lilacs by a former president of the society Mr. Stan Downing, an ardent grower of these beautiful spring flowering shrubs. A question and answer period followed.

Members renewing their membership before Dec. 15 became eligible for rose bushes. The winners were Enos David, Mrs. Grace Thompson, Stan Downing, Mrs. Eric Cooper, Mrs. C. Hall, Rev. A. Foster, Mrs. F. Arbuthnott, Mrs. N. McFee, Mrs. Brooks-Allen and James Grills.

Door prizes and refreshments brought the meeting to a close.

MR. AND MRS. PATRICK HEALEY

Healey – Flunder

Holy Rosary Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Doreen Flunder, daughter of Mrs. A. Fur, Belleville and the late Mr. Ted Flunder and Patrick Healey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Healey of Stoco. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Father Sweeney, organist was Mr. T. Cassan and soloist Mr. Gene Healey, Oshawa, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Eugene Flunder, wore a full length white empire - style gown with roll collar, three - quarter length sleeves and cathedral train. A full length veil fell from a headpiece of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of white gladioli and orchids.

Matron of honor was Mrs Gene Hughes, Belleville, wearing a full length gown with sleeves brushed nylon bodice and balloon sleeves and a purple velvet skirt and cummerbund. In her hair was a velvet bow and she carried a bouquet of yellow and white carnations.

Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Miller, Kingston and Miss Christine Flunder, Belleville, sister of the bride. They were dressed identically to the matron of honor.

Best man was Don McLeod, Sudbury and ushers were Mike Healey of Oshawa brother of the bridegroom and John Mulvihill of Brockville.

For the reception held at the Belleville Shrine Club, the bride's mother wore a turquoise and silver brocade dress with matching stole, silver accessories and a cymbidium orchid corsage.

The bridegroom's mother wore a silver and black brocade dress and hat, black accessories and a corsage of yellow and white carnations.

For the wedding trip to Quebec the bride wore a cocoa wool boucle dress with matching chinchilla - trimmed jacket, cerise hat, black accessories and a white orchid corsage.

The couple will reside in Kingston.

Community Services Topic at B and P Club

"The life blood of the community is volunteers" was one of the points stressed by Mrs. Elaine Stacey, chairman of the commercial division of the United Appeal campaign as she spoke to the Business and Professional Women's Club at the regular meeting held Monday evening at the San Valley Motor Inn.

The speaker, who was introduced by club member Alderman Robin Jeffrey, gave a general picture of the United Community Services and described it as a clearing house for a number of community services. The organization tries to prevent an overlap of services and to fill the gaps where these services are needed.

Mrs. Sisson dealt in particular with various groups covered by the UCS including Boy Scouts, YMCA, Navy League, CNIB, Red Cross (Homemakers), Arthritic Society, Association for Retarded Children and a new group the Quinte International Club which is primarily for people from other countries to become acquainted with community affairs.

Along with others she mentioned the Christmas Exchange Program which is now being revamped with plans going ahead now for work at the end of the year; also Meals on Wheels which has been turned over to the various churches. Plans are also being made for several new services.

Mrs. Sisson also stated that they are aware of the objections to various agencies covered by the UCS, but maintained each has a service to perform and proportionate amount of funds according to the needs, are given.

In conclusion, the speaker stressed the need for involvement and that one of the main objectives of the UCS is a system whereby those in need will be taught to help themselves.

Thanks on behalf of the members was expressed by Ettie McCabe.

Previous to the speaker's address president Dorothy Ellis turned the meeting over to vice-president Dorothy Brown who conducted the "Civic Night" meeting.

During the business portion it was announced that the annual fashion show will be held at Club Cedars on Wednesday, April 15.

U.C.W. Meeting

EASTMINSTER UCW

Mrs. H. Fast, co-chairman of United Community Services, stressed the needs of senior citizens in an address to Eastminster UCW at their Jan. meeting held last week. Mrs. Fast commenced her address by telling of the two-fold purpose of the Community Services, as an agency to co-ordinate the citizens in a single fund drive, and as a social planning agency — one that plans to help fill the needs which other groups have not met. She mentioned work with retarded children, pre-school stimulation classes for underprivileged children and handicapped children. A directory of services for children is being compiled. Also mentioned were the International Club, classes in English for young immigrant mothers; the furniture exchange, co-operation with the Salvation Army on a clothing depot; Christmas exchange, Committee on Youth and Meals on Wheels. This last topic led to the concern for the welfare for senior citizens.

"There are two million people over the age of 65 in Canada, who are silent protestors of the injustices of our society," she remarked. "In the city of Belleville, 3,000 senior citizens have no adequate drop-in centre. Letters were sent to all churches asking that such centres be set up to make use of the building in that area. To date four churches have responded." She continued by telling of the many ways in which people of the church could assist, such as visiting, driving, shopping, home aid service and telephone check-ups. In addition, Mrs. Fast spoke of the many talents and wealth of knowledge and wisdom of the older citizens that could be put to good use in the churches, homes and organizations of the community.

In conclusion, Mrs. Fast issued a challenge to all women, "Life is what you make it," she said. "Let us all help to make life more worthwhile for all Bellevillites." Mrs. Fast was introduced by Mrs. Audrey Mason and thanked by Mrs. Jean Lovering. Mrs. Evelyn Thropp, president of Eastminster UCW conducted a brief business session. A letter from the committee on overseas relief was read requesting clothing, particularly for men and for children aged five to 15. Announcements were made regarding the congregational annual meeting potluck supper on Jan. 23, anniversary services Feb. 1, and the Bellevue-Sherpherdess UCW annual meeting in Napanee Feb. 4 and 5.

A worship service was presented by Mrs. Jean Lantz and Mrs. Evelyn Barber. The silver group was in charge of the afternoon meeting and served lunch at its conclusion.

WEDDING

CRAGG — DRURY

A quiet wedding took place in College Hill United Church on Jan. 10, when Rev. Roy Tussey united in marriage, Mrs. Pearl Drury and Morley Cragg, both of Belleville. The attendants were Mrs. Laura Ostand of Belleville, and Alfred Fewtrell of Stratford.

A dinner ceremony the guests enjoyed a buffet luncheon at the home of the bride. Table decorations featured a miniature bride.

In the afternoon, "Open House" was held with many friends present. Pouring the tea was Mrs. Jack Cassidy and the coffee was poured by Mrs. Arthur Cantrell.

The couple left on a trip to St. Catharines.

Women's Institutes

QUEENSBORO — The recent euchre party sponsored by the Women's Institute for the benefit of the burned out family of Murray Norris was well attended. In play were ten tables.

Winners were women's high, Mrs. Lebo; men's high, John Bristol and door prize was won by Mrs. Roy Rollins. Other prizes were won by Mrs. Carl Gordon, Allan Bristol and Harry Declair.

Proceeds from the party and donations were almost $80 which the Queensboro WI raised for the family.

"You've started to study WHAT at the Women's Club?"

Local Papers Here to Stay

OTTAWA (CP) — The locally-produced daily newspaper stressing local news is here to stay in the foreseeable future, say the owners of the Brantford, Ont., Expositor.

Developments such as electronic transmission of news into the home or centrally-run newspapers with satellite editions would have a hard time uprooting the community-based local paper, they add in a submission to the special Senate committee on mass media.

John C. Preston, general manager of The Expositor, and Peter M. Preston, executive editor, also suggest that grievances against newspapers are handled better locally than through establishment of a national press council on the British pattern.

The Preston brothers, third-generation owner-managers of a newspaper founded in 1852 and owned by their family since 1890, say they believe the links between a community and its newspaper are stronger when the paper is owned "by people active in management and keenly interested in their community."

The trend towards concentrated ownership of groups of newspapers has been reflected in an average four or five inquiries a year about purchasing The Expositor, the brothers say.

They add that they have no way of knowing the source of the inquiries, because they are made through agents, but they feel some of the inquiries could be from United States interests.

Computers Could Brainwash Society

OTTAWA (CP) — Le Droit, French-language daily newspaper published in Ottawa, says stereotyped processing of information brought about by computer technology threatens to brainwash society.

In a submission prepared for presentation today to the special Senate committee on mass media, Le Droit says technical progress is an expense that can hardly be avoided by newspapers, but costs are not the chief concern.

"Automation will soon be the universally accepted way. If we do not guard against it, information will shortly become stereotyped and there will ensure a universal brainwashing on a scale which the dictators never even dreamed of.

"To avoid this, we must review work techniques in the publishing industry. Research into this subject would be worthwhile, but this is neither the place nor the time for such an undertaking."

Publisher in Favor Of Press Council

OTTAWA (CP) — Establishment of provincial press councils to hear complaints against newspapers by readers was endorsed today by newspaper publisher W. J. Blackburn of London, Ont., in a brief to the special Senate committee on mass media.

Mr. Blackburn is majority owner of the 123,000-circulation London Free Press and of CFPL television and radio stations, also in London.

He suggested that Ontario dailies which also favor the idea could start up a council now on a voluntary basis. Only those interested would participate and only cases involving participating members would be handled.

He said he felt press councils would work best on a provincial rather than a national basis. For the citizen with a complaint against a newspaper, there now was no court of appeal outside the regular courts which were complicated, expensive and time-consuming.

TV Like Course in Crime

OTTAWA (CP) — Many Canadian parents think their children are getting "a course in crime" from watching television, the Senate committee on the mass media was told Tuesday.

Dr. Edgar Gillespie, representing the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation Inc., with head offices in Toronto, said that by and large parents are concerned about the possible bad effects of television.

Reading, effective reading, is many things:

- It is reading rapidly and understanding well.
- It is gaining knowledge and wisdom.
- It is finding enjoyment and relaxation
- It is concentration and maximum use of mental abilities.
- It is surveying all reading matter and deciding what to read, since there isn't time for everything.
- It is varying the speed according to the subject matter.
- It is the development of better study and work habits.
- It is the gaining of a richer, more useful vocabulary.

Reading, effective reading is fundamental to successful, enjoyable and purposeful living.

Reading is a skill which must be taught. All students and adults can be taught to read better and faster.

Palling the String

A 400-foot-long railway trestle in the Coquihalla Valley near Hope, B.C., goes down like a deck of cards — the second time around. Four militia units spent two days wiring up charges, but the bridge remained standing the first time the charges were touched off. The second time the explosives worked.

Welfare Hell Says Appointee

CALGARY (CP) — Alleg Payne, one of 21 persons appointed to the new National Council of Welfare, believes it's hell de be on welfare.

Mrs. Payne, 31, active in the welfare rights movement here for the last year, is "really impressed with the formation of the council.

"It's the first real step toward a just society."

In announcing establishment of the council Monday, Health Minister John Munro said it would give those on welfare a voice in the formation of welfare programs.

The council includes persons from low-income groups, economically disadvantaged minorities and social workers.

Mrs. Payne, a member of the city's social services committee, said she thinks her appointment made committee members "sit up and take some notice of me."

An attractive brunette, Mrs. Payne is the mother of seven children between the ages of three and 14 and draws $223 a month in welfare. She first attracted attention in May, 1969, when Chatelaine magazine published her article, It's Hell To Be On Welfare.

Following publication, she became one of the more outspoken members of the welfare rights committee of the Now (No Other Way) organization. She picketed stores and took part in sit-ins at the city welfare offices.

Selection Of Jury Stalled

MONTREAL (CP) — Selection of a jury was stalled Tuesday by lack of prospects in the conspiracy trial of 11 Trinidad students, charged in connection with the Feb. 11, 1969, computer-smashing incident at Sir George Williams University.

Only nine jurymen had been selected out of a possible 82 Tuesday, second day of the trial.

Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench ordered the sheriff to seek out a new panel, but rejected a defence recommendation that new jurors be sought from Montreal's black community.

The defence made the recommendation because of the "nature of the case," whose defendants are all black.

The 11 black students—two of them women—each face five charges, including conspiracy to commit arson and conspiracy to destroy property.

Bank Will Pay More Interest To Get Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move to put more money into circulation for the hard-hit housing industry, two federal agencies have cleared the way for substantial increases in the maximum interest rates U.S. commercial banks can pay on savings deposits.

Hospital Association Director Speaks at WHA Annual Luncheon

"Women's Hospital Auxiliary members are the hospital community relations ambassadors", said Mr. R. Alan Hay, guest speaker at the annual Women's Hospital Auxiliary luncheon held yesterday afternoon in Education Hall. Mr. Hay is the Executive Director of Oshawa Hospital Association.

Seated at head table were Mayor Russell Scott, members of the hospital administration, auxiliary members and guests.

A number of reports were given including the report of the president, Mrs. B.E. Burley. She mentioned that the auxiliary was able to discharge almost fully the obligation of its $40,000 pledge without liquidating any of its assets. This was due mainly to the success of the Opportunity Shop.

Introducing the guest speaker was Mrs. J.E. Nelles, Mr. Hay spoke on the work and functions of the Ontario Hospital Association. It is a voluntary organization formed in 1924 by hospitals. All hospitals in Ontario belong as well as some private and governmental ones. Mr. Hay went on to say that its objective... tion is to be a "representative voice of Ontario hospitals" and to provide the highest possible standard of patient care. Another function is to carry out educational and training programs for hospital workers. Seminars are being constantly carried on at the head office in Don Mills.

There is a special educational services division and a career counselling department as well which informs people of careers in the health fields. Consultation is also an important aspect of the association: professional people with experience in fields of value to hospitals are frequently consulted. There is also a department to advise hospitals on accident prevention programs.

proof to social

He went on to commend the work of the hospital auxiliaries. Change and progress would not be worth very much without volunteers with the qualities of compassion and concern, he said.

Mrs. D. G. Burr thanked Mr. Hay and presented him with a gift in appreciation.

The officers for 1970 were then installed by Mrs. F. A. Beeby, chairman of the nominating committee. President is Mrs. B. E. Burley; 1st vice president Mrs. J. E. Nelles; 2nd vice president Mrs. S. B. Bochnek; 3rd vice-president Mrs. C. D. Ashley; recording secretary, Mrs. D. G. Burr, corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. B. Duffy; treasurer, Mrs. E. S. Fairman and immediate past president, Mrs. W. G. Harvey.

The following committee chairmen were appointed: bulletin Mrs. N. K. Manning; finance Mrs. E. S. Fairman; holiday treats Mrs. F. M. Till; membership Mrs. J. E. Nelles; opportunity shop Mrs. F. A. Beeby; puppets Mrs. C. D. Ashley; samaritan cupboard Mrs. Robert Temple; social Mrs. J. B. Duffy and volunteer services Mrs. S. B. Bochnek.

Financial Report Given at Luncheon

The largest total expenditure for the Women's Hospital Auxiliary during the past year as reported by George A. Weeks and Company in the financial report amounted to $29,209.28 which went toward furnishings and equipment for the hospital.

A number of other disbursements were made throughout the year, but covering a large portion of expenses was the contribution of the Opportunity Shop amounting to $11,400, with other receipts of activities during the year along with the bank balance December 1968 of $16,116.68 which covered the year's expenses.

This together gave a grand total of $32,187.66 for last year's activities with the balance on hand in the bank December 31, 1969 amounting to $7,823.06.

Checking Over the Brochure

Chairman of the Board of Governors of Belleville General Hospital Harleigh Hamilton checks over brochure with Mrs. S. B. Bochnek, 2nd vice-president of Women's Hospital Auxiliary and Mrs. J. E. Nelles, 1st vice-president.

Patients' Stay Made A Little Brighter

A second year-round project with the aid of making each patient's stay in hospital a little brighter is that called "Holiday Treats". This important work has been done by Mrs. Phillips Till who submits the following report:

On Valentine's Day, St. Patrick's Day, Hallowe'en and on the day before Christmas, favors were placed on the tray of each patient. These favors were made by various Girl Guide Companies and C.G.I.T. and Explorer Groups in the city. Letters were written by the convener to the leader of each donor group in which the sincere thanks of the Auxiliary were expressed. At Easter time several Auxiliary volunteers distributed a small bagpuss plant to each patient. Handknit baby bootees, made and donated by members and friends were presented each of the 240 patients bearing trays of gifts from which they could choose a purchased toilet article, or something hand made and donated. Many patients have expressed their appreciation of the thoughtful gestures of this committee.

For more than twenty years each child patient in our hospital has been sent home with a loveable little puppet, painstakingly made by a member of the dedicated Puppet Group. Mrs. C. D. Ashley has been the chairman of this group since 1959 and she reports a membership of 13 who have met eight times in the various homes with almost 100 per cent attendance. Finished puppets were brought to the meetings and new supplies taken home. Each lady gave from 10 - 12 hours a month to meet the monthly quota. Altogether over 650 puppets were placed in the pediatric ward in 1969. Mrs. Ashley wishes to commend all her workers for their unstinting, enthusiastic co-operation and their willingness to open their homes for meetings. The cost of making the puppets last year was $167.59.

The children were also remembered by the Auxiliary at Christmas time when $50 was spent on toys and other gifts for the party in the pediatric ward.

During the past year the Auxiliary gave $180 to Mr. Robert Sanders, the Social Worker in the hospital to assist him in his work with patients who needed special help for their rehabilitation.

Talks with Speaker

Women's Hospital Auxiliary president Mrs. B. E. Burley chats with the guest speaker, Mr. R. Alan Hay, Executive Director Ontario Hospital Association. The occasion was the annual W.H.A. luncheon held yesterday afternoon in Education Hall.

Recording Secretary Sums Up Auxiliary Accomplishments for 1969

Recording secretary E. Corrine Musgrove summed up the main activities and accomplishments of the Belleville Women's Hospital Auxiliary for the year 1969.

The affairs of this organization were entrusted by the membership to the leadership of Mrs. B. E. Burley as president.

This year the number of members also collected by the convener Mrs J. E. Nelles, mounted to a record of 283, still indicates the health and vigor of the organization.

The attendance at the ten general meetings also improved notably with an average of 68. Credit for this increased interest must be attributed to the efforts of several of the standing committees. One group which has done much to arouse enthusiasm is the public relations committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. G. Price. The programs for the general meetings were arranged by one member of this committee, past president Mrs. W. G. Harvey. Several of them were designed to fulfill the aim of becoming better informed about the hospital, and in the broader field of health.

At the annual meeting in January, Dr. Richard Potter, MSA described a plan for Extended Patient Care which would lessen the pressure on overcrowded hospitals. In April, Mr. Robert Sanders, social worker in the hospital, explained his role in serving the needs of the patients in cooperation with the medical team. In May, Dr. Bert Conden dealt with that most timely topic The Effects of Drugs on Mental Health.

At the June meeting, Miss Ruth Gaw, director of nursing services, delivered an interesting address on the changes in goals and methods of nursing education throughout the history of Canada, with special emphasis on the programs in the Belleville Hospital. September brought Dr. James Davis, chief of the newly opened dental clinic, describing the facilities and services offered in this important field. In November the members heard from Mr. Philip Rickard, hospital superintendent.

A tour of the unit for Extended Care allowed the members to see the splendid new furnishings purchased with auxiliary funds.

Interspersed with these programs were others that offered instruction and entertainment in other areas.

In February, Mr. Robert McCulloch provided valuable information about wills and estates in an address entitled provocatively A Voice from the Grave. The never-failing interest of ladies in their appearance was demonstrated in October when a particularly large turnout enjoyed a demonstration of wigs and hair pieces given by Mrs. Vivian Jewell of the Jewell-Brenmore Salon. The March program was all fun, with the spotlight on our renowned Opportunity Shop, about which you will be hearing more a little later. Marvellously entertaining was a skit entitled "GoGo Strip Luncheon" written and produced by Mrs. James Forrester, who was assisted in its presentation by a number of our talented members. At this meeting too, Mrs. Frank Bowler recounted with justifiable pride the progress of the shop from its opening in 1948 to the present day.

Publicity for general meetings has been looked after by Mrs. Owen Clarke, who used the coming events column of The Intelligencer and Radio Station CJBQ to invite all women from the community and surrounding areas to attend. Reports of the meetings were written for The Intelligencer in a most interesting and comprehensive way by Mrs. Nelles who contributed greatly to the reputation of the Auxiliary as the Quinte district. A scrap book containing all printed records of activities is kept by Mrs. L. J. M. Tremblay. Mrs. Price was responsible for forwarding all Auxiliary bulletins, press reports and literature about the opening of our new hospital to the Public Relations Director of the provincial association. Locally, Mrs. Price and her group were responsible for distributing 1,000 books maintained in the library. A number of larger volumes, seldom read, were given to the County Jail and Hastings Manor.

The first annual awards program for Junior Volunteers was held in December. There are 36 Junior volunteers in service, without whose assistance several services could not exist. In addition to their regular assignments, these girls fill in on all school holidays when many women are unable to leave their families. It was felt that these girls should not only be shown the appreciation of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, by way of entertaining them, but in addition, be encouraged to continue serving their hospital. Pins were presented to 13 girls who had completed 50 hours of regular duty.

There are 137 active volunteers at present — 85 adults and 26 Juniors. Commissions realized from cradle picture sales were $879.64. Those working on this service have made approximately 1,000 patient calls.

Mrs. Bochnek concluded by saying: "No hospital auxiliary can prosper without the support and nursing. Here, at Belleville General, we have been fortunate in having this from both departments. They have offered invaluable assistance and guidance to those of us responsible for co-ordinating the various services. As to their responsibility for the care and well-being of the patients, to do it that way, in turn, are responsible to them for our services performed within the hospital.

In-Hospital Volunteer Program Has Many Changes

The "In-Hospital Volunteer Program experienced an active year with many changes being reported Mrs. S. Bochnek, chairman of this service.

The year began quietly, due to the ban on visitors and volunteers. All services were inactive for two weeks with the exception of transportation. No hairdressing appointments were taken but three weeks. Lower hairdressing prices were arranged with the participating beauty salon and introduced when the ban was lifted.

February brought with it the excitement of the new hospital opening. In addition to the regular program, the volunteer office arranged for auxiliary members to assist in moving patients from the old building to the new. Further arrangements were made to assist in moving the pharmacy department to their new location. A total of 69 members contributed a total of 233½ hours in all.

Temporary quarters were set up in the vacated south wing, and, for the first time, the Auxiliary shop operated within the In - Hospital Program were in one location adjoining the volunteer office. Since most services had previously been located apart from one another, quite an adjustment had to be made by all concerned. However, once this adjustment was made, the combined headquarters provided an easier, interchangeable program which operates on a more efficient basis. In sharing the same quarters, each service has become more aware of being a part of the overall in - hospital program. Both the volunteer room and office were completely refurbished during the summer, with the assistance of the hospital.

One new service was added to the program in 1969. That of easing for planters, installed by the Auxiliary and placed throughout the new hospital. This service also arranges and places fresh flowers in various parts of the hospital.

The 4th level paediatric supervision program was expanded twice during the past year. Volunteers are on duty seven days a week from 9.30 to 11 a.m. and 2 to 8 p.m. A up-to-date training program was introduced this past summer which all volunteers working on this service, must attend before beginning their regular assignments. This instruction period is designed to help volunteers become acquainted with the program and add continuity throughout the service.

Three light-weight aluminum carts were purchased for the library service, to replace the two unbalanced wooden ones previously used. The new carts were designed by the volunteers working on this service to provide maximum efficiency and ease. Each cart has been equipped with plaques bearing the WHA crest and the words "Free Lending Library."

The use of taxis was added to the transportation service in June to augment the use of drivers. This practice was continued throughout the year.

Volunteer assistance was a scarce item this past summer. The lack of volunteers necessitated a continuing review of the visiting program during the summer. In order to continue to offer Cradle Picture sales, one person was hired to maintain this service on two half-days each week at the convener. The free lending library was inoperative on several occasions due to the lack of volunteer assistance.

Although only one new service was added to the program, internal and preparatory work, better and steady communications with hospital staff and administration, plus improved training programs, deemed it necessary to appoint supervisors to assist the chairman in carrying out her duties. Two supervisors were appointed in September and assigned a regular day and time period to carry out their duties from the volunteer office.

Magazines are an important part of the free lending library service. This past year, 6,988 magazines were distributed throughout the Hospital along with 3,720 books. Although the number of books is about the same as in 1968, magazine distribution increased from 2,851 of the same year.

In November, the south wing was vacated and the volunteer room and office moved to new quarters in the north wing. Smaller facilities and fewer book shelves necessitated condensing the number of books maintained in the library. A number of larger volumes, seldom read, were given to the County Jail and Hastings Manor.

The first annual awards program for Junior Volunteers was held in December. There are 36 Junior volunteers in service, without whose assistance several services could not exist. In addition to their regular assignments, these girls fill in on all school holidays when many women are unable to leave their families. It was felt that these girls should not only be shown the appreciation of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, by way of entertaining them, but in addition, be encouraged to continue serving their hospital. Mrs. Bochnek concluded by saying: "No hospital auxiliary can prosper without the support and nursing. Here, at Belleville General, we have been fortunate in having this from both departments. They have offered invaluable assistance and guidance to those of us responsible for co-ordinating the various services. As to their responsibility for the care and well-being of the patients, to do it that way, in turn, are responsible to them for our services performed within the hospital.

Opportunity Shop Largest Contributor

A member of the Opportunity Shop Committee, Mrs. Lou Beeby reported on the progress of this project to the Women's Hospital Auxiliary for the year 1969.

"At the beginning of the year it was found difficult to obtain a convener for the Shop and, at a meeting at the home of the president Mrs. Burley, it was suggested that as business had increased to such an extent, it was time to consider the idea of a committee of up to four women who would act as joint conveners, thus reducing the responsibility of each and dividing the work amongst more people.

The four members chosen, with the approval of the executive, were, Mrs. Frank Bowler, a past convener, Mrs. J. Gallagher, a past assistant convener, Mrs. C. Campbell, the day convener with considerable shop experience and Mrs. F. A. Beeby, a new convener and an executive member.

Mrs. Bowler was in charge of all supplies, supervising cleaning activities and was in charge of the pricing shift on Monday mornings. Mrs. Gallagher manned the duster project and was convener of pickers on Tuesdays — also a day convener. Mrs. Campbell looked after the approval book, kept fresh smocks on hand for the workers, was in charge of the Wednesday pricers and also a day convener. Mrs. Beeby, the executive member, was chosen to represent the Shop at meetings, attended the concessionaires' department with Mrs. J. C. Young and convened the pricers on Thursday mornings. These arrangements have worked out smoothly and the Shop has had a busy year in operations is due to a great extent to the efficient work of this committee.

During the year, treasurer Mrs. W. W. Shand relinquished her post due to ill health. In the interim, while seeking a replacement for Mrs. Shand, the bookkeeper of long standing, Miss Ivy Eggleton, stepped into the breach and took charge of the treasurer's duties. Mrs R. L. Brettingham is now treasurer for the shop. Mrs. Greaves, staffer, with occasional help from Mrs. McIntyre, has done yeoman service, keeping a staff of at least three women busy on each shift.

Sales at the Shop have been outstanding this year and at each monthly meeting of the Auxiliary a large cheque has been presented. More and more people seem to be taking advantage of the bargains offered and donors are becoming more plentiful. Publicity has been good, both on the radio and in the newspaper.

The hospital has benefited greatly by this outstanding project which has enjoyed 22 years of continuous operation and which has always been completely run by volunteer help. A project, quite unique in Canada."

Rocky Still Champ

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocky Marciano registered a comparatively 12th-round knockout over Cassius Clay in a staged bout between the two fistic heavyweight boxing champions filmed shortly before Marciano's death last year and screened simultaneously in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Europe Tuesday night.

Marciano floored Clay for the third time in the fight with a solid left hook and Clay, or Moajmand Ali, was counted out at 57 seconds of the 12th round.

Marciano bloodied front cuts over his eyes and nose and knocked down himself in the eighth, came back with a devastating rush to even the simulated match in the 11th.

The two unbeaten former champions filmed 75 one-minute sequences, covering a variety of actual fight situations, in a Miami studio. The rounds were woven into a film production.

The outcome was decided by a computer on the basis of programmed information concerning the fighters' actual careers.

Marciano, who was reported to have lost 50 pounds training for the match at the age of 45, died in the plane crash three weeks after retiring from the fighting, not knowing who had been judged the winner.

The Brockton, Mass., flock-buster had retired from the ring in 1956 after compiling a nine-year record of 49 wins, including 43 knockouts.

In Philadelphia, Clay said: "Rocky was my buddy, and he really wanted to see it."

Action frames taken from the filmed fight between the late former heavyweight boxing champion Rocky Marciano and the undefeated former heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay show them in good fight action. The bout was filmed last year before Marciano was killed in a plane crash. The film got its first showing Tuesday in more than 850 theatres in the United States and Canada.

Eastern All-Stars Leave Little Doubt About Outcome

ST. LOUIS (CP) — East Division hammered the West Division 4-1 Tuesday in the annual National Hockey League all-star game and none of the players is arguing the outcome.

A record 18,587 fans attended.

Last season's first East-West all-star game at Montreal, ended in a 3-3 tie. Up to then, the annual game involved an all-star team against the Stanley Cup champions.

Coach Claude Ruel of Montreal Canadiens, who guided the East Tuesday, said after the game he felt his division had shown it had the better team.

Scotty Bowman, manager and coach of St. Louis Blues, who bossed the West team, said that he couldn't complain about his squad's performance.

"The East obviously had the bigger stars. There's no way of getting away from it. You couldn't put together a much better team than they had."

Bobby Orr, 21-year-old Boston Bruins defenceman was playing in his second all-star game and contributed his usual outstanding performance, although he failed to score any points. Orr said he thought the whole team played an outstanding game."

Asked if he would some day like to coach such a powerful-packed squad, he had a better idea:

"No, I'd like to own one like it."

Hull, appearing in his ninth all-star game, was another outstanding player for the East, scoring his third all-star goal and assisting on Howe's 10th.

Ruel kept Hull on a line with centre Dave Keon and right winger Ron Ellis, both of Toronto Maple Leafs, and the trio provided the greater share of the East's 44 shots against western goalies Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers and Jacques Plante of the Blues.

Hull also lavished praise on his team-mates, saying the whole squad contributed to the victory.

He said he wasn't sure of how many more all-star contests he could look forward to.

"You never know, this might be my last," he said.

Hull was not among the first 12 players selected to the all-star team by the eastern section of the NHL Writers' Association.

Hull missed the first 14 games of this season but Ruel picked him as one of seven players to fill out his team.

The outstanding stars for the West were Plante and Prentice.

"Prentice was easily our best man out there," Bowman said.

Plante won praise from Bowman for stopping six shots in the last half of the second period and 26 in the final period.

Many of his saves were on close in shots by Hull and Ellis.

The game opened with the fastest two goals ever scored in an all-star match.

Laperriere blasted a shot from just inside the blue line that beat Parent with only 20 seconds gone in the game. Parent said later he was screened by Howe on the shot.

Prentice replied for the West just 17 seconds later with an easy shot from about 40 feet in front of Giacomin. The Rangers goalie appeared to have an easy stop to make but the puck hit a bump in the ice and bounced over his stick into the net.

The members of the winning team will collect $500 each while the losers get $250 each from the NHL.

NHL Players Promote Helmets

ST. LOUIS (CP) — National Hockey League players want an equal voice with club owners in any decisions regarding proposed international returnments, the NHL Players' Association said Tuesday.

Alan Eagleson of Toronto, association executive director, said this was one of several points discussed at a series of meetings between a players association delegation and an NHL governors' committee Monday and Tuesday.

Eagleson and Red Berenson, newly-elected president of the association, led that delegation while the governors' committee consisted of Bill Wirtz of Chicago Black Hawks, Charles Mulcahy of Boston Bruins and Bill Putnam of Philadelphia Flyers.

NHL president Clarence Campbell has suggested that the league may expand in the next three or four years to include an international playoff with the top European team.

The players' association also said it strongly supports the move by Curt Flood who last Friday filed a suit in United States federal court seeking modifications of baseball's reserve clause which binds a player to his club.

Flood's National League baseball contract was traded last year by St. Louis Cardinals to Philadelphia Phillies.

Eagleson said the NHL players have instructed him to give any assistance possible to the

The Aces shelled Belleville which supports Flood's stand.

The NHL players also pointed out ways by which hockey's reserve clause could be modified.

One suggestion was that the NHL owners honor a 1957 waiver agreement which said that any player dropped by an NHL club must be waived out of the league by all other teams. Under current practice, teams impose prohibitive waiver prices to keep other teams from picking up a player who could then be dropped from the roster and demoted to a minor league farm club.

Eagleson said a fair waiver price of perhaps $100 to $200 would be acceptable.

The players asked that the mandatory wearing of helmets be given serious consideration by team owners.

"The players feel this is a management decision since, if it was left to the players, there would be some who would still refuse to wear a helmet," said Eagleson.

Kingston Aces and Barrie Flyers both won 'away from home Tuesday to advance in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series standings.

baseball players association Mo Hawks 8-2 in front of 850 fans, the smallest crowd of the season at Belleville, said the Flyers downed Woodstock A's in Woodstock 5-3 as only 97 fans watched the hapless A's suffer their 27th defeat in 30 games.

At Woodstock, centre Jon Weeks provided Barrie's margin of victory with two goals. Mike Dubeau, Pete Panagabko and defencemen Don Fraser also scored as the Flyers moved past Belleville into fifth place in the eight-team league.

Mac Westgate scored two goals and playing coach Gerry Striegl one for the last place A's, who have only three wins to their credit.

The idle Orillia Terriers have a 14-point lead over the Hornets and Aces, leaving five teams battling for second place, bunched within four points. Oakville Oaks are also involved in the scramble.

No Matter How You Spell It, It Still Comes Out SLUMP

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

It's spelled S-L-U-M-P.

Everybody has one, with the possible exception of the Holy See and the Orillia Packers, and they're going to be the Belleville Mo-Hawks' turn.

It happened last night, and it let the Memorial Arena crowd see an 8-3 loss to Kingston Aces.

There are several ways to react to a slump.

You can try to scare all hornbeans of it from your system, as all but 500 paying customers attempted last evening.

You can be philosophical about it, a la veteran Wayne Rivers: "Everybody loses games . . . we're just losing them in a row."

You can look on the brighter side, as Manager Lou Kaverman did: "Maybe we've only four points out of second place, all tied together, and about 16 points out of first. We've finished Bellefaire's hold on the hockey playoff spot since the season's ago."

Or you can make excuses. Nobody has more excuses for shin than playing-coach Dorvey Aston, but he and the other team members have more pride than to try and blame anything but themselves for their current spiral.

We're thinking too many fundamental mistakes. It's not that we aren't working — just that everything's going wrong," he says.

There isn't much mention or the fact that the club has been without defenceman Lou Kaverman in five of their last six games, all losses. In addition to being the best puck-clearer on the roster among the Mo-Hawk defence regulars, Kaverman happens to be the club's hardest hitter. Without the point-producer, averaging a point a game.

Jones tried to fill the defence vacuum created by the absence of Kaverman and veteran Wayne Rivers by starting American Hockey League veteran Bob Wilson in last night's games.

Wilson showed he will help the Mo-Hawks in the hitting department, but his two-year layoff from the hockey wars showed up when Kingston rookie Hugh Harvey dented him on a rink-length rush to set his way to giving the Aces a 5-1 edge with the game barely 10 minutes old.

"Once Bob gets his timing and legs, he'll be a big asset," said Jones. He limited Harvey to five of them down, and that's what we've needed."

John Mercer and Fred O'Donnell paced the Aces with a pair of goals each, with Rod Graham, Harvey Garfield Bell, and Bob Clayton adding singles.

George Godson got a first-period scoreboard reply for the Mo-Hawks and Al Ferguson's solo end-to-end effort started the second period with the only real Belleville threat.

Ferguson's goal made it 4-2 and Russell Lorne O'Donnell nearly narrowed the gap to 4-3 on the next rush.

A pair of quick Kingston goals threw cold water on that, and showed that if the Mo-Hawks were getting no breaks, the Aces' account was overdrawn.

John Mercer caught Steve Hern flat-footed with a between-the-pads shot at 7.39.

A minute later, with referee Mike Hamilton's penalty unnoticed Mo-Hawk penalty, Aces' defenceman Garfield Bell's harmless point shot skidded past Hern off Greg Matchett's stick.

And so on, and so forth.

The Aces played an extremely fast brand of head-

Few Close Calls

This near-miss by Kingston goalie Dave Gavel was one of the few genuine Belleville scoring threats in their 8-2 OHA Senior A loss Tuesday night to the visiting Aces. Mo-Hawks' John "Shaker" Baker and Ray Johnston cruise in for any rebounds while veteran Kingston defenceman Bill Burega moves in to lend Gavel a helping hand.

Hawks Lose 8-3

KINGSTON (Special) — Kingston Aces moved into first place in the Intermediate group for the Senior Ontario Junior B Hockey League Tuesday night by pumping in the short-handed, in possession all the combinations in an 8-3 victory over the Belleville Mo-Hawks.

The large Kingston ice surface and a tough second-place Belleville team proved the much best night for the Trenton Golden Hawks, as they romped over the Mo-Hawks 8-3.

Injuries to forwards Gary Lisle and Chris Long forced coach Roger Drake to go with only three lines, which is particularly tough on a rink the size of Kingston's.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the last - place Hawks, who remain two points back of Cobourg and four behind Belleville, with a game in hand on either club.

Bob Hadley, Jeff Howard and Jim Hennessy scored the Trenton goals.

Shots on goal were even at Brian Wilson of Trenton and Kingston's Chris Harris were both under the gun 31 times.

Trenton's next home game is Friday night at 8.30 against the Belleville Elks Peterboro, in a crucial contest for both clubs.

Belleville Fish and Game Club member Clinton Grills gives his version of the size of the 10-pound, 12-ounce pickerel that won him the Judge Anderson Trophy for the club's best catch of 1959. Mrs. Alma Wallis, guest speaker at Tuesday night's annual club meeting, and club president Tom Heim listen to the fish story.

Mrs. Wallis Proved Fish Story

By MAURICE SWITZER
(Sports Editor)

At least one person of some 150 attending last night's annual Belleville Fish and Game Club's Ladies' Night had proof to back up a fish story.

Guest speaker Mrs. Alma Wallis had camera verification of a 36-pound arctic trout caught with a six-pound fish in its jaws!

The natural oddity was just one of dozens of slide scenes the well-known Kingston, Ont. naturalist-wildlife photographer used to captivate her Legion auditorium audience with last night.

Mrs. Wallis' self-narrated photographic outing took her audience from the slopes of the highest peak in North America, Alaska's 14,.ft. McKinley — to more familiar Laurentian slopes, replete with scenes of everything from squirrels to grizzlies found in those habitats.

All who heard Mrs. Wallis' presentation were "winners," in a sense, but the Fish and Game Club executive performed their annual duty of distributing prizes for best catches of the year.

The prized Judge Anderson Trophy for best fish went to Clinton M. Grills for his 10-pound, 12-ounce pickerel entry.

There was some suspicion that Mr. Grills, of RR 6, Belleville, also had a hand in landing the best muskellunge, but Mrs. Grills assured those in attendance that she deserved sole credit for hauling a 15-pound, four-ounce muskie from the Moira River at Tweed.

Fonboro's Bert Wannamaker was the most versatile Fish and Game Club outdoorsman winner, accepting the "best buck deer" award for a 158-pound trophy bagged in Limerick Township, and topping club lake trout anglers with an 11-pound beauty from Elliot Lake waters.

Best Kamloops Trout entry for 1958 was a five-pound, six - ounce by Carl Shaw. The Belleville fisherman made his catch in North Lennox and Addington.

Belleville's C. Arther Bowers was a prize - winner by virtue of the whopping 14 - pound, four-ounce pike he took from Moira Lake, while H. E. Payne's two - pound, eight-ounce large mouth bass catch in Stoney Lake was good enough to top club entries in that category.

Club president Tom Heim convened the annual meeting, assisted chiefly by directors Don MacKinnon, Jack Layton, and Fred Clarke.

Mr. MacKinnon's traditional annual meeting toast to the ladies was responded to by Mrs. Ken Yorke.

Alderman Arthur Keegan was on hand as the representative of city council.

Canadians to Plead Case for Open Hockey in February

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

How and when will Canada work her way back into international hockey?

It could depend upon a mid-February meeting of the International Olympic Committee executive board in Lausanne, which might lead to a mid-March congress meeting of the International Ice Hockey Federation in Stockholm.

But it's all extremely complicated.

Fred Page of Vancouver, president of the North American arm of the IIHF, has written John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, IHF international president, requesting that Bunny request a meeting with the IOC executive board in Lausanne.

It was the statement by Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, that amateurs were endangering their Olympic eligibility by such conduct that led to Canada's withdrawal from the 1976 world championships.

Canadians want to be at that Lausanne meeting to plead their case for open competition in non-Olympic years.

If they get the green light at Lausanne — and this time they want it in writing and properly notarized — the next step is on to the IIHF congress in Stockholm.

There the Canadians will lay chapter and verse before the timorous Europeans who bowed in the Brundage edict that they would be accepting their amateur status by playing Canada if Canada insisted on playing professionals.

The right to play nine professionals, below the level of National Hockey League, was granted Canada by a 25-22 vote in Crans, Switzerland, earlier.

When the IOC frowned on the IIHF move, however, the IIHF "reluctantly" granted (except for Canada) royalty to change its mind.

But suppose the IIHF wins IOC approval for the suggestion that designated professionals may play in world hockey in off-Olympic years?

Canada will be right back where she started, pleading for an open tournament, then pounding with a suggestion for 12 pros, then accepting an IIHF concession that says 8 pros would be acceptable because nine is fewer than half the team's complement.

Buffalo Franchise Makes City Offer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The city pension council received informally Tuesday a proposed 30-year agreement for use of the city-owned Memorial Auditorium by the new Buffalo team in the National Hockey League.

City lawyer Anthony Mangano, who had conducted lease talks with the team's owners, said the proposed agreement would be submitted to Mayor Frank A. Sedita today, and if he approves it, to the council formally next Tuesday.

Under the proposal, the hockey club would pay five per cent of its gross receipts during the first seven years of operation, 6¼ per cent during the second seven years and 7½ per cent during the last six years.

The club also would receive 10 per cent of all income from hockey concessions.

Mangano told councillors at a closed meeting that the city would realize an average $325,000 a year from the lease, Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League now pay $77,000 rent annually.

The contract is conditional on the city making an estimated $6,500,000 in improvements in the downtown arena, including the addition of about 4,000 seats.

Mangano said income from the hockey club and all other sources would be enough to offset the $540,000 average annual cost for the improvements.

The new team, as yet nameless, will begin play in the NHL in October.

London Possible Expo Farm City

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Montreal Expos have been asked to consider London as a future site for a Triple A baseball league farm team.

Bob Harris, a local land developer, said he made the inquiry Monday "just out of curiosity to see if they were at all interested," and added that the response was "favorable."

Danny Menendez, director of minor league operations for the Expos, said in an interview Tuesday that London's geographical location enhanced the city's hopes of acquiring a franchise in the International League.

"Naturally, the Expos are interested in another Canadian entity," he said. "Our club doesn't belong to Quebec alone."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 22

Your birthday today: Confrontation with natural and social limitations challenge you to reformulate your ideas of life and your pattern of career activities. These factors lead to sweeping changes all through the coming year. The opportunity to change your affiliations comes early. A chance to do something significant for your community is probable somewhat later.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your talent speaks for itself today. A spur of the moment expedient pays off, particularly in selling or advertising. A casual word from you may set off an unexpected explosion or confrontation. Be kind and mind your own business.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Use your most obedient manner and press forward in your work. Skipping a meal may be very helpful if yesterday's tendons still bother you. You have active competition today, and should proceed accordingly. Evening meditation brings forth inspiration.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Aside from receiving practical jokes or unbelievable stories you are in very good form today. Haste and impatience are the easiest responses to various aspects, and you needn't give in to them.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Anything experimental seems bizarre or impractical to your associates. Pick a better time, lest your theories privately before putting them into practice. Bear with temporary upsets in your schedules. Leave the problems in your workplace; keeping your home life peaceful and simple.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Today's influences are mixed, contradictory. This gives you the chance to select which phase or side you'd rather see prevail, and focus your energy accordingly. Wait for better knowledge before career changes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Some expenses are impossible to avoid. Today is a likely time for official fees, etc., to come due. Amusing distractions lead to little lapses in your work and possible future confusion if you do not keep careful notes or records.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Both nostalgia and doubt exist over whether you could have done better with past problems and the people involved. Since it is past and beyond correction, learn from your reverie and go on to a more hopeful future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Proceed with your determined effort to put your life on a new basis. There is progress, but little comment or report available. Have faith. Study of materials relating to your new plans should fill the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Take more initiative in family life and partnerships. The morning is important to your work. Later make plans for improving your dwelling place, perhaps a move to better quarters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): This is not a propitious day for starting new projects. A positive social approach has rewards. Your physical system should be given a rest through restricted diet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Public attention comes your way today. Make the most of it with an early start and the right attire. This type of conformity is most profitable and allows counts.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Spending as a palliative for tension achieves nothing but the decrease of your funds. People talk, but you needn't adopt their rancorous views or repeat their gossip. Leave new contacts alone for another day or two.

Majority Silent Because Uncaring

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I thought a lot about Richard Nixon's appeal to the "silent majority" as I was going through two new books on Russia this week — "Moscow Tales" by Yevtushenko and "The Silver Pencils Tragedy" by both qualified Western observers of the current Soviet scene.

It seems that the "silent majority" is the same in every country, capitalist or communist. It is silent mostly because it is unaware and self-involved; it speaks up only when its own interests are stepped on too sharply.

In Russia, only the intelligentsia oppose the government — only the writers, artists, students, intellectuals, and a few professional people. These are the ones who were shocked and shamed by Russia's beastly invasion of Czechoslovakia; shocked by the brutality of the invasion, and shamed because "nobody gives a damn" except a few individuals.

The few rumbles of disillusionment and protest against the Soviet action in Czechoslovakia from men like Solzhenitsyn and Sinyavsky, Zaltsberg and Yevtushenko, are the voices of individuals who have given courageous adherence to the cold reason of their own minds.

The main body of citizens — as everywhere — goes along with the government because it is easier and safer and who cares what happens elsewhere?

And this is why the fulminations of the Nixon-Agnew axis against protests and criticism of the government are so dangerous and treacherous. It is not that the protesters are right and the government wrong (though I happen to think that is true); it is that such people are absolutely indispensable if a society is not to degenerate into despotism.

Most people are apathetic, except when their own pocketbook or the nerves of their self-interest. They want to do their job, get along, and see no further. Only a handful care about abstract issues, about the general welfare, about the "public thing." And it is only these few, as watchdogs against state repression and tyranny.

In Russia, the protesters are silent out of indifference and fear; in the U.S. there is no fear, but there is just as much indifference and perhaps even more complacency. It is the young, the powerless, the intellectuals, the artists, who act as the social conscience of our nation, and their full freedom to speak is what marks us off most sharply from the Soviet system.

Attacking these people — rather than, more wisely, answering them — is to make us more like our enemies. Invoking the "silent majority" against dissidence is to repudiate the whole history of a nation which was conceived in protest and dedicated to self-expression.

Benson Hints Income Tax Rates May Be Cut in Coming Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson spoke Tuesday of possibly lowering federal income tax rates before his proposed plan of sweeping tax changes is fully in effect.

The tax change proposals he made last Nov. 7 are planned to start Jan. 1, 1971, and to take five years to become fully effective.

Mr. Benson said that if, during the five years, the new tax plan produces more revenues than the government needs or feels should be taken in income taxes, the government can lower the rates of tax.

He told the Commons finance committee that the starting point of his tax proposals was that the new plan should produce nothing less in federal revenues in its first year of operation than current taxes would yield.

The new tax plan does involve an increase in revenues, mainly because of the five-year introductory phase of the proposal to tax capital gains as part of personal income.

The finance minister said that if an individual taxpayer made a large capital gains profit or had some other big boost in income for one year, he could pay taxes at the lower rates that would apply if the extra income were averaged back over the previous four years.

He could also escape the high rate of taxation on that year of unusually high income, if it came from the sale of property, by taking back a mortgage. The income from the sale would be taxed in the subsequent years as he received payments on the principal of the mortgage.

Interest on the mortgage would also be taxable under existing tax law.

Mr. Benson said that in the current economic climate, hoping to change inflationary federal government is deliberately applying high taxes to create a surplus and direct excess spending power out of the economy. In less prosperous times, the government might want to tax less and run a deficit in order to get expansion going again.

Speaker Allows Motion to Concur in Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux Tuesday ruled in favor of an opposition move that forced before the House a controversial committee report on Arctic sovereignty.

The government Monday argued that only committee chairman Jean Wahed (L—Labrador) could bring the report before the Commons and said that Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca), the vice-chairman, had no right to do so.

But Mr. Lamoureux, in a precedent-setting ruling, said that any MP can put before the House a motion for concurrence in a committee report.

A full debate on the motion was being scheduled for Thursday, a government spokesman said.

The debate may not result in a vote. It could be adjourned without a vote after parties state their positions. Or, failing a conclusion, the motion would be transferred to government orders and the government would control its future.

The committee report, presented Dec. 16, says the northern development committee wasn't impressed by Prime Minister Trudeau's suggestion that adequate pollution controls in the Arctic can be effected by international agreement.

The report says the government should "without delay" tell the world that "vessels and submarines passing through Canada's Arctic archipelago are and shall be subject to the sovereign control and regulation of Canada."

Mr. Lamoureux suggested that the question of how such situations be handled should be turned over to a House committee.

Government's Grain Policies Called Inhuman and Ineffective

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs flayed the government's grain policies Tuesday as inhuman, ineffective and inefficient.

The comments were made during Commons debate on a Conservative non-confidence motion condemning the government for its alleged failure to make full use of grain-storage facilities and for not setting up a system of payments for grain stored on farms.

The Liberals easily defeated the motion and an NDP amendment on separate 167-46-72 votes.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 131, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditiste 14, Independent 3, vacant 1.

The NDP motion called for a government guarantee of sufficiency payments for the 1954-55 crop year of at least $1.25 bushel—the recommended minimum under the International Grains Agreement.

It also recommended the appointment of a federal transport controller to co-ordinate all shipments of grain.

During the debate on grain policy, Sir Graves (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar), who moved the NDP amendment, said farmers in Western Canada "are prepared to accept federal government policy if it is clearly constructed to that end.

"But no policy, no indication of policy is being put before them—it's bluemin."

Stanley Knowlan (PC—Mackenzie) said the "miserable government" has been ineffective and inefficient, showing "gross waste"

I AM AN INDIAN by Kent Gooderham (ed.)

Here is a book written by Canadian Indians — men and women who are called Indians but who think of themselves as Sioux or Ojibway, or Delaware or Assiniboine. This book offers a glimpse into an Indian world — a world of wars and treaties, honor and treachery, wealth and degradation.

How the story is told is as important as the story itself, and every effort has been made to retain the original wording of the Indian authors.

COVENT GARDEN by Ronald Webber

More than most capital cities London is composed of a number of self-contained small worlds. One of the most characterful and historic is Covent Garden, soon to vanish forever in its present form. Ronald Webber, who was in business in the famous market for many years, tells its absorbing story from the days when it was a 'Covent' garden to the present day when, besides its Inigo Jones church and its superb opera house, it is the home of some distinguished theatres and restaurants as well as clubs, and public houses with very special opening times.

PROVENCAL SUNSHINE by Roger Higham

Provencal Sunshine is the result of a spring walking tour of Provence. Equipped with a light tent, the minimum of camping gear and spare clothing, and a good pair of boots, the author passed through some of the loveliest scenery and the most ancient towns of Provence.

THE HONEYCOMB byAdela Rogers St. Johns

With revealing candor and a vivid style, Mrs. St. Johns recalls her progress for her first involvement in the newspaper field with the Los Angeles Evening Herald, through her rising importance as a byline writer, her entry into the Hollywood scene, and her life amid the glamour of stars and celebrities. Although she chose what was considered a man's career, she never forgot that she was a woman, and in her recollections, she also finds time to discuss her marriage, and difficulties with being simultaneously a wife, mother and career woman.

THE PEOPLE'S WAR: Britain 1939-1945 by Angus Calder

The book begins with the events of the early war years, from the evacuation and the blitz to the political crisis of 1942. The social currents are examined in depth. The churches, the arts, science, agriculture and industry; all succumbed to radical change in the face of need. Beyond its value to all students of contemporary history, this remarkable book provides an absorbing and highly readable account of what was for millions of people in Britain the most crucial experience of their lives.

ASTROLOGY FOR ADULTS by Joan Quigley

Have you ever wanted a complete, accurate and understanding analysis of your character? Did you ever wonder how two people in the family could be so very different even though their heredity and environment were the same? To these questions and many more, the stars have the answers. Through Astrology for Adults you will discover by yourself all that the stars can reveal about strengths, weaknesses and ultimate potentials — just like a professional.

Indians' Treatment Apartheid

OTTAWA (CP) — The very existence of a federal department to handle Indian affairs is discriminatory, John MacDonald, former deputy minister of Indian affairs and northern development, said Tuesday.

Continuing the present system is no less than apartheid, he told the Senate's special committee on poverty.

"To our credit we have accepted the responsibility for making certain that the necessary, rudimentary, conditions of life were present in their communities. . . .

"Yet in doing so we have violated one of the central tenets of democratic society—that each individual has the right to the necessary degree of freedom to develop his positive potential as a human being. . . . "

Benson's Travel Expenses Highest

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's chief inflation fighter, Finance Minister Edgar Benson, had the biggest travel expenses of any federal cabinet member in the 1968-69 fiscal year.

Mr. Benson received $10,113 in travel expenses compared with $8,725 for Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, the second highest, and $8,382 for Prime Minister Trudeau, third highest.

CN Delays Deadline For Worker Transfer

Montreal Move Now Sept. 1

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The dispute over transfer of 13 reluctant Belleville CNR employees to Montreal has received a fresh jolt of controversy.

Last night the railroad announced it had tentatively deferred the transfer deadline six months — from March 1 to Sept. 1.

Today, organized labor, now in the midst of opposing the move, says it was surprised by the railroad announcement — and now will fight the transfer even more vigorously.

The additional six months would give the railway time to study regional administrative boundaries, CNR indicated.

W. T. Wilson, vice-president of personnel-labor relations in Montreal, said CNR may adjust current boundaries of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence regions. The present St. Lawrence region runs from Dorval to near Toronto — and includes the Rideau area, the administrative section where the 13 revenue-department workers are employed.

But, organized labor today indicated it will use the additional time to strengthen opposition.

"They've given us a little more time now to sit down and set up our battlegrounds," said H. W. Pointer, chairman of Local 126, Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. "We're going to fight this just as vigorously — if not more than previously."

Mr. Pointer is head of a committee that has mounted opposition to the move — carrying its campaign to the Commons.

In Montreal, Mr. Wilson said the change of deadline did not come about "as result of political pressures."

"We had a second look at the situation and there's a possibility there may be changes in the regional boundaries."

Mr. Pointer today retorted the CNR official was speaking with "a forked tongue."

"I think it's political pressure in Ottawa that postponed this."

Unbroken Peace Seen By Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon told Congress and the United States today he will boost spending to fight crime and pollution at home and, in foreign affairs, can foresee "a generation of uninterrupted peace."

In his first State of the Union address, before a joint Senate-House of Representatives session, Nixon said law enforcement agencies will be the only ones in record increased funds in his forthcoming federal budget.

And he said he will propose the biggest, costliest anti-pollution program ever—with $10,000,000,000 to be spent on "clean water" projects alone. The outlays would be made over a five-year period.

Touching briefly on foreign affairs, Nixon foresaw progress in achieving peace in Vietnam and looked hopefully toward fruitful negotiations with the Soviet Union and, possibly, Communist China.

"I would be the last to suggest that the road to peace is not difficult and dangerous," he said, "but I believe our new policies have contributed to the prospect that America may have the best chance since the Second World War to enjoy a generation of uninterrupted peace."

The president, promising to submit his second consecutive balanced budget in the next two weeks, pointed to budget restraint as a key toward healing inflation, which he blamed largely on federal spending during the Democratic administration that preceded him during the 1960s.

In the Celebrity Tradition

There's a lot to a name — particularly when the name is Celia Franca. Belleville last night accorded her the welcome due a celebrity as the National Ballet visited the city last night. Autograph seekers — like 11-year-old Susan Walker — were part of the offstage scene. (For details, see Page 17.)

Three Held in Slaying Of Unionist and Family

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The FBI kept secret today details behind the arrests of three men held in connection with the gunshot slayings of Joseph Yablonski, United Mine Workers union official, and his wife and daughter.

J. Edgar Hoover would only say that the three, all from the Cleveland area, were charged with violating federal laws in connection with the deaths.

Held in Cuyahoga County jail were Paul E. Gilly, 37, a house painter from East Cleveland; Aubrau W. (Buddy) Martin, 32, a Cleveland laborer, and Claude E. Vealey, 26, who gave no address.

The three were scheduled to appear before a U.S. commissioner today on charges of interfering with the rights of a union member by force or violence; conspiring to interfere with a union member's rights and obstruction of justice.

Vealey, an Ohio state reformatory parolee, also was charged with violating the federal firearms act by transporting firearms across state lines.

Family members have asserted that the slayings of Yablonski, 59, his wife Margaret, 57, and daughter Charlotte Joanne, 25, resulted from Yablonski's unsuccessful bid to become president of the UMW.

Yablonski had made an unsuccessful attempt to unseat UMW President W. A. (Tony) Boyle in a bitter union battle shortly before the slayings.

The FBI did not say whether the three men charged Wednesday were members of the union. But a union spokesman in Washington said in a statement the UMW was "most happy to learn that they apparently have no connection with the UMW."

Journalists Released From Port Harcourt Hotel

LAGOS (AP) — The first of a group of 80 foreign journalists held at Port Harcourt overnight flew here today.

They landed at Ikeja airport in Lagos, about two hours before a news conference called by Gen. Yakubu Gowon, the Nigerian leader, was to be held.

The journalists had been confined to a Port Harcourt hotel after many of them Wednesday pointed a grim picture of starvation and misery in the former secessionist territory of Biafra.

Reports reaching here Wednesday night said the journalists were confined to the hotel after the plane that was scheduled to return them to Lagos was commandeered "for military purposes."

One passenger arriving in Lagos from Port Harcourt said they saw the journalists being taken away under armed guard.

Nigerian authorities are known to be seriously concerned about some of the press reports sent from former Biafran territory Wednesday.

The journalists, making the first official press visit to former secessionist territory since the end of the civil war, almost unanimously presented a much graver picture of suffering and hardship among the defeated. Ibo secessionists than has been disclosed in Lagos.

Hunt Horrified

LONDON (AP) — Lord Hunt, Britain's Biafra relief co-ordinator, today accused newspaper men of showing only one side of the Biafra situation and said he was "horrified by the tone and general slant" of the news coverage.

"Of course you can see these horrible things," he said. "But they are not typical."

Although the temperature was 10 below zero, James Klinkner and his 4-year-old twin sister Angela didn't seem to mind a bit. They were warm in their new fake fur maxi coats which their mother, Mrs. Penny Klinkner, of Madison, Wis., made for them. (AP Photo)

Quinte Warming Up, Above Zero Tonight

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

There's heart-warming news for the hard-wintering Quinte district tonight.

After the coldest night in decades, temperatures are finally moving significantly upwards, for a predicted overnight low of five degrees above zero.

And tomorrow the district may bask in temperatures as high as 25 above — thanks to a speedup in a warmer flow moving across the province, says the weathermen at CFB Trenton.

Normally, it's nothing to shout about. But after the meanest weather spell in recent memory, the sudden appearance of milder air is guaranteed a warm welcome.

A quick check of last night's local temperature lows should dispell any doubt about the reaction.

In Belleville the mercury reached 19 below, at Trenton 15 below.

Picton recorded 21 below — believed to be a record for a town which usually gets more snow but milder temperatures than other Quinte centres.

Coldest spot in the district was Bancroft with 31 below. At Tweed, for the second night this week, the mercury plummeted to 29 below.

It was the worst night in a winter that may be well on its way to setting a record for the longest cold spell ever.

The weather didn't climb easily out of its overnight deepfreeze.

At 10 a.m. today it was still 10 below zero at CFB Trenton.

The weatherman was predicting a high of 10 degrees above for the day.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Bitter sub-zero temperatures prevailed throughout Ontario again early today. Temperatures varied from near zero in southwestern Ontario to between 10 and 15 below zero in eastern Ontario and in between 20 and 25 below in the Muskoka and Haliburton regions. Milder temperatures are expected in Ontario today and Friday along with some light snow.

Iraq Executes 36, Charging Plot by Iran and by U.S. Agency

From AP-Reuters

BAGHDAD, Iraq (CP) — Iraq's executioners used the noose and the gun to put a total of 36 persons to death in a little more than 24 hours as alleged plotters or spies with the execution of 14 more persons today.

Baghdad radio said trials of persons accused of attempting to overthrow the Baathist government Tuesday were continuing, and there would be more sentences.

Firing squads and hangmen worked past midnight Wednesday night, carrying out death sentences given 22 persons convicted of the coup attempt.

Then at dawn today seven persons convicted last year of spying for the United States were executed. They apparently had no connection with the coup plot.

A few hours later, Baghdad radio said seven more Iraqis, six of them army officers and one a civilian were convicted in attempt, the Iraqi government also ordered Iranian Ambassador Ezllah el Amili and four of his chief aides to leave the country within 24 hours.

Accusing Iran and the United States of being behind the coup

The Iranian government denied the charge and ordered Iraqi Ambassador Mohammed al Yasin and four military attaches to leave Iran.

Iraq also closed the Iranian consulates in Baghdad, Basra and Kerbela, and the Tehran government issued closing orders for the Iraqi consulates in Iran.

Iraq broke diplomatic relations with the United States during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and has never reopened them.

Baghdad radio said that by 12:15 a.m. today 18 active or retired army and police officers had been executed by firing squad and four civilians had been hanged for an attempted coup which the government said failed Tuesday night.

The seven executed at dawn were convicted of spying for the United States. They included a former mayor of Baghdad and a former interior minister who once said in a Baghdad radio interview he had worked for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

At least four of those executed on coup charges were senior officers under the pro-Western regime of the late King Faisal. They were persuaded off after the republican revolt in 1958 in which the king was assassinated.

President Ahmed Hassan el Bakr's government charged the Iranian government with supplying 2,000 machine-guns and 250,000 rounds of ammunition to the conspirators. Baghdad radio said two American officers of the Central Intelligence Agency directed the smuggling of the arms into Iraq.

The government radio reported:

Iraqi army officers and intelligence agents infiltrated the ranks of the plotters and obtained tape recordings of almost all secret discussions they held with Iranian officials.

The coup was originally planned for last Saturday night but postponed until Tuesday night. The plotters planned to take over a tank battalion at a camp near Baghdad for an armored assault on the capital and then to assassinate government leaders and others in the ruling Baath Socialist party.

But the tank battalion at El Rashid camp remained loyal to the government and smashed the coup attempt. A state funeral was ordered today for two government soldiers killed in the action.

Roluf Innovation

Marketing Holidays Given A Musical Twist

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The shortest travelling distance between two points may be a straight line.

But — when it comes to bookings getting travellers to accept the obvious can be a complicated information process.

For travel agent Carl Roluf it's meant a unique departure — a fling with show business. And last night Belleville's tiniest out to watch the second of his productions in record months.

The business problem Mr. Roluf is tackling is a fairly common one, he says.

Many local holidaymakers still believe the only way to receive passage to faraway places is to go directly to the carrier. They will book directly with ship and airline companies, not aware it can be done through local travel agents. In turn, this means a loss of local business.

He's been aware of the situation ever since he opened a travel bureau 10 years ago, says Mr. Roluf.

At that time, he and his staff took an on-the-spot poll. Quinte residents were asked where they would have to purchase a rail ticket for Winnipeg. Invariably, 8 a y s Mr. Roluf, they went to Toronto.

Only a small percentage were aware they could have purchased such a ticket at their local railroad station.

To offset the situation he began to augment normal travel advertising with it m shows in a studio theatre above his Front Street store.

These were the forerunners of his latest, bigger ventures.

Late last year he rented Centennial Secondary School auditorium, added a Caribbean steel band, a host of pamphlets and posters, travel films and travel - association representatives — and drew 800 people.

Last night, he continued the formula — this time putting the focus on Europe — and exchanged the steel band for an orchestra playing European themes.

About 500 people showed — and the smaller turnout was predicted earlier in the day by the agent.

The National Ballet was in town, the Belleville Theatre Guild was staging a premiere — and it was forecast as the coldest night of the year.

However, Mr. Roluf said he was satisfied with the response—and ideally would repeat his productions.

He's the only travel agent in Canada engaged in such promotion and the venture has attracted wide trade interest. It's expensive — but he claims already it's showing dividends.

At a time of the year when big-city agencies are reporting a big percentage drop in business, his agency is way up, says Mr. Roluf.

The promotion outlay follows the belief-in-ownership mandate basic to business.

There's no point in just having one, reminds the travel agent.

"You've got to tell people you've got a better mousetrap."

More Than Blowing A Horn

Promotion is much more than blowing a horn, as far as Carl Roluf is concerned. It also means full show-business techniques. Tuba-player Charles Kammer was among musicians retained for occasion.

Family Service Costs To Be Record in 1970

The Hastings County Family and Children's Services (CAS) will have the largest budget in the history of the society in 1970.

This was the statement of the service's director Bruce M. Kerr as he gave his organization's annual report to county council at the conclusion of its inaugural session yesterday.

Mr. Kerr said the CAS budget last year totalled $270,595 of which the province contributed 71.21 per cent, plus 100 per cent of the cost of all children born out of wedlock.

Last year's estimated cost to the county was $42,00 — a decrease of about $5,000 from 1968, but in a year of tight money the society was hit by spiralling costs resulting in the budget being exceeded in most areas relating to child care.

This known deficit, added to already known costs, will produce an 1970 the largest budget in the history of the society.

Mr. Kerr said the society ended last year with 132 children in care, an increase of but three from the beginning of the year.

However, more children, 94 in all, had been admitted than in any year since 1963. Of this number 19 were from the county, including eight from the Mohawk Indian Band who were a charge against the province.

There were no proven cases of child beating in the county last year.

Mr. Kerr said that traditionally infants born to unmarried parents constitute the largest single group of children admitted to care, but such was not the case last year. At 42, the number was the lowest in years.

The report said that 89 girls, pregnant and unmarried, sought assistance from the CAS last year with only about half of these relinquishing their children to the agency for permanent care.

Mr. Kerr was said to have been the best year yet for the agency's adoption program with 68 children being placed. Of these 20 children were from outside societies. The success of the adoption program was attributed largely to a stepped up advertising program sponsored by the province.

Budget Tops $2 Million

TRENTON — Hospital business has become big business in Trenton.

Trenton topped the $2 million mark for the first time in the hospital's 18 - year history.

The $2,024,890 budget was based on a standard ward rate of $36.50, acting administrator Mrs. Clara M. Lowe stated in her annual report. Salaries of hospital employees accounted for 73 per cent or $1,467,009, of the spend total.

Both the quantity and quality of service increased in 1969 with the opening of a new ward featuring 22 medical care beds for long-stay patients and 14 more active beds, including an intensive care unit of five beds.

Admissions increased over 10 per cent with a total of 5,364 — an increase of 530 over the previous year. However, the patient didn't stay as long as at most hospitals.

"The average day stay for last year was 7.44," Mrs. Lowe reported, "which was the shortest in the province."

The total of 2,276 operations performed in 1969 was an increase of 183 over 1968, but the biggest increase of all was handled by the emergency department.

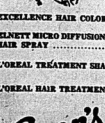
A 9 5,425 hits swelled the emergency department ranks to 17,770 in 1969, but the X-ray department wasn't far behind with a 5,000 increase and a 18,012 total. Physiotherapy totalled 17,118 — an increase of 4,332 over the previous year.

"I would like to say thank you for the auxiliary's contribution of the television and completely furnished sitting room for our extended care patients; the $3,000 donation towards the purchase of medical equipment for the intensive care unit, and the many other donations of both time and money which are too numerous to count here," Mrs. Lowe concluded.

Auxiliary Contributed $5,047 to Hospital

TRENTON — Trenton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary was the largest financial contributor to the hospital in 1969.

Total contribution of the 391-member Auxiliary was $5,047 with the largest portion being a $2,000 donation towards purchase of medical equipment for the hospital's new intensive care unit.



Volunteer Services Director, Mrs. Harold Keefer, said that a conservative estimate of the number of hours of free time donated during the year totals 2,200.

Junior Volunteers served in five hospital departments during the summer and holidays, and in two departments during the school year.

At the hospital auxiliary's annual luncheon meeting Monday afternoon, a new executive was elected for 1970.

The new executive is: past president, Mrs. W. J. Steenburg; president, Mrs. W. Ellis; first vice-president, Mrs. F. J. P. Attis; third vice-president, Mrs. Clifford Graham; recording secretary, Mrs. F. E. Hyland; and corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. Rutherford.

The auxiliary's next annual meeting will be held Jan. 18, 1971.

DUNCAN ARCHIBALD MONTGOMERY
(Stirling)

Following a heart attack, Duncan Archibald Montgomery, 187 Henry Street, Stirling, died suddenly at his residence this Thursday morning in his 83rd year.

Provincial Base Questioned

Country Still Disputes Educational Assessment Factors

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Despite a two-hour explanation from an official of Department of Municipal Affairs, Hastings county councillors are not convinced that the new provincial assessment factors for educational purposes are either correct or fair.

August McKay, director of the standards branch of the Department of Municipal Affairs assessment branch, explained how his department arrived at the new assessment factors, which last fall gave rise to a storm of protest from municipal reeves.

Some municipal representatives said if the new factors were applied, they could result in their educational levies being almost doubled.

Mr. McKay said that to arrive at the factors, his department had checked sales transaction records at the registry office and related sale prices to actual assessments. From these figures it was then established what the total municipal assessment at market value should be and the factor determined.

The assumption, Mr. McKay said, was that sale prices were the best representation of market value, but he admitted that such spot checks could never give the accurate picture which a complete reassessment of all properties would provide.

In arriving at the assessment factor, Mr. McKay said speculative sales, sales within families, and other unrealistic sales had been discarded.

But rural reeves claimed that many farm sales caused in arriving at the assessment factors had been unrealistic.

Reeve Cecil Shaw of Madoc township said cattle and machinery had been included in the sale price of some farms while Stirling Reeve Donald Rodgers said milk quotas valued at $15,000 or more had been included in farm selling prices.

Rawdon Reeve Burton Morton said his township's assessment factor has been reduced from 39 to 29 and, if applied this year, would result in his municipalities' educational levy being lowered by more than $100,000, even based on last year's cost.

Last year, he said, the township educational levy had jumped from $54,000 to $72,000.

"The township just cannot afford such increases," he said. "It is unfair, and we are greatly concerned."

Madoc township reeve Thomas Burnside agreed.

"If don't see how some municipalities can stand 100 per cent increase in educational costs unless there is some supplementary grant."

Mr. Burnside noted that in Belleville "where the real growth is" the assessment factor had been changed only two points — from 64 to 62.

Mr. McKay said it was his understanding that the department of education would limit levy fluctuations so municipalities would not receive the complete brunt in one year.

Wollaston Reeve Albert Vader said his municipality's educational levy last year had jumped from $18,000 to $40,000 but had been stabilized to bring it down to $33,000.

If the new assessment factors were applied this year, he feared the educational levy would take another big jump unless a special subsidy was given.

Tweed Reeve Barbara Allen said she had come to the conclusion that the new assessment factors were merely a complicated way of muddying up an already cloudy issue and further confusing the people.

To a question by Marmora village reeve William Shannon, who suggested the new factors had "dreamed up a new set", Mr. McKay said the reason for the new equalization factors was to allow the Department of Education to apportion grants on some real worth.

It would allow the department to hand out grant money on the basis it wanted, rather than on a distorted basis.

This was the reason why the government felt it was worth while to stir up a hornet's nest, he said.

This year, for the first time, appeals will be permitted against assessment factors, but before any appeals were made, Mr. McKay said the department wanted municipalities to understand the new uniform procedure of calculating the factors.

Then the province is completely re-assessed at market value under the provincial reassessment take-over, that currently used assessment factors will be no longer required, it was stated.

A Touch of Irony

Sale sign makes ironic contrast with property scene on Sidney's second concession west of Belleville today as fire gutted old farmhouse. Two tenants — Mrs. Hessie Generaux and son Hubert, 30 — were left homeless by blaze during coldest winter in years.

Suburban Roads Budget at Record

The Hastings - Belleville Suburban Roads Commission budget for 1979 will total $114,000 of which $82,000 will be for new construction, solicitor Ken Hunter told chairman Harry Morrow.

Speaking to members of Hastings county council at their Wednesday morning session, Mr. Morrow reviewed construction work done last year and outlined what was planned for 1979.

He said the commission this year planned to carry out the third stage resurfacing of the Wallbridge - Loyalist Road.

This work includes regrading of the approximately one half mile remaining north of Highway No. 2 and the laying of hot mix pavement over the entire 1.6 miles. Automatic signalling protection will be provided for the CPR crossing on this road.

Cost of the above work is estimated at $90,000.

Mr. Morrow noted that the suburban road commission funds were limited to the Belleville's share of costs could not exceed one mill on all of the city's provincially equalized assessment.

The city and county share equally in commission expenditures with the commission receiving the same allocations from the province as the county — namely, 50 per cent on roads and 80 per cent on bridges and culvert expenditures.

The city's estimated contribution toward the suburban roads commission's expenditures this year will be $28,000.

The roads which come under the suburban roads commission are those which, in what is known as Road 6 and 5-A.

Road 6 runs from Highway 401 through Carrollton to Corbyville and then easterly through the 6th of Thurlow and Tyendinaga to its intersection with the Shannonville sideroad at Farrell's Corners. This road has one branch which runs west from Carrollton across the Moira River to Highway 14.

Wallbridge Road (5-A) runs from Highway 2 west of the city past Loyalist Coll ge to Thurlow's Corners, where it intersects with the 4th of Sidney.

The commission has also now assumed another three miles of county road running north from Tucker's Corners to Highway 14 and following formal approval of the highways minister will be responsible also for maintenance of this section.

Sarbarkas Roads Commission expenditures are in addition to regular county road costs. At its inaugural session council passed a regular roads bylaw calling for the expenditure of $550,000 which is $100,000 more than the same bylaw last year. A supplementary roads bylaw will be passed at the council budget session in the spring.

Sales and Ad Clubs Query Tax Paper

Finance Minister Bennon's White Paper on taxation is drawing the concern of the Federation of Canadian Advertising and Sales Clubs.

Discussions among Federation executives, meeting in Belleville Tuesday revealed worry about the White Paper's effects, and the writings on:

- Curtailment of convention and entertainment expenses, leading to a communications slowdown in business.
- The proposals involving small businesses.
- The possible dissolution of sales and advertising clubs.

"We're not happy. It possibly can affect our future as sales - advertising clubs," Federation president Peter Pracklund later told the Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

A press release following the earlier executive meeting stressed the need for company - paid memberships to remain classified as deductible business expenses.

If not, memberships would be no deterrent that Clubs would be be dissolved . . ."

Disappearing with the clubs would be the "educational activities and opportunities they provide the community" plus services they supply to net business.

The executive also is worried about the White Paper's effects on convention and entertainment expenses.

Conventions are vital information and education sources for businessmen. Any curtailment could also adversely affect the hotel and travel industries.

Curtailment of entertainment expenses also would mean less communication between salesmen and potential buyers, leading to a slowdown in orders.

"The effect of such a chain reaction on employment is obvious," cautioned the release.

sympathy with those protesting proposals for small business tax levies, head of the federation's 5,500 members are operators of small or medium businesses.

Cemetery Changes Hands Gravedigger Keeps Job

PICTON (Staff)—Bloomfields Hickslte Cemetery belonging to the Quaker group, the Society of Friends, has become the responsibility of Village council.

At its last meeting, council agreed to take over care and operation of the cemetery since the Society of Friends has scheduled in membership making it an impossible task for them.

The cemetery's gravedigger, Eileen Smith, will continue her duties under the change in management.

A Wellington resident Mrs. Smith has been the official gravel-digger of the Hickslte Cemetery for a number of years.

Bicycling the five miles from Wellington to Bloomfield, to dig the graves, Mrs. Smith has become a well-known figure because of her unusual occupation.

Her name has appeared in Ripley's Believe It or Not. At one time Mrs. Smith acted as caretaker of the cemetery as well as serving as its grave-digger.

Bloomfield council has agreed to lighten her duties by limiting her job to gravedigging.

Village Reeve, Allen Anderson, recently announced plans for improvement to the Hickslte Cemetery now under Bloomfield's supervision.

Populated Townships Plan To Exercise Extra Vote

The township of Sidney and Thurlow will exercise their prerogative of casting additional ballots in questions coming before Hastings county council.

But it still hasn't been decided whether the extra voting privileges should be extended to the election of the county warden each year.

Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey brought up the subject noting this was the right of Sidney and Thurlow to extra votes and said the perogative would be exercised this year.

At the same time he admitted the extra votes would only rarely have any bearing on council deliberations.

Reeve Barbara Allen of Tweed asked whether the privilege would also extend to the election of warden.

Warden Casey in reply admitted he hadn't considered this aspect.

In interest to some other municipalities, Hastings county council each year decides on its new warden in caucus and then formally elects him in open council.

Madoc Reeve Thomas Burnside said this was one of the unwritten rules of Hastings council, but admitted the time might come when members "would have to stand and be counted" in open council.

No decision was made regarding the additional votes in the election of warden, it being decided to play it by ear when the time arrives next year.

Voting representation on county council is determined by population. Because of this several townships have deputy reeves, but Thurlow still has a right to one additional vote for a total of three and Sidney to two extra votes for a total of four.

Plenty of Experience

Hastings county council will have the experience of five former county wardens to draw on this year.

There are also four new members on this year's council body — but two of them have returned to municipal politics after a few years' absence.

Former county wardens still serving on county council are Reeves J. N. Brown of Bancroft, William Shannon of Marmora village, Thomas Burnside of Madoc village, Calvin White of Dungannon and Donald Rogers of Stirling.

New council members this year are Reeves Cecil Woods, Madoc township farmer and Warden John I. McKenzie of Faraday township who in civilian life is a chief deputy ranger, Deseronto merchant George Lyons and Mayo township farmer Ray Hannah.

For Mr. Hannah service on county council is not new, as he has represented his township on the county body on two previous occasions. Mr. McKenzie also served briefly on council some years ago, while Mr. Lyons has been a member of the Deseronto town council.

County Standing Committees

Standing committees for Hastings county council were appointed at yesterday's inaugural session of council.

The list includes the appointment of former warden Fred Beckett of Rawdon township, as the county representative on the Belleville and Suburban Roads Commission, replacing Harry Morrow as the council appointment.

Warden John Wilkes said the understanding was that Mr. Morrow would be renamed as the third member of the roads commission to succed Fred Mitchell of Thurlow township.

Standing committee members will meet to name their own chairmen. Following is the list of committee appointments:

CN Delays Transfer Until Fall

Mr. Feister claimed Brotherhood officials had been trying to set up a meeting with the railroad on the issue. Union leaders had postponed discussions with the ministers of labor and transport pending such a meeting.

"The postponement was a ploy to use," said Mr. Feister. "The last I heard our national officers were trying to set up a meeting with management."

"What we'll do now is put the heavy gloves on again."

The dispute has been simmering for months.

When the railway announced last November that it planned to move the Belleville employees here as part of a centralization move, the personnel involved replied that they would quit rather than be transferred to Montreal.

Disruption of living habits and children's schooling, general hardship and the difficulty of locating jobs in adulthood were the reasons given by the unhappy employees.

The conflict was made public when Belleville MP Lee Clark criticized Commons speech that the CNR dire tive was "inhuman."

Many of the employees involved had worked for CNR for 10, 20 or 30 years, Mr Grills said, and could not make the move — especially to Quebec where life is more unpredictable — at this late stage in their lives.

Special Schools

Every now and again we hear or read about some special primary school organized by parents who are dissatisfied with the State system.

The parents get together, organize a teaching staff (often including some of their own number), and there is a relatively free and easy atmosphere, one in which teachers and students engage in what might be termed educational dialogue.

It is not difficult to appreciate why the youngsters enjoy such a learning program; there is a more personal relationship among all concerned, a greater feeling of security, and opportunities to develop self-expression not found in the conformist mold of the primary school.

Such a school — the Montreal Free School — was described in a recent issue of The Intelligencer. Established by Vicky Palmer, 32, and her husband, a music teacher at McGill, it caters to about two dozen children aged four to twelve.

Mrs. Palmer, mother of three, said she and her husband found the public schools were destructive of the individual children's "state learning." Regimentation and "impoverished curriculum," including lack of art, music and science, were among other complaints.

According to the Montreal report, the new school, where even some mild swearing is permitted, seems to have brought about remarkable personality changes in the youngsters. Now they actually like school.

We are all familiar with this sort of thing — with experimental schools and what they accomplish. For the great majority however, the State system is the only means of education available. Incidentally, the youngsters at the Montreal school are largely sons and daughters of university teachers. In other words a select group.

What the public school system must try to do is introduce some of the ideas of experimentalists such as these. Curriculum should be kept constantly under review, discipline at an effective minimum and self-expression encouraged.

Rather than a rash of do-it-yourself schools growing up all over the place, we need fresh ideas and a more compassionate approach within the framework of what already exists.

Farm Economics

To rent or to buy? That is a question faced by an incalculable number of people daily: "A home . . . a car . . . a farm. Some businessmen, for example, find it more economical to rent a car on a permanent basis. That way they save on wear and tear and have a new car virtually all the time.

Renting land for farming purposes on the other hand may be more of a rarety, but this also finds favor with some. The recent Quinte Farm Conference heard from Robert Hunter, a Brooklin-area farmer who he preferred to rent.

"I can't afford to buy the land I work," he said. "If I could I would retire to another business."

From a purely business, no speculation, no inflation point of view, he said, it was cheaper to rent than to own farm land; and anyway ownership carried with it too many problems.

The man who rents a car permanently and farmer Hunter doubtless would find much in common.

A home — well that is different. With a home, even an old one in good condition, the value increases with the years, affording a virtually certain profit when the time comes to sell.

Farm and Country magazine editor J. R. Phillips told the conference that only farmers who could make a "reasonable living in agriculture should remain in farming. Well no one would argue with that, but there is evidence that many do make a very reasonable living from it. It is to be found in a recent issue of Mr. Phillip's magazine.

The Canada Country is sponsoring a 21-day farmers' holiday and agricultural study tour this spring to South Africa and Rhodesia, with stopovers in Rio de Janeiro and London. That is in March and April; then in May and June there is another one-month tour to Russia, Czechoslovakia, Britain and Ireland (in that order, according to the advertisement). Yet another one is being organized by a Toronto travel agency and will take farmers on a tour of California and Hawaii.

If anyone had imagined the farming fraternity were not the travelling kind, these four projects dispel the notion. So if you are a young man in search of a career and a yen for faraway places, then why not take up farming? Make good at it — and the world is yours.

PM Effects A Cavalier Approach to Affairs of State

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Forget the timid bleating of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition that Prime Minister Trudeau, a devious republican, is scheming to convert Canada from the parliamentary to the congressional form of government.

It just does not make political sense.

But a republican he is not.

He is simply too deep-dyed a pragmatist for that kind of caper.

As prime minister, iron-fisted leader of a rigidly-disciplined and unlikely subservient majority government, he is supreme.

King Pierre exercises ultimate power that any 19th century monarch would envy.

What Pierre wants, Pierre gets.

And who but a weak, uncertain and powerless Opposition is to question his casual whim or whipish ukase?

As the president of even a personally hand-tooled republic he would be subject to the checks, balances, and the like crunches the veto of a congress.

When he has it so supremely good, powered as prime minister as any dictator, why should he spoil it by permitting congressional hacks to enjoy a monopoly on the levers of power?

Think of it — there is nothing that a steel willed majority prime minister can not do in governing the country as long as Parliament goes along with it.

If Parliament does not go along — and for a miraculous moment in the last days of power of minority Prime Minister Lester Pearson it did not — the PM can change the rules of the parliamentary game.

Pearson, anything but a powerful prime minister, did it when the splintered Opposition fused to defeat his income tax bill, just two years ago.

In this situation, the rules since Confederation decreed that a defeat on a tax bill is automatic death for a government.

But unpowerful a minority prime minister as he was, Lester Pearson had had enough muscle to convert defeat into victory by the simple process of refusing to resign — and in effect, reviving — the parliamentary rules that had controlled the Commons for 103 years.

Trudeau is no permissive prime minister like Pearson.

Nor is he a mutilated PM.

Parliament goes along with anything he says and does, because he rules the Liberal majority in the Commons with a club of fear and the Liberals run the House with their fat plus of votes.

The cabinet walks softly and carries a ditto machine, and those who do not "toe toe" him are out. Like his former deputy ex-number two in the ministerial pecking order, Paul Hellyer.

So why should King Pierre change anything except those things calculated to perpetuate his reign the next time he must face the voters, in 1972?

Trade his throne for HIM, monarch of all he surveys for a chair as Mr. President, compelled to court a congress?

It will not wash, I'm afraid.

But change other things to preserve and protect the palace?

Yes indeedy.

The many men around him — the circle of power is three times the size of mere than ringed any previous prime minister — have drilled him on the vital voting statistics.

The young, the way the years work things out, are getting the majority thrust.

The unyoung — do not trust anyone over 25 — see the years thin their ranks.

So how to youth-orient the administration, and take a chance on the vote of the unyoung as indispensable?

Well, what better than to lower the voting age to 18 as the government formally has proposed?

Let in the draft dodgers and deserters.

Talk about the possibility, blinding even at the desirability, of legalizing pot.

Say you are too busy to see almost anyone but Barbara Hutton for Beatle John Lennon and Yoko.

Swing like a young fun-loving, kiss-blowing bachelor even if you are past 50.

Do your own thing. Have fun in Faraway Places.

Display a gay contempt for the questions of critics as like saying the toughest decision at a federal provincial conference, where the future constitutional and tax paths of the nation are being mapped, was whether to go skin-diving in the land of the sea, sun and sand, or whether to ski on the snows of the Alps.

Figures?

"I'll have another flu shot, please!"

School Desks Ditched

Hamilton Spectator

Hamilton - Wentworth separate school board threw "between 150 and 200" old school desks into the garbage and citizens salvaged a few of the desks before they were burned in the Dundas dump.

Even if the board placed no value on the desks — scarred and damaged — the beat-up furniture obviously had some use for some people. It's only sensible that it n't have been deliberately wasted.

It is quite possible that the board, with little effort, could have found takers, or even buyers, for every one of the desks. An announcement on school bulletin boards might have solved the board's disposal problem in a constructive way.

With a lot of sanding and a little paint, a veteran school desk that's basically sound can be a useful and long-lasting addition to a home, nursery school or a Sunday school. Certainly more useful than a heap of ashes in the Dundas dump.

The Tragedy of Unwanted Children

Regina Leader-Post

According to a recent study of population growth made at Princeton University, unwanted births accounted for 35 to 45 per cent of the increase in the U. S. population between 1960 and 1968.

The study found that about 750,000 births a year are unwanted by both parents and about one million are unwanted by at least one parent.

Significantly, among mothers classified as poor, 42 per cent of the births were unwanted. Among negro mothers, 17 per cent were unwanted.

It is sobering to think that if this ratio holds for another generation, 35 million to 45 million out of the 100 million destined to arrive in Canada and the United States by the end of the century may be "unwanted."

More than that, it is downright chilling. For it is chiefly out of the ranks of unwanted and unloved children, both poor and affluent, that delinquents, criminals, narcotics, suicides and generally unhappy people are recruited. Thirty-five million to 45 million potential social misfits is a frightening number.

We can never call ourselves a truly civilized people until no child comes into the world unwanted, unneeded, unvalued.

Moon Is Still A Mystery

Montreal Gazette

For four days, some 800 experts debated what they had learned from analysis of the moon debris returned to earth last summer by the Apollo 11 astronauts. At the end of the Lunar Science Conference in Houston, Dr. Harold C. Urey summed up the results:

"All of us will admit that we have been wrong".

All of the theories so far advanced, including those held the longest, concerning the creation and development of the moon, have been proved faulty. The evolution of the moon remains more of a mystery today than it was before the first moon rocks were brought to earth. Before that time, confident theorists had it all figured out.

This should not really be surprising. The scientific method begin only with the Elizabethan savant, Sir Francis Bacon. Ever since, theory has succeeded theory, as new knowledge was uncovered. Less than 30 years ago, otherwise competent men said that the harnessing of nuclear power was impossible. Until it happened, many believed that man could not survive travel beyond the speed of sound, and many more said man could not survive the jolt of a rocket launch that would defeat earth gravity.

The moon, earth's ancient satellite, is believed to contain many of the secrets of earth's beginnings, and the more we know of earth the better we can conduct ourselves upon its surface.

Dr. Urey's summing up means that it is much more important for man to study the moon than was ever believed. The old theories have been shattered. Only extensive study can replace them with the knowledge that man needs.

Robert Bourassa: A Nationalist Who Respects the Minority

Quebec Liberals Will Seek Jobs and Greater Efficiency

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Liberal party has elected a new leader, who offers the promise of a new set of priorities for the politics of Quebec province.

Robert Bourassa, successor to former premier Jean Lesage, is a 36-year-old lawyer and economist who has championed two ideas:

—The need to create new jobs in a province where the number of unemployed has tripled since 1966.

—The need for administrative efficiency where he says administration can be "18, 15 and even 30 per cent more costly than in the rest of Canada."

Notably absent is the constitutional question, which the governing Union Nationale party has played up since it came to power in 1966.

Mr. Bourassa, a protege of former premier Lesage, says he is a federalist interested in having "businesslike relations" with Ottawa.

The new man is also a nationalist who wants to make French the working language of Quebec while respecting rights of the English-language minority.

He is also a pragmatist man who wants to make federalism work to the advantage of Quebecers.

To sell his ideas, he will have to unit the Liberals, in disarray after a weekend convention that provoked internal bitterness.

If Mr. Bourassa can get the Liberals together he would be in a great position to battle Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's Union Nationale party.

And the young leader, youngest ever for a major political party in Quebec province, could reach young people with his bread-and-butter message.

Mr. Bourassa could be the biggest political obstacle in provincial politics to come in the way of Rene Levesque's new separatist Parti Quebecois.

No longer is Mr. Lesage the sole provincial politician with credibility on the college and university campuses.

Mr. Bourassa's youth was not considered a liability; it was looked upon as a priceless asset.

His political inexperience—he has never served in cabinet and was only elected in 1966—was seen by delegates from a favorable angle: His is a fresh face in politics.

Mr. Bourassa says he will bring "young businessmen" into government, which would no longer be 'run like the corner store.'

He says five to 10 per cent of the three-billion-dollar budget now is being wasted each year by inefficiency. He would spend the money saved on job-producing plans.

He is speaking as a former technocrat at Ottawa and Quebec City and a graduate of Oxford and Harvard who offers good, solid, government.

Enormous problems face Quebec. Apart from unity, economically, the province is divided into Montreal and the rest. This division expresses itself dramatically in both federal and provincial politics.

At Quebec City the Liberals are urban-based and the Union Nationale, rural. At Ottawa the federal Liberals are urban, the Creditiste rural.

With the presence of Mr. Levesque's separatist party, there is the old dividing line of the division between the Quebecois and the Canadian.

Furthermore, there is the French-English language problem and school administrative questions.

Then there are the social divisions.

Mr. Bourassa may succeed in rallying all of these elements in work toward his promised "prosperous society." The real

Barbershop Singers Try to Revive Chapter in Belleville

A newly formed barbershop quartet made its first appearance in Belleville recently as guests of the Belleville Lions Club.

Club members applauded the efforts of Donald Brook, Alfie Evans, Keith Chambers and William Bailey.

"They did an excellent job of singing more than a few of the old barbershop numbers," said one club spokesman.

The quartet is attempting to capture interest in order to start a chapter in the city.

"If their performance at our last meeting is any indication, Belleville will have harmony again soon," he added.

Spearheading the movement for a new chapter the four barbershoppers are trying to promote more than a passing interest in the idea of a barbershop quartet.

"Our idea," said Alfie Evans "is to get around and harmonize to show various groups how good barbershop harmony can sound."

"We hope that by fall we will have gathered enough interest to get rolling again by next winter."

Belleville did have harmony up until three years ago, when the city's chapter of the Society for Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartets Singing in America Inc. lost its charter for membership because it did not meet its membership quota.

"Our previous chapter sometimes reached a peak of 30 members in the 10 to 12 years we sang together. We even used to have a show and parade, at which four quartets from various centres came to the city," said Mr. Evans.

Twenty-one members are needed to start a new chapter, and Mr. Evans expressed the hope their quota will be gained through the group's performances.

The reason for the loss of charter for the previous chapter was simply the fact that "too many people have too many things on the go," remarked Mr. Evans.

Everyone so far has been good, with several men indicating their interest in potential membership.

"I think quartets are the best form of relaxation there is around today. Singing gives the individual an opportunity to forget the stresses and strains of the day. You might say it is beneficial to your make-up, and will help set you on the path for another day," said Mr. Evans.

CLC Urges Laws to Control Concentrated Media Ownership

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian Labor Congress brief to the Senate media inquiry today sought legislative curbs on concentration of mass media ownership into few hands.

The principal voice of organized labor in Canada said the public ought to be apprehensive about the concentration of ownership, blended into appropriate legislative measures which the brief did not define.

Ownership of mass media should be segregated from ownership of other forms of capital to avoid conflict of interest. Another concentration of concern was cross-ownership of newspaper, radio and television, particularly in the same community.

Also, the CBC could play a role in providing radio and television alternative sources of information in communities served by only one newspaper, the brief said.

As a matter of right, the ordinary consumer of mass media entertainment and information should have more than one outlet available to him to learn about events.

The CBC recommended the special Senate committee on mass media consider ways to encourage establishment of additional newspapers. It was in the public interest for cities to have more than one. Special postal rates, tax concessions and direct subsidies were some avenues.

There was too much foreign influence in the handling of international news printed in Canadian papers, Canadian publishers, who own and control the domestic news service, The Canadian Press, were unwilling to spend money on originating foreign news, the brief said.

Brantford Publisher Fears Growth of Newspaper Chains

OTTAWA (CP) — Publisher John Preston of the Brantford Expositor said Wednesday there is a danger of increasing ownership of Canadian newspapers by newspaper chains.

Mr. Preston agreed with a questioner who suggested this during his appearance before the special Senate committee on mass media. He said he would hate to see every paper in the country owned by three groups.

But, eventually, something like that was inevitable unless something is done to curtail the sale of papers to the groups, he said. However, he had no solutions to the problems.

Mr. Preston said all three groups in Canada—FP Publications, Southam Newspapers and Thomson Newspapers—would be after the Expositor if the family-owned newspaper was for sale.

"If we were to hold up our hand and say we were for sale, we would be trampled to death," he said in reply to questions about the concentration of media ownership in Canada.

Although the Expositor is not up for sale, the family has thought of selling out because of succession duties which would be applied when he and his brother, Peter, die.

Joint Operation Could Stimulate Competitive Opinions

OTTAWA (CP) — R. S. Malone, president of FP Publications Ltd. of Winnipeg, said today that joint business operations between newspapers—such as the type of anti-combines authorities—could stimulate competitive editorial voices in Canada.

Mr. Malo, also publisher and editor-in-chief of the Winnipeg Free Press, suggested to the special Senate committee on mass media that it should consider a relaxation of anti-combines regulations as a way of preserving newspapers and encouraging development of new editorial voices.

He cited Edmonton as an example of a place where a second newspaper could be established by co-operative business arrangements between two publishing companies.

In a submission prepared for Mr. Malone said financial pressures and competition from television and radio have encouraged a North American trend towards newspaper monopolies in cities—a single newspaper or single ownership of both morning and evening newspapers.

FP Publications operates both daily newspapers in Victoria.

An alternative trend is development of so-called agency arrangements, whereby separate newspapers in a city combine some operations such as printing, Mr. Malone said.

FP Publications had an agency co-operation with Southam Newspapers in Vancouver. A joint holding company owned their combined physical assets and printed and distributed FP's Vancouver Sun and Southam's Vancouver Province. Profits were shared.

Government authorities in North America tended to resist such arrangements on such grounds as monopoly, restraint of trade or concentration of power, Mr. Malone said.

Mr. Malone, whose group operates eight daily newspapers across Canada, said he would support both single ownership of newspapers in a city or joint publication rather than see any more dailies fold.

He regretted the trend towards one-newspaper towns, but joint publication could be an answer.

"Whether one likes it or not, monopoly situations are likely here to stay, except where agency type operations can be developed. Our problem is to learn to live with it, and still serve the public with a quality newspaper."

Insisting that competitive news-gathering and editorial policies must be maintained under joint operations, Mr. Malone added:

"While our combines branch here in Ottawa might take a rather jaundiced view of any attempt, say, the Southams and ourselves co-operating to publish joint morning and evening papers in Edmonton, you must ask yourselves—might this not be a benefit to the city of Edmonton, having two separate editorial voices, with competing news staffs, foreign services, columnists and leader writers, commenting with conflicting views."

Mr. Malone said his company had been approached frequently by citizens of Edmonton asking it to start another newspaper there. The Edmonton Journal, he said, is a Southam newspaper.

Not Papers' Privilege

Free Press Public Right

OTTAWA (CP) — A special Senate committee on mass media was told today that politicians should refrain from any action that would infringe upon freedom of the press.

Freedom of the press is a democratic right of the public, not a special privilege of newspapers, said Norman Smith, editor and president of the Ottawa Journal, in a submission prepared for presentation to the committee.

Any move to "guide" the press, however well intentioned, could lead eventually to muzzling it and thereby to muzzling the democratic process, he said.

"I think this committee's prodding should usefully remind us all that the public has a right to take a good hard look at the press from time to time," Mr. Smith said.

"But I am convinced that governments should leave the running of the press to the press.

"If some of us are making more money than is good for us, tax us.

Power of Press To Manipulate Opinion Is Myth

OTTAWA (CP) — The power of the press to manipulate public opinion is a myth, newspaper editor William C. Heine said Wednesday night.

Mr. Heine, editor of The Free Press of London, Ont., told the special Senate committee on mass media that experience shows the public has too much common sense to be manipulated by an editorial line.

He was commenting on a remark by Senator C. R. McElman (New Brunswick) who had said he believed the key issue before the committee is "a question of access, unadulterated power" in the hands of media owners, especially in a monopoly situation.

"If we gang up or monopolize against the public interest, I crack down.

"If we are seditious or libelous or otherwise unlawful, take us into court.

"But as to what we put in our papers—good, bad, indecent or incomplete—let the public be the judge.

"Men of politics shouldn't shape the press. Not if it is to be free."

Mr. Smith said he can perceive no immediate threat to press freedom. But there was a danger of future encroachment by government in the name of such laudable aims as completeness, efficiency or a sense of unity.

Mr. Smith cited comments made by Communications Minister Eric Kierans in a speech last June to the effect that there is a public revolt against mass communications and also that governments have a role to play in an evolution to individual from mass communications.

The Journal editor said Mr. Kierans was making fair comment, "but suppose a successor were to decide that the people's revolution against mass communications now compelled the government to step in to see that the people were fully informed!"

Who then would decide what the people were to be informed about, he asked.

Mr. Smith also quoted a question posed by Senator Keith Davey, (L—Ontario) chairman of the media committee, on whether the press, "all of it, everywhere in Canada, contributes to national unity."

"National unity can never be an absolute, unchanging thing, Mr. Smith said and he asked who can decide what is good for national unity or what is in the national interest. If the press was free and useful, there would be no time when all of it would appear to be contributing to national unity.

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE COCHRANE

Cochrane – Beaumont

Cherry Valley United Church was the scene of the recent marriage of Patricia Ethlyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Beaumont, RR1, Milford, to Wayne Waller, son of Mr. Walter H. Cochrane, RR4, Picton, and the late Mrs. Cochrane.

Rev. Robert Sherwin and Rev. Wesley Neelands performed the ceremony and Miss Evelyn Moore was at the organ.

Miss Troyce Moore and Mr. Keith Moore, Picton, sang a duet.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white brocade, full-length empire style. It was sleeveless with a wide boat neckline, and the bodice was trimmed with band - seam rhinestones and silver sequins. A short train fell from the shoulders. Her elbow-length veil was four tier silk illusion with embroidered edges and was held in place by a white satin and organza single rose. She carried a nosegay of deep red roses and white carnations.

Mrs. Glen Flaig, RR2, Picton, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a ruby velvet full-length A-line empire style gown with wide boat neckline, short sleeves and a self-bow at the back. The three bridesmaids, Mrs. Tilton Beaumont, RR8, Picton, Mrs. Tony Beaumont, RR1, Picton, and Mrs. Christopher Beaumont, Newmarket, all sisters-in-law of the bride, were contrasting jade green velvet with identical styling to that of the matron of honor. All were small bow matching their dresses in their hair; cultured pearl drop earrings and pendant, a gift from the bride, and black patent pumps. They carried nosegays of red and pink carnations centred with a red-edged white carnation.

The bridegroom's best man was Dennis Vanderkruyf, RR4, Picton, and the ushers were Tilton Beaumont, RR8, Picton, Tony Beaumont, RR 1 Picton and Christopher Beaumont, of Newmarket, all brothers of the bride.

Jackie Beaumont, niece of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a floor length A-line dress with inverted front pleat and Juliet sleeves of white tiered, puffed lace. She wore a small ruby velvet bow in her hair. She carried a small nosegay of red and white carnations.

Master Mark Beaumont, nephew of the bride, was ring-bearer, and carried the single ring on a white satin pillow.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Maple Inn, Bloomfield. The bride's mother wore a flowered silk sheath with a black sheer three - quarter length coat, black accessories and a corsage of deep red rosebuds. Mrs. Zita Day, representing the bridegroom was in princess style gold lurex with corsage of bronze 'mums.

For the wedding trip to New York State, the bride donned a teal blue two-piece wool suit with silver grey mouton collar. She wore silver accessories and a corsage of deep red rosebuds.

Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane will reside at Belleville RR4.

Many Tasks for Volunteer Bureau

The Volunteer Bureau of the United Community Services has many needs to fill each month. For those wishing to become involved in service to the community, working within the Volunteer Bureau is an ideal place to start.

If you have spare time on your hands, and would like to put it to use helping someone else, take note of the following needs:

- Volunteer needs this month center on a steady and increasing need for drivers. With a new volunteer project beginning which requires transportation of handicapped pre-school children each Wednesday morning, the driver plays an all-important part in the chain of events leading to the success or failure of this attempt to assist helpless children.
- There is a particular need for transportation for a child who lives in the Stirling area, who is participating in the Belleville program every Wednesday morning.
- There are approximately 85 pre-school children in six different volunteer programs, and must rely heavily on donations of supplies and time from interested persons.
- If you would like to work as a volunteer in one of these programs, we could use your help for one half day weekly or more, in a capacity which would suit your particular talents.

Call Mrs. F. E. Burrows, United Community Services, Volunteer Bureau, 962-8531 for an interview.

Legion L A. Elects Officers

The first meeting of the new year of the Ladies' Auxiliary Branch 99 held in the Legion Hall on Jan. 19 with a good number in attendance.

The 1969 committee reports showed a successful year. There were 43 banquets catered to during the year and 118 members and veterans looked after by the sick committee with cards, flowers, fruit and smokes. Two rummage sales were held and euchre every Thursday afternoon. There were 30 applications for membership during the year and two dances.

The group welcomed two new members at the meeting Cynthia Bush and Gladys Morrison and an application for membership from Beatrice Rees was received.

It was decided to hold a Valentine dance in February and plans were completed for the first Zone sports day, which is being held in Deseronto on January 24. The box will be leaving at 12.30 p.m. sharp for bowlers and euchre players.

Chairman of the sick committee for 1970 is Comrade Connie Pringle. She reports a number of members ill at the present time. In Belleville General Hospital are: Comrades Evelyn Woodcock, Earl Pickell, Bob McCoy, Stuart McBride, John Fisher, Ernie Chalk, Jack Wiltshire and Scotty Johnstone. In Kingston General Hospital is Jim McKenna, Princess Margaret Hospital is Eden Blair. At home are comrades Annabelle Hardwick and Jean Hammond.

After the business was dealt with the installation for the new slate of officers took place with Comrade Jack Rashotte, Branch 99 president in charge assisted by comrades Hank McLaughlin, Sid Scott and George Carbury. Comrades Mick Sylvester and Richard Kirby assisted comrade Rashotte at the electo.

The officers and executive for 1970 are: president, Edna Bennett; 1st Vice, Gwen Samuel; 2nd Vice, Lillian Cummings; secretary, Mamie Spencer; treasurer, Daisy Jeffs; sgt.-at-arms, Jean Bursaw; executive members: Augusta Bradford, Annie Haley, Dorothy Purdey, Mary Davis, Jessie Bushell, Connie Pringle, Elizabeth Hunter and Hilda Brooks.

The meeting was closed by Comrade Semark and a chicken dinner was enjoyed by all.

Due to a rental for the hall the February meeting will be held on the 18 instead of the usual Tuesday.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "We're so rushed all week since I went back to work. I barely have time to talk to the children, but I always set Saturday afternoon aside for a special outing. Sometimes it's hard to squeeze it in, but I make time."

Working mothers must make time for daily talks, as well as time for family togetherness. A special time alone, perhaps during the morning baby brushing, while washing dishes together or at bedtime will make each child feel mother always has time for him.

Trips, projects and playing games may not be as important to a young child as are shared moments for confidences every day.

Auxiliary Of A.N.A.F. Lists Officers

Members of No. 99 Ladies Auxiliary of ANA and AF attended the regular monthly meeting and the annual election of officers held in the Tartan Lounge of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 clubhouse. After the necessary business and reports the meeting adjourned until the election and installation of the 1970 officers was completed.

President Alice Skerratt invited Unit president R. G. Burns to chair the ceremonies and assisted by two unit executive members, J. McArthur and A. Jordan, he conducted the election and installation.

The 1970 executive is as follows: President, Terry Carmack. 1st vice, Mary Northey; 2nd vice, Gladys Fitzgerald; treasurer, Rennie Buckley; secretary, Mabel Galbraith; executive members: Elizabeth Lundberg, Jane Newland, Joan Seames and Janet MacDonald.

After the final adjournment light refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour was held.

88 Years of Age

Mr. Fred Deayes, RR 2 Bellrose, was honored when friends and relatives gathered to greet him on the occasion of his 88th birthday. Mr. Deayes received many gifts from those present.

Stuffed Mushrooms Make Excellent Gourmet Treat

By MARY MOORE

If it is dips you are after do not look at me. Over the holiday season I have watched guests reach and dip, reach and dip then, balance a potato chip precariously to their lips protected by an inch-square serviette until I hope I never see a dip and a dipper again.

I felt on a little bit of an hors d'oeuvres kick because I worked on new ones for parties during the holiday season. While I know the peak of the entertaining season is over I must give this to our readers and hostesses alike is fresh in my mind.

Last week I gave you Peg's Marinated Brussels Sprouts. Today I am giving you Stuffed Mushrooms — a gourmet treat. It was my assignment to bring the hors d'oeuvres to a family get-together on December 27th. I took marinated Brussels sprouts and these stuffed mushrooms and maybe because the guests were all hungry and waiting our arrival these stopped the show.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS

1 lb. small perfectly fresh mushrooms (see below)
About 1 cup bottled genuine lemon juice
Two 4-oz. tins chive cream cheese
One 8-oz. can small shrimp, drained
Sliced stuffed olives (for garnish)

Select small perfect mushrooms if your dealer will give you his permission. Carefully remove stems from mushrooms. (Use them in soup or with steak or in combination with peas as a hot vegetable for another meal.) In a large dishpan wash mushrooms by gently tumbling them around under running cold water until thoroughly clean. I used a soft brush with a handle to move them around in the water. Drain and dry on towels. Marinate in the lemon juice 2 hrs. turning them over at halftime to be sure all mushrooms are soaked with lemon juice. Drain well on paper towelling.

Now settle down to the filling process. If you have a patient little helper like my seven-year-old granddaughter Jennifer this is a joy instead of a bore. Gently fill each mushroom with the chive cream cheese. Top each with a small canned shrimp. Finish it off with a slice of stuffed olive.

You will need a pound of mushrooms for 12 people because these are so popular. I provided marinated Brussels sprouts too and arranged them alternately on Sandy's wooden hors d'oeuvres tray with raised concentric circles. They were a pretty sight indeed.

Hostesses who give cocktail parties and are aching for a change of menu should clip this.

Dinner Menus

Bachelor Gave Gifts; No Strings Attached

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I enjoy reading your column. However, you know, you can't win them all, so perhaps you will forgive me if I disagree with your answer about returning the gifts to a boy friend with whom the young lady severed connections.

I was a bachelor once, and any gifts I gave my girl friends were given with no strings attached. Frankly, I would have felt very cheap if I had asked for their return. Of course, this is only one man's opinion. — T. H.

Dear T. H.: Perhaps your experience is a little different from the gifts exchanged between two people who are engaged and planning marriage, gifts which may have cost hundreds of dollars. Some may even have been a type of instalment plan contribution to the home they had planned to share — and didn't.

Were yours of this I-plan-to - spend - my - life - with - you type?

* * *

Dear Doris: I read your column over and over. I think it is just great. I would like you to send me any information on a better figure and how to look older for I am 16 years old but I look about 12. — In Bad Shape.

Dear Shape: Believe it or not, it won't be long before you will find it flattering if people think you younger than you are!

The leaflet of exercises can help you shape up at any age, and it is on its way. Don't resort to heavy eye make-up or other lily-guilding.

You don't have to talk like 12, do you? Act your age, and nature will sooner or later do a job on your appearance.

* * *

Dear Doris: In a few weeks our daughter is bringing home her boy friend of two years. She is giving a birthday party for him. They appear to be very serious re marriage.

We have not met this young man and are dubious as to what we should get him for a birthday present. He is an only son and comes from rather a wealthy Canadian family so has everything.

Could you suggest suitable gifts for him from mother, dad, 11-year-old sister and 12-year-old brother? Mollie.

Dear Mollie: Nothing lavish. Most important is to give what will stop his knees from knocking together — easy friendship.

Get young Sis and Brother to pull together on some taffy or fudge for him Ask for a chat from your girl about his taste in books and records; or any hobbies he indulges in. This will point the way.

Don't worry about that man — has — everything bit. He doesn't think he has, until the collection includes your daughter.

(Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let's Dorie and Ann Landers answer your questions. Just write to them, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Columnist Doubts Pregnancy Story

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thirty-six people work in this office. In the past six months, there have been nine pregnancies. One of the girls has started bringing a thermos of drinking water from home. It seems she read about a young woman in Australia who swears she got pregnant from the water in a swimming pool. She uses a douche connection.

We realize this sounds crazy, but in this day and age when scientists are talking about test-tube babies and producing organic matter in laboratories, anything is possible. Before you make a decision, please concede that there is a lot to be said for keeping an open mind. — QUERY IN TRIPLICATE.

DEAR TRIP: I agree it's a good idea to keep an open mind. Something might drop in. That girl in Australia may well have gotten pregnant in the swimming pool, but it wasn't from the water, honey.

As for the babe in your office who is carrying a thermos jug from home, are you sure it's water she's got in there?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 15 and have been dating for three months. I have no trouble with boys — that is, most boys. The one I am writing about has a weird effect on me. Chris gives me stomach trouble. When I am with him, I can't eat a bite. I feel so tight inside it is awful. It is embarrassing to see all the other kids devouring pizza, hamburgers and French fries, while I struggle to finish a cup of hot chocolate. I like Chris more than anyone else. Why does he give me stomach trouble? — NUTTY NELL.

DEAR NELL: Most stomach trouble originates about three feet up — in the head. The stomach is a principal target for relayed messages. Sometimes the messages reads, "I am unsure of myself," or "I am frightened," or "I feel guilty," or "I'm not measuring up as I should." Try to decode your message and go to work on whatever is bothering you. And get some help if you can't hack it alone.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What can be done about a couple in our crowd who act as if no one in the world has kids but them?? Both this man and his wife monopolize every conversation with the cute sayings of their children. Their kids are darling but then, so are ours — and everybody else's.

We have seen the same batch of pictures four times and heard the same stories over and over until I could tear the hair out of my head. They forget who has seen and heard what and every time they tell a story they add something and make it better.

Last Sunday they ran two hours of old home movies. We were trapped with three other couples.

Is there any defence against people like this? What do you advise?—FED UP.

DEAR FED UP: Distance.

* * *

Confidential to MYSTIFIED: Your friend's "secret" is that she knows how to make men feel comfortable. And she's probably got a small corn in her ear from listening. Observe this gal in a group. I'll bet she knows how to draw people out, gets them to talk about themselves — and keeps herself in the background.

Hastings Warden 'Shocked at Bad Relations' with City

Hastings county warden John Wilkes has voiced strong objection to the comment of Belleville Mayor J. Maxwell Scott to Trenton on Monday when he urged action to stall off provincial legislation which might force municipalities together "as an old county set-up . . ."

Mayor Scott made the comment at the Trenton Rotary Club, the Belleville mayor was quoted as saying the county as such is not qualified to run the communities of Belleville and Trenton."

Yesterday in a statement to council members at the close of the inaugural session Warden Wilkes said he received the shock of his life at the remarks of Mayor Scott.

"I didn't realize that relations between Belleville and the county were as bad," he said:

"I am certain that such is not the case and that most of our differences really result from misunderstanding rather than friction between our communities."

Warden Wilkes said the county bore no ill will whatsoever toward the city and said this was proven by the county's willing participation in many joint functions which serve to benefit "all citizens in our total community."

As examples of county-city co-operation the warden pointed to the Belleville General Hospital, a project which he said neither municipality could have undertaken alone.

"The county is quite happy to have this institution located in the city. We will continue to share to the extent of 35 per cent in all capital expenditures."

Other examples of co-operation between the county and Belleville were listed by the warden.

These included the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, which is a joint operation with Belleville, Trenton and Prince Edward county; the county social services department, which again is a joint operation between the county, the city and Trenton.

Another joint co-operative effort between the city and the county was stated to be the county - owned Hastings Manor.

"This council only recently approved a policy that would permit residents from Belleville and Trenton to be admitted to these institutions (at Belleville and Bancroft) at the same cost as county residents."

The warden said that Trenton has no equity in the cost of either of the county's two homes for the aged, while Belleville has shared in the cost of Hastings Manor only to the extent that they are billed to 71 beds.

The 71 beds do not meet Belleville's needs in this service and Warden Wilkes said this county felt it was being most generous in its offer.

"I could mention many more fields of joint endeavor, but these are probably some of the more important," said Warden Wilkes.

For instance, he said, there was a joint airport committee.

Also the county had made efforts to have a joint planning area established.

"We have been unsuccessful to do this (establish a joint planning area) for several years, and it was only after several fruitless attempts and after being advised by our neighbors that they were definitely not interested in a joint operation that the county made application to have the county defined as a planning area."

Warden Wilkes said that all of these serve to improve the services that local governments were either required to provide, or wished to provide to citizens.

"Neither the county, nor any of its administrative personnel, has any desire to try and control the destiny of our neighbors. We are not trying to build an empire, but are simply attempting to provide the best possible service to our citizens.

"We think we can best do this by co-operation with neighboring municipalities and not by playing the role of the adversary," the warden continued.

"We also believe that by standing united as a county, we can provide a standard of service to our smaller municipalities that they can not provide on an individual basis."

"Although there are those who would like to see us divided and thereby weakened, we will not be divided," declared Warden Wilkes.

Students On Bus Escape Injury

TWEED (Special) — Passengers in a school bus escaped injury Tuesday afternoon when the vehicle was in collision with a car on county road 8 four miles west of Highway 37.

There was no damage to the school bus driven by Harold Decker, 63, R.R. 4, Stirling, but the car driven by Fern Marie White, 29, R.R. 2 Roslin, had $600 damage and a passenger Sandra White, aged 4, suffered a bump on her head and lacerations.

PRESENT:

A 12-WEEK SEMINAR

WORK SIMPLIFICATION

This course covers the basic techniques of methods improvement and prepares the participants for making an effective contribution to a Work Simplification Program.

THE COURSE . . .

Emphasis is placed on practical problem solving, using problems and cases representative of actual work situations. To further add to the practical nature of this course, participants are invited to bring a job or problem from their own organization as a Work Simplification project during the course.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

- Owners or Managers of small companies.
- Supervisors and Foremen from both line and staff functions in manufacturing concerns.
- Supervisors in administrative, professional and technical fields.

SUBJECTS . . .

In each session of approximately two hours, the following topics will be presented:

- Work simplification and productivity
- Principles and Techniques of Method Analysis
- Making Work Simplification Work
- Facilities Layout
- The Supervisor and Work Simplification

An Ontario Department of Education Certificate is awarded for successful completion of this course.

COURSE LEADER: F. Beeby, Training Administrator, Northern Electric Co.
Course Begins Feb. 23 to May 11

Monday Evening 7 to 9
FEE - $45.00

Meet the family.

Our TV's. From 11-inch Panasonic, world's smallest TV—to 20-inch Panasonic. Every one of them made with the legendary Panasonic quality.

At Panasonic, size has nothing to do with quality. Every model we make, we make like it was our only set.

And we don't skimp on features that make viewing simple. Like side-lever controls that let you adjust your set with precision. And automatic circuits that make sure it keeps put.

Like dark-tinted screens that shade the picture from glare and reflection. So you don't see halos when a not-so-sainty character is on.

And Speed-O-Vision. Which means you never need an appointment with your television. Click . . . and on come sound and picture. Instantly.

A lot of other features we don't skimp on include direct vision tubes for better viewing. Illuminated channel selectors, dipole antennas for clear reception, and earphones for privacy. And a lot more.

So if size has nothing to do with a good black and white TV, what does? Quality. Quality and a lot of innovation. The type you get from a company with 2,500 scientists and research engineers. With 60,000 technicians in over 80 factories. And with experience in selling 4,500 products in 120 countries.

Drop by any Panasonic dealer and spend some time with our family.

We think you'll like our type of planned parenthood.

Sports On All Fronts

SARNIA (CP) — Midget teams from the host Sarnia Minor Athletic Association and Warren, Mich. battled through five sudden-death 10-minute overtime periods and ended up tying 4-4 in an AA contest in the North American Silver Stick hockey championships for squints and midgets. Tournament officials called the game at 12:25 a.m. and said they would try to reschedule it for late Friday afternoon. The tournament ends Sunday. In other games played Wednesday, the third night of the tournament, Exeter, Ont. defeated Port Huron, Mich. 5-3 in a midget A contest and Warren defeated Ann Arbor, Mich. 6-0 in squirt A play.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League announced Wednesday four more players had signed their 1970 contracts. They are pitchers Howie Reed and Carroll Sembera, infielder Kevin Collins and catcher John Boccabella. The other 10 players signed are outfielders Rusty Staub and Adolfo Phillips, infielders Ron Fairly, Bobby Wine and Angel Hermoso, and pitchers Dan McGinn, Mike Wegener, Claude Raymond, Ernie McNally and Carl Morton.

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto Blues regained first place in the western hockey division of the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association Wednesday night with a 7-1 victory over University of Windsor Lancers. Toronto now leads University of Waterloo by two points. Paul Laurent paced the Blues with two goals. Other scorers were Bob McGuire, Terry Sherman, Bill Buba, Les Burman and Nick Holmes with one each. Bill Wright scored the Windsor goal. Despite the score, goaltender Don Brunor was outshooting the Lancers ace, stopping 59 shots while Windsor managed only 15 shots at Toronto goalie Adrian Watson.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — City officials and holders of a new National Hockey League franchise for Buffalo reached informal agreement Wednesday on terms of a 20-year lease for Memorial Auditorium. Corporation counsel Anthony Mangano said the Niagara Frontier Hockey Corp., holders of the franchise, notified him they would accept the city's counter-proposal on hockey concessions. The club had offered to pay the city 10 per cent of concessions and the city replied with a proposed increase of 15 per cent. The plan must now go before the entire council for approval. The lease provides that the team pay five per cent of its gross receipts the first seven years of operation, 6½ per cent the next seven years, and 7½ per cent the final six years.

Prentice Ponders Future

PITTSBURGH (AP) Dean Prentice says he wants to end his hockey career in a blaze of glory, and this may worry Pittsburgh Penguin officials because the 36-year-veteran is having one of his finest seasons.

"You always want to go out with a good year," the 37-year-old left winger said Wednesday night after he helped give the Penguins a 3-3 tie with Oakland Seals with two assists in the only National Hockey League game played. "It's not final yet, but I'm definitely thinking about it."

Prentice leads the Penguins in scoring with 15 goals and 16 assists. Last year he scored only 14 goals and got 20 assists with the Detroit Red Wings.

But Detroit left him unprotected at the end of the season in the player draft and the Penguins picked him up.

"I'm really happy here," Prentice said. "They gave me a second chance.

"But I think I'm ready for a long rest. My wife has put up with this schedule—not much of me—for 16 years and my two girls are growing up.

"It gets to be a little bit tiresome. I can feel it especially when we have three games in four nights. I was getting tired out there tonight near the end."

Prentice, who scored his 300th career goal earlier this season, was one of two Penguins (Bob Woytowich was the other) to play in the NHL all-star game Tuesday night. He scored the only goal for the West.

Tonight, Esposito gets a chance to extend his shutout string when the Black Hawks visit Detroit Red Wings.

In other games, Montreal visits Minnesota North Stars, Toronto Maple Leafs are guests of Los Angeles Kings, Philadelphia Flyers meet the Bruins in Boston and New York Rangers, East Division leaders, meet the front-running Blues from the West Division in St. Louis.

In the only game Wednesday, Pittsburgh Penguins gained a 3-3 tie with Oakland Seals.

Although only four shutouts away from passing Harry Lumley's modern record of 13 set in the 1953-54 season with Toronto Maple Leafs, Esposito said he doesn't worry about setting a higher mark.

"I don't even think about it," he said referring to pressure from the fans for more shutouts. "After all, the shutouts could stop any time. I think I've just been fortunate to gain this many."

Esposito's work behind the hard-checking forwards and defencemen this season has given the Hawks the lowest goals against total in the league—88 in 41 games. They finished in the East Division cellar last season after scoring 280 goals and allowed 266.

The tie game at Pittsburgh Wednesday preserved the Penguins' three-point advantage over the fifth-place Seals in the West Division. The single point also moved the Penguins to within three of third-place Minnesota.

The Seals took a 3-0 lead on goals by Gerry Ehman, Howie Menard and Mike Laughton but Ken Schinkel scored twice in the last half of the second period to spark the Pittsburgh comeback.

Defencemen Tracy Pratt scored the tying goal for the Penguins at 6:16 of the third period.

The Penguins took 35 shots at Oakland goalie Gary Smith to earn the draw while the Seals tested Pittsburgh's Al Smith with only 23 drives.

Doctor Advises Banning Crossbody

CHICAGO (AP) — The cross-body block should be eliminated from football, a University of Michigan doctor says.

Dr. Thomas B. Peterson of the department of orthopedic surgery at the University of Michigan Hospital studied 250 football knee injuries and found that 54 per cent resulted from this practice.

"I believe that football rules should be changed to eliminate the cross-body block," he wrote in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In the cross-body block, the defensive player throws himself horizontally at the opponent's knees in an effort to upset him. Clipping, or blocking from behind, is not permitted.

Dr. Peterson found the crossbody block causes more knee injuries at the high school and college level than among professional players.

The force of the cross-body block "can be likened to the thrust of a railroad car against the side of the unprotected knee," he said.

The dangers of the cross-body block have been recognized by coaches, he said, and noted they designate special players as "suicide squads" for open field play during kickoffs and punt returns.

Yankees Charged

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A Miami lawyer testified Wednesday the New York Yankees hired him to help a promising baseball player stay out of the army. But a Yankee official testified the Yankees were not involved.

George Foss, 45, made the charge during a hearing on a suit he filed against the American League team for $1,964 in fees he said the Yankees owed him.

Foss said he made a futile effort in April, 1968, to keep minor league second baseman James Robert Babyak out of the army with a hushed-up understanding that the Yankees would foot the bill.

"Johnny Johnson, a Yankee vice-president, said the club would have Babyak pay our fees and then the boy would get his money back through bonuses from the Yankees," Foss testified in Broward County court of record.

Johnson, in charge of player development for the Yankees, later testified that he attended a meeting with Foss and Babyak, at the player's invitation, on April 10, 1968.

"I told Mr. Foss that the Yankees are not involved, and any payment would have to come from Babyak. I did not have the authority in my position to hire an attorney to represent the New York Yankees."

Pack Trades Three For Draft Choice

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago Bears hope to climb out of the professional football shadows with the aid of three members of the once-great Green Bay Packers acquired in one of three major trades Wednesday.

The Bears gave their No. 1 pick in the upcoming Jan. 27 college draft to Green Bay for running back Elijah Pitts, outside linebacker Lee Roy Caffey and centre Bob Hyland.

The trade was the two inter-conference trades in the new National Football League.

The Packers acquired the one of three major trades Wednesday.

The Bears gave their No. 1 pick in the upcoming Jan. 27 college draft to Green Bay for running back Elijah Pitts, outside linebacker Lee Roy Caffey and centre Bob Hyland.

The trade was the two inter-conference trades in the new National Football League.

The Packers acquired Pitts, Caffey and centre Ken Bowman from Green Bay in exchange for the Bears' No. 1 draft choice.

Bowman, 6-3, 250, was acquired by the Packers from the Los Angeles Rams in the National Football League expansion draft last season.

Pitts, 6-1, 210, was the Packers' leading ground gainer in 1969 with 544 yards in 124 carries for a 4.4 average. He also caught 20 passes for 178 yards and scored 10 touchdowns.

Caffey, 6-3, 230, was a starting linebacker for the Packers in 1969 and was named to the all-star team.

Hyland, 6-3, 240, was a backup centre for the Packers.

Chicago's other trade also was an inter-conference swap with the Bears dealing offensive tackle Rufus Mayes to the American Conference Cincinnati Bengals for defensive tackle Bill Staley and defensive end Harry Gunner.

In the only other trade, the National Conference Los Angeles Rams sent reserve centre Frank Marchlewski to New Orleans Saints, also of the National Conference, for an undisclosed draft choice.

"We would have liked to have Atkins, a cornerback and wide receiver, to Houston Oilers of the American Conference for Pete Beathard, also a veteran quarterback, and star cornerback Miller Farr.

In the only other trade, the National Conference Los Angeles Rams sent reserve centre Frank Marchlewski to New Orleans Saints, also of the National Conference, for an undisclosed draft choice.

"We would have liked to have afforded the luxury of taking our first-round draft, but we had to do something now and not for the future," said Chicago coach Jim Dooley. "With what we get in the draft and in other trades, we can get the Bears back as winners again."

The Bears won four National Football League titles from 1940 through 1946, didn't win another one until 1963 and then sank to a 1-13 record last season, the worst in their 50-year history.

Pitts and Caffey each played on NFL champions from 1965 through 1967 for the Packers, who obviously are thinking of the future. Their acquired draft choice will enable them to pick second in the first round, behind Pittsburgh Steelers.

Baby Habs Eye Potential Rocket

MONTREAL (CP) — Inside an opponent's blueline he's a Rocket Richard, full of fire and determination with his mind bent only on scoring goals.

Outside he's a friendly type, not hurting anyone, slightly lazy, a poor stickhandler, listless checker and haphazard playmaker.

But he scores goals and that's what makes Guy Lafleur, a right winger with Quebec Ramparts of the Quebec Junior A Hockey League, one of the hottest junior prospects in Canada.

Lafleur, 18, set a goal-scoring record for the league Sunday night when he scored his 75th and 76th goals as the Ramparts beat Verdun Maple Leafs 11-3.

Centre Michel Briere, now with Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League, held the previous high mark when he scored 75 goals with Montreal-Bruins of the same league last season.

However, Lafleur's 76 goals have been scored in 42 games and he still has 14 games left to reach his personal goal of 100 goals for the season.

One fellow who has been keeping a close eye on him is Eric Taylor, who roams Quebec on behalf of Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series.

"I've been following him since I saw him play in the Quebec Carnival tournament when he was 12 years old," Taylor said. "I knew then he was going to be good."

Lafleur's 76 goals are almost one-third of the Quebec City team's total output for the season—235.

The Ramparts currently have a narrow one-point lead in their division and their chances of winning the league title in their first year are strong. But even more important as far as the league is concerned is that Lafleur is a great drawing card.

"Right now the Ramparts are out-drawing the American Hockey League Quebec Aces," Taylor said. "And attendances are up at all rinks where Lafleur plays."

He's not much outside the blueline," is the opinion of Verdun goalie Gilles Meloche. "But once he gets that puck inside the line, he's really dangerous and his shots are really fast."

Texas Public Relations Writer Waxes Poetic

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Should there be a virulent outbreak of purple prose on the sports pages one day now, blame Eddie Mullens of El Paso, Tex.

Eddie is sports information director for the University of Texas, and nobody throws away his press releases without scanning them for a sample of his scintillating similes.

Recently The Associated Press compiled a feature on Eddie which listed some of the most bon of his mots.

Since then, sports writers all over North America have been claiming them as their own.

No matter what you read, it was Eddie who first described an athlete as having "more trouble than a lone-deaf flute player in a bed of cobras."

One player on a losing streak was "frustrated as a crippled cat eyeing a tall mouse hole."

Another, who had a good night, was "busier than a dog-catcher's headpecker in the redwood forest."

And how about "as welcome as a double hernia at a weight-lifting contest?"

"As nervous as a mouse at an owl convention" was another, along with "slicker than ice on a pump handle."

What could be "more trouble than dust in a paint bucket" or quicker than "a vegetarian leaving a meat-packing plant?"

Mullens claims it is possible to be "as nervous as a two-headed calf in a slaughter-tat for going to the ben house."

A basketball star he described as "owning more shots than a hospital and more moves than a chess tournament."

The whole thing is enough to make one "as nervous as a long-tailed cat in a room full of rocking chairs."

Others that Mullens maps off are "about as pleasant as a tender-footed Indian on the warpath," or "wilder than an ape in a barber shop."

Among his lesser efforts are "nervous as an alligator near a dry pond," "hotter than a fry-cook's skillet," and "as rare as a penny parking meter."

Where will it all end?

Who can tell? Probably the only way to slow it down is by "praying faster than an atheist at an earthquake."

Twenty Rinks Qualify at Muskoka

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Twenty Ontario rinks qualified for Saturday's five trophy event finals Wednesday in the 13th Muskoka International Mixed Bonspiel.

The five-day event, involving 104 rinks, is being held simultaneously at Huntsville, Bracebridge and Gravenhurst.

Another 20 entries will gain berths in the finals today and Friday.

Qualifying for a shot at the main event, the Muskoka Trophy, Wednesday were rinks skipped by Bill Blackburn of Huntsville, Keith Langill of Gravenhurst, Ron Travers of Toronto Board of Trade and John Allingham of Toronto Avonlea.

Gaining spots in the Bracebridge Trophy finals were Dr. Will Goodman of Toronto Cricket, Skating and Curling Club, Arn Stephen of Port Carling, Ont., Jerry Pollock of Sutton, Ont., and Japles Leifer of Woodstock, Ont.

Huntsville Trophy final qualifiers were Richard Wallace of Port Carling, Jack Shropshire of Richmond Hill, Ont., Grant Baker of Mississauga, Ont. and Garry Armstrong of Newmarket, Ont.

George Parlett, the mayor of Bracebridge, earned a spot in the Gravenhurst Trophy finals along with Bill Constable of Avonlea, Jack Webb of Barrie, Ont. and Dr. Jim Goodwin of Gravenhurst.

Completing half the field for the International Trophy were Gordon Metcalf of Huntsville, Don Wyman of Gravenhurst, Harold Thompson of Huntsville and Irwin Coneybeare of Richmond Hill.

Trophy event final qualifiers are determined by net points from four 10-end preliminary games.

Plan to Bar Writers from Dressing Room

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There is a movement slowly infiltrating the National Hockey League to bar reporters from dressing rooms and follow the mass-interview policy adopted some years ago by the Professional Golfers Association.

At the moment, at least one dressing room in the NHL is out of bounds to anyone other than authorized personnel, and at least one other club is considering a similar stand.

Manager Jim Gregory of Toronto Maple Leafs, whose dressing rooms have always been open to press, radio and television, says there is a good reason for the barred-dressing-room attitude.

"A lot of the players find they get a certain amount of bad publicity from reporters wandering through the dressing rooms," Gregory says. "They feel this is their private domain and should be outside the limits of prying reporters."

Gregory says the NHL players' association is considering the possibility of post-game interview areas, "where reporters would gather after the game."

"A reporter would then ask for specific players to appear after they had showered and changed back into street clothes."

The underlying feeling about this attitude is that players, who now are paid for between-period television interviews and post - game analyses, are more and more beginning to expect payment from the other media.

"I know for a fact," Gregory says, "that there are few players in the league who will give a radio interview without being paid."

The only step left for the players is to refuse a newspaper interview unless they are paid.

The move borders on the one-way-street theory.

Perhaps Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins and Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks, two of the game's most popular personalities, would be the first to admit that such a theory is madness.

Both players, by their extroverted nature and time-for-everybody attitude, are probably two of the best-known and sought-after sports figures in existence.

But, getting away from the one-way-street theory, there is one perfectly good reason why the mass interview cannot be applied to a team sport and particularly to hockey.

In golf, the player, regardless of his failures in any round, is talking solely about his own game.

In hockey, the failures of the entire team or the player's own lineman or defence partner have a large bearing on the effectiveness of the individual competitor.

Even with reporters wandering through the dressing room, the player still has the right to refuse comment after a particularly poor performance.

Under the mass-interview rules, a goaltender would be forced to comment on his reasons for allowing nine goals or the league strongman could be asked for reaction after losing a fist fight to a 165-pound rookie.

How could the goaltender explain that his club let him down or the strongman excuse the fact that the rookie was aided by a team-mate and his own club refused to come to his aid?

There is absolutely nothing wrong with sports personalities using their popularity to capitalize on the affluent advertising market.

The pay-for-what-I-say attitude takes on a different hue when it is used to bench the source that sets up the power play.

English Soccer Teams Take on Mod Look

LONDON (CP) — These days British youths with an eye on instant fame and fortune can either grab a guitar or kick a straight pass.

Several top soccer clubs now sport long-haired, youthful crowd-pleasers who have been dazzling fans and setting the girls swooning with their pop-star aura.

The latest to join leading idol George Best of Manchester United in the teen-age limelight is a shy, slender Scot named Peter Marinello, who at 19 has had top English soccer clubs tripping over each other trying to put him under contract.

Son of Italian immigrants, Marinello emerged from Scotland's Hibernian farm team as a skilful winger a couple of seasons back.

Chequebook-waving talent scouts from rich English clubs first spotted him 18 months ago when he made his first appearance on the Scottish youth international squad.

Unwilling at first to part with him, Hibernian finally accepted a £100,000 offer from London Arsenal in early January after days of cloak-and-dagger shenanigans between Scotland and London which kept the newspapers buzzing with rumors.

Other interested clubs included London's Tottenham Hotspur.

Marinello's share of the deal was a £5,000 slice of the sale price, and he went on the Arsenal payroll with a weekly salary estimated at £100. When established, he could expect to earn £150.

As a money-making career, professional soccer has seen a vast improvement in the last 10 years. In 1961 soccer players and clubs forced the Football Association to abandon rigid pay scales which limited the salaries of even world-class players to less than £22 a week.

Tom Finney, ranked as one of England's greatest soccer exponents, earned about £15,000 during 12 years with Preston after the war. Top players today could expect to make that sort of money in a couple of years.

The low wage levels were scrapped following the departure of several top British players to warmer and better-paid jobs with Italian and Spanish clubs.

Each top pro club has a countrywide network of spies and scouts scouring Sunday morning amateur matches in public parks and school matches looking for teen-age talent.

Likely prospects can be signed as apprentices at 15 when they leave school, earning £10 to £15 a week until they are 18 and legally able to turn professional.

Gold-plated scorers like Marinello then can watch their pay cheques start multiplying.

On top of their salaries, members of domestically and internationally successful clubs who bring home cups and titles can earn added bonuses ranging up to £2,000 each for a plum like the European Cup.

Sidelines such as commercial endorsements, ghost-written articles and TV appearances pile up the money. Beat's outside interests are supposed to be equal to his £10,000 salary.

Players with Tottenham Hotspur, which in 1961 became the only club this century to win the FA Cup and to top the First Division in one season, made a total £1,700 during the last season before pay restraints were lifted.

A club repeating that feat this season could make its players richer by at least £10,000.

The schedule of Solunar periods, as printed below, has been taken from Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are, of somewhat shorter duration.

Trenton and Belleville Bang Heads in Play-off Battle

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sports Writer

"When you get them down — kick 'em", is a philosophy that won't make a team candidates for any Lady Byng awards.

It will, on the other hand, go a long way towards making them winners.

The Belleville Ellis Juniors are "up" at the moment. The club currently holds the fourth and last play-off spot in the Eastern Ontario Junior B League after impressive weekend victories over Kingston and Peterborough.

"They have to be our two best games of the year," says Floyd Crawford. "I was particularly pleased that neither win was based on luck. The boys played good solid hockey."

The team they have "down" at the moment is the Trenton Golden Hawks, who have dropped four in a row and trail the Ellis club by four points. However Trenton coach Roger Drake isn't hauling out the first aid kit just yet. "Now that exams are over and some of our injuries have healed, we'll be able to go with three lines," says Drake. "We've been forced to go with only two the last few games and it's pretty hard to keep hitting when you're shorthanded."

GERRY JOWETT
Back In Goal

Friday night's contest will go a long way toward determining "just who kicks who" as the teams meet head on in Trenton.

Both coaches look on it as the big game of the year and both expect their club to be skating and hitting Friday night.

"Overconfidence is the thing I'm worried about most right now," claims the Belleville coach. "It's particularly a problem with players of this age group."

The fact that Gary Lisle and Chris Long will be back in action and that Juvenile star Ted Brown will dress for the game, should go a long way toward stopping Ellis' overconfidence.

Both teams will be at full strength for the game, and the coaches feel that the team with the most hustle will come out on top. One thing in Trenton's favor is the home - ice advantage.

"I'm most impressed with Trenton's ability to bounce back," says Crawford. "There is no question that they'll be up for this one."

The Belleville mentor had praise for the play of his defencemen lately. "Greg Burkhit and Dalton Lambert have been particularly steady," he claims.

Belleville will go with the lines of Mallory-McConnell - Meagher and McCormack-Lepenette-Waite that brought them the weekend wins.

Drake is looking for an improved skating effort from his charges to augment their hard-hitting style of play. He also had words of praise for Ellis centre Danny Lapenette. "He doesn't look like a hockey player when he's just skating around," says the coach, "but just give him the puck and he's trouble."

One of the most persistent troubles may finally be solving itself. Goalie Gerry Jowett gave Trenton one of its few solid penindicting efforts against Oshawa last Sunday and will probably be between the pipes Friday night.

Game time is 8:30 Friday at the Trenton Community Gardens.

Mo-Hawks Hope to End Dream

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Owen Sound Crescents will be bringing their impossible dream into Belleville tomorrow night, but Belleville Mo-Hawks don't intend to play sandman.

The seventh-place Crescents have a hairline hope of making one of the Ellis Senior A's six playoff spots. All they have to do is win their last ten games and hope the Mo-Hawks — currently in sixth spot — lose their last nine.

Belleville won the teams' first four meetings, but a 6-5 road loss to the Crescents launched the Mo-Hawks current four-game losing streak. The Crescents sport the services of high-scoring Dave McComb, to name but one former Collingwood star who joined the migration to the Sound this season, and Sunday they handed front-running Orillia Terriers only their sixth loss of the season.

The Mo-Hawks' sixth-place standing is deceptive. They are only four points back of Galt and Kingston, who share second spot with 36 points, which means that the order of the league's last five playoff clubs is still far from settled.

Goalie Steve Rexe accepts more than his fair share of blame for the Mo-Hawk bad fortunes of late.

Rexe, who has gone through 35 red lights in the last 13 periods he has been between the pipes, claims not getting the jump on opposition h a s cost the Mo-Hawks dearly.

"If I can come up with the big save until we get on the scoreboard first, we'd be winning," he says.

Rexe has been the biggest individual sufferer from the Belleville slump. Seven games ago his goals-against average was about ready to dip below the 3.00 mark. Now it sits at a fat 3.81.

The locals, down, but feeling far from out, are bent on making tomorrow night's 8 p.m. Memorial Arena game an all-out effort.

Then they hope a rest is as good as a change.

Following Friday's game, the Mo-Hawks are idle until a Tuesday, Feb. 3 game in Kingston.

A Sunday, Feb. 1 home game with Barrie has been pre-empted by the Quinte Figure Skating Club's annual Carnical.

The 11-day layoff could be one of the biggest favors the Mo-Hawks get all season.

During that time, newcomers Lorne Ferguson and Bob Wilson — both out of hockey for the past couple of winters — will get the chance to re-sharpen their skating legs.

And chief sick list members Lou Kazowski and Wayne Hawks could also make their re-appearance in the Mo - Hawks' badly-depleted defensive corps.

That's the vacation.

A win against Owen Sound here tomorrow night would be the holiday pay.

Aid Official Critical of Thant

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should consider opposing U Thant's candidacy if he seeks another term as United Nations secretary-general, a former Canadian foreign aid official said Wednesday.

Roy MacLaren, who resigned last year as deputy head of the aid and development division of the external affairs department in order to express publicly the observation during an appearance before the Commons external affairs subcommittee on international aid.

He said he believes the present secretary-general must bear substantial responsibility for "administrative confusion" in the current system of UN aid to developing nations.

In a statement prepared for the subcommittee, Mr. MacLaren said "beyond making an occasional somewhat platitudinous speech urging more funds, U Thant does not appear to interest himself very much in economic development activities."

He said he feels this is a "curious omission" in the first secretary-general from a developing country and is particularly regrettable since about 80 per cent of the current UN budget is devoted to economic development activities.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) said he was "greatly shocked" by Mr. MacLaren's criticism of U Thant, and asked the witness what he feels Canada should do about this situation.

Mr. MacLaren said he recognizes that many factors must be taken into consideration in choosing a UN secretary-general. But he felt Canada should put support any candidate with a "substantial aid outlook" such as that displayed by the incumbent.

Jets Must Cut Fumes

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will move to impose regulations requiring jet aircraft using Canadian airports to use techniques that reduce fumes released from fuel combustion, Transport Minister Don Jamieson told the Commons Wednesday.

Replying to questions by Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka), Mr. Jamieson said he had talked to U.S. officials about similar requirements being imposed in that country.

Planes will likely be required to place adapters on their jet engines to reduce fumes, Mr. Jamieson said.

"If we accept that 'development' is another word for peace, then it is difficult to support an item of the world's major peace organization a man who obviously is not sufficiently concerned with development."

He suggested that Canada might sound out other countries about the possibility of creating a new position of deputy secretary-general with responsibility for the administration of all UN economic and social development activities.

Mr. MacLaren stressed, however, he does not wish to suggest that U Thant is solely responsible for the current problems in the UN aid system.

"The basic problems in the current UN aid system result mainly from a general lack of co-ordination, an absence of established priorities and inter-agency rivalry."

Final Bid to Be Made To Fill Montreal Jury

MONTREAL (CP) — A last-ditch effort was scheduled today to finish selecting jurors for the conspiracy trials of 11 Trinidad students in connection with the computer-smashing incident at Sir George Williams University last Feb. 11.

Only 10 white males had been selected for the jury by Wednesday, the trial's third day, forcing a court order that 100 persons be picked up at random today.

Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench, agreeing to a defence motion that invoked the Criminal Code, ordered the sheriff to begin selecting males no later than 8 a.m.

To date in the trials, there have been questions on possible racial discrimination and news-paper reporting of the incident at Sir George.

The 10 selected by Wednesday were from a group of about 140, many of whom could not render an impartial decision because they had formed opinions from newspaper accounts of the incident, which caused an estimated $2,000,000 damage.

Under the Criminal Code, prospective jurors in today's selection may be summoned by "word of mouth."

Earlier Wednesday, Juanita Westmorlands, one of the defence lawyers, said careful screening of prospective jurors is essential because of racial prejudice inherent in society.

Miss Westmorlands, a Jamaican Negro, said in an interview it would be irresponsible for the three-member defence not to investigate the feelings of prospective jurors toward Negroes.

The 11 on trial are Negroes.

Miss Westmorlands said many persons have been influenced by sensationalism, especially the headlines, which suggested that Negroes were largely responsible for the discontent and violence at Sir George.

But she was unsuccessful in having Negroes selected to the jury. Mr. Justice Mackay ruled that the sole criterion in choosing a jury is whether he is able to judge impartially, whatever the accused's color.

Damage to the computer centre capped a two-week student occupation of the downtown building. Occupation followed charges of racial discrimination against Prof. Perry Anderson, later fully exonerated by a faculty committee.

The 11 Trinidad students are the first of 87 adults to face trial over the incident.

Danny The Red Denies That's' He's Here to Agitate

TORONTO (CP) — Daniel Cohn-Bendit, 24-year-old student leader of the 1968 Paris riots, denied Wednesday that he was a foreign agitator, and said he was in Canada to "exchange experiences."

Mr. Cohn-Bendit, brought to Canada by the CTV network for a television program, said his presence did not herald militant student action.

"If you think you won't have trouble in Canada because I am not here, you are mistaken. It is systems that make trouble."

Butter Surplus Possible - - Olson

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson told the Dairy Farmers of Canada Wednesday a big surplus in powdered milk may be joined by another in butter.

Mr. Olson said the export market is so bad that any effective system for stabilizing the industry probably means working out a way to "keep supplies of dairy products reasonably within the limits of what can be sold in Canada."

The situation is that there is a world surplus of dairy products which is coming close to being unmanageable," Mr. Olson said at the dairy farmers' annual meeting.

At the meeting, Canadian dairy farmers were asked to join an organization set up in the United States to develop new dairy products.

Boyd Rice, research services manager of the American Dairy Association, told the Dairy Farmers of Canada that he now is working with Dairy Research Inc., a non-profit organization formed last year by the American Dairy Association.

Where 50 Planes Once Flew, Argus Carries Flag in Arctic

OTTAWA (CP) — About once every two weeks, a Canadian Argus long-range patrol plane makes a flight from Thule, Greenland to Yellowknife, N.W.T., to have a look around the Arctic.

The defence department, in hoping with Prime Minister Trudeau's avowed increased emphasis on things Canadian in the north, calls them "sovereignty flights."

In the late 1940s and early 1950s, however, the defence department had three squadrons —about 30 planes—operating in the Canadian Arctic, mainly on photo-survey.

That's just one of many possible examples of a steady decline in the armed forces strength in northern Canada. While it is fashionable today in military circles to hint at a broad new northern role as an exercise in sovereignty, any buildup will have to be substantial to equal the numbers of men and equipment that used to be there.

Last Nov. 19, the defence department announced that two four-man military detachments would be established at Yellowknife and Whitehorse.

More than a decade ago, there were larger detachments of signallers alone in those two locations.

Later this year, squads of some 20 men each will carry out some exercises in the Arctic.

In 1965, the defence department mounted an 800-man arctic exercise known as Polar Strike.

A decade ago, some 1,500 servicemen were stationed permanently in the Canadian Arctic.

Now there are only a handful there, excluding those at the two intelligence stations at Inuvik and Alert which monitor Russian broadcasts of all types.

In 1959, there were 583 servicemen at Whitehorse and 679 at Fort Churchill, Man. Now there is only one serviceman at Churchill.

These figures provide some of the background to a Commons committee report scheduled to be debated today over the objections of the government.

The report of the northern development committee says Canada should "without delay" announce that "vessels and submarines passing through Canada's arctic archipelago are and shall be subject to the sovereign control and regulation of Canada."

The government instead wants to work out arctic sovereignty through a pollution control measure for northern waters.

Here are some things that the defence department used to do in the Arctic but gave up years ago as obsolete or because of austerity:

It operated a big air base at Resolute on Cornwallis in the Arctic Islands.

It maintained the Canadian portion of the Alaska Highway with 300 servicemen and the Northwest and Yukon signal system with 200.

Servicemen were stationed at such remote locations as Alaktvik, Fort Reliance, Fort Resolution, Fort Providence, Fort Rae, Clum, Norman Wells, Dawson and Beaverlodge in the western Arctic.

There are no servicemen there now.

The defence research board for more than 15 years has sent annual expeditions into Canada's most northern territory. In 1962, some 75 civilian scientists and their assistants were conducting arctic research at Fort Churchill.

The defence department built the mid-Canada warning line, now dismantled, across the sub-Arctic from Labrador to the Peace River Valley.

Thousands of Canadian civilians helped in construction of the Distant Early Warning radar line across the Arctic. Construction was paid for by the U.S. but Canadian defence department engineers picked the sites.

The line is still in operation, paid for by the U.S. Four Canadian military officers have been stationed at the four main stations on the line since 1961.

The navy operated the ice-breaker and research ship Labrador until she was turned over to the transport department in 1958.

In the same year, the air force had 200 men stationed at Goose Bay, Labrador. There is only a handful there now.

The air force used to run a survival school at Cambridge Bay, later a main DEW line station. The army taught arctic survival at Fort Churchill. There is no such school any more.

House Debates Pollution

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave second reading Wednesday to the proposed Canada water act and was expected to turn today to another major issue—the question of arctic sovereignty.

The Commons gave the water act second reading and referred it to committee after a wrap-up speech by Resources Minister J. J. Greene, the sponsor.

Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) said Ottawa has shown little concern about water pollution and is acting too late.

Fish were dead in the St. Lawrence and swimming was generally forbidden in the river.

Expo authorities had helped create the problem by dumping thousands of gallons of pesticides on the Montreal islands without regard for consequences.

Robert Simpson (PC—Churchill) reiterated his party's position that the bill should be stronger. Arnold Peters (NDP —Timiskaming) said it is a good bill but will require federal spending to be effective.

Mr. Greene closed the five-day debate by saying the responsibility for pollution will be placed where it belongs, "on the polluter."

He said the bill should prove a powerful incentive to industry to develop non-polluting methods.

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Car Fumes Add To Smoking Harm

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been hearing a lot about bronchitis and emphysema of the lungs. But I've had the impression such lung complications occur only in the middle-aged and the old.

My husband, who is only 31, has a chronic cough. He smokes at least two packs a day. He has smoked since the age of 14. In addition, he is a garage mechanic. He works in a small shop, the windows are kept closed all winter, and the place hasn't got adequate ventilation. He tells me he keeps on breathing fumes from car exhaust. It's not the cigarettes, he says, so much as the car fumes. Meanwhile he coughs and coughs and won't go to a doctor. He says he's too young to have bronchitis or emphysema. — Mrs. O.

Comment: Bronchitis is no respector of age. It can occur in the very young as well as in the elderly. As for emphysema, although more common in those past middle age, it can also occur in the young.

Your husband's history of having smoked cigarettes for about 17 years is certainly reason enough to suspect the likelihood of chronic bronchitis and the possibility of emphysema (destruction of the little lung air-sacs). I can only guess and he can only guess— until he agrees to go to a doctor.

As for what his job may contribute to his cough, I believe that it only adds to the damage his smoking is accomplishing. For it has been found that NO2 (Nitrogen dioxide) is a gas found both in cigarette smoke and in auto fumes. This gas seems to play a part in causing emphysema.

If your husband expects to get over his cough, I suggest he give up cigarettes and find a job where ventilation is better than in his present work setup. Better keep nagging him until he sees a doctor.

* * *

For Miss Y.: As you are only 14, have your family doctor decide whether or not he will agree to "pierce your ears." Better not let your girl friend perform the surgery. Although she is willing and wants to be helpful, I think you will agree that it is not a job for a 15-year-old.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have dark circles under my eyes. They have caused me deep suffering and embarrassment. I am a teenage girl who has had to work long hours with little sleep. I have had blackened eyes for three years now. They have caused me to have an inferiority complex. It is a horrible strain. I wish you could suggest something to help. — Miss J.

Comment: In some way, somehow, you'll have to find means to get a good night's sleep. Not only once in a while, but night after night. After a few weeks of restful sleep you may find that the dark circles have lessened or entirely disappeared.

However, I think you ought to know that lack of sleep is not invariably the reason for dark circles. I have seen it in patients who have slept as much as 10 hours nightly.

In their case it seems to be due to especially transparent skin under the eyes allowing the veins to show through. Sleep doesn't help such patients.

The best remedy — and it isn't really a remedy but a palliative measure — is to have a dermatologist recommend a cover-up make-up to apply around the eyes. This will almost completely remove the dark circles and lessen much of the emotional strain you have faced every day.

French School Deputy Sought

TORONTO (CP) — A French-language group has asked the Ontario government to appoint a deputy minister of French-language education and give control of French schools and classes in the province to French-speaking ratepayers.

The demands are contained in a brief presented Wednesday to Education Minister William Davis by the provincial committee of the French Language Advisory Committees of Ontario.

The committees were established last October and comprise seven members each from seven French-language areas: Toronto, Ottawa, Sudbury, North Bay, Cornwall, Kapuskasing and Windsor.

Mr. Davis, replying to the brief's suggestions, said he agreed there might be "a place for someone in the department who would be totally involved in French-language education," but that appointing a deputy minister would be a difficult and complex matter.

As for turning over administration of French schools and classes to groups of French-speaking ratepayers now serving as advisory committees to school boards, Mr. Davis said:

"I also agree with them that we should make a study of the responsibilities of the advisory committees. . . But it is too soon for me to make any definite statements."

The brief said there was a need for "central leadership" to promote unity of purpose and action for the 120,000 students and 10,200 teachers in the province's French schools.

It said the present system of integration of French and English education results in "profound differences of opinion" in the interpretation of the authority of French-language advisory committees.

It said Franco-Ontarians will be convinced they are on an equal footing with English-speaking citizens only when they "are allowed to be full participants, at all levels, wherever their interest and that of the community as a whole, particularly in anything that deals with the education of their children."

Witness Says Deputy Chief Tore Tickets

TORONTO (CP) — An upholster testified Wednesday that Deputy Police Chief John Murray tore up two speeding tickets for him and told him that if he ever was caught again he should "just look at the policeman's number and phone 'Phil' immediately."

Conrad Boffo, now president of Snyder Upholstery here, told a police commission inquiry into alleged charge-fixing by senior members of the force that in 1959 and 1960 he worked for Phillip Wynn.

Former policeman Peter Lott described Wynn at an earlier session as a millionaire furniture manufacturer and landlord who boasted of his connection with senior policemen and had parking tickets hanging on a nail in his office.

The public inquiry, which began Jan. 5, had been ordered by the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission to deal with allegations by Lott and Constable Ian Samuel that senior police officials interfered with charges against influential persons.

Records were introduced at the hearing Wednesday showing that between December, 1967, and August, 1969, some 18 traffic charges against Wynn had been withdrawn—14 on the authority of Deputy Chief Murray.

In nearly all of the cases "extenuating circumstances" was given as the reason.

Boffo testified: "I heard from Mr. Wynn that there was no way he would ever get a speeding ticket. . . . They'd be fixed up by Deputy Murray."

He said he got two speeding tickets and mentioned them to Wynn. He said Wynn told him "not to worry. Just to hand them to him."

"He told me not to pay them. He'd have them fixed up." Austin Cooper, inquiry counsel, asked him whether Murray had said anything.

"No," said Boffo. "He told me next time just to look at the policeman's number and phone it to Phil immediately so no ticket would be issued.

"Murray took the numbers off the tickets and destroyed the tickets."

Under cross-examination by Arthur Maloney, lawyer for Murray and about 30 other policemen at the inquiry, Boffo said:

"There is one reason I am here today, and one reason only: I felt I had to come forth because I know about ticket-fixing."

Wynn later testified that Boffo was a "liar" and that his charges were based on "a personal grudge."

"Otherwise he would have been here at this inquiry two weeks ago, if he wanted to benefit the city."

Harold Mansfield, a former employee of Boffo who now operates Stewarts Upholstery, supported Wynn.

Wynn told the commission he did not believe it was unusual that he was able to get summonses cancelled, and added that he had not taken them directly to Deputy Chief Murray.

He said his truck and auto drivers had taken 13 summonses to police stations to ask for cancellations. The other six were declared "bad summonses" by an official of the police summons bureau.

Wynn said he received 75 to 100 tickets a year, for his seven vehicles and paid fines of $300 to $400. In view of the total number of tickets, the number of cancellations was not out of the ordinary.

Liberals to Form Election Board

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Liberal party plans to form a special election committee to handle its next provincial election campaign, party Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday.

Mr. Nixon said in an interview the province-wide committee will be established at the party's annual meeting in Ottawa Feb. 19 to 21.

Its function will be to seek candidates, develop constituency organizations and serve as a political channel between constituencies and the provincial caucus.

Mr. Nixon said the committee, to be co-ordinated by a special group under Donald Deacon, Liberal member of the legislature for York Centre, may get even bigger before the next election—expected by Liberals in 1971.

Americans Own Much Cable TV

TORONTO (CP) — The president of one of Canada's largest cable television companies says cable television in Canada "is owned in excess of 55 per cent by Americans."

E. S. (Ted) Rogers, president of Rogers Cable TV of Toronto, told the Progress Club of Canada Wednesday that cable television is Canada's most powerful means of communication and national unity and it is being given away to Americans.

"But I don't blame Americans. I blame Canadians," he said. "If any business . . . has been ignored it's cable television."

"Our birthright is not being sold out, it's being given away" by a timid public and government.

Farm Machinery Report Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Roy Basford told the Commons Wednesday that a government interdepartmental committee is carefully studying the report of the royal commission on farm machinery released last week.

Replying to questions by Marvin Howe (PC—Wellington-Grey), Mr. Basford said the report's conclusion that multi-national firms are charging higher prices for farm machinery in Canada than elsewhere is receiving special attention from the committee.

Ballet Fans Find New Concept Exciting

By EUGENE LANG

A new concept, a novel twist, — call it what you wish — but the annual appearance of the National Ballet of Canada lead evening in the collegiate auditorium before a sizeable audience who braved the biting bleakness of the weather produced a warm and warm appeal for all those present.

Gone were the usual expectations one has always anticipated at the yearly showing here of Canada's track dancing ensemble. Minus orchestra, conductor, corps de ballet, colorful lighting and attendant stage effects, one was confronted with basic harmonies of planked floorboards and many a mind as is the plausibility of it all. But the missing figures fell into place lucidly and easily with only the efforts of four dancers, piano accompaniment, recommendation and technical manager to bring the entire series of four offerings to a successful outcome.

With the parting of the curtains for item one we were given an introduction to the behind the scenes preparations necessary for all dancers. Two practice bars provided the four dancers the next half hour to demonstrate the limbering up of body muscles necessary for the final fluidity of movement.

Celia Franca, artistic director of the ballet since its inception 18 years ago, then converted on the scene and with deeply instilled knowledge of all aspects of her art, described items in the last mentioned earlier. Succinctly, the ballet was traced from its birth in 17th century France through its 20 odd decades of existence to the present. Along with side trips to the manner and delineations of various vital positions. Miss Franca also beautifully described the three other productions to follow, her comments adding intrinsically to the evening's enjoyment.

Nadia Potts and Murray Kilgour displayed suave sensitivity as the Grand Pas de Deux from Tchaikovsky's famous popular Nutcracker Ballet. Victoria Bertram and Earl Arnold caught a subtle touch of comedy capsules and the dashing debonair in roaring Twenties revivement that was replete with schmers and schmalz. Their short but difficult skit was set against the tongue-in-cheek Tango movement from William Walton's First Facade Ballet.

Following intermission The Lesson with music after Ionesco in a tune ballet from the Danish Fleming Flint was premiered here for our local audience. Exellent performances were turned in by the three member cast in a childlike and childish theme. Nadia Potts portrayed the flippant fledgling of a ballerina with youthful zest culminating in dejected death; Victoria Bertram was admirable in the stilted manoeuverings of the straight laced pianist and Murray Kilgour vested his distinctive talents as the vaunted dancing master with Prussian predomination. The eccentric music was equally harshly thin adding brittle to the skittle.

Accompanist Mary McDonald gave clever keyboard embracements throughout the entire program with deftness and durability. Too bad she didn't take a curtain call with the rest of the cast when the applause of the audience mirrored their approval.

Attention is short; demanding on artists, different for viewers, but damned good. Like highly seasoned pizza — not for every taste, but who wants meat and potatoes every meal.

Wait Until Dark

First Nighters Enjoy Drama

By BARRY GRILLS
(Staff Reporter)

The Belleville Theatre Guild's third major production of this year's drama season opened last night and became another theatrical success.

Wait Until Dark, despite last minute problems with parts and set, came off with all the flair of this season's previous two plays, Dark of the Moon and Blithe Spirit.

Last minute problems arose on the weekend when a professional actor, Brian Gordon, was hired to replace Wilf Caron in the lead role of Mike Talman. In addition, delays in set construction and lighting also made opening night a worry.

However, the audience would never have guessed it when the play was over.

Wait Until Dark is the story of a blind girl, played by Sandra Forte, who is terrorized in her own Greenwich Village basement apartment by three men who are searching for a doll filled with heroine.

The play blends violence, suspence and pathos for the blind. In one powerful plot of criminal design to dupe the girl into giving up the doll, brought home by her husband from Montreal.

Brian Gordon is outstanding in the role of Mike Talman, a role he had not even seen before Monday, a role that becomes tragic and criminal desire for the heroine gives way to his respect and growing fondness for the blind girl. The indecision caused by his feelings results in his murder.

James Williams is more than competent in the role of the real heavy and makes no bones about the fact that Harry Rost, his part in the play, is completely demonic.

Ron MacPherson as Sgt. Carlino provides a realistic portrayal of the third criminal, the one to whom crime is as natural at getting up in the morning.

Also playing well in the cast are Tammy Reid as Gloria, devilish neighbour's girl who becomes an angel in conspiring with the blind girl in tricking the criminals and Gary Lafferty the blind girl's receptionist husband.

Playing policemen in the play are Peter Hicks and Nick Dourdoss.

The play is continuing and will run for nine more nights at the Pinnacle Playhouse.

And if play director, Roy Higgins, had many fears before last night, they were sufficiently quelled when Wait Until Dark became yet another Belleville theatrical achievement.

Hair Care Flair

Sandra Forte, cast as the blind girl in the Belleville Theatre Guild's production of Wait Until Dark, uses some hair spray as part of her pre-performance preparations.

Line Process Aids Control

George Lewis, accounting manager at Erie Technological Products Ltd., made a presentation on Responsibility Accounting to the members of the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants at their monthly meeting held Jan. 13.

He noted that budget control by line process makes the supervisors responsible for their production costs and that periodic reports keep management and supervisors informed on their progress.

Rex Hoff of Head Johnson Canada, thanked the speaker. In addition, the members viewed a slide presentation on the society's golden anniversary conference to be held June 17-19.

Weldon Pleads Guilty To Manslaughter Charge

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Russell Andrew Weldon, 41, of Trenton, Ont., pleaded guilty Wednesday in connection with the death of manslaughter in the Oct. 21 death of George Lawrence Cook, 58, of Murray Township.

The plea was accepted by the Ontario Supreme Court jury after Weldon's lawyer, Robert Carter, said he wished to change the original plea of not guilty" of non-capital murder.

Mr. Justice Edwin G. Thompson reserved sentence until Friday.

Cook was found beaten to death at his home and Weldon was arrested a short time later near Oshawa.

Cobourg is 40 miles south of Peterborough.

Winter Carnival to Be Held in Deseronto

DESERONTO — If careful planning, co-operation and a wide variety of events spell success, then the Deseronto Spirit of Winter, 1970 carnival will be more than successful.

All ages and tastes have been considered. The kick-off is directed to the oldsters, with a party at two o'clock Friday, Feb. 6, in the hall of branch 290 of the Royal Canadian Legion. The youngsters come in for special attention in at least two instances. Sunday, Feb. 8 at 1.30 p.m. the Lions Club is sponsoring a series of races down the Centre St. hill, beginning south of Highway 2. In addition there are various hockey games.

There is a long variety of activities, such as a two-day fishing derby, an elimination snowmobile race, a dog sled race and a snowmobile parade Sunday morning. A torchlight parade precedes the official opening Friday evening.

One of the most popular features will probably be the free snowmobile and sleigh rides to and from the observation and on the Bay of Quinte, with two stops, one to visit the museum in the residence of Melville Hill, and the second at the Council House.

A beauty contest will precede the opening of the carnival, with entrants participating from within a radius of 12 miles of Deseronto. Mrs. McCullough is in charge of this event, and entry forms can be obtained from her.

A permanent record of the carnival is being sought. The entry must consist of eight black and white pictures of the carnival submitted within 30 days of its close.

Red Cross Lists Officers

MARMORA — Marmora Branch, Canadian Red Cross Society, held its annual meeting on Jan. 11. The following officers were returned to office for the year 1970: president, Mrs. Alice Stark; vice-president, Mrs. G. J. Meiklejohn; secretary, Mrs. Raymond Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Francis Rothernel.

Committee chairmen are as follows: sick room equipment and loan service, Mrs. Tom Shannon; water safety, Mrs. A. M. Jones; welfare and disaster services, Mrs. M. H. Borland; senior citizens, Mrs. Howard Bleecker; campaign chairman, Mrs. Tom Bailey; press and publicity, Mrs. G. A. Wentworth; telephone, Mrs. G. J. Meiklejohn.

Reports presented indicated a busy and successful year.

Mrs. Tom Shannon stated that use of loan cupboard continues to increase over previous years, with 150 articles being loaned out and 70 persons using the services. There are at present 27 articles out on loan. Additional equipment and miscellaneous items have been purchased to supplement the loan cupboard and the branch is grateful for the donations of money and equipment.

Water safety chairman, Mrs. A. M. Jones, reported that the swimming program conducted by the recreation committee had been very successful, with an enrolment of 141. During water safety week, films were shown in the schools and three young people visited the schools and gave demonstrations in water safety and life saving. In addition, a Red Cross water safety display was set up at the Marmora fall fair by the young people who had worked during the summer at the beach.

In order that the Marmora branch of the Red Cross Society may successfully carry out its yearly program, it is necessary that membership be increased. During a discussion in this regard, it was concluded that the public must not be aware that, the membership is open to everyone and, in future, notice of meetings will be published in the paper and on the bulletin board. It is hoped that more citizens will attend these meetings and help in ensuring a successful organization.

The Red Cross "Blitz" campaign in Marmora will be held on Monday, March 16, with Mrs. Don Bailey as campaign chairman.

'Love Thy Neighbor' Misunderstood

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

The most misunderstood phrase in all Christendom consists of only five words: "Love thy neighbor as thyself" — for the generality of people misinterpret the meaning of "love," don't know who their "neighbor" is, and fail to grasp the reflexive nature of "thyself."

* * *

There is only one respect (apart from speed) in which the computer is superior to the human being operating it, and that is its ability to mean for its own performance and know when it is behaving defectively.

* * *

Those who live by the rule die by the exception.

* * *

The really dangerous dichotomy of our time lies not in C. P. Snow's division between the "scientists" and the "humanists," but the far greater gap between the men who are power-oriented and the men who are knowledge-oriented.

* * *

Changing mores call for new definitions; among today's belles, a "gentleman" is a beau who doesn't make a serious pass until the second date.

* * *

The most that can be said for a book that consciously tries to "improve your mind" is that occasionally it may cure your insomnia.

* * *

Men dress well to feel equal to other men; women dress well to feel superior to other women.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 23

Your birthday today: You have a cheerful, complicated year ahead in which you must seek more definite expression of your real goals in life. You may change profession in the course of this search for identity and purpose. There are many paths — ys to explore, novel ideas and people to study. Romantic interests are active and healthy. Today's natives tend to relocate over great distances.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Disregard past and present annoyances, incidents. You must concentrate all your resources on your own interests. Fortunately for once, friends are busy elsewhere.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Offer encouragement to younger or less skilled associates. Get rid of all sorts of outworn and outdated possessions. Resolve use of the empty spaces before beginning replacements.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Short cuts prove misleading and wasteful; adhere to well-known, traditional methods. Friends need your help and advice, but rest until it is sought. The evening have alternate plans in case present ones go awry.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Be guided by past experience in a rather conservative course of action today, lince pot much co-operation is in sight anywhere. Some evening exercise will be helpful in settling you for a good night's rest.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): There's just nothing else to do but endure the stresses of the moment. Take nobody into your confidence about money and your plans. Wear whatever clothing you have which gives you a feeling of assurance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Technical information proves to hold the key to a variety of puzzles. The later hours are excellent for organizational effort, range planning, review of your budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Too steady a concentrated effort defeats itself today. Pause now and then; get a little less done but with better quality. Back away from someone's attempt to involve you in an awkward chore.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov 21): Do the minimum to square off the week's work, then seek a complete change of scene and mood at the earliest convenient moment. It will be a favorite spot with pleasant memories and relax.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Whatever else you do, make sure your loved ones hear from you and know what you are about in case of some delay or unusual absence. Avoid isolation, but expect help from nobody. Your problems are meant for you to resolve on your own.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You have to follow an orthodox procedure today to protect your financial situation. Your interests in the fine arts, museums and such matters are somewhat, while other matters are less satisfying.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): No particular plan seems to work well at the moment. Put together what you can and do not fret over what cannot be finished. Prayer and meditation this evening will show you a new direction for the future.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Do your own work conscientiously but not that of people who are just loafing. Stand clear of local controversy.

Brief Asks Cut in Aid For Separate Schools

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Public School Trustees Association Wednesday recommended a cut in provincial assistance for separate schools and proposed a unified secondary school system.

A brief presented to Education Minister William Davis said the per-pupil grant paid to separate elementary schools is higher than that paid to public schools and should be made equal.

At the same time there should be no grants paid to Roman Catholic high schools for any grades.

Grants at the elementary level now are paid to Grades 9 and 10 in the separate school system, while those grades in public schools receive grants at the secondary school level.

Senior separate school grades are considered private schools and get no public assistance.

W. D. Doubleday of Kingston, president of the association, said the brief had been prepared in reply to recent "pressure" for provincial grants for grades 11, 12 and 13 in Roman Catholic high schools.

Both the Ontario Liberal and New Democratic parties have advocated tax support to the end of high school for both public and separate schools if there is agreement to share special services and if the Roman Catholic schools are turned over to elected boards.

Mr. Davis, in his last public statement on Sept. 15, 1969, said "the policy of the government is very simply this—it hasn't changed—the separate school system exists to the end of Grade 10 and this is the present position of the government."

Canairelief Won't Get Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is not considering assistance for Canairelief to pay debts of more than $300,000, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday.

The statement was in response to a question by Gerard Laprise (Creditiste—Abitibi) who noted that Canairelief now is planning to wind up its operations on the Portuguese island of Sao Tome and sell the airplanes used to fly food to Biafran refugees during the Nigerian civil war.

London Shoppers Mark Their Prices on Food

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London shoppers were put on their honor to mark the correct prices of food items Wednesday when the city's first self-service Warehouse Market opened its doors.

Under the new concept of the IGA food store chain, shoppers are given a red marking pencil to mark the price of the items they select.

Items are left in their original cardboard cases stacked on shelves with prices by the case and by the item marked so that customers know how much to charge themselves.

They take their goods to a check-out counter and then pack their own bags and boxes and carry them out. Prices, in most instances, are lower than in regular super markets.

Springtime in January

Well not quite spring, just wishful thinking. This particular brand of spring is special in mid-January, which only means snow, sub zero temperatures, and more to come. In one of the local greenhouses, hundreds of 'mums are just beginning to blossom, even if it isn't spring. (For story see front page, second section.)

Transport Lacking For Biafran Relief

Bitter Words Traded

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Thompson (PC-Red Deer) added another chapter Thursday night to the contradictory story surrounding conditions in Nigeria, igniting one of the angriest debates in a Commons committee this year.

Mr. Thompson, who had just returned from a six-day visit to Nigeria, told the sub-committee on international relations that conditions in the wake of a 30-month civil war are not disastrous.

News reports of widespread starvation and suffering have been greatly exaggerated, he said.

David Lewis, deputy NDP leader, said Mr. Thompson's report was "disgusting" as he walked out of the meeting.

Mr. Thompson presented a lengthy report in which he strongly condemned reporters who recently visited the former rebel enclave.

The reporters had been angered by unsatisfactory treatment at the hands of federal Nigerian officials and had written one-sided accounts of the situation in the old war zone.

"The fourth estate went in search of the worst there was to find," he said.

Mr. Thompson said at least 300,000 to 400,000 refugees are receiving aid under relief plans now in operation.

The numbers threatened with starvation had been greatly overestimated, he said, although there were probably more than 350,000 in the bush who were still afraid to come out.

"There are hungry people but the food is getting to them."

Members of the international observer team told reporters that federal units inside fallen Biafra had less than 100 vehicles but the Guard Training Division in Lagos had five times as many.

Doctors and nurses treating hungry children brought from the bush to sick bays in Port Harcourt were almost unanimous in their criticism of federal relief efforts.

"Their army is never short of beer and their whores get transported everywhere," a Scottish doctor said, "but they can't get a truck to take my nurses out to the clinic. Where are all the trucks that kept Biafra going for 2½ years?"

In Lagos, the Nigerian chief of state, Maj-Gen. Yakubu Gowon, told a news conference relief work is progressing satisfactorily, but he got angry when told the reporters had seen much army indifference to the refugees.

"We don't expect miracles," Gowon declared. "Is anyone willing to say there is not misbehavior in their own armies? . . . Just because a soldier looks away and is not bending down over someone, he is indifferent.

"We are doing our best. Have we been given credit since the war started?

"There is no doubt that the next few weeks some will regard it as their main task to belittle our efforts and the efforts of those who are genuinely trying to help in a difficult situation.

"For our part we have made it our duty to ensure that we do everything possible to bring relief to our people and to ensure an early return to normalcy to all parts of our country."

He also said Roman Catholic missionaries who had been working in the Biafra area would be investigated and that each case would be considered before any are expelled. He said some mercenaries fighting for Biafra had disguised themselves as priests to avoid capture.

About 60 white priests and about a dozen nuns are under house arrest in Port Harcourt, Federal interrogators question them four to six hours at a time.

Another 42 are still inside what was Biafra, their movements restricted mostly to the grounds of their missions. All of those interviewed during a tour of the former rebel area say their automobiles, supply trucks and even their bicycles were confiscated by federal soldiers.

Workers Critical Of Federal Efforts

PORT HARCOURT (AP) — Every hour Radio Nigeria exhorts the war refugees to remain where they are so that they can be helped, but relief workers say there are not nearly enough trucks to take food to them.

Slain Unionist Was to Testify To Grand Juries

CLEVELAND (AP) — Union insurgent Joseph Yablonski, his wife and daughter were murdered shortly before he was to tell what he knew about United Mine Workers' activities to two grand juries, officials say.

Yablonski, 59, had just lost a bitter election in an attempt to unseat UMW President W. A. Boyle.

Sources in Washington disclosed that Boyle, too, would have been a key witness at two federal grand jury investigations of UMW affairs — one in Washington and the other in Pittsburgh.

Quieter World Role Is Charted for U. S.

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon has charted a quieter world role for the United States which avoids foreign entanglements and permits more energy to be spent on solving pressing domestic problems.

Foreign diplomats in Washington said the new policy represents a final turning away from the massive retaliation doctrine of the 1950s and the era of confrontation that persisted in the 1960s.

"We shall be faithful to our treaty commitments, but we shall reduce our involvement and our presence in other nations' affairs," Nixon said in his State of the Union message to Congress Thursday.

The foreign-policy course he described, a worldwide extension of the Asian doctrine first enunciated at Guam in July, and a mention of progress toward peace in Vietnam, appeared to be responsive to the national mood as the president now sees it.

He said the great European industrial nations and Japan, the countries of Latin America and many nations in Asia and Africa showed more determination to assume responsibility for their own defence.

Pinpointing this as the basis of his Guam doctrine, the president said:

"Neither the defence nor the development of other nations can be exclusively or primarily an American undertaking.

"The nations of each part of the world should assume the primary responsibility for their own well-being; and they themselves should determine the terms of that well-being. . . .

"To insist that other nations play a role is not a retreat from responsibility; it is a sharing of responsibility."

Nixon's Economic Plans Wilson's Main Interest

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson flies to Ottawa Sunday on the first leg of a North American trip that may play a role in determining the date for the next British general election.

While his aides say Wilson is making the trip to discuss important world issues with both Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon, there is some indication here that the British leader is particularly interested in Nixon's economic planning for 1970.

Wilson has been praising Britain's economic prospects for the year in glowing terms. The country's foreign accounts show a substantial and continuing surplus and the pound is relatively strong on foreign exchanges.

But the bright prospects could be shaded if the United States goes into a recession, damaging Britain's vital export trade.

Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, recently returned from an extensive U.S. tour, bringing back reports on American financial and economic thinking. Informants said these reports indicated that Nixon is determined to curb the American inflationary spiral.

Wilson probably will make up his own mind after conferring with Nixon on economic matters next Tuesday.

Mammoth Fossil Found in Rome

British House Plans Debate

LONDON (CP) — A furore has erupted in Britain over reports of pillage, rape and mass starvation in Nigeria's conquered Biafra.

The eyewitness accounts by reporters clashed with those of official observers but pushed the Commons Thursday into fixing an emergency debate for next Monday on the problems of the former colony.

Lord Hunt, the conqueror of Mount Everest who returned here Wednesday after heading a British interviewed inquiry on relief in Nigeria, said Thursday he had been "horrified" by slanted reporting by journalists there.

But a British member of the international observer team — quoted in Lagos as saying the team is doing some rethinking on the relief situation and the conduct of federal troops toward the Ibo population.

Brian Silk, a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, said he had been told by Col. Douglas Cairns, senior British observer, that "their next report would be very different from their previous findings" following disclosures by reporters.

Cairns was quoted as saying: "It will all come out—the rapes, the food shortage and everything else."

On the other hand, Lord Hunt accused the news brigade of reporting "unbalanced half-truths." He said published photographs showed starvation but not nearby market places with healthy people.

However, the 59-year-old Hunt admitted that on his own quick tour of the territory since the Biafran surrender he had not visited bush areas where refugees are reported starving but had stuck to main roads.

Wilson said he believed the press reports to be honest but tending to deal with individual cases, while Lord Hunt presented "a camera view of the whole panorama."

Israelis Leave Island After Radar Captured

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — An Israeli helicopter-borne force which occupied the strategic Egyptian island of Shadwan in the Gulf of Suez for 32 hours withdrew today after completing its mission, a military spokesman said.

There was signs the Israelis planned to cap their island landing by ferrying home a captured radar station.

A senior staff officer said after the razor-backed island was seized that he believed the British-made radar unit would be shipped back—just as Israeli commandos snatched a top-secret, Soviet-built radar station from the Suez gulf a month ago.

The 12-square-mile island, one of a group of coral islands that lies off the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula at the lower end of the Suez gulf, was seized after heavy fighting and is the largest occupation of Egyptian territory since the war in 1967.

Israeli sources said 18 Egyptian defenders were killed during the assault and 40 others may have died when strafing Israeli jets sank two torpedo boats.

However, in Cairo, an Egyptian military spokesman today said at least 55 Israelis and 50 Egyptians were killed or wounded in the fighting on Shadwan island.

Students Get Weekend Chance To Impress Legion Judges

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Public speakers who have always been given a chance to let their talent rise to the top don't have long to wait. This weekend, is the event.

The Royal Canadian Legion has spent the past few weeks getting things together for their annual public speaking competition.

The two-day session, to be held at the Legion Hall on Pinnacle St., will start Saturday morning at 9 a.m. and also run through that afternoon. Speakers will also be judged on Sunday afternoon, beginning at 1:30.

First and second prizes of $10 and $5 will be offered to winners in the competition, which is open to all elementary and secondary school students.

Those placing first in the city contest will then go to the provincial "semi" contest, to take place in Madoc, Feb. 1.

The contest, which has been sponsored by the local Legion for the past five years, has sent a number of young Belleville speakers to the provincewide competitions to be held in Ottawa.

Choice of topics is left up to the individual speaker, but, according to Mrs. R. Kirby, chairman of citizenship and public speaking, students should attempt to choose topics that are suited to both their age and background.

The deciding factors of the things the judges will be looking for as they tally scores.

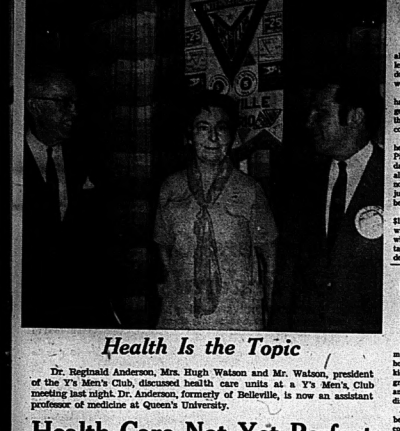
"The criteria we have set up is based on the individual's appearance, gestures and manner. At the same time the judges are interested in the originality as well as the thought and organization that each puts into his efforts.

"We have placed limits of three to five minutes for public school speakers; and five to seven for high school competition," said Mrs. Kirby.

The Legion annual contest has been established to the past number of years and has come to offer a series of contests.

Competition does not end at the branch level, but continues all the way up to the final province-wide contest.

After the four winners are picked at Branch level, they go next to the zone contest, to be in Madoc. The next two areas of contest encompass the district, then the area levels, culminating in provincial finals.



Winners in the district competition are awarded trophies and at the area level, they are given an all - expense paid trip to the site of the provincial contest, this year is Ottawa.

Prizes at the provincial level, which will be held March 23, are gold medals for the top winners, and silver for all the runners-up.

Public school speakers who come out on top in the final contest will also get $25. Grades 9 and 10 winners will take home $50, and the top speaker from Grade 11 to 13 hits the $500 jackpot.

Response from city schools in offering speakers is expected to be good, as it has been in past years, remarked the chairman.

"Last year we had about 65 students competing. This year I hope we can top that number, and send a speaker to the provincial finals," added Mrs. Kirby.

Health Is the Topic

Dr. Reginald Anderson, Mrs. Hugh Watson and Mr. Watson, president of the Y's Men's Club, discussed health care units at a Y's Men's Club meeting last night. Dr. Anderson, formerly of Belleville, is now an assistant professor of medicine at Queen's University.

Health Care Not Yet Perfect

"The people of this country have come to expect the best in health care and the government has undertaken to provide such care — this is implicit when the government plans to pay for health services out of money provided by the taxpayers."

Dr. Reginald M. Anderson, assistant professor of medicine at Queen's University and former Belleville doctor, outlined some problems in the medical care field to the Belleville Y's Men's Club last night.

"However, it is not at all certain that the health science professionals, such as doctors, dentists, physiotherapists, and so on will be able to provide the services expected by the people," he said.

"There is a very large question mark as to the ability of the economy to pay for the whole package."

He added that there was no health care system and the word "system" implies the existence of an organized, coordinated planned undertaking.

"We are making valiant efforts here in Ontario to organize such an undertaking, but we are far from having succeeded in doing so at this stage of the game."

Dr. Anderson explained that senior government officials in the health department have stated that 50 to 60 per cent of all medical graduates are required in family practice.

"This figure has not been reached for years and it is likely that this level will not be attained under present circumstances," he said.

"Most young doctors prefer to practice where they have access to hospital beds, contact with fellow doctors, reasonable hours and good education facilities for their children — so the small communities suffer."

"Even in town and cities general practice is not popular with the new generation of physicians."

Dr. Anderson said he hoped the problem would be solved by the establishment of community health centres with a special building, four or more medical doctors and a supporting staff of nurses and assistants.

"Such a unit will be able to serve a relatively large area and more people than individual doctors could."

"Already 15 to 20 per cent of Canadian physicians are practising in some 400 formally organized clinic groups of from three to 60 members each," he said.

Canning Plant to Contract For Red Kidney Bean Crop

Prince Edward county farmers this year will get a toe hold in the growth of red kidney beans used as an ingredient in chili con carne and certain other Italian dishes.

And the product will not only be grown in the Prince county to the south but will also be processed and put into cans.

The operation will be a custom canning operation by Sprague Foods Ltd. at Mountain View for Pasquale Bros. Ltd. of Toronto and Montreal, canners of a full line of Italian-Canadian foods. Pasquale Bros. was purchased last year by Imperial Tobacco.

Sprague Foods Ltd., known for many years for its tomato canning operation, is already canning the red kidney beans but supplies are being brought in for processing.

The beans are currently grown in the Chatham area of Ontario and are also imported from Italy and Portugal.

But this year the Mountain View canning plant will let contracts for growing in Prince Edward county.

"We'll start out in a small way but hope eventually that up to 600 to 700 acres will be grown," said canning factory operator Roger Sprague.

To take care of the custom canning project, Sprague Foods Ltd. last year constructed a new plant addition which is expected to see year round operation doing custom canning for Pasquale.

Currently the red kidney beans and chick peas from Mexico are being packed. The beans are received in bags and in sacks and can be stored for indefinite periods before being processed.

The custom canning operation is currently providing full time employment for about 17 persons. The estimated tomato canning season the plant employs about 50 workers most of them women.

Persistence Paid For Printer's Devil

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Applying for a job as a printer's devil with the Picton Gazette more than 50 years ago, Leonard MacDonald was rejected because of his doubtful spelling ability.

The determined young man, who was still a public school student, decided to lick his problem.

Leonard first learned to spell "persistent" and returned to the Gazette office on two more occasions, each time asking for work. Managing ed. of the Gazette, Ira Allen, and A. E. Calnan finally told Leonard that any boy as persistent as he seemed to be deserved a job.

Leonard became a printer's devil on the staff at the Picton Gazette in 1916. Today, the paper's managing editor, Lindley Calnan is a third-generation.

"Leonard was an inventive genius who used his talents to solve many problems that otherwise could not have been licked."

Wednesday members of the Gazette staff met at Prince Edward Yacht Club at a banquet honoring Leonard MacDonald, master printer, who recently retired as press foreman. For 53 years a member of the Gazette staff, Leonard MacDonald from printer's devil to press man in a three-year period.

The banquet he had learned to spell 'persistent' the printer's devil was bound for swift promotion. He became the Gazette's editor soon after being given his job and told him he'd bought he could do photo engravature. Questioning the boy, Mr. Calnan learned that Leonard had made engraving plates in a workshop he had built in his home. His used silk stockings as screens and relied heavily upon an ancient camera borrowed from a Picton photographer.

With his improvised equipment Leonard could do roughly styled photo engraving.

Encouraged by his initiative, Mr. Calnan arranged for Leonard to study the techniques of engravature through a correspondence course originating in Kansas, Missouri. The young man completed the lessons and the Gazette bought a camera and other necessary equipment for engravature Leonard became a top photo engraver but later transferred to the press department of the Gazette as his forte.

Commented Lindley Calnan, "If Leonard lacked something to work with he would invent it."

"The master printer" retired on Jan. 1, 1970, succeeded by Howard MacDonald and Leslie Pendleton. At the retirement banquet held in his honor the Gazette's managing editor, Lindley Calnan presented Leonard with a pair of binoculars. Gazette staff members marked his retirement with a personal gift.

What spells success? Sometimes, it seems, if a man can but outstrip the other words just spell themselves into a success story with a happy ending.

Students to Compete In Public Speaking

Twelve students from S. H. Connor, Tweed, Actinoline and St. Carthage's Schools, Tweed, will compete in the Canadian Legion (Tweed Branch) public speaking contest to be held in the Legion Hall, on Tuesday, Jan. 27. The judges will select two winners (1st and 2nd) from each of two categories, Elementary Grades 1 to 6, and Grades 7 and 8. Contestants are permitted to choose their own topics and are judged on delivery, material, language and literary form. Winners will be awarded cash prizes and the two 1st-prize winners will be allowed to compete in the zone public speaking contest to be held at the Madoc Branch of the Canadian Legion.

Snow Tractor Rates Most Popular Vehicle

PICTON — Picton's most popular snow vehicle this winter seems to be the snowremoval tractor rented, with a purchase option, by town council's public works committee last November.

Town foreman Carl McConnell said this morning that the public works department is steadily receiving telephone calls from Picton residents this winter requesting sidewalk plowing. For school children living in the vicinity of Bridge St. the tractor is providing a special safety service.

Following a request from John Cross, president of the Picton Ratepayers' Association, town council agreed to ask the public works department to plow sidewalks in this area immediately following a storm.

Mr. Cross said that certain strips of the Bridge St. sidewalk remained unshovelled during the winter, forcing school children to walk in the street. Since this street is located in a heavy traffic area, Mr. Cross felt that it was dangerous for children to travel on the road.

The tractor has been used frequently this winter.

Snow has been cleared from Main St. and other heavily travelled parts of town, using the snow tractor. If town council decides to purchase it at the close of the trial period the tractor's cost would be about $6,000.

IN MEMORIAM

BARTLEY — In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. Ethel Bartley, who passed away January 23rd, 1969.
The hand that rocked the cradle
Has left an empty space
The heart that loved so dearly
Is hidden from our face.
Sadly missed by daughters Ruth and Jean.

BELL — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Ethel Bell, who passed away January 23rd, 1969.
Sadly missed and remembered by her son, Bill, and daughter-in-law, Ruth.

CROSS — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Ethel Cross, who passed away Jan. 23rd, 1969.
Sadly missed and remembered by her son, Bill, and daughter-in-law, Ruth.

CONWAY — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Conway, who passed away January 23rd, 1967.
The world changed year by year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the sad heart cease
From memory year, never,
To keep you dear and lonely everything dear among.
Sadly missed by daughter Mary.
Also remembered by granddaughter Jean.
Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her sufferings all are o'er,
And in our aching hearts we know
She's safe on heaven's golden shore.
We miss her now, we miss her still,
Nor has she traveled far;
For memory keeps her very near,
And left the gates ajar.
Sadly missed and loved by ever remembered by daughter Mary and granddaughter Jean.

CROSS — In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Ethel Cross, who died one year ago January 23, 1969.
If I had seen death in the last,
And held your dying hand,
Or felt the chill as from your heart
I would not have felt so bad.
If I did get to tell him you had,
For old I see you die,
Or hear the last faint prayer,
And could not say goodbye,
I would be satisfied,
No one could see me weep,
But I could see you smile
And hear you say goodbye.
—Lovingly remembered by husband Wilbert.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank the multitude of friends and neighbors who expressed their sympathy in any way during our recent bereavement in the passing of our beloved husband and dear father. Especially Mr. Jim Bush of Bush Funeral Home for their service and kindness. Also Rev. Ross Hamilton and Mr. Bayley for their comforting words. Also for the floral tributes, spiritual bouquets, cards and donations to the Heart Fund. Thanks also to ladies of Rose community who provided lunch at the Plainfield Hall.

Farmers Making Good Use Of Agricultural Office

Hastings and Prince Edward farmers are making good use of the agricultural engineers working out of the Stirling office of the Ontario department of agriculture and food.

Hastings Agricultural representative Douglas D. Tipper in presenting his report of last year's activities, told county council this week that 30 requests for assistance had been filled since Sept. 1 when Donald E. Presant, assumed the responsibility for agricultural work in the two counties.

The two counties had previously been covered by Gordon Tipper from Brighton and when Mr. Presant took over there was a backlog of 70 requests from Hastings and Prince Edward.

As of Dec. 31, 30 requests from Hastings had been filled although the number still on file remained at 41.

Requests for assistance were said fairly evenly divided under the broad headings of buildings, drainage and dams.

Mr. Tipper reported several staff changes in the past year, including the hiring of Miss Jane Gordon as secretary, Mary A. MacEachern and the appointment of Michael Affleck as clerk. This counselor is to work in the north end of the county.

In addition to regular staff the Stirling office now has more specialist people to draw on from the regional office at Brighton and other provincial points.

"The task is to make the services which these people represent, fully effective for the farm interests and needs of this county," Mr. Tipper said.

Mr. Tipper said there was now more inter - relationship with other branches and departments and this affect society as a whole. Health and welfare resources were cited as two examples.

"It is my primary task to co - ordinate these activities into the county program," he said.

Special projects carried on by the Stirling office last year included the development of a farm pasture program with the renting of a 100-acre farm from ARDA as a forage centre. This will take about three years to get into full operation.

The department's aerial spray program for renovation of ranch land was rated successful for a first year attempt but it was recognized there were many problems to overcome before it is fully successful.

The use of computer assembly mail-in farm accounting began last year as a pilot program will be expanded this year.

The 4-H homemaking section saw an enrolment of 439 girls last year with 410 project completions. These projects were carried on by 28 clubs under the direction of 70 leaders.

The 4-H Agricultural and Junior Farmer section saw an increase to 301 from 238 in the number of projects carried out.

Also during the year county department opened a branch office in Bancroft which is staffed for three days each week. Mr. Tipper said the Bancroft branch office was a pilot project with its success depending on the use of the facilities and the demands of needs by the people in the northern part of the county.

Referring to milk cheque activities Mr. Tipper said the county dairy industry was steadily moving away from the processing of fluid milk to finishing in larger areas.

As an foundation - fluents were also processing duties in 1967, in 1968-69 there were three and in 1969 the county was left with only one dairy processing bottled milk locally. Industrial milk for the county's 12 cheese factories remained at approximately the same level but the number of milk producers had decreased about 20 per cent in the last three or four years.

Seminar Designers

Belleville Industrial Commissioner, Ray Brown, left, discusses plans for the three day product design seminar to be held in Belleville, February 20, 21 and 22, with Jack Wilson, centre, manager of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce and Loyalist Extension Director H. J. Butterill.

Conference on Products Outgrowth of Test Clinic

A weekend seminar on product development is being planned for the benefit of the Quinte area industries by Loyalist College in joint sponsorship with the Ontario Department of trade and development and a research unit in engineering design of the University of Toronto.

The seminar to be held at the San Valley Motor Inn, Feb. 20, 21 and 22, will be the latest in a series of such meetings. The first "clinic" was announced by the Hon. Stanley Randall, minister of trade and development at the closing "Belleville Week" banquet last September.

Highlights of the three day seminar include a keynote address by J. E. Scott who has had extensive experience in product development and market valuation with large industrial firms in Canada and the U.S.; and seminar sessions led by I. H. Spinner, professor of engineering design, University of Toronto and a session directed by Irvine W. Smith also of the Cockburn Design Unit on new product design.

Throughout the three-day program there will be small group and workshop case study discussions on new product design and market valuation.

It is expected that 30 representatives from area business and industry will register for the seminar that is the outcome of the first product development clinic held in Belleville last fall.

The purpose of the seminar is to acquaint management executives in large, medium and small firms with the latest information and techniques concerning product development and to assess needs for long range staff training programs.

North Hastings Farmers Say Veterinary Plan Inadequate

Despite the service provided by a contract veterinarian some farmers in North Hastings are finding it difficult to obtain veterinary service when it is needed.

This was indicated at Hastings county council this week by Carlow Reeve Mack Douglas who said that in some instances the veterinarian failed to show after service had been requested.

Agricultural Representative Douglas Tipper of Stirling, said later that in such cases communications were likely to be at fault with the veterinarian possibly not actually receiving the call.

Mr. Tipper explained that veterinary service in the scattered North Hastings area was provided by a contract veterinarian from Barry's Bay in Renfrew County. The man was guaranteed a base salary to provide service at a standard rate regardless of mileage travelled.

He said that calls for service were handled by other people when the veterinarian was away on call and occasionally there was a communication breakdown with the result that the farmer felt neglected.

However, due to the scarcity of veterinarians, the service was the best that could be provided under the circumstances, Mr. Tipper said the contract veterinarian idea had been in operation in scattered population areas of the province for more than 20 years.

"Good communications are needed to make the plan work," he said. "In many cases when the veterinarian is going to be in an area, herd owners will communicate with each other so several routine calls can be made on the one trip.

Because of the financial returns possible the natural trend for young veterinarians is toward the clinic type service and caring for pets rather than do large animal service.

"It is just one of the facts of life," commented Mr. Tipper.

Stirling reeve Donald Rodgers told council a veterinarian could make more money two or three hours after supper looking after small animals than he could by working all day making calls to farms.

Citizen of Year

First Winner Retains Interest

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

William Hurst, Hastings County farmer, has not lost interest in Belleville, an interest that resulted in his receipt of the Belleville Citizen of the Year Award in 1963.

Mr. Hurst was the first winner of the Belleville Jaycee's award, given to the man or woman in Belleville whom a panel of judges consider to be the best citizen of the year.

Mr. Hurst began his career in public life at 17 as president of the Anglican Young Peoples Association. Later he became president of the Kinsmen Club and the Rotary Club.

However, it was probably his work on the Belleville Board of Park Management that netted him the award.

He joined the board in 1957 and was chairman the second year when he was told to do something for parks, in particular Zwick's Island.

"We had very little money to work with," he said. "But in 1961 or 62 we built the canteen at Zwick's Island."

Mr. Hurst also secured a donation from Corby Distilleries Ltd. for a rose garden in Corby Park.

"Around the same time the Fry property was left to the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs," he remembered.

But although he is no longer on the parks board, it has not stopped his interest in parks and Zwick's Island.

"I would like to see them start something along the line of an Olympic size pool," he suggested about Zwick's Island.

He also feels that something badly needed here is another ice rink.

Mr. Hurst then spoke of the changes in Belleville in the six years since his receipt of the Citizen of the Year Award.

He recalled the tremendous growth of industry in Belleville due to companies taking advantage of Ontario government loans.

"I do feel that maybe we're going a little too fast, with the costs of services to these industries very high," he said, explaining that the high costs resulted in higher property taxes for Belleville residents.

He also feels that there should be more interest shown by Belleville citizens in occupying various positions on boards.

"And they shouldn't have to be paid," he added.

But one of his strongest opinions is concerned with the Belleville water situation.

"It's time that Belleville, Trenton and Quinte and Trenton Townships looked into the possibility of piping water from Lake Ontario to Trenton."

"The Ontario Water Resources Commission has recommended that water be piped into Belleville rather than construct a new filtration plant."

"If gas can be piped from western provinces at a profit then it would be logical to pipe water 12 miles," he said.

"This would eliminate the maintenance costs of a filtration plant dumping chemicals into the present water supply. It isn't good for drinking when this is done."

Taxation On Farms Discussed

Members of the Hastings County Farm Service heard a talk on farm assessment and taxation at their annual meeting held yesterday at Stirling.

Carl Bateman, Hastings county assessment commissioner and administrator, and members of last year's special committee on farm assessment were the day's keynote speaker.

Kenneth Mumby of Rawdon township will continue as president of the farm service club group which carries out the work of three former organizations, the Soil and Crop Association, Plowmen's Association and the Farm Safety Club. Each of the vice-presidents named will be charged with specific responsibilities in carrying out the year's program.

South Marysburg Plans Fire Aid Talk Tonight

PICTON (Staff) — An open meeting to discuss community fire protection will be considered tonight in South Marysburg Hall.

South Marysburg represents one of three townships still considering a tentative proposal for fire protection services recently forwarded to the town of Picton.

Following a council meeting this week, Sophiasburg Township rejected the proposal. Councillors decided a separate firefighting unit could best answer their township's needs.

Picton's tentative agreement remains under discussion in South Marysburg, North Marysburg and Athol Townships.

Under the proposed fire protection plan, the four municipalities would jointly purchase a combination pumper and tanker fire truck with an 800-gallon capacity tank, fire hose and ladder and equipment.

The truck and its equipment would be housed without charge in Picton Fire Hall.

Providing the truck and equipment are compatible with the means of fire-fighting in Picton, the town would contribute $3,000 towards the purchase.

The four municipalities would jointly pay to Picton an annual sum equal to the averaged annual salary and allowances of three full-time firemen and also a proportionate cost of administrative expenditure of the Picton Fire Department negotiable each year.

Campbell To Head Commission

TRENTON — H. J. Campbell, the president and general manager of Minor Brothers Paper Mill of Glen Miller, has been appointed chairman of the Trenton Board of Police Commission.

The three man board is composed of Mr. Campbell, Judge J. C. Anderson and Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald.

Both Mr. Campbell and Judge Anderson were appointed by order-in-council by the provincial cabinet. Mayor McDonald serves in an ex-officio capacity.

Initial task facing the commission will be salary negotiations with the Trenton Police Association. Talks begin today and the commission will report back to town council on the progress of the negotiations.

Primary among the police association's demands is salary parity with Metro Toronto for first class constable. A raise of $1,550 would be required to boost the current $7,600 salary to the $9,150 Metro Toronto level.

In addition the association is seeking a percentage increase equal to the first class constable's request, for all other ranks.

Double pay for overtime and higher contributions by the commission to medical, hospital and life insurance plans covering members of the association, were other requests put forward by the association's bargaining committee.

The police association's contract with the commission expired Dec. 13, 1969.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE

PROCLAMATION

"Y.M.C.A. WEEK"

JANUARY 26 TO JANUARY 31, 1970

This is National Y.M.C.A. Week. This week, millions of Canadians and others affiliated with more than 1900 Y.M.C.A.s throughout North America are paying tribute to the work of the "Y".

The Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. will play host to local citizens who are not members but who would be interested in visiting the Y.M.C.A. building and participating in some of the "Y" activities for boys, girls, men and women during the week

The Belleville "Y" has given service to the people of Belleville and district for over three-quarters of a century. As the needs of people have changed the "Y" programs and services have changed. Such change is being accelerated by the present "Y" Board of Directors, staff and members. The "Y" will be giving more emphasis to work with teens, to working co-operatively with other groups and agencies to meet vital community needs, to "spearheading" actions which will bring together organizations doing similar work. The "Y" welcomes suggestions about its programs and services.

During the observance of "Y" Week, I am sure that all of us will join in paying tribute to the Belleville "Y" for its contributions to our community, and wish it continued success in its endeavors.

By virtue of the authority invested in me as Mayor of the City of Belleville, I, J. Russell Scott, call upon all citizens to assist in the observation of Y.M.C.A. Week in Belleville, United at the Mayor's Office this 20th day of January, 1970.

Signed
J. Russell Scott, M.D.
MAYOR

Economy Needs Boost

When it comes to the economy of the country and especially the need for still greater efforts to combat inflation and unemployment, allied to increased productivity, there is no stronger exponent than Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees.

The former Conservative trade minister recently tried to get a motion before the House on this theme, but while the Speaker acknowledged that the matter he raised was important the unanimous consent of the House for such a motion was lacking.

But even though discussion was denied Mr. Hees got his point across anyway. He noted that during December the number of unemployed persons in Canada rose from 354,000 to 383,000, an increase of nine per cent over the previous month. The trend moreover indicated a further steady increase.

To offset this, the member called for an expanded export drive and tax incentives to increase productivity as well as induce more industrial research to improve the quality and style of Canadian products. This is a good point. Many Canadian products have quality and style, but the same degree of sophistication could be extended to a much wider range of products. Anyone who has ever searched a store for something "distinctively Canadian," as a gift for someone overseas, will know what we mean.

And what about those exports? Mr. Hees said there had been a "steady contraction of our efforts in this field during the past year." This has been "about an increase in exports of only one-third to one-half of the rate of increase of "all of our principal foreign competitors."

When he was trade minister, Mr. Hees recalled all of Canada's trade commissioners from around the world and assembled them in Ottawa along with businessmen seeking new markets for their products. It was a drive to increase Canada's sales that proved most successful.

It would be politically humbling, but the Trudeau government could do no better than emulate such an effort. It would place the spotlight on Canada at a time when inflation is rife and the economy at large is in need of a boost.

What about tax incentives? Well they seem unpopular by themselves. But as Mr. Hees suggested in an address in Belleville last December. He was referring to the White Paper on Taxation proposal to withdraw the 21 per cent tax on the first $35,000 of profit, and its gradual increase over a period of five years to 50 per cent.

Small businesses in particular would suffer from such tax strictures. Inevitably some would fall, while for those remaining the necessary incentive would be gone. This is not a climate of success; Canada can do better, but in order to do so the businessman must have the incentives from government that he now lacks.

Architect Speaks Up

Peter Prangnell, newly-appointed head of the architectural department at the University of Toronto, thinks that much of modern architecture is degrading, embarrassing or just plain awful.

The British-born architect has spent most of the past ten years in the United States and Canada so his opinion of the North American scene must be taken seriously.

At the same time Mr. Prangnell is a bit vague in his statements. This one for instance: "Consider the buildings that are illustrated in our professional magazines and sense the embarrassment of those people who try to make themselves at home in them. Ultimately the architect can make you look silly and feel silly."

Later he becomes a little more explicit, as when he observes: "How awful design has become. It is a mysterious process applied to a useful object only so that it may be the vehicle of expressing any concept except man's ease and wellbeing."

In other words, architects are becoming so enamoured with their design concepts, and putting them into practice, that they overlook the fact people ultimately are going to live and work in the buildings that result.

Belleville in its current program of home, apartment and office construction seems to be long by design ideas which are both attractive and utilitarian — nothing extravagant like Toronto's city hall or the National Arts Centre in Ottawa for example.

But five years from now, perhaps when the city is much bigger than it is now, we shall see buildings spring up that will excite controversy. And who is to say that that is a bad thing?

Although Reunification Is Remote...

Ulbricht Regime Indicates Desire for Talks with Bonn

By CY PEIX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Walter Ulbricht's lengthy statements about the chronic quarrels between his East German government and Bonn had a (well)-hackneyed-harsh ring but also left some hope for future moves towards better relations.

Ulbricht is maintaining his demands that West Germany accord diplomatic recognition to his Communist regime.

Reiteration of this insistence at his East Berlin press conference this week served to keep the atmosphere surrounding the German issue cool, despite initiatives from the West made since October by Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Few West Germans entertain real hopes that their nation, split since the Second World War, will be reunified within the foreseeable future.

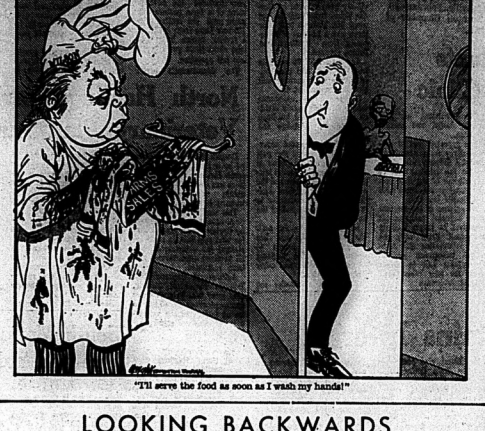
But at least one opinion poll has reflected a widespread desire for talks with the Ulbricht government and Brandt shares this.

Ulbricht, now 58, was once considered the most uncompromising of European Communists. Now he's the "hero" of Bonn.

But his part of the former Reich has developed into an economic giant of the Soviet bloc.

Buoyed by the consequent surge in East German self-confidence and ingratitude dressed by Russia and other East bloc countries, Ulbricht may be more inclined at present to move towards negotiations with the federal republic.

Bonn, with its new Social Democratic chancellor, has both material assets and international prestige to bargain with in the right relations with the East generally.



Before Hitler came to power, the old Germany maintained close ties with the Soviets, especially in military matters.

In recent years, West German resentment have been building up substantially over Russia's ties with Russia and other Communist countries.

The federal republic's commerce with these states has developed so sharply that concern is currently being expressed over the extent to which the trade balance has come to favor Bonn.

But the Berlin wall remains and so does the constant bickering over such issues as the status of Berlin and West Germany's membership in the so-called of all Germany.

The differences centred on Berlin symbolize the continuing points of friction which promise to keep the German question uneasy one for some time to come.

Christmas Exchange Aid Not from City Alone

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I would like to express my objection to a couple of statements made in the article in your January 17 issue regarding the Christmas Exchange.

It is with reference to the statement indicating that the Exchange hopes to approach the "County Welfare Office" for support given to families in outlying areas this past year; this assumes that all the assistance came from the City of Belleville. This is most certainly not true. I work in Belleville, my children attend secondary school there. I recall that Centennial secondary school gave a great deal of support to the Exchange. Perhaps some research should be done to see how many students of the schools which gave assistance lived outside of the Belleville city limits. It might be an interesting comparison with the percentage of needy families outside of the city limits receiving assistance.

I am certainly being canvassed in Belleville, not only through the mail, but by various other city canvasses. As a family we also support our local welfare service of Belleville.

Perhaps another comparison needs to be made here, before such disparaging remarks are published.

The reference to the County Welfare Office needs clarification. Is the Director of the Exchange not aware that this office is the service of Belleville, Trenton and Hastings County? And, if I recall the last report which was presented on the functions of this unit, it was Belleville which was the largest user of the unit. It might also be pointed out that one of the first duties when the unit was formed was to change the name from "Welfare" to "Social Services" to preserve the dignity of recipients. Surely this, too, is the hope of the Exchange.

If the more affluent (?) City of Belleville would like to see co-operation with its smaller neighbours, how can we ever hope to see any world communities to work in peace and harmony?

A Citizen of the Whole Community.

Ottawa Samaritan

The Major Does His Thing

Ottawa Journal

"The angel with the husky beard" is the name thousands of Calcutta street dwellers know him by.

Every day Major Dudley Gardiner doles out meals and Canadian milk; 764 children are fed daily at the gates of the Salvation Army mission, 755 babies suffering from malnutrition are supplied with milk and vitamins three times a week at the dispensary and 1,000 permanent dwellers are fed daily seven days a week.

The milk is supplied from Canada through the Unitarian Service Committee. Much of the badly-needed canned comes directly from the Ottawa Valley through contributions to The Journal Cup of Milk fund.

The Salvation Army is one of the services through which the USC works in distributing milk throughout India.

Major Gardiner is a volunteer whose only income is a small army pension which he uses largely to support nine orphan boys.

Major Gardiner first entered the British army at age 13.

When he became a Japanese prisoner-of-war, he made a pledge to himself that if he escaped with his life he would devote the rest of his life to building things up because he had spent his life until then knocking them down.

When he was released, Major Gardiner worked in Hong Kong with refugees. For the past nine years he has worked in India. An amazing side-effect is that he speaks Bengali with a Cockney accent.

At the Calcutta mission young Indians help him to prepare cooking and to distribute milk and food on the daily run.

The USC provides a Jeep ambulance for the food run, and the milk and food. The Calcutta operation is a straight relief operation, run on the same non-profit, non-denominational basis as the Unitarian Service Committee.

Doing It Yourself

Orlando (Florida) Sentinel

With the increasing scarcity of construction workers, housewives and their husbands are beginning to find out how few of them know how to hang a picture or drive a nail.

To help correct this situation, the Brevard Junior College is offering a new course. Students will be taught how to make simple home repairs, paint walls, fix plumbing . . .

We don't suppose anyone will leave Brevard to put up an office building or threaten the job security of journeyman plumbers, but if they know how to use a "plumber's friend" they will find that knowledge useful.

Black Radicals

Insolent and Arrogant

The Globe and Mail

Two black students called a press conference in Montreal last week to announce what would be done if the Canadian government did not respond to their demands in connection with charges laid against a number of Caribbean students in the computer centre at Sir George Williams University computer.

Geddes Granger and Roy Darbeau, students, and Rosie Douglas — one of those charged — said that unless Ottawa accepted responsibility of racism at Sir George Williams before the trial begins, student governments in several Caribbean countries would launch a "second offensive against Canadian racism"; Mr. Granger said the offensive would be directed "at Canadian people and interests in the Caribbean".

It is possible that further investigation of the events leading up to the violence at the university could be justified. But no Canadian Government — not the Government of Canada, not the Government of Quebec — should even consider undertaking such an investigation until the court has dealt with the charges before it; and it was a gross impertinence on the part of these students to suggest it should.

Outside of a country in which the political function is divided from the judicial function, Canada is one of the best by the courts according to the law, and not according to the political influence he can muster. No Canadian would have the insolence to try publicly to bring political pressure on a court, and if he tried to do it in secret he would be guilty of a criminal offence and rightly so.

Canadians will refuse, also, to submit to the political blackmail of outsiders.

Aims at Control of the Senate

Enigmatic Nixon Gains Stature and Puzzles Opponents

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The 81st Congress reopened for business this week with the Democratic majority finding President Nixon an increasingly difficult target in this year of vital elections.

As a stunning recent example, Nixon left the Democrats speechless with his proposed family assistance program and minimum income package of last summer.

The Democrats still haven't come up with an alternative and it is this sort of material they will need if they hope to salvage their control of Congress in next fall's elections.

In disarray and virtually leaderless after the presidential election of 1968 and the Senator Edward Kennedy tragedy of last summer, the Democratic party seems ill-prepared for the years ahead.

As a measure of their mood, Democratic Senator Leader Mike Mansfield, in outlining a non-belligerent election strategy recently, suggested: "Maybe it's a time for honey rather than vinegar."

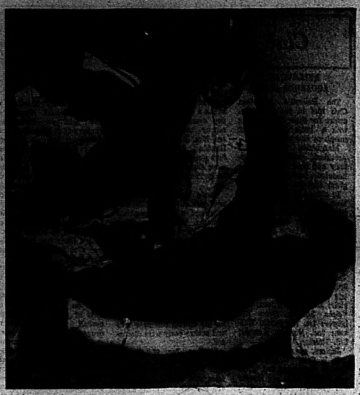
As for Nixon himself, not only the Democrats but the pundits, the commentators and the country at large are left puzzled after his first 12 months in office.

Despite the supposed pitiless publicity of the office—and all the talk of the "old Nixon" and the "new Nixon" during his campaign—little in fact is known about the real, off-stage Nixon.

After the ars of the glamorous jet-set Kennedys and the folksy Johnsons, Nixon remains a largely unknown figure—"a very private president" in the words of one writer.

In the parlance of the day, he and his whole family strike modern America as being thoroughly "square."

But he has planned his presidency on the "silent majority" of middle Americans he feels are in communion with his life-style and apparently it is paying off. According to the most recent poll, the man who was elected with only 44 per cent of the vote now enjoys the support of 61 per cent of American public.



Max Frankel, writing in the New York Times magazine, says:

"The most conspicuous feature of the Nixon presidency so far has been the jog, the slow and steady trot, lap by lap, step by step, permitting fairly easy recovery from a stumble and leaving only a few traces of leap or lurch."

It is, perhaps, the pace the country now longs for after a decade of near-debilitating crises at home and abroad.

The last election, come next fall when 25 Democratic senators—and only 10 Republicans—are up for re-election.

With Nixon assuming the initiative and the Democrats in a vulnerable position, the Republicans are seen as having a fair change of winning control of the 100-seat Senate.

Obituaries and Funerals

MRS. JAMES GABOURIE
(Tweed)

TWEED — The funeral of Mrs. Lily Gabourie, 81 years old, who died suddenly from the Cassidy Funeral Home, Tweed, to St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Dean C. E. Baker, assisted by Reverend T. E. Briceland of Kingston; Rev. Hendrick of Joyceville; and Reverend G. E. Groenewegen of Stoco. The Honor Guards were Reverend Sisters and members of the office staff of the Joyceville Penitentiary. The bearers included Jerome Genore, Jimmy Gabourie, Paul Gabourie, Robert Gabourie, Michael Plunkett and Denny Plunkett.

Entombment was in St. Carthagh's vault, in Tweed, for burial in St. Carthagh's Cemetery in the spring.

Mrs. Gabourie was a former resident of Tweed, she had been a patient in St. Mary's of the Lake Hospital, Kingston, for some time where death occurred. She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bosley.

Mrs. Gabourie is survived by seven children. They are: Edward of Caledonia; Mrs. S. Genore (Irene) of Tweed; Sister Joan of Arc of Montreal, Quebec; Mrs. (Nellie) Meyer of Detroit, Michigan; Stanley of Kingston, Ontario; Mrs. Edgar (Rota) Plunkett of Kingston and James R. Gabourie of Cobourg, Ontario. Her husband and three sons, Wilfred, Clayton and Felix predeceased her. She is also survived by 15 grandchildren and 26 great grandchildren.

The deceased was a member of St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed, and an honorary member of the Catholic Women's League.

PETER CASEY
(Tweed)

TWEED — One of Tweed's centenarians, Mr. Peter Casey passed away recently three years ago when he lay. He was a resident of Lodgerton Corners, west of Tweed Village where he farmed, having lived in this district for many years.

He was a resident of Kingston's House of Providence for approximately eleven years prior to his death on Jan. 18 in that hospital (House of Providence). Mr. Casey would have been 101 years of age, had he survived until Sunday, Jan. 25, 1970. He was born in Hungerford Township, the son of the late Patrick Casey and his wife the former Bridget Scanlin. His wife, was the former Mary Murphy. They were married in St. Carthagh's Roman Catholic Church, Tweed and she died in 1954.

On Mr. Casey's 100th birthday last January 1969, he attended Mass at 10.00 a.m. received approximately 100 guests at noon and joined in the sing-song in the afternoon. The only time Mr. Casey needed a doctor for treatment of any kind, was three years ago when he had the misfortune to fall and break his hip, but he rapidly made a complete recovery from that. He was a catcher for the Tweed's first baseball team, and he was an enthusiast as far as sport was concerned, watching hockey regularly. His love of singing was also well-known and he sang with his daughter Gertrude, Sister Mary Gertrude, of St. Pet. er's Convent, Trenton, as she would accompany him on a guitar.

He is survived by the following children: Cecil Casey, of Oshawa; Gerald, of Rochester, N.Y.; Patrick of Kingston, and a daughter; Gracia, (Mrs. Felix LeGare) Tweed, who predeceased her father, besides Sister Mary Gertrude of St. Peter's Convent, Trenton.

Mr. Casey was the last of his immediate family.

The body rested at the Cassidy Funeral Home, Tweed, until Wednesday, thence to St. Carthagh's Church, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Dean C. E. Baker, and in the Sanctuary was Rev. T. E. Briceland.

The bearers were Leo Murphy, Thomas Brosnan, William McCrea, Arthur Palmateer, Percy Gaylord, Francis Craig.

Entombment was in St. Carthagh's vault, Tweed.

MRS. MICHAEL ACERRA

Following a brief attack at her home, 41 Candiffon Road, Mrs. Yvonne Emma Acerra, died suddenly in Belleville General Hospital early this Friday morning, in her 67th year.

Mrs. Acerra was born in Montreal, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Armancy-Jill De Voyeau and had resided in Belleville for the past 40 years.

She was a member of St. Michael's Church and the Catholic Women's League of that parish.

Surviving are two sons, Anthony and James Acerra and two daughters, Mrs. Robert (Anne) Alexander and Mrs. June Broad all of Belleville.

Also surviving are several brothers and sisters in the Montreal area. Her husband Michael Acerra, and one daughter, Mary, are predeceased. There are nine grandchildren.

Mrs. Acerra is resting at the O'Brien Funeral Residence with visitation after Saturday noon.

Requiem mass will be celebrated in St. Michael's Church on Monday, Jan. 26 at 10.00 a.m.

Interment will be in St. James' Cemetery.

New Bylaw Regulates the Use Of Snowmobiles Within Deseronto

DESERONTO — Monday evening's meeting of the Deseronto Council was a quiet one, with routine business taking up most of the time. Requests from various charitable organizations were received asking for support and will be considered in setting up the budget. A special meeting is called for Jan. 28 when council will meet as a committee of the whole to thrash out various matters dealing with the budget. All members were present.

At the request of the snowmobile club, a bylaw was passed regulating the use of these machines within the town. The speed limit is set at no greater than 15 miles an hour and sidewalks and footpaths must not be used except for crossing at right angles. Private property must not be used without permission of the owner; they must be in as unnecessary noise, such as from idling the engine; lights and brakes must be in good condition; and after 10.30 p.m. machines travelling home must take the most direct route. An infringement of any term of this bylaw will make the lawbreaker subject to a fine up to $50 for each offence.

Council was pleased about the suggestion for the bylaw, and its various restrictions had come from the club itself.

The town is in need of a new town hall as a new location. An offer was received from David Saunders to sell his garage to the town for this purpose, and the offer is being seriously considered.

A contract will be given to Fred Carter and son to keep the town dump levelled off at a cost of $200 for 1970. The Lions Club was given permission to have Centre St. closed off from Dundas St. to Edmon St. from noon to four o'clock on Feb. 1 in order that this area may be used for the carnival sled and toboggan races.

Permission was given to hold the March of Dimes the week of January 26.

Officers for 1970 Elected

TYENDINAGA — RESERVE — A building committee has been set 'up' by LOL No. 93, and work will start as early in the spring as possible to build new lodge rooms. Since their building was destroyed by a flash fire Nov. 15, meetings have been held in the home of Melville Hill, with Pine Lodge, the women's branch, meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Brant.

Mr. Brant, the master of the lodge at the time of the fire, has since become the county master for South Hastings.

Men were working in the yard near the building when the fire broke out, caused by the explosion of the oil burner. They rushed in but were driven out, without being able to rescue a single article. The Deseronto Fire Department was unable to lend assistance, as two of their fire trucks was out of order and they could not leave the town unprotected by sending the only available truck.

The alarm was relayed to Peter Anne, but firemen could do nothing.

Everything was lost. Priceless historic documents are what they regret most deeply. Among these were the warrant of the lodge, dated May, 1946, and minute books going back to 1941.

Business of the lodge has been conducted regularly in spite of the loss of the building and its contents. Officers of the lodge were elected for 1970. Master is Lawrence Maracle and Gerald Maracle is Deputy Master. Victor Brant is Chaplain and Melville Hill is Marshal.

Former Teacher Hopes to Be Social Worker

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Every day is a challenge to Valerie Poole, former school teacher visiting for over two taken her from the wilds of northern Quebec to British Honduras in Central America.

Now she's studying nursing at the Greater Niagara General Hospital, and hopes some day to become a social worker.

In 1966 she was on the staff of a Cree Indian school 90 miles north of the Ontario community on Lake Mistassini in Quebec. It all had started when she "just decided one night" that she wanted this Indian children. She was accepted by Anglican Church Home for Children and was told two other girls to the Mistassini area. There they lived in government-supplied three-bedroom houses.

Attendance at the school was good despite the fact that Indian children go with their parents into the bush on trapping lines in the winter.

"We lose some in the fall, but they come back in January usually. In fact, during the duck-hunting, but the parents try to retain the children so they don't miss too much of their studies."

"They usually take the sicker learners so they can get treatment in hospital."

She says Indian parents are concerned about the children's education and behave when they take them into the bush they consult with the teacher.

The settlement where she taught was only five years old at the time, but there Indians had made a good deal of progress. "Every year they build 10 or 11 houses. Gradually they are all getting houses, but even though there are houses they still have the Indians to go back into tents.

"But they are happy and contented. I like their life. It is very casual but interesting."

Both Anglican and Roman Catholic priests conduct Sunday services, and a woman Protestant missionary holds services in a tent. At the Anglican services the pews usually are filled and people sit on the floor at the back of the church to listen to the Anglican priest and a Cree lay reader. "It seemed unbelievable," Miss Tustin said.

The people of Niagara Falls had sent up some 1,000 pounds of clothing, but there was a big demand during the winter for woollen hats. "At the end of last winter we found that the children's ear drums were breaking because of the cold winds.

"Some days the tiddlies came to school with towels or sweaters tied around their faces to protect them from the cold."

But Christmas in 1969 "was beautiful."

"Presents and candy were donated by various schools in Montreal. We had a Christmas concert. At the church hall, then went back to the school where we had Santa Claus. It was the most re-

WEDDING

WEATHERDON — HALL

Roslin Anglican Church was the scene of the recent marriage of Elizabeth Rae Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Hall of Plainfield and Charles Vernon Weatherdon, son of Mr. J. A. Weatherdon of Ottawa and the late Mrs. Weatherdon. The setting at the ceremony was Rev. V. Earle and organist was Mrs. A. Bales of Roslin.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of crystal peau with an empire waistline and Venice lace yoke. The floor length sleeves were trimmed with three rows of Venice lace to match the bodice. There was a self bow on the sleeve and waistline. The chapel train was completely bordered with Venice lace and attached to the dress with a large self bow. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of deep red sweetheart roses, lily of the valley and baby's breath. The headdresh was a flower petals attached to a three-tiered scalloped veil.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Bruce Stickle, Tweed, sister of the bride. She wore a floor - length gown with a bodice of thermidore velvet, featuring a high ruffled collar and full - length sleeves with matching ruffle trim. A band of pink peau-de-soie trimmed the empire waistline and attached to the band was a softly gathered straight skirt of pink French crepe.

Bridesmaids were Miss Judy Weatherdon, Belleville; Mrs. Wanda Black of Sudbury and junior bridesmaid was Miss Kathy Turriff of Ottawa. All were dressed in the same manner as the matron of honor and carried bouquets of white baby mums.

Best man was Peter Rennard, Ottawa and ushers were Bruce Stickle, Tweed, brother-in-law of the bride, and Stan Lavole of Ottawa, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

For the reception and dance held at Gilead Community Centre, the bride's mother wore a white and silver crimplene dress with black accessories and a corsage of red carnation corsage.

The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Stan Lavole was attired in a maroon velvet dress trimmed with silver. She wore silver accessories and a white carnation corsage.

For the wedding trip to Kilmington, Vermont the bride wore a white lame dress with black accessories and a corsage of red carnations.

The couple will reside at 362 Winona Ave. Ottawa.

Roslin Couple Honored On 35th Anniversary

ROSLIN — Mr. and Mrs. John Hart were honored recently on the occasion of their 35th wedding anniversary at St. Paul's Anglican hall in Roslin.

Approximately 100 relatives, friends and neighbors were in attendance to surprise the couple as they entered the hall. They were presented with a corsage and boutonniere respectively by their daughters-in-law.

During the evening the guests enjoyed dancing supplied by Joe Hart brother. Later in the evening an address was read by the eldest son Clifford Hart. The honored guests were presented with a pole light from the family and many useful gifts from relatives, friends and neighbors. Both spoke briefly in appreciation. Lunch was served buffet, style by members of the family.

There are four sons, Clifford, Gerard and Leo all of Belleville; Arthur of Kingston, and one daughter Eleanor at home. There are also eight grandchildren.

John Hart is the son of Mrs. Louise Hart of Roslin, while Mrs. Hart is the daughter of Mrs. Eleanor Copeland of Belleville.

Wallbridge LOBA Lists New Officers

Wallbridge LOBA met at the Orange Hall, Wallbridge for the first meeting in the new year.

The newly elected officers were at their various stations, with the Worthy Mistress, Mrs. Marie Kingston presiding.

Regular agenda was followed. Mrs. Nellie Ketcheson and Mrs. Susan Marshall reported on two successful euchres held recently, and plans were made for future ones.

Appreciation for flowers, fruit and goodies received at Christmas as expressed in letters, were read by the secretary, Mrs. Georgina Evans. Letter for cash donations, were received from the Belleville Salvation Army and True Blue Home at Richmond Hill.

Following lodge, refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. During this portion members celebrating birthdays and wedding anniversaries during the month of January were honored by the Worthy Mistress.

Following is the list of officers for 1970: Worthy Mistress, Mrs. Marie Kingston; Immediate Past Mistress, Mrs. Annis Dickens; Deputy Mistress, Mrs. Nellie Ketcheson; Jr. Deputy Mistress, Mrs. Ruby Bertrand; recording secretary, Mrs. Georgina Evans; financial secretary, Miss Joyce Evans; treasurer, Mrs. Margaret Chatlen; chaplain, Mrs. Mary Clapp; guardian, Mrs. Helen Hagar; director of ceremonies, Mrs. Mae Hottinger; first lecturer, Miss Linda Niles; second lecturer, Mrs. Georgina Rupert; pianist, Mrs. Bernice Moore; Inner Guard, Mrs. Nancy Embury; Outer Guard, Bro. Jesse Chatlen and auditors, Mrs. Margaret Reynolds, Mrs. Pearl Holmes and Mrs. Annis Dickens. Committees were also appointed.

Points for Parents

By MARY DEYSON

Mother: "Johnny has a bad cold, but they're so fussy about absences at school that I'm letting him go anyway. He doesn't seem to feel sick."

Grandmother: "You can't keep a child home for every little sniffle. First graders would be out of school half the winter if you did."

Early stages of the common cold are the most contagious and a sneeze will fill the air with thousands of viruses, which are likely to infect every child in the classroom.

Prone to Accidents, Youth Seriously Injured

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My boy friend has been involved in a number of accidents, and the last one was terribly serious.

His face is now badly disfigured and plastic surgery might be the only solution. I would like to know:

1. Could something be driving him to these accidents?

2. How long does it take to recover from plastic surgery?

3. Does it have any effect on him mentally?

4. Is there anything I can do to help him adjust to the situation?

I love him very much. He is 25 and we hope to get married. Distressed

Dear Distressed: Some people are accident prone. Was he the one who drove the car every time it got into trouble? A physical check-up and a driver's test might throw light on this.

2. It all depends on the surgery. It may involve extensive replacement of skin and regrowth.

3. Any illness or accident leaves its mark. If surgery removes all traces, perhaps the personality change ought to be all for the better.

4. Your message to him is that you love him; and that actual appearance has very little to do with the way you feel. Visit him in hospital regularly, and let him know that you are rooting for him all the way.

* * *

Dear Doris: How can I persuade my girl that what I say is not to nag but to help her to be more popular?

She is troubled with B.O., but she doesn't seem to notice it herself. I just can't persuade her that she should bathe too a deodorant, and change her clothes every day. She resents any advice I try to give her. — Any Hope?

Dear Any: Of course there's hope! Maybe we thought it was only little boys who hated to wash. Girls are culprits too — and pretty big ones. No one needs to be within smelling range of a person who fails to bathe regularly.

Start with a little gift: bath salts, a bath mitt, scented soap, or dusting powder. A trip to the hairdresser for a cut, shampoo and a new hair style will help to spark her pride in her appearance.

Praise her when she does well. ("You smell so nice!") and when she gets compliments from her friends, she'll admit (if only to herself) that mother does know best.

* * *

Confidential to Hurt and Serious: The in-laws keep nattering because they see how much it upsets you. Ignore them, stand tall, and carry on your life. Don't let their presence spoil your tips or force you to leave a club you enjoy. A friend worth keeping won't be deceived by this ganging.

Doris welcomes your comments and ideas. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Dessert: Courtesy of Many Readers

By MARY MOORE

NOTE: You, my reader friends are wonderful — loyal and dependable too. On December 27, in this column I sent out an S.O.S. asking for help in finding a recipe for Honeymoon Salad that a Mrs. R. W. M. requested. To date I have received dozens of letters from you giving me the detailed recipe and thank you all for your co-operation.

ANSWER: (to Mrs. R. W. M.)

HONEYMOON SALAD
(a dessert; courtesy dozens of other readers)

1½ cups miniature marshmallows
1 cup mixed red and green maraschino cherries including about 1-3 cup of the red syrup
One 10-oz. can Mandarin oranges sections (drained
One 14-oz. can crushed pineapple (drained)
½ pint (10 oz.) fresh dairy sour cream
1 cup flaked coconut

Into a cut glass bowl measure all ingredients and gently stir to blend. Cover with Saran and chill at least 24 hrs. Serve in cut glass dishes.

NOTES: 1) This is a large amount and serves ten people adequately. 2) I had some leftover and it was excellent after stirring covered in refrigerator for four days. One reader said it would keep two weeks. 3) This Honeymoon Salad is not a salad at all — it is a dessert and is an excellent item for hostesses and social conveners to keep in mind when they want a dessert that may be prepared well in advance.

LETTER: For New Years dinner I served turnip with our turkey. When I mashed it I added two or three spoonfuls of canned applesauce. This is an old custom and our family loves it but I never see it mentioned in cookbooks. — Mary R.

ANSWER: It is a new idea to me so I cooked a turnip last night and added two apples to the pot. When all was tender, I drained them and mashed them and added some butter, salt and nutmeg and ate it. It was a good change and I thank you for this different idea. It is especially welcome at this time of year when good vegetables are so important to our budget and diet.

91st Birthday Celebrated

DESERONTO — Mrs. Mary File of Deseronto recently celebrated her 91st birthday. Mrs. File has one son, Reg living in Deseronto, and she herself lives with her only daughter, Mrs. Iren Sherman. She has 13 grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren.

The celebration held on Sunday was a happy one with friends and a number of cards and gifts were received.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

MOUNTAIN VIEW WI

MOUNTAIN VIEW — Mrs. Robert Barber opened her home for the Jan. meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute. Mrs. Ronald Lough acted as co-hostess. There were 30 members and two visitors present.

Mrs. K. Motley gave a summary of the district directors' meeting which was held in Picton.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Lottie Green who is convener for resolutions and safety. She introduced Mr. Allan, assistant agricultural representative for the county who showed films.

He was thanked by Mrs. Wilfred Motley and he and his wife were presented with a gift from the institute.

The meeting was closed and the hostess, assisted by the lunch committee, served refreshments.

Ann Landers

Judgment Required In Movie Admittance

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The other night my husband and I decided to go to a movie. We couldn't get a sitter so we wrapped our four-month-old son in a blanket and took him with us. When we got to the ticket taker, he said, "Sorry, this picture is for adults only. It has an X rating. We don't let the baby in."

My wife replied, "The baby is only four months old. What's more, he's asleep and won't see anything." The man became belligerent and said, "We have orders not to admit anyone under 18 and I'm not taking any chances."

The woman in the box office refunded our money and we left. My wife was upset and she had to take a sleeping pill. I was pretty burned up myself. What do you think, Ann? Rules are rules but isn't this ridiculous? — TURNED AWAY.

DEAR TURNED: I referred your question to the top brass in the Motion Picture Association, Mr. Jack Valenti. He said: "The ticket taker was obviously overzealous in his effort to stick to the letter of the law. His boss probably told him, 'If you let anyone under 18 in the theatre, you will lose your job.'

"The key word is 'judgment.' A baby in blankets should have been admitted. It is heartening, however, to know that the industry is policing its own. We would rather make a few people angry because their children couldn't get in, than have them mad because they were admitted when they should not have been."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Sometimes I'm sure the only reason my mother had me was because she wanted someone to do her housework. Are children supposed to enjoy their childhood or be slaves?

I was 16 and finding school very rough. If I'm going to get into a decent college next year, I need grades. I have loads of homework and a busy social life. Is it fair of my mother to ask me to get off the phone and set the table while she is doing nothing but reading or sewing?

Several of my girl friends are having the same problem with their mothers. What is your opinion? — SLAVE LABOR.

DEAR S. L.: Are you a guest or a member of the family? If you are a guest, you have overstayed your visit. If you are a member of the family, you should contribute something besides your wit and wisdom. Girls whose mothers do not expect them to lift a finger have a very difficult time when they marry. These prima donnas are bewildered and lost. Be glad your mother has good sense and kvitcherbotha'.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been reading your column for years and always thought it was the funniest part of this paper. Now I have a problem and I apologize for not asking you seriously.

I am 44, a widower who lost a fine wife after 28 years of marriage. My children are grown and doing well. I've been keeping company with an attractive divorcee 22 years my junior. She has a sunny disposition and is splendid company. I believe she would marry me if I asked. The problem is, I've seen too many older men make fools of themselves the second time around. How can I tell if this lady is interested in me or my money? We share many interests and she has been the ray of sunshine in my life. — DOW JONES.

DEAR DOW: Has Sunshine asked any questions about your income, your stocks or your bank account? Has she ever asked you to help out with her bills? Have you ever bought her any expensive gifts such as a fur coat or real jewelry? Have you ever loaned her money? If you can answer "no" to all these questions, she gets the nod from Ann.

Concentrated Ownership Assists Some Papers

OTTAWA (CP) — Ownership concentration probably has strengthened some faltering Canadian newspapers, the Halifax Herald Limited suggested today in a brief to the special Senate committee on the mass media.

"Whether the concentration of ownership is essentially desirable depends entirely on the product and the kind of people involved in the ownership and management," said the brief.

"If such people are responsible, independent and fair, concentration of ownership is not a significant matter.

"It is probable that concentration of ownership has strengthened and improved some newspapers in Canada which were faced with financial, management and technical problems that might not have been resolved otherwise."

The submission was presented by Graham W. Dennis, publisher of Halifax's two daily newspapers, the morning Chronicle-Herald and the evening Mail-Star.

The Chronicle-Herald has a history of independent ownership dating back almost 1¼ centuries, said the brief. For most of that time it had been published by members of the Dennis family.

"In the intervening years, Canadian journalism has witnessed the demise of countless small newspapers and, with it, the formation of concentrated ownership chains as we know them today.

"Economic pressures and the ever-mounting cost of production have doubtless contributed to this concentration of ownership in the media, and this trend will likely continue in the future.

"Certain proposals in the white paper on taxation and the recent amendments to the Estate Tax Act, we believe, make it more difficult for families and individuals to retain ownership in the future."

Freedom of the press is described in the brief as an extension of the individual's right to free speech. "It includes the right to receive news, to comment on the news, to communicate information and opinion in general without governmental or other interference.

"The counter-balance to this freedom is to be found in the laws of libel and slander, and the fact that there is now broad spectrum of media in that every divergent and dissenting point of view has forum."

Tax Rebates To Be Altered

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's property tax rebate programs will continue this year under a new formula that will increase the amount paid to householders in many municipalities.

The new formula, announced at a news conference Thursday by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, will provide a basic $30 rebate to all householders plus 10 per cent of the municipality's average 1969 property tax.

The formula sets a $15 limit on the amount of any increase in the rebate over that paid in 1969.

Because the new formula was designed to provide increased relief for urban municipalities with heavy tax rebates, Mr. McKeough said there may be some communities in which the 1970 rebate will be lower than last year.

However, the reduction from what was paid in 1969 will not be permitted to exceed $5.

Although attempts have been made to end the rebate program, started in 1968, it has proved to be "the most effective way available to the government" for direct relief for homeowners and tenants.

"If a more flexible system of personal income tax can be introduced in the future, it is possible that the burden of property tax could be mitigated through a closer integration of the personal income tax and property taxes," Mr. McKeough said.

The change will bring the total cost of the rebate program to $136,000,000 this year, an increase of nine per cent over 1969 payments.

Since the program was introduced, the government has paid the property tax on the first $2,000 of assessment on all residential properties. Mr. McKeough said the old system gave the greatest relief to municipalities with low tax rates.

The minister said the program likely will continue for at least another two years.

The new system was being announced now rather than with the budget in February to give municipalities time to determine the 1970 rebates.

Landlords again will be required to pass on rebates to tenants or face prosecution. Householders will receive rebates in the form of a reduction on tax bills and rebates will not exceed 50 per cent of any tax bill, a measure to ensure that collectors with low assessments pay at least half the taxes due.

Mr. McKeough said he thought most municipalities would have their calculations completed by the end of March, but special arrangements will be made by the department for areas such as Thunder Bay and Niagara where the municipal structure was changed last year.

Dairy Farmers Ask Milk for Starving

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Dairy Farmers of Canada called on the federal government Thursday for bold new approaches in the use of Canada's surplus skim milk powder in the world food program.

Farmers in the closing stages of their three-day annual meeting said the substantial powder surplus represents a source of nutrition needed by children and mothers in many countries. The powder could be supplied in orderly programs over a period of years.

"Canada now is utilizing its milk powder in the world food program in significant quantities but much more could be done," said the farmers.

They also said prices Canadian producers received through the Canadian dairy commission for milk going into foreign programs should be well above depressed world price levels.

They called on Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, in co-operation with dairy farmers and Canadian Federation of Agriculture, to call a meeting early this year to examine possibilities of proved and expanded use of powder surplus and other dairy products in external aid.

Farm Industry Said In Danger

OTTAWA (CP) — Under the present government program the Canadian farming industry will be destroyed within three years, a Progressive Conservative member of the Commons agriculture committee said Thursday.

Harold Danforth (PC—Kent-Essex) said in an interview after a committee meeting that it would be disastrous for the government to continue with its program of withdrawing subsidies from the farming industry.

MacNaughton's Views On White Paper Alter

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said Thursday the provincial government "will not be a party" to the federal white paper on tax reform.

In a speech delivered on his behalf to the Society of Industrial Accountants by Bert Lawrence, minister without portfolio, Mr. MacNaughton said:

"Potentially, it (the white paper) severely circumscribes Ontario's efforts toward tax reforms and critically jeopardizes the capacity for provincial-municipal financing in the 1970s."

He said the white paper will "encourage an unnecessary escalation of tax rates, threaten economic growth and reduce our ability to cope with expenditure priorities for the next decade."

The white paper will benefit only the federal government, he said.

"One cannot escape the conclusion that the form and structure are designed solely to accommodate federal objectives and that little consideration has been given to provincial-municipal needs. . . .

"The federal paper defines the outer boundaries of the income tax field by virtue of the proposal to integrate personal and corporation income tax rates.

"At the same time, Ottawa stakes a larger federal claim within the proposed limits."

Mr. MacNaughton's remarks differed from his first reaction. When the white paper was introduced Nov. 10, he said its proposals complimented the province's program.

At a federal-provincial meeting on taxation in December he said the white paper implementations would produce about double the federally-predicted gain of $630,000,000.

Watering Part of Routine

Peter Koekman gives beds of seedlings their share of water for the day. These particular seedlings are pansies, and will be ready for sale in time for spring. All plants are watered once a day, following a carefully planned schedule.

Not Long Now

Spring! Greenhouses are First Hint

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Even when the mercury dips to 20 degrees below zero, there is still a breath of spring to be had — despite the cold and the snow.

Encased in warm temperatures and plenty of water, spring is alive and well in greenhouses across Canada.

Although the majority of flowers grown are potted, kinds are grown determined by the consumer.

Basically, it is adherence to the simple law of supply and demand, growers will tell you.

The flower business revolves around the seasons, and those special occasions.

Easter, Christmas, Mother's Day, Valentine's Day — all means a deluge of orders at florist shops everywhere, and the culmination of weeks of cutting and planting preparations.

With each occasion, the consumer demands what he feels to be the seasonal flower or plant.

Christmas means Poinsettias, Easter — lilies and Mother's Day — a wide variety of potted plants, particularly 'mums.

Greenhouses in the area also grow some flowers for cutting and most of these are snapdragons and carnations.

Temperatures are thermostatically controlled, and the amount of light the plants receive can be artificially increased or decreased.

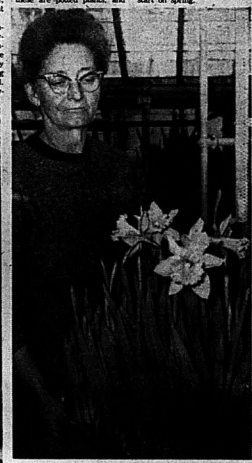
"We can make an artificial daylight for the flowers if necessary," said one grower as he pointed to the strings of lightbulbs strung the length of the greenhouse, "or, if less light is required, we simply place sheets of black cloth over the beds."

Ventilation is another important ingredient in successful growing of flowers. This is usually adjusted by vents at the top of the house, so there is always a constant flow of air.

As far as moisture is concerned, related another grower, when flowers are blooming heavily, they need more water. "Plants are normally watered in the early morning to prevent mildew," he added.

Before a new crop of flowers can be planted, each flower bed is sterilized by steam, to ensure that it is free of weed growth and completely clean.

Greenhouses deal in a number of popular house plants, including geraniums, violets and azelas.



In one greenhouse, there can be as many as 6,400 plants, usually about half of these are potted plants, and other half are flowers to be cut.

By far the most popular flower is the 'mums, with its numbers overriding all others combined.

A count of the total number of plants in the average three or four greenhouses goes over the 25,000 mark.

Most of the flowers planted in the early fall are beginning to bloom a definite headstart on spring.

A Multitude of 'Mums

These bunches of potted 'mums compose the bulk of area greenhouses — and in this one alone, there are more than 1,000 plants. Second in popularity to 'mums are carnations, snapdragons, and often, geraniums. Many of these plants will be sold during the Easter season, but particularly for Mother's Day.

In Time for Easter

Easter isn't that far away, and the daffodils are just beginning to flower, Mrs. Joan Stanton, who has been employed at one of the local greenhouses for more than 40 years explained that most of the plants are grown to meet seasonal demands, such as Easter.

Planners Veto Proposal For Canadian Tire Parking

Canadian Tire Corporation plans for a parking lot on Boswell St. behind its Coleman St. store, were killed last night when Belleville and Suburban Planning Board refused to recommend rezoning of the Boswell St. property.

"Insufficient justification" for the parking lot, despite "an awkward parking situation" on streets near the store, was the reason the board gave for refusing to support the rezoning.

Don Jones, manager of the store and Belleville lawyer J. D. Templeman appeared before a public hearing Dec. 11 to request the change. The board deferred action until planning director Bert Kenny could bring in a report on the situation last night.

He said the proposed parking lot on Boswell St. would introduce commercial use to a residential street by spot zoning.

The rezoning would create a small pocket of residential land surrounded by commercial development at the southeast corner of Boswell St. and Harriet St.

Mr. Kenny commented that the "value and marketability" of adjacent residential properties might be lowered.

"It is difficult to justify moving into the residential area when there is a significant amount of land on Coleman St. which is noted to permit the facility requested," Mr. Kenny told the board.

At the December public hearing, 23 people from the area signed a petition opposing the parking lot.

The property in question is now used for private employee parking in conjunction with the Canadian Tire Store. It belongs to Canadian Tire Corporation, and a vacant house occupies part, of the site.

Formal Approval Given For 80-unit Housing

Construction of 80 units senior citizens housing on Bridge St. West, opposite the Exhibition Park grandstand, was given formal approval by Belleville and Suburban Planning Board last night.

The board approved a rezoning bylaw for the 2.1 acre site in the Palmer Gardens subdivision now under development.

City council approved construction of the geared-to-income housing units by the Ontario Housing Corporation last Dec. 3.

Planning board coupled its approval of rezoning for the housing project with the suggestion that council construct a sidewalk on the south side of Bridge St. West between Yeomans St. and the site of the development.

Sidney Agrees to Remain In Suburban Planning Board

Sidney township will maintain its planning partnership with Belleville and Thurlow for at least another year.

The news was brought to last night's meeting of Belleville and Suburban Planning Board by Sidney's Reeve, Jack Bush.

To the obvious relief of other board members, Reeve Bush affirmed: "Sidney will stay with the planning board." Some doubts had been expressed in recent weeks that Sidney might go it alone in planning or join a county scheme.

However, Mr. Bush noted that the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board has jurisdiction over "a very small area of Sidney."

"Our council decided a year ago that something had to be done about planning over the entire township," the reeve added. "We did something about it at our last council meeting by hiring the planning consultants, Marshall, Maclin and Monaham of Toronto, to do a township planning survey.

The study is being undertaken jointly with the village of Frankford, and is expected to take a year to complete.

"We just couldn't wait; we just had to get some planning action under way," said Reeve Bush. "But for the part of the township now under the jurisdiction of this board, we will continue to plan, for a year at least, in conjunction with Belleville and Thurlow."

Not Enough Meetings

Board Ends with Surplus

Good news was in store for Belleville and Suburban Planning Board last night — its secretary - treasurer A. F. Jones reported it ended 1969 with a surplus of about $4,000.

Accounting for the surplus is the sale of maps and reports and underspending of the amount appropriated in the budget for members' allowances.

"We grossly over-estimated the number of meetings the board would hold in 1969," planning director Bert Kenny told the board. The over - estimate was based on expectation that the official plan would be ready and public meetings would be required to present it to the public and other interested bodies.

"We will have more meetings next year," the planner promised, adding that he hoped the official plan would finally be ready in 1970.

Mr. Kenny presented the board with a report on proposed re-organization of the staff with the hiring of a parks planner.

After a few planner takes up his duties he will be responsible for current applications and research material. This is expected to free the planning director and assistant planner to work on the official plan.

The new deputy city clerk, expected to take over his post Feb. 15, will also function as part time secretary - treasurer of the committee of adjustment. This position has been filled in the past by Mr. Jones. Mr. Jones will then become full time secretary-treasurer of the planning board.

The board that sat last night was the 1969 board, since the townships of Sidney and Thurlow have yet to name their appointees to the board.

The board's inaugural meeting and election of chairman will be deferred until the appointments are made.

Foster Ward

Protective Zoning Rates More Discussion

Foster Ward residents may not get the "stop-gap" rezoning bylaw that would, in effect, put a freeze on industrial expansion in the area.

Belleville and Suburban Planning Board agreed last night to confer with the residents sometime in February to discuss the issue. But both Mayor J. Russell Scott and Ald. E. A. Orr questioned the wisdom of rezoning the area before the urban renewal consultants bring in the conceptual plan for Foster Ward.

"This is a question of protective zoning for the residents, to prevent any further industrial expansion in the ward," planning director Bert Kenny told the board. "We were told by the city solicitor that we can't put a freeze on industry in the area, so this rezoning proposal is a compromise."

Foster Ward, primarily a single-family residential area, is now zoned for industrial use.

"I hope we don't just reverse the present situation," said the mayor. "We don't want a Big Bop plan."

But Zdenek Kvarda noted that the ideal plan for land use in Foster Ward, based on the urban renewal proposals, would take a year to draw up.

"In that year many changes could take place in the ward," he said.

The zoning change was requested by 60 per cent of the 133 ratepayers living in the residences in Foster Ward. Council referred the matter to the Industrial Commission, which asked for an opportunity to interview industrialists in the area to ensure that the rezoning change would not conflict with any planned industrial expansion.

So far, only two industrialists have been contacted. Both have indicated that "it is only fair to go along with the ratepayers' request", as long as their industries remain in an industrial zone.

Public Library in School Would Be Ontario Example

Centennial Secondary School offers a unique opportunity to combine "teenage and adult education in one place" Belleville and Suburban Planning Board was told last night.

Ald. E. A. Orr proposed that the school library be expanded to include a public library operated by the Belleville Library Board for residents of the west end of the city.

The joint school and public library would "be an example for the province", the former superintendent with the Bay of Quinte District High School board said. "It could be jointly stocked by the library board and the board of education."

Ald. Orr said public use of the Centennial library "was taken into consideration when planning the school."

"It was situated near the main entrance, opposite the auditorium and is not part of the teaching section of the school," he said.

The question of a branch library in the west end of the city was raised by assistant planner Frank Stokmans, who said the Library Board was interested in including the building in the city's five year capital works budget.

The Library Board had included him in discussions of possible sites for the branch building.

Ald. Orr's suggestion was submitted to Mayor J. Russell Scott for him to take to the Library Board for its consideration.

The mayor raised the question of why Moira Secondary School's library was not used by the public library, which built an east hill branch across the road from the school.

"Moira's library was to be used that way, but it was located on the second floor, quite some distance from the entrance," said Ald. Orr. "Everyone knows it takes just one person walking past a door to distract 45 students in the classroom."

H. E. McConnell to Head Belleville Shrine Club

The Belleville Shrine Club installed its new officers and directors at a Wednesday meeting.

The new elected persons will serve a one-year term.

Elected in president was H. E. McConnell. R. C. Sargent and H. T. Doidge became chairman of the board and secretary-treasurer respectively.

New directors include J. C. McDonald, house and property committee; D. A. Pierson, entertainment; Harold Bankier, crippled children; R. E. Middleton, finance and publicity; George Muller, members' activities; A. Evans, membership; Sam Mulholland, roster; and H. West, sergeant-at-arms.

At the same meeting, five members were awarded life memberships in the organization by assistant raban Tom Woods of Rameses Temple in Toronto, the installing officer.

Receiving th awards were Kenneth Vivian of Shannonville, C. Ed Way of Tweed, Alfred Cooper of Belleville, Harold Connor of Carrying Place and Harold Thompson of Bloomfield.

Representatives of the Crippled Children's Fund acknowledged a donation of $2,000 to the fund by the Belleville Club.

Hawks Clip Wings, Jam Fourth Spot

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks have at last caught up to Detroit Red Wings in the battle for the final playoff berth in the Eastern Division of the National Hockey League.

The Hawks edged the Wings 4-3 Thursday night to put both clubs in a tie with 49 points, five back of third-place Montreal Canadiens.

In other games, Montreal downed Minnesota North Stars 4-2, Toronto Maple Leafs beat Los Angeles Kings 3-2, St. Louis Blues defeated New York Rangers 4-3 and Boston Bruins gained a 3-3 tie with Philadelphia Flyers.

The immediate schedule facing both Chicago and Detroit could provide both clubs with a stiff test in their fight for a place in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

In the next six games, Chicago faces Montreal, Toronto, Minnesota and Boston once each and Philadelphia twice. Detroit has games against St. Louis, Montreal, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Oakland Seals and New York. The Red Wings' visit to the two weaker West Coast clubs could provide them with the advantage.

Detroit had the advantage of home ice Thursday night along with a 47-29 edge in shots on goal but Tony Esposito made the difference in goal for the Black Hawks.

Pit Martin scored twice in the first period for an early Hawks lead with brothers Dennis and Bobby Hull adding single goals.

Gordie Howe collected his 16th season goal for the Red Wings in the second period and Wayne Connolly and Garry Unger scored in the final 20 minutes during which Esposito stopped 20 shots.

Detroit goalie Roger Crozier twisted a knee trying to stop Martin's second goal at 11:11 of the first period and Roy Edwards took over for the rest of the game.

The crowd of 14,805 at Detroit saw the Black Hawks pick up their seventh consecutive win.

Bobby Rousseau paced the Canadiens with two goals before 14,489 fans at Minneapolis.

Defenceman Ted Harris and left winger John Ferguson also scored in the first period to give the Canadiens a 4-1 lead in the first 20 minutes of play.

Bill Goldsworthy scored once in the first period and assisted on a goal by Tom Williams in the final session as the North Stars dropped their first decision this season to Montreal, which moved to within two points of second-place Boston.

Phil Myre of Montreal and Minnesota's Cesare Maniago both stopped 32 shots.

Veteran right winger George

PIT MARTIN
Two For Cause

Armstrong scored his sixth and seventh season goals to spark the Maple Leafs in their second consecutive win before a crowd of 8,178 at Los Angeles.

Mike Walton also scored for Toronto while Mike Corrigan and Bill Flett collected single goals for the Kings, who remain mired in the Western Division cellar.

Orr's Assist Puts Him Ten Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Phil Esposito scored a goal and assisted on another while Bobby Orr picked up an assist as the two Boston Bruins continued their battle Thursday for the National Hockey League scoring lead.

Their points, picked up in a 3-3 tie with Philadelphia Flyers, left Orr with a 10-point lead over his second-place teammate.

Walt Tkaczuk of New York Rangers earned two assists in a Centre Norm Ullman failed to collect a fourth goal when goalie Wayne Rutledge foiled his penalty shot attempt. The shot was awarded to the Leafs after Fleti dropped on the puck in the Los Angeles goal crease with Rutledge on the bench in favor of a sixth attacker.

The win left the Leafs still eight points behind Chicago and Detroit in the East.

Toronto visits Oakland Seals in tonight's only schedule game.

Red Berenson scored one goal and assisted on others by Ron Anderson and Gary Sabourin to lead the Blues against the Rangers before a home crowd of 16,196.

Tim Ecclestone also scored for the Blues, who opened a 15-point lead over second-place Philadelphia in the West. The Rangers lead over second-place Boston was cut to two points by the tie.

Brad Park, Bill Fairbairn and Dave Balon, scored for the Rangers. Both teams had 30 shots on goal with Ernie Wakely winning the goaltending duel over Ed Giacomin.

Phil Esposito's goal with six seconds remaining in the game at Boston earned the tie for the Bruins and extended their unbeaten record over western clubs to 22 consecutive games.

Esposito assisted on another goal by Johnny Bucyk with Eddie Westfall collecting the third.

Andre Lacroix, Jean - Guy Gendron and Gary Dornhoefer scored for the Flyers before a crowd of 14,835.

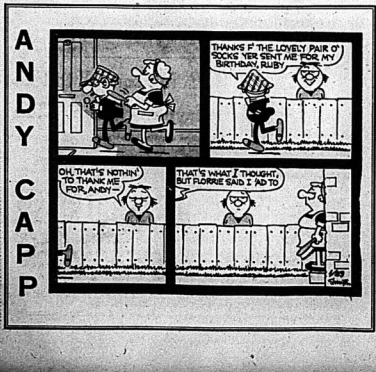
Knudson Near Leaders After First Crosby 18

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — George Knudson of Toronto was just one stroke behind the four leaders going into today's second round of the rain-soaked Bing Crosby pro-am golf tournament.

Knudson shot 34-34—68 to tie with six others Thursday behind leaders Bert Yancey, Bob Goalby, Ron Cerrudo and Bob Murphy. In company with Knudson were Howie Johnson, George Archer, Jim Wiechers, Tom Shaw and Hugh Royer.

Arnold Palmer, the gallery favorite even in this field that includes dozens of celebrities from the world of show business, had a three-under-par 69, just two shots back.

Three layouts are being used for the first three rounds by the 168 teams of a professional and an amateur. They are Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill. All carry par 72s.



There was some doubt that the second round could be played on schedule today. Daylong heavy rains were forecast with the courses already drenched.

"Almost unplayable," Archer said after his first round.

"It's not the same game," said Yancey. "It's a shame we have to play under these conditions."

Casual water puddled the courses on almost every fairway, and a heavy fog rolled in at midday. "I couldn't see the greens from the tees on 10, 11 and 12," Cerrudo said.

Toronto's Al Balding was five strokes off the pace after shooting 35-37—72 and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver was well back with a score of 41-39—80.

Pilots Said Pulling Out

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Times has quoted William Daley, major owner of Seattle Pilots, as saying the American League baseball franchise "is up for grabs. It is no longer rooted in Seattle."

The front-page story followed a 5 p.m. deadline set by the American League for a Seattle group hoping to buy the franchise to post a $1,500,000 loan problem.

Shortly after the deadline, Lamar Hunt and Tommy Mercer, two Texas magnates interested in getting the franchise for Dallas-Fort Worth, formally applied to the league for the franchise.

Daley's statement, according to The Times, added: "The American League has no other choice but to move the franchise. How can a transfer be avoided?"

The league has given Seattle every chance, but the city has not been able to raise the money. So there is no other choice," the Times quoted Daley as saying.

"It could be Dallas or Milwaukee," Daley said. "The league will decide that in its meeting in Oakland Tuesday."

Have They Lost Grey Cup Mold?

OTTAWA (CP) — If city police don't recover the stolen Grey Cup by Feb. 12, the Canadian Football League probably will order a replica of it, says commissioner Jake Gaudaur.

The cup, won in 1909 by Ottawa Rough Riders, was stolen from the club's offices in December. Police say they have little hopes for a quick recovery.

Gaudaur said a replica of the cup probably will be ordered at a Feb. 12 CFL meeting if the original wasn't found by then.

Slumps and catch-phrases can backfire in any weather.

Like when you say "The Cards are a great team "on paper" " and the other guy says: "Ya, but baseball is usually played on grass."

And we've all heard Conn Smythe's "If you can't beat 'em in the alley" relic. Well, with the exception of Happy Jack Ferguson and Terrance Harper, the Montreal Canadiens couldn't beat their way out of a wet Wheaties box, but they have had their share of hockey successes.

Occasionally, the slogan can hurt the cause it is designed to promote, and that's what could very well come of one of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's newest public relations brainwaves.

"Minor Hockey — More Than A Ten Million Dollar Business" boasts a release signed by Ken Mantin, secretary of the CAHA's Minor Hockey Committee.

The information is designed to help spread the good word during Canada's Minor Hockey Week, which officially begins Saturday.

But does the best way to inform a parent of the benefits his son gains from playing house league tyke involve brandishing the fact that ". . . minor hockey contributes TWELVE MILLION DOLLARS to the Canadian economy!"

"Sporting goods stores and manufacturers, insurance companies, gasoline stations, restaurants, bus companies, arenas — yes, the whole community benefits from the efforts of the thousands of volunteers who make minor hockey possible for the boys of Canada," Mr. Mantin's press-oriented epistle reads.

It goes on to talk of "fantastic amounts spent by parents for minor hockey equipment" and gives a provincial branch-by-branch breakdown of expenditures made by the 16,000 minor teams across the country.

Surely, their fiscal contributions are not what minor hockey workers are supposed to brag about.

This promotional gaff is the last straw in a brouwful of self-congratulatory balderdash dished out annually.

The minor hockey week publicity portfolio also includes "a statement from your mayor," which leaves the local chief magistrate space for his signature and generously puts another 60 words in his mouth.

"We must pay public tribute to the men and ladies who spend so many hours organizing and operating the many leagues and games for our youngsters," the release proclaims. "By their work they are providing our youngsters with an opportunity to play hockey."

"Out of this comes better bodies, healthier minds, better boys, and better citizens."

But the minor hockey public relations team really outdid themselves in an illustration accompanying this year's P. R. surprise package.

Captioned "Juvenile Hockey or Juvenile Delinquent," the scene depicts, on the one hand, a pair of boys carting their duffel-bag, bin tin security scrawl. The other side of the coin shows two unkempt, long-haired youths in an alley, one leaning against a car labelled "rent" with an unidentified bottle in his hand, the other smoking a cigarette with one arm casually on the shoulder of an equally scruffy, big-girl.

The intended inference is clear. If your son isn't playing minor hockey in the rink, he'll be behind it smoking God-knows-what, standing in the street-car, and boozing it up with some broad.

It's all so simple, isn't it?

Funny thing is, we've seen long-haired minor hockey players in Belleville, smoking, and drinking from unidentified bottles. Their dating habits are none of our business.

Minor hockey is a wonderful thing, two things provided:

1. That we never lose sight of who are the most important people involved — the boys, not the coaches, parents, or other credits to the community.

2. That we be honest about the system's failings, put try and make a Milky Way out of situations that occasionally curdle a community's stomach.

We've all seen the all-star coach pull a team off the ice because he lost an argument with a referee, or the house league Punch Imlach who tries to play his star tyke the whole game, or the over-zealous father who tells the boys to forget about all that passing stuff and go out and pump those goals in.

As in most fields, the good minor hockey volunteers don't limit publicity. Their press clippings are those of the boys who mature at hockey and life on the way through the system that they had a hand in.

They know that if you look after the would-be Billy Reays, the Bobby Halls-to-be will look after themselves.

Speaking of the world's highest-paid retired athlete, The Golden Jet will have at least somebody rooting for him tomorrow night when the Hawks hit Montreal.

The annual Kinsmen Club hockey safari will be passing through the Forum Saturday under the guidance of the CN's chief elephant-herder, Miles Duracks.

The expedition hopes to bring back some of the explorers missing from last year's excursion.

Teamwork Stressed as Minors Near Play-Offs

"You have to convince them they're in a team and not just a bunch of individuals going their own separate ways," says one minor hockey league official.

His theme was echoed by all his co-workers in one form or another as virtually all the coaches stressed the need for teamwork in the Belleville all-stars' upcoming series against Trenton.

The Rollins Construction Pee Wee team, coached by Terry Flynn and managed by Ray Bachiesi, exemplify this. "We have no big stars," says Flynn. "So if all the boys aren't skating and playing hockey, it hurts us more than another team."

Although they have lost two and tied one against Trenton this year the Pee Wees are confident they can take the series. According to the coach, "We have a good skating team with three balanced lines. Our biggest weakness is that we lack the size to do some real body hitting." The Rollins team boasts the play-off position next Sunday in Trenton.

The Belleville Kinsmen bantams, who went all the way to an OMHA championship the past two years, hope to continue their winning ways this season. Coach Murray "Moe" Hunter and manager Bob Ricketts feel that the team has the potential to repeat as champions, but feels that it will require a strong effort from all the team members.

The bantams have split two league games with Trenton, whom they face this Sunday afternoon.

"We're strongest in goal, and upfront," claims Hunter, "although the defence has sometimes inconsistent." Outstanding Kinsmen players include Mark Coates, Dave Goegan and Andy Ricketts, along with goalies Bob Moore and Bruce Clarke.

The Blake Kerr Midgets have lost only two games all season, but one of them was to Trenton — their first round opponent.

Coach Bob Burrowes and manager Tom Neill are strong advocates of positional hockey, with particular stress on headmanning the puck.

The team has fine balance and a strong defence corps, while their biggest problem is getting steady scoring power. Forwards Dave Smith and Rick Meagher, along with defencemen Tim Wilson and Peter Ackerman were mentioned as having played exceptionally well this season.

The midgets will be looking to avenge a 5-4 loss to Trenton, when they travel there for the first playoff game a week from tomorrow.

Coach Lou Stacke and manager Marsh Hopkins face perhaps the toughest job of all the coaches in moulding a team.

"Most of the players we got have never played all-star hockey before," claims Stacke. "At a time when they should be polished hockey players, they are just beginning to learn the fundamentals of system play."

While the inexperience of his Western Tire juveniles is a handicap, it also presents an opportunity for the greatest improvement.

"The boys have shown remarkable improvement this year," says Stacke. "They should account for themselves very well in the play-offs." He named Fred Stickle and Norm Lapp as the two most improved players.

The Western Tire team starts its playoff schedule against Trenton on Feb. 1, in Trenton.

Owen Sound Facing Statistic-Twisters

The Owen Sound Crescents tonight meet a Belleville senior hockey team that has been defying the league statisticians.

Despite losing five of their last six games, the Mo-Hawks are a surprise to their Owen Sound opponents — not to mention their local supporters — on at least two counts. Firstly, the Mo-Hawks are still only four points out of second place in the OHA Senior A standings going into tonight's 9 o'clock Memorial Arena game.

Secondly, despite only managing to score seven times in their last three games, the locals still boast four players among the league's list of top 20 scorers.

George Godson, going for his second straight club scoring leadership, is tied with Orillia's Al Osborne for the senior league's eighth scoring spot.

Godson has already matched last season's 15-goal output, and has added 22 assists in 30 games. The smooth Peterborough centre paced the Mo-Hawks with 15-34-49 last winter.

Linemate Lorne O'Donnell is the league's tenth best point - producer with 18 goals and 17 assists.

In addition to their offensive abilities, Godson and O'Donnell have stood out as penalty - killers and two-way hockey players, and have only logged 16 minutes in penalties between them.

GEORGE GODSON
League's No. 8

The third member of the Mo-Hawk "bread-and-butter" line — Al Ferguson — is one of five Senior A players to pass the 20 - goal plateau. Fergy's 21-11-32 credentials put him in the league's top dozen point spotters.

Playing - coach Davey Jones is another Mo-Hawk on the Top 20 chart, with 13 goals and 15 assists in 27 games.

Meanwhile, Oakville's Jim "Obie" O'Brien continues to make a runaway of the scoring race. With 31 goals and as many assists, the lofty centre is nursing a 9-point lead over the rest of the senior pack.

The seventh-place Crescents are also in good nick, but diminished from playoff contention with a loss in Belleville tonight — sport the services of the league's ninth-best point-producer in Don McComb who has accumulated 13 goals and 23 assists.

The Mo-Hawks will be equally concerned with their defensive record in tonight's 9 o'clock game.

They have watched 26 pucks go by in the past three games, which have been played without the blueline services of Lou Kozuski and Wayne Brown.

The Mo-Hawks have beaten the Crescents in four of their first five meetings. Tonight's game will be their last action for the next 11 days.

Skating No Folly For Sharon Poole

TRENTON (Special) — It's unusual for an 18-year-old to believe in Santa Claus, but you can't really blame Sharon Poole if she continues to hang a stocking on the mantlepiece next Christmas.

No matter what the jolly Saint delivers in future years however, it would have to place second to this year's Yuletide gift.

Sharon made her professional skating debut with the 1969 Ice Follies International at Quebec City this Christmas Day.

The daughter of chief warrant officer Sid Poole of 33 Laird Drive in Middleton Park, Sharon was well known in local figure skating circles. Arriving from Camp Borden in 1963, where she started skating at age seven, she joined the Trenton Figure Skating Club. For the past two years Sharon has been employed by the Recreation Committee of the Marysvale, instructing the junior members.

Her initial performance came almost a year after she auditioned in Toronto for the Ice Follies.

Miss Poole will be touring North America with the ice skating show for the remainder of the year, although she plans to visit her parents in June.

The Follies are currently playing in Saint John, New Brunswick, where Sharon performs in three of the show's numbers as a Follette. Her closest home engagements will be next year, when the show visits Kingston and Peterborough.

Ellis' Place Two In Scoring Race

While the Eastern Ontario Junior B League will see no drastic changes in the top spots, a win tonight by Trenton over Belleville could move them within two points of a playoff berth. The Golden Hawks entertain the Printers in the Community Gardens at 8 o'clock tonight.

Oshawa Crushmen continue to top the league with a three-point lead over the Kingston Frontenacs. Oshawa also has two games in hand.

The Belleville Ellis Printers hold down fourth, nine points behind Peterborough and two up on Cobourg. Preston Golden Hawks trail the Cougars by a game.

Individually the Ellis B's have a lot to gain from a convincing win.

Belleville's Terry Meagher continues to be among the league's leading scorers, currently tied with John Nestic of Oshawa in fourth place with 42 points. Meagher has

Bata Loses To Leaders

The Ontario Champions of the past two years tightened their hold on first place in the Eastern Ontario Intermediate C League as Little Britain edged the second - place Bata Braves 5-4.

Bata opened the scoring at 6:40 of the first period on a goal by Roger Smith, but the visitors came back to take a 2-1 lead at the end of the opening frame.

Bill Dixon tied the game, scoring the only goal of the middle period.

Bata pulled ahead early in the third on an unassisted goal by Smith, his second of the game. Three consecutive goals by Little Britain provided their winning margin. Bata's Doug Potts closed out the scoring.

Petes Demolish Flyers to Force Tie for Junior Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The high-scoring forward unit of Rick MacLeish, Danny Gare and Mickey Donaldson combined for 15 points Thursday as Peterborough Petes demolished Niagara Falls Flyers 12-4 to vault into a three-way tie for top Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series lead.

The Petes, St. Catharines Black Hawks and Montreal Junior Canadiens all have 53 points, 10 more than fourth-place Toronto Marlboros.

In one other Thursday game, at Hamilton, Kitchener Rangers fought off a third-period rally by the home club to outscore the Red Wings 9-8.

The Petes massed a total of 30 scoring points to sink Niagara Falls deeper in the cellar of the 18-team group with their 26th defeat of the season.

Donaldson led the assault with three goals and one assist. MacLeish managed two goals and four assists and Gare, a rookie, contributed two goals and three assists. Craig Ramsay scored two goals, and Jim Mahon, Chris Meloff and Paul Perras one each.

The Petes led 6-0 after 40 minutes before a crowd of 2,270, then exploded for six goals in the third period.

At Hamilton, right winger Gerry O'Flaherty produced three goals and three assists to lead the Rangers into fifth place, one point ahead of Ottawa 67s.

Kitchener led 7-3 in the third period but the Red Wings challenged when Buster Harvey and Larry Gould scored 44 seconds apart.

However, Dave Creasman a struck back for the Rangers at 12:59 and O'Flaherty finished the scoring with his 25th goal of the season 10 seconds later.

Rod Hare, Jerry Byers, Joe Norris, Bob Hurlburt and Bob Barber all scored once for the winners. Ron Lebeau, with two goals, and Bill Forrest completed the Hamilton scoring.

The defeat left the Red Wings tied for eighth place with Oshawa Generals at 28 points, one behind London Knights.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — General manager Jack Riley of Pittsburgh Penguins has been named interim president of the National Hockey League club. He succeeds Senator Jack McGregor, who resigned to run for governor of Pennsylvania. Donald H. Parsons, chairman of the board, appointed Riley to run the club, but did not indicate if Riley would continue in the dual role after this season.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A disqualification enabled Pop Tail, a six-year-old mare who hadn't won a race in five months, to become the largest-priced winner in Pennsylvania thoroughbred history at Liberty Bell race track Thursday, paying $297.80, $96 and $23.40. Pop Tail, sent off at odds of 147-to-1 by the crowd of 7,764, finished second in the seventh race; Coppers Run, which finished first, was disqualified for interference at the head of the stretch and placed third.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes Thursday announced the signing of three impact holdovers from last year and another Canadian-born quarterback for the coming season. Offensive tackle Bill Rhodes signed a three-year contract with the club, while running back Dick Smith signed for one year. Red O'Quinn, the Al's general manager, also announced the signing of Skip Rochette, a 23-year-old Montrealer, who will graduate from Bridgeport University, Bridgeport, Conn., in June. The Alouettes already have Montrealer Barclay Allen, a quarterback from Southern Illinois, in the fold.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The international hockey situation will be high on the agenda this weekend at meetings of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the Canadian Olympic Association. The CAHA holds its semi-annual board of directors' meeting Saturday and Sunday with the COA meeting Saturday. But while the meetings are being held at different locations in Winnipeg, there is to be a combined meeting some time Saturday to discuss Canada's future course concerning world hockey. Canada stunned followers of world hockey earlier this month by withdrawing from the 1970 world tournament because the International Ice Hockey Federation refused to ratify an earlier agreement to allow the use of professionals.

ROME (AP) — Italy has a new crop of athletes turned actors. It's all part of an effort by the Italian movie industry to cash in on the popularity of sports idols at a time when the box office is floundering but stadiums blooming. Middleweight boxing champion Nino Benvenuti says: "It is nothing unusual in the United States where they have Jim Brown, the football star, buy hugging Raquel Welch." Benvenuti, however, no longer plays football. Benvenuti, between his successful title defences against Don Fullmer in December, 1968, and Fraser Scott last October, starred a pistol and rode a horse in an Italian western titled Alive or Preferably Dead. Benvenuti stars opposite Italy's top cowboy actor, Giuliano Gemma. "I prefer boxing," says Benvenuti, "but acting is fun." For his debut as an actor he was reported to have received 70,000,000 lire or $112,000.

Craig Redmond, 4, of Kamloops, B.C., started his hockey career as a toddling two-year-old and if his father Harry has anything to do about it Craig will one day be a National Hockey League star. Want Junior to Be A Star? -- Rent Him His Own Arena!

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — If Harry Redmond has anything to do about it, Craig Redmond will one day be as much a household name for National Hockey League fans as Maurice Richard, Gordie Howe or Bobby Hull.

Many fathers who are avid sports fans have similar dreams for their sons but few go at it with the same dedication that Redmond does for his four-year-old son Craig.

Craig gets his own rented arena to practise in, and only the very best equipment. Last summer he attended the Banff School of Fine Arts for figure-skating lessons and followed that by attending sessions at the Glen Sather Hockey School.

Understandably, because of his age, Craig has a little trouble expressing his feelings about these activities and the future he seems to have ahead of him.

"I want to be a hockey player." is Craig's answer to it all.

It all started in 1967 when his uncle gave him a hockey stick and a puck when as a toddling two-year-old he was visiting his grandmother in High Prairie, Alta.

"We didn't think anything of it at the time as he was in love with other sports as well as hockey, such as football," says his mother, Norma, a pert, attractive blonde. "We just didn't realize until a year later that he was really interested in hockey."

To foster this growing love for the sport, the Redmonds last summer took their son 215 miles from this community in the interior of British Columbia to take the figure-skating lessons in Banff, Alta.

There was a problem at first of fitting Craig into the group, as everyone else enrolled in the school was more advanced and also at least four years older.

The director of the program solved the problem by agreeing to give the boy private skating time in the morning.

It was shortly after his figure-skating lessons that he enrolled in the Glen Sather school, run by Sather of the NHL's Boston Bruins. Craig began to be noticed.

Although not old enough to play with the other youngsters in the school, four-year-old Redmond was able to exercise with them—which meant skating, doing stops and starts, shooting and other hockey fundamentals.

Bobby Orr, Boston Bruin's all-star defenceman and an instructor at the school, noticed Craig, and the two of them appeared on a television show together.

Since then, his parents say, it has been a constant round of interviews.

The Redmonds would like to have their son playing organized minor hockey now, as they feel he is ready for a little ice time and fear any further delay will only hinder his development.

Minor hockey league officials have turned thumbs down on the idea, saying Craig is too young.

Undaunted, Redmond, who coaches a beginners' hockey team, went out and rented a Kamloops arena and now puts the boy through two skating sessions a week.

"We don't want people to think we are pushing him," said Redmond, "but we feel Craig is ready to play organized hockey, and holding him back may prove to be damaging.

"We don't want him to be a frustrated Tringe player though. If he is going to play, he has to be good. If not, he can quit right now."

And what does Craig think about all this?

"I want to play hockey," he says.

The Flying Fathers, a team of Roman Catholic priests from Ontario, Wednesday night defeated the Lahr Arrows hockey team which represents Canada's No. 1 air wing here.

The Fathers racked up an 8-7 win with Rev. Pete Vallely of St. Vincent de Paul Church, Toronto, getting three goals. Rev. Les Costello, team captain from Cobalt, Ont., and Rev. Bill Scanlon of Toronto got two apiece. Rev. William Murphy of Trenton got the other goal.

Arrows scorers were Rim Peterson, North Bay, Ont. and Ron Laughlin, Star City, Sask. with two goals each and Bill Picco, St. John's, Nfld., Sonny Burke, Amherst, N.S., and Rim Masson, Toronto, one apiece.

'Warhorse of Courts'

Pancho Hasn't Mellowed Much

NEW YORK (AP) —Pancho Gonzales' tennis may have mellowed with age, but not his disposition.

He still plays the game in anger.

"I get fired up every time I pick up a racket—sure, I still get sore if somebody breaks my concentration," the 41-year-old warhorse of the courts said as he awaited tonight's $10,000 winner-take-all match against world champion Rod Laver at Madison Square Garden.

Gonzales, his raven hair now streaked with gray, discussed in an interview his reputation as the terrible-tempered Mr. Bang of tennis.

"It's not really a correct image," he said. "In all of my years in tennis, I can't recall of ever having lost a match because I lost my poise and let my temper get away from me."

Pancho was reminded that in his amateur days and in his early days as a professional, when he was the world's best, he had been known to storm off the court in the midst of a match and go after a heckler in the stands.

"Only about three or four times," he said. "Always it was some drunk. When a spectator starts needling an athlete who is involved in a contest and who is concentrating deeply, the spectator must be ready to accept the consequences.

"I'd still go into the stands if some guy kept hurling insults at me."

Gonzales said he disagreed with those critics who contend that tennis players are prima donnas and should be no less susceptible to noise than baseball and football athletes.

"It's entirely different," Pancho said. "I don't think the tournament tennis players can be educated to accept noise while he's playing a point any more than a boxer can be taught to accept silence.

"Noise is great, but not until the point is played. It's the same in golf. A man making a crucial putt and in deep concentration needs silence. When the putt fails, let people scream all they want. It's good. "It's the same in tennis."

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market were mixed in active mid-morning trading today.

On index, industrials were up .57 to 183.44 and base metals .12 to 116.55. Golds were down .94 to 159.55 and western oils .77 to 218.67.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,000,000 shares compared with 1,019,000 at the same time Thursday.

Losers outnumbered gains 139 to 135 with 202 issues unchanged.

Crush International fell 1¼ to 12¼ on 17,330 shares after a brief trading halt at the opening to match orders.

A report from Ottawa said the sale of most citrus-flavored soft drinks will be banned in Canada by July unless manufacturers can devise new methods to flavor such drinks. Health Minister Munroe said Thursday that most citrus-flavored drinks sold in Canada contain up to 10 times the amount of brominated vegetable oils that Food and Drug Directorate have indicated are acceptable. He would not name brands affected.

Trading in Inspiration was halted at the opening at the company's request. The stock closed Thursday at 35 cents, down 8 cents.

The company is expected to make an announcement this weekend.

On index Thursday, industrials were up .19 to 183.42, Western oils lost .27 to 219.44, base metals .21 to 116.43 and golds .17 to 157.49.

The market opened with a small loss but reversed direction after the first hour.

On index, industrials were up .38 to 183.42, Western oils lost .27 to 219.44, base metals .21 to 116.43 and golds .17 to 157.49.

Trading which opened at an active pace slackened about mid-session, then picked up near the close.

Volume was 4,021,000 shares compared with 2,863,000 Wednesday.

Losers outnumbered gains 259 to 243 with 231 issues unchanged.

Electrohome was up ¼ to 37¼. Famous Players will sell its 49-per-cent interest in Central Ontario Television Ltd. and its 45-per-cent interest in Grand River Cable TV Ltd. to Electrohome for $3,700,000.

Famous Players was up ¼ to 13¾.

Jonsmith picked up one-half cent to 14 cents. Jonsmith shareholders at record Jan. 30 will be given the right to purchase one additional share at 15 cents for each five shares held. The rights expire Feb. 27.

Price dropped 1¼ to 15 although the company forecast higher annual earnings for 1969.

Toronto Deputy Chief Denies Upholsterer Shown Favoritism

TORONTO (CP) — Deputy Police Chief John Murray testified Thursday he had never torn up traffic summonses or shown favoritism to Phillip Wynn, a furniture upholsterer.

Wednesday, Conrad Baffo, who worked for Wynn 10 years ago, said Murray once torn up two speeding summonses for him at Wynn's request and told him that if he were ever caught again to get the policeman's number and pass it on to him via Wynn.

The public inquiry, which began Jan. 8, has been ordered by the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission to deal with allegations by former constable Peter Lett and Constable Jan Samuel that senior police officials interfered with charges against influential persons.

Murray testified he had never torn up a ticket. "I know the consequences. You'd just get a warrant."

He said that if a summons were torn up and ignored the police summons bureau would automatically issue another.

If it continued to be ignored, the warrant would grind on until the person named found he had been convicted and was faced with a warrant for his fine or arrest.

"I've exercised my discretion, Mr. Commissioner," he said, "and it always will as long as I'm on the job."

He said he showed Wynn no more consideration than he would anyone else.

Wilfred O'Connor, an accountant who worked for Wynn as a salesman - upholsterer - bookkeeper 10 years ago, said he recalled Baffo as a husky worker who never drove a truck while he worked for Wynn.

Baffo had testified his "friend" while he made deliveries.

Robert McFalls, a Chatham, Ont., lawyer, said the inquiry he was forced to dismiss a charge of drunk driving against John Ferguson Stein May 1, 1956 because the arresting constable failed to appear in court.

McFalls, a Crown attorney at the time, dismissed the charge, said Constable John Ballmer who made the arrest "indicated to me that he was told by his superiors that he was not to appear."

Constable Ballmer told the commission that Insp. Harry Fielding had said he was not to attend in court because Stein's case would be remanded.

But the inspector had not remembered telling him this and later had given him a blast for not attending, the constable said.

Stein, a tank manager, testified that after his arrest he had telephoned Deputy Chief Murray. Murray, he said, told him to ask for advice but did not ask him to interfere in the case.

Immunization as Substitute For the Pill Is Suggested

TORONTO (CP) — Research into contraceptive devices is swinging away from the pill, says Dr. Jack Wallers, president of the Ontario Medical Association and a director of the Canadian Medical Association.

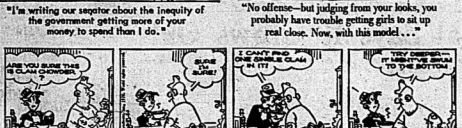
Dr. Wallers said Thursday that in the future a woman may be immunized against conception, perhaps for six months. Such immunization techniques now are being investigated at the University of Michigan.

As another choice, in future a woman may have available some form of test to tell when she is in her monthly cycle.

Present tests cannot tell a woman exactly when she is ovulating and able to become pregnant. Once she knows, she may abstain from intercourse for a few days.

The pill may have limited use in the future," Dr. Wallers told a news conference after he read a statement by the Canadian Medical Association committee. He said that there is no evidence the pill causes cancer of the breast or female reproductive organs.

MONTREAL (CP) — A contraceptive that is taken only once every six months is proving safe and effective in continued tests that now run to more than 18 months.



The only major drawback found so far among the 82 women participating in the test is erratic bleeding, from which nearly all of them suffer in the first year.

A report on the tests was submitted Thursday to the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons by Dr. G. D. Burtenev of the University of Ottawa and the Ottawa General Hospital.

The contraceptive, really a new wrinkle on an old drug, progestogen, which has long been used to treat a number of medical conditions and is a constituent of some but not all present birth control pills.

It is being administered by injection in the hip muscle in one large dose every 180 days.

Not one pregnancy has occurred among the 82 subjects, all of whom have several children. The average number of children in the group is 5.2.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Phobia Can Cause Severe Suffering

You may think the following letter is ridiculous, but I assure you that the one who suffers from phobia is not "just imagining things."

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am writing you now in desperation. I hope you will be able to tell me something that will help me to overcome my terrible obsession about infectious germs.

I get into a panic of fear if I come in contact with someone who nurses or works in a tuberculosis sanitarium. I am afraid they are carrying the germs.

Some months ago a relative was in a nursing home for a while. We were told later that the woman with whom she shared a room was found to be tubercular. Now I feel that whatever clothes I wore when we visited there must be contaminated.

When I am walking in town, I watch constantly that I do not step on cigarette stubs or spittum, and so carry the possible germs on my shoes. I also worry so much about coming in contact with the empty soft drink bottles in the grocery stores from which so many people drink these days. I feel sure that my groceries must be contaminated if the clerks have handled the bottles.

I'm sure you can see that I make my life miserable, and I hope and pray that you can help. I realize I am in a category all by myself. — Mrs. H.

Comment: I know how desperate and unhappy you must feel. If it makes you feel any better, you are not alone. Many thousands of otherwise healthy people suffer from various phobias.

Yours might fit into one of two categories: nosophobia (fear of all the symptoms you can think of); or misophobia (of contamination).

I make two suggestions. One is visit your family doctor to talk it over. Two, if he can't help, ask him to refer you to a psychiatrist.

There's no fun going along as you are. Phobias are hard to overcome, especially when we surrender prematurely.

For Mrs. Y.: Raynaud's disease is more common in women and produces abnormal blood vessel constriction. It is for this reason, for example, that in cold weather the patients hands seem to be drained and she describes her hands as being "dead white." Often, guarding against the cold and taking medicines which relax the blood vessels are sufficient to control this condition. More severe cases are helped by a sympathectomy operation.

For Mrs. U.: Your youngster's convulsions may be nothing much to worry about at all. One estimate is that 4 to 5 per cent of children during the first two or three years of life have them — and then disappear. As in your 1-year-old son, fever often initiates the attack. He may never have another. Convulsions are rare in

Strictly Personal
Name Changes Deplored

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Although it's a matter of no great moment, I was quietly pleased to learn that Florida's Cape Kennedy — whose name was changed from "Cape Canaveral" six years ago — is going to have its historic name restored by the U. S. Senate.

In a burst of great public patriotism — although he privately had no love for the Kennedy clan — President Johnson illegally changed the name to Cape Kennedy after the assassination of the President. Since Johnson had no power to rename geographical locations, the state's two senators have used a successful fight to redesignate this oldest known landmark on the U.S. Atlantic Coast.

The John F. Kennedy Space Centre on the Cape will retain that name as a memorial to the President, which is all that should have been done in the first place. For changes of old, place-names should not be lightly undertaken by a people or their government.

More than 20 years ago, in the case of place names, when Mayor LaGuardia of New York renamed Sixth Avenue "The Avenue of the Americas." But New Yorkers stubbornly refuse to accept this Fascistic term, and refer to it, and only out-of-towners and bus guides refer to it as "Avenue of the Americas," which is a dumb name.

Many foreign countries, such as France and Mexico, rename their streets and squares after famous men or the dates of great public events — but when a new regime comes to power, and history is revised, sometimes these nomenclatures become a national embarrassment.

Russia, of course, has named and renamed whole towns for transient political reasons. St. Petersburg became Petrograd, then Leningrad; Tsaritzyn was turned into Stalingrad, but now has become Volgograd, after Stalin fell from favor.

Toponymy, or the study of place names, is a respectable science in itself. It indicates that place names are not to be tampered with for political or patriotic reasons; people have a deep psychological stake in names which orient them in time and in the traditional space and time, and provide roots for a sense of loyalty, which cannot be changed by governmental edict.

In Paris, after the liberation, the Avenue du Marechal Petain became the Avenue de la Division LeClerc, and the Avenue de Vichy and the Avenue Victor Emmanuel III became the Avenue de New-York and Roosevelt. If a violently anti-American regime takes over in France, these great avenues will have to go. It is absurd, but a more so than changing Canaveral to Kennedy.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 24

Your birthday today: Your business in the coming year must be able to meet stiffer competition than ever to be supplanted with some additional advantage. You are promised more authority, greater responsibility, and dedicated people to help assist you both. Make further and more imaginative plans for long-range goals. Today's natives generally have very keen minds hidden beneath shyness or modesty. Abstract beauty seems more attractive than physical expression for many of them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The lighter and more frivolous your attitude, the better. Take the day off from being serious and clown a bit with the children. You are eligible for a party — find one or get one going yourself.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Lay aside all matters related to problems and revel in a pleasantly sociable weekend. Gather your friends and loved ones for a quiet evening of good fun.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Stay with the young in spirit today. Accept their terms, but avoid overloading your system with food and drink. The hours go into a long evening, so take a rest or a siesta somewhere midway.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): There is a symbolic meaning behind the events of the morning and a special reason why you visit you receive. Carry yourself with dignity and courtesy for the day, then follow your intuition for a much livelier evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Everything is pleasant enough, but misunderstandings drift in if you get nervous or start telling somebody for granted. Share sports and hobby interests with friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): A woman of rare insight may help you considerably. Be especially important to your work and happiness. Listen well; repress the urge to feud or get overly sensitive to your efforts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): A compliment brings cheerful chatter and a stroke of luck into your group. Window shop, but do not buy now. Organize your festivity for the evening, but avoid any pointed reference to the past and its tensions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 22): Critical friends offer stirring advice; disregard the rude or cross manner, look at the basic sense and be guided. Your own initiative is the only way anything will get done. No new ventures, however, — just the finer adjustments on already going projects.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Legal matters offer a confusing picture at the moment, but are mostly favorable over the long run. Go along with the status quo temporarily; let them pick the sport and the place. Have fun.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Discretion is the keyword for today, in all directions. Sensitive effort will bring surprisingly good results, mainly in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Some different views occur to you. They seem surprising or impossible, but a little checking shows that others are ahead of you, have examined the field and found the same ideas. The evening promises to be much happier.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Serious business is best forgotten today. Chores done early prepare the way for a midday break. Travel is most meaningful if it is merely sight-seeing, a search for beauty.

Arctic Hawks Harry Government on Arctic Sovereignty Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — The arctic hawks descended upon the government Thursday, urging a more vocal and forceful defence of sovereignty to protect northern resources.

A motion to concur in the report of the northern development committee, which rejects the government's low-key approach and urges "without delay" a clear declaration of northern sovereignty, didn't come to a vote.

If it had, the government would have had to vote in effect against its own position or face a split in party ranks. Eleven Liberal MPs were on the committee.

External Affairs Minister Sharp said forthcoming legislation on Arctic sovereignty will affirm control of "our national heritage." He said the government doesn't disagree with the northern affairs committee but prefers a different strategy.

But opposition spokesmen said the government's position suggested it has doubts about Canada's claims.

Wallace Nesbitt (Oxford), Conservative front-bencher who spoke after Mr. Sharp, delivered a sharp dig at the external affairs minister.

Mr. Nesbitt said the committee report simply states principles "which I am sure any Canadian, including members of the cabinet, should agree with." He emphasized Canadian.

Prime Minister Trudeau said last fall that the government feels the north can be protected by an international agreement to prevent arctic pollution.

However, Ian Watson (I—Lisgar), the committee chairman, said he is "totally convinced" Canada itself must exercise the control.

Mr. Watson said the international body that sets oil-spillage levels on the high seas is dominated by countries with a strong shipping lobby subservient to oil interests.

He said Humble Oil's 115,000-ton Ice Capadian caused a challenge to Canadian sovereignty last summer by entering the Northwest Passage without asking Canadian permission.

Mr. Watson said General Dynamics recently told Humble it can deliver six 175,000-ton super submarine tankers for arctic navigation.

"I have asked and ask now if this company has consulted with the Canadian government about the design of these vessels," Mr. Watson said. "I expect the answer is no."

The Liberal member said that if the motion came to a vote, he would vote for it. He said the government couldn't do otherwise without prejudicing Canada's case in any court of law.

Canada has a clear control over arctic shipping or face disaster in the arctic coastline.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said the Canada Shipping Act will be amended to toughen anti-pollution controls on Canada's coastlines, including those of the Arctic.

However, there was some question of how rigorously Canada could enforce them by inspecting foreign ships about to enter Canadian waters.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas both said Canada should declare at once its sovereignty, not only over the arctic islands but over the waters between.

"Canadians don't want another Alaska Panhandle," Mr. Douglas said, recalling the agreement that isolated northern British Columbia from the Pacific.

Mr. Stanfield said that each day of government silence "increases the conviction of other countries that Canada has doubts about her sovereignty in the north."

Almost all other speakers, including Mr. Watson and another Liberal, Paul St. Pierre (Coast Chilcotin), urged a strong and unequivocal government position.

One exception was Steve Otto (L—York East), who asked how Canada could enforce such a position if foreign vessels wanted to ignore it. He decried the tough line.

Bud Orange (L—Northwest Territories) asked how Canada could stop other nations from sailing in the Arctic. Mr. Orange said if the waters are not Canadian at the moment, steps should be taken to ensure that they become Canadian.

Mr. Douglas said there are compelling reasons for a clear and forthright statement on sovereignty.

One was that without it, Canada's claim to offshore oil resources might come into question.

Paul St. Pierre, the Liberal MP who began pressing the issue a year ago, said the Manhattan came back with a large hole in its hull despite the softest ice period in the Arctic for years.

Accidents involving two small Canadian oil barges also pointed up the real danger of pollution.

Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca), the northern committee vice-chairman, said the government had shown its disdain for committees by its reluctance to debate the report.

The report was completed Dec. 16 but a motion for concurrence wasn't made until this week, when Mr. Yewchuk took the step. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux created a precedent in allowing the move.

"Don't tell me, let me guess—you're speeding to Mother Goose's place for a yearly reunion."

Film Board Official Says It Grows Old

OTTAWA (CP) — In an ironic and devastating report, a senior public official has suggested the National Film Board is in trouble because it lacks a clear purpose, policy and priority and that it suffers, moreover, from advancing middle age.

The report was prepared by Andre Saumier, assistant deputy minister of regional and economic expansion following protests last month by NFB staff against cutbacks in employment.

Tabled in the Commons Thursday by Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, the report describes the board's method of selecting "surplus employees" as being without any particular rhyme or reason.

Noting that the government has no comprehensive cultural affairs policy, Mr. Saumier writes in his report that the board's senior management has been out of touch with "the mysterious workings of government in Ottawa" and allowed the federal austerity program to creep up unnoticed.

Government policy meant a freeze on the size of the federal grant to the film board. With its 1970-71 grant pegged at $18,000,000 the board is cutting back production to the 1964-65 level and last autumn announced the dismissal of 90 employees.

Mr. Pelletier told the Commons Thursday that a review of the dismissals has since cut the total by five and another 12 employees will be given 12-month termination notice rather than three-month notice.

At the same time, he said, Mr. Saumier's report indicates that the board "is not threatened with imminent paralysis, as certain persons have given to understand during the past few weeks."

In an interview later, an aide to Mr. Pelletier denied that the government is as deliberately sought to limit the development of the NFB or force it back into its original role as a national information agency. Far from being concerned about production of feature films by the board, she said, the government had almost nothing to do with it until December, 1969.

In view of the report, however, "a film policy will have to be formulated," she added.

CBC Erred At Expo

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC president George Davidson said Thursday the corporation went "badly astray" when it spent $148,000 in 1967 for accommodations at Expo 67 that were never used.

Mr. Davidson told the Commons public accounts committee the CBC had rented blocs of rooms at three hotels in Montreal for Expo, making "a substantial error in judgment" as to the number of personnel that would be involved in coverage.

The rooms were rented at the Motel Raphael, Motel des Nations and the Berkely-Colonnade.

In addition, the corporation spent $40,000 for rooms in other hotels, even though 40.7 per cent of the "bloc accommodation" was vacant during Expo.

Last Juror Chosen For Students' Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — The 12th and last juror in the conspiracy trial of 11 Trinidad students was selected Thursday from among more than 100 Montrealers picked up on the city's streets on the orders of Mr. Justice Kenneth MacKay of Court of Queen's Bench.

The operation, conducted by provincial police officers, was made necessary when the regular panel was exhausted after three days of selecting jurors.

As the trial enters its fifth day today, an all-male, all-white jury will hear opening testimony in the trial of 11 Negro students charged with taking part in the $2,000,000 computer-wrecking incident at Sir George Williams University last Feb. 11.

Selection of a jury was delayed by the defence exercising its legal right to reject 120 jury candidates without offering any reasons. Many were declared "partial" when they admitted they had already formed opinions about the case.

Nigeria Cracks Down On Pillaging Troops

Regular Army Units Move In

LAGOS (Reuters) — Troops of the federal 3rd Marine Commando Division have been withdrawn from Orlu province in occupied former Biafran territory, reliable sources said today.

The troops have been blamed for incidents of looting, rape and other excesses reported from the Orlu and Owerri sectors since the Biafran surrender.

Reports from the area today said the troops had been pulled back south of Orlu province and had been replaced by 1st and 2nd Division soldiers.

Military police were reported taking stern measures against troops caught molesting civilians or looting.

The 1st Division, considered the most highly disciplined unit of the Nigerian army, is composed of regular troops who were the core of the original Nigerian army before the civil war.

It was not immediately clear whether they were also replacing 3rd marine commandos in Owerri.

The reports said about 20 soldiers were rounded up in Owerri Wednesday and led away with their hands tied, under armed guard, to military cells.

In one case, an officer drew his pistol and aimed at a man caught looting, but he fled into the bush.

Waiting for Spring

Standing against a wintry landscape this Victoria Park elm seems a symbol of the times. It waits for spring, and the end to a harsh winter, which this week may have set a record for sustained temperature lows in the Quinte district. Last night — the second time in three nights — Belleville shivered at 19 degrees below zero.

Young Mother Dies In Bayside Mishap

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Provincial police today were seeking reasons for a two-car crash at Bayside last night that killed the mother of two young children and sent five other persons — including the woman's husband — to hospital.

Victim of the late-night mishap on Highway 2 was Mrs. Sharon Hebert, 26, of RR 3 Belleville.

Mrs. Hebert, who leaves two daughters aged two years and three months, was with her husband and a friend in the Hebert car when it collided broadside with an oncoming automobile, say police.

Rheal Hebert, 34, is in Trenton Memorial Hospital with fractured chest and vertebrae. Donald Johnson, Frankford, suffered head injuries and was transferred to hospital at Kingston.

Three women were in the second car, driven by Mrs. Margarette Guernsey, of Picton.

Mrs. Guernsey was transferred to Kingston for treatment of head injuries.

Mrs. Joan Hyatt, Bloomfield, and Mrs. Kathleen Mensink, RR 1 Bloomfield, suffered lacerations. Mrs. Mensink was later released from hospital, said police.

The mishap occurred shortly after the Heberts left their home to drive Mr. Johnson to Frankford, say police, leaving Mr. Hebert's teenage brother babysitting the children.

Officers said they were not sure who was driving the Hebert car at the time of the impact, which wrecked the vehicle.

Mrs. Hebert died after arrival at Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Peking May Seek Summit Parley

HONG KONG (AP) — The Hong Kong Star says Peking is considering whether to upgrade ambassador talks with the United States into a summit conference to settle the Vietnam problem and China's relations with the U.S. in the Far East.

The paper quotes unidentified "China sources" as saying that the full politburo of the Chinese Communist party has discussed such a proposal.

The paper's sources say Chairman Mao Tse-tung took a neutral stand during the discussions and promised he would consider the proposal in the light of the progress of the talks.

ministration-backed measure to overhaul federal narcotics laws.

The drug bill sharply reduces penalties for the possession or use of marijuana, heroin and other narcotics, while providing stiffer sentences for pushers and traffickers in illegal drugs.

Democratic Majority Leader Mike Mansfield moved to take up the drug bill after the Senate passed the organized crime control measure by a 72-to-1 vote despite scattered protests that some of its provisions endanger individual rights.

The crime bill will bring federal enforcement powers directly to bear on illegal gambling, a major source of revenues for the Mafia and other underworld cartels.

Large-scale illicit gambling enterprises would be made a federal crime. These are defined as involving five or more persons, being in operation for more than 30 days, and having a gross take of $2,000 or more in any one day.

Munro Promises Aid To Recreation Drive

GUELPH (CP) — Health Minister John Munro said Friday the government would eagerly support a program involving communities more closely in recreational activities.

Speaking at a physical education seminar sponsored by the University of Guelph, the minister said he would like to see professional physical education and recreation personnel take charge of a movement to enable more Canadians to take advantage of recreational facilities.

He said the government will try to broaden its definition of recreation as a means of increasing its support of such programs.

Mr. Munro said his department is studying and reassessing its program of physical fitness research.

Winter's Grip Relaxes Today

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

It's 55 more days to spring - - - but the Quinte area may get a preview of its mildness starting today.

Not that it'll be exactly springtime. But it may well feel that way after the grinding cold spell of the past week.

The worst winter spell in decades is being lifted by warmer air after driving a final frosty spike into area thermometers last night.

In Belleville, temperatures plummeted to 19 degrees below zero early this morning.

CFB Trenton weather office recorded a low of 18 degrees below. At Tweed it was 29 below.

In Belleville the low was the same as Wednesday night — the coldest of the year in the Quinte area.

The warming trend is on its way from the west, reported the Trenton weatherman today.

Clouds will insulate the region later in the day, bringing snow — and higher temperatures.

The low tonight is forecast at 10 above and Sunday's high about 26 above.

And springtime? It's officially due here March 20.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Late today and Saturday night should see a break in the cold spell as much milder weather over the west pushes into southern Ontario. Cloudiness and some snow are expected along with the milder weather in various sections of the province today and Sunday.

Egyptians Bomb Oasis

TEL AVIV (AP) —Egyptian warplanes made their deepest penetration into the Israeli-occupied Sinai desert since the 1967 Middle East war in a bombing attack Friday night on the oasis town of El Arish.

An Arab woman and a 17-year-old boy were wounded in the raid just before midnight, the Israeli military command said.

Four houses also were damaged. But Israeli military installations and encampments escaped damage and no soldiers were wounded, a spokesman said.

Only one plane was involved in the attack, the Israelis said.

It Was Oil War And France Lost

PORT HARCOURT, Nigeria (AP) — From the squall of diarrhea-withered babies on the clinic floor, an American oil worker selected a scale-covered infant, washed it gently with surgical soap and handed it to his Scottish buddy for towelling.

"Here, Teddy, watch this one," he warned. "It may be a gusher."

Foreign oil workers brought to this refinery town to get Nigeria's oil flowing again after 2½ years of war are spending off-duty hours helping doctors and nurses care for 600 Ibo babies rushed to an abandoned maternity clinic here from vanquished Biafra.

The oil men, mostly British and American, see little chance of getting back into full production before summer although they hope the refineries will be in operation again by late April. The original target date was February.

"The Ibos were very clever," said one engineer. "They didn't destroy the refineries. In case they got back, but they left with the coupling joint that connects the pump with the machinery. It's one of the most difficult parts to replace."

Most of the inland fields in the swampy Niger delta are leased by Nigeria for drilling to Shell BP Anglo-Dutch Co. The offshore rigs, glowing at night against a background of tall palm trees belong to Mobil and Gulf.

Safrap, the French company, had small leases in the tiny enclave that was Biafra. Their future is undetermined.

"Don't kid yourself why Harold Wilson's government helped Nigeria," said a Northern Irish roustabout. "This was an oil war and the French lost."

Nuclear Pact Soon Operative

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Soviet Union have agreed tentatively on early ratification of the treaty for their final step in joining the treaty to outlaw the spread of nuclear weapons.

U.S. officials said diplomatic efforts also are under way to secure similar action by enough other countries to bring the treaty into force at the same time.

The treaty's terms provide that it goes into effect when joined by 40 countries in addition to the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union.

The final step in joining such an international accord is a legal procedure called deposit of the instrument of ratification. The deposit of this piece of paper officially commits a country to the treaty.

So far Britain and 25 non-nuclear states have deposited their instruments of ratification of the nonproliferation treaty. That leaves 15 to go, plus the United States and Russia, to bring the pact into force.

Potential $32,000 Deficit

City Agencies Face Cutback If More Funds Not Found

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleviliians will have to dig deeper into their pockets in the future if the 13 United Appeal agencies are to continue to function.

Shortage of funds for operation of the social services was underscored on Saturday by city council by directors of United Community Services at a closed session in city hall.

UCS, as the supervisor agency of the United Appeal faces an accumulated deficit which could total $32,000 by the end of 1970 — a deficit incurred largely by trying to meet agency needs in past years by borrowing on future campaign proceeds.

The United Community Services is a city initiated organization which has two primary functions, one to organize and run the United Appeal campaign and the second to operate the city's social planning program.

Magr. J. P. Sullivan, chairman of United Community Services, prompted the draft, financial information session men and about 40 representatives of member agencies at an "information meeting."

At the end of 1969, UCS had an accumulated deficit of about $18,000, accumulated over the years by "trying to keep agencies going by borrowing on the next year's campaign proceeds," he said.

Complicating the financial situation is the UCS offer to double the city grant in 1969. The city had given from $8,000 to $10,000. A year to UCS, but the organization did not seek the grant last year because it was operating for the first time without a paid director.

As part of the potential deficit, the chairman said this morning, will be a $13,506 amount built up this year — the amount by which the October United Appeal campaign was undersubscribed.

The campaign objective was $125,000, but only $113,000 was raised in cash and pledges.

"And every year the number of unfilled pledges seems to increase", Magr. Sullivan commented.

As a result, each of the 13 member agencies of United Community Services can expect to receive only 73 per cent of their promised allocation of funds this year unless remedial steps are found.

"In my opinion, the agencies can't carry on their programs for 1970 with only 73 per cent of their budgets, Magr. Sullivan declared.

The future of UCS rests with city council and the people of the community, the chairman indicated.

"I'm the city interested in social planning and marshalling all the volunteers who have contributed their services in the past?" he asked.

Mayor J. Reid Scott, re-joined in the affirmative this morning.

"I feel that if United Community Services was needed in 1965 (the year of its institution) it is needed more now, and needed in the future, as the city grows. This work must be kept going.

"There was no announcement of funds", he asserted. "The agencies needed 1970 budget quotas that they were allocated to operate, and although campaigns are disheartened they were given more by the device of borrowing on next year's expected campaign proceeds."

Mayor Scott said four solutions were discussed at yesterday's meeting.

They were abandonment of UCS, which the mayor personally voices; a mini appeal in the spring to make up the deficit in last fall's subscription; the cutting down or elimination of allocations to some of the member agencies; and the advancing of funds from the city to UCS this year.

"We need a full time, professional director", added the mayor. "If he is an expert on campaign collecting, he can pay for himself."

"This is just as much a Quinte area service and concern as it is a city concern", Mayor Scott added. "Several agencies extend their services outside the city limits. They can't be totally subsidized by the city of Belleville."

He cited the Victorian Order of Nurses, Children's Aid Society as far as finding the Boy Scouts and the Belleville Public Library as agencies from far as Trenton.

Participating agencies in United Community Services were: Belleville Family YMCA, Council, Girls Scouts Association, Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children, Canadian Society of Canada, Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Canadian Red Cross Society, Canadian Welfare Council, Crippled Children Committee, Navy League of Canada, Ontario Welfare Council Inc., St. John Ambulance Association and the VON.

Stage Replaces Lecture Room

Participation in theatre offers distinctive benefits for youth, the opening of a weekend conference on youtheatre was told today.

In a sense, the stage replaces the educational lecture platform, Ernst Kneisel, Belleville Theatre Guild president told the opening session of the conference which has drawn participants from around Eastern Ontario.

An active role in theatre provides its participants with "some insight into life," said Mr. Kneisel.

"If a picture is worth a thousand words, I think a dramatic performance is worth a thousand lectures in sociology, psychology, philosophy . . ."

Close to 80 adults and young people had registered by noon this morning for the two - day conference, sponsored by the Guild and the Eastern Ontario Drama League.

Immediately after the opening remarks in the Guild's Parnaso Playhouse, the conference divided into groups to discuss various aspects of youtheatre.

Adults were scheduled to talk a wide range of topics, from organization to theatre programming.

Youth group activities include classes in characterization, concentration and rehearsal techniques.

Social events scheduled for the conference had a smash-hit start last night. More than 1,200 turned out to participate at the Miss Teen Festival in the city's armory.

Tonight's highlight social event will be a cabaret in the Hotel Quinte's Pinnacle Room.

A youth theatre art exhibition — featuring costumes, set and design displays — also is open to public viewing at Corby Public Library.

Waiting their turn are guest lecturers who will conduct two-day series of seminars, workshops on youth and drama.

Oshawa Firm Wins Contract

An Oshawa firm has won a $284,000 contract for air-conditioning Belleville's federal building.

Lowest of three bids submitted on the project was made by H. R. Stark Ltd., the federal public works department has announced.

Highest bid was $296,000.

The installation is expected to take eight months and is scheduled for operation by summer, 1971.

Plans and specifications for the project were prepared by Watson and Wiegard, Belleville architects.

Moira Blues Festival Draws Crowd To Start Youtheatre Weekend

The Belleville Theatre Guild has entered the rock music promotion business, even if only temporarily, with success being the key word in its first effort.

The Moira Riverbottom Blues Festival began at eight p.m. last night — the first event in an Eastern Ontario Drama League youth conference this weekend — and by the time 12.45 a.m. rolled around, 1,200 rock fans had passed through the entrance.

The festival, co-ordinated and run by the Theatre Guild's youtheatre segment, saw four bands play one-hour sets and members of two of these groups, Bill the Lizard and Two-Minute Hate participate in a short improvisational session after midnight.

Whiskey Howl, featured blues group on the festival bill; came through as expected and was the best-received group of the night.

The five-man band featuring Gary Penner, bass guitar; Wayne Wilson, drums; John Bjarnason, harmonica; John Wilber, vocals; and Peter Boyko, lead guitar, showed the Belleville audience why they are considered by many the best blues musicians in Canada and why they received a standing ovation when they played with blues impressario, Johnny Winter, last year.

Their numbers expressed an original blues styling and, in particular, blues harmonists notes that were fresh and totally different. In one case two harmonicas were used in harmony.

Also outstanding was Damage (formerly Milkwood), which displayed surprising competence after just two days of practice together.

Louis Mckelvey, lead guitarist, and Jack Geisinger, bassgancer that damage was sist, explained to The Intelligencer that an interim set-up for them while they await the commencement of recording their second album for Polydor Records.

For Two-Minute Hate, it was the second trip to Belleville in the space of just over three weeks. And although they had been seen just recently reaction was still good.

Their rendition of Morning Dew was probably their best number of the night.

Bill the Lizard represented Belleville's groups at the festival, offering a number of new songs, some of them original compositions, since their last Belleville appearance.

Outstanding among their newly-written songs was a boogie that opened their set and risque - sounding tune entitled Redbird.

Although security police hired for the festival had telephoned just hours before the event, they would not be on hand there were no disturbances.

"It was too late for us to obtain replacements, so we announced to the audience that they would have to prove to the older people here that they didn't need that type of supervision. And they didn't."

Man Dies In Hospital From Burns

MADOC — Funeral services were held at Perth Thursday for Murray Norris, 42, who suffered severe burns when his Quonadoro Home was gutted by fire Jan. 11.

Mr. Norris, resident here for the past two years and employed in the village's liquor store, received burns to 100 per cent of his body.

He was pulled from the burning house by his daughter Susan, 18, who escaped injury with her three-year-old brother, Troy.

Taken to Belleville General Hospital he was transferred to Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston the same day.

Mr. Norris died Wednesday - 10 days after the fire.

Weldon Sentenced

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Russell Andrew Weldon, 41, was given an eight-year sentence Friday by Ontario Supreme Court Justice Edwin Thompson after he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of manslaughter.

Weldon had originally pleaded not guilty to a charge of non-capital murder in the Oct. 21 death of George Lawrence Cook, 51, of Murray Township.

Police found Cook lying in a pool of blood after apparently being beaten with a sledgehammer when they went to his home to investigate the reported theft of a truck.

Schools Take Over

Driving Starts with Kindergarten Safety

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Learning how to cross streets safely in kindergarten is the first step towards producing competent young drivers at 16.

The first step, and the second, learning to drive a bicycle, have been in the hands of the city police and its safety officer, Robert Hall, for some years.

But the final step, actually learning how to manoeuvre a car safely and seriously through all driving situations, is rapidly becoming the responsibility of the secondary schools.

Whether this should be the case is now a matter of debate, it seems.

"Since the automobile is a fundamental fact of this society," says Clint O'Neill, department of education officer in charge of driver training courses in Ontario schools, "one might deduce that the wise use of the automobile should be a function of education."

But the men on the spot, the principals, have misgivings.

"Formal, academic instruction is our reason for being," runs their argument. "How can we juggle regular classroom work and the extras like driver education into a standard timetable?"

They ask if the demand for driver education in the schools is "is not another case of parents abdicating their responsibilities?" Then they come full circle and return to the starting point by reacting with horror at the thought of some parents training a second generation of highway maniacs.

About 150 16-year-olds will graduate this year from driver education courses in the four Hastings secondary schools. The course is also offered at Madoc and Bancroft schools. In addition, Moira Secondary gives all male two-year occupations students driver education before they leave school.

Driver education is one "frill" that trustees usually support — probably because the look of such training in the past is apparent to them every day out the back door.

Trustee Donald Williams of Tweed, the board's first meeting this year, agreed that the program be extended if necessary, to ensure that all students who want the training could get it. He also questioned if 16-year-olds holding driver training at the end of regular school hours, making it inconvenient for rural students, who must take buses at 4 p.m., to enrol in the course.

He suggested that practice cars be stationed in outlying areas "such as Shirley and Frankford so that rural students could take driver training close to their homes.

"The Ontario Provincial Police, driver examination branch, say that if that is so, we should be providing it," he told the board.

The maximum number of students that can be handled in about 10 days each car for each half-year. The schools run two courses a year — one now ending and another going on in the fall and by the end of January.

The course includes 25 hours of classroom instruction with the stress on proper attitudes, 10 hours behind the wheel of a car and a further 12 hours in the car, observing fellow students as they do their practice driving.

Despite rumors of long waiting lists and refusal of applicants because of a shortage of teachers, Belleville principals say they are able to handle most of the requests for driver training.

J. C. Sterling, superintendent of curriculum for the Hastings board, says shortage of teachers limits the number of students each school can handle.

All driving instructors must take a two-week summer course and pass department of transport licencing exams.

The board has hired instructors from commercial driving schools to handle the practice driving session when qualified teachers are in short supply.

The cost of graduating one student driver varies between $90 and $75, depending upon the number enrolled. Of this, each student pays $30.

Cars come at no cost to the board — local dealers donate them to the schools for a year, then recall them and sell them as demonstrators.

The board's costs must cover $5c. oil, maintenance, licences and instructors at $4 an hour.

Total cost of driver educations to the board will probably amount to a maximum of $9,900 this year, if expenses reach the limit of 5 pupil level.

Adding to the popularity of driver education with parents is the insurance premium rebate on public liability, property damage and collision, granted to graduates of an approved secondary school driving course. Young people between 16 and 25 get a 10 per cent cut in their insurance premiums if they show evidence of successful completion of the course.

As yet, no public demand has arisen for enlargement of the department of transport approved course — a motorcycle training program.

Tryout Behind the Wheel

Marilynne Dean, a driver education student at Centennial Secondary School, begins her practical work behind the wheel, while fellow student Donna Parkhurst looks on. They are among the class of 24 who are beginning the second course in driving offered this year at Centennial and all other Hastings County secondary schools.

Alternate Route Sought To Barcovan Beach Road

WOOLER — Murray Township council has agreed to study the feasibility of reconstructing a half mile section of the Power Line Road which has been closed for over 30 years.

The Federal Transport committee presented the proposal to Murray Council in a letter, after consultation with both the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways.

Purpose of the reconstruction would be to provide an alternate route for traffic and allow the closure of Barcovan Beach Road at the joint CN-CP level crossing, just south of Highway 2.

Advantages of the closure of Barcovan Beach Road were cited as the elimination of a level crossing and a saving of approximately $45,000. This is the estimated cost for erecting a railway crossing light and gate warning system at the present level crossing on Barcovan Beach Road.

Murray council decided to see if the three authorities (CNR., CPR. Transport Committee) would underwrite the major proportion of the cost of reconstructing the half mile of Power Line Road between concessions A and B of Murray township.

All seven Murray Township road employees received a 40 cent an hour hike in their present salary negotiations which were revealed at Friday night's regular council session.

Grader operators and equipment maintenance men will now earn $2.50 per hour while truck operatorss will receive $2.40 per hour.

Money was the major factor in the negotiations and fringe benefits will be approximately the same as last year.

In other business transactions, council hired Dunwoody and Co. Chartered Accountants as Murray Township auditors. Reeve Harry Lafferty said that no term was specified in the contract.

The Lower Trent Valley Conservation Authority asked council, by means of letter, if the township had any land available for sale, particularly in the region of Wilson's Island in northern Murray.

Council's reply was that a list would be sent to the conservation authority after land appraisals were carried out this spring when the snow was gone.

However council decided it would make no special deals with the authority and that the authority must compete with other bidders in any land sale.

Deseronto Ponders Its Fate

DESERONTO — Boundary lines should be redrawn to include Deseronto within the jurisdiction of the Lennox and Addington County board of education, local councillor Jack Layfield claimed this week.

He charged that the town is a "forgotten and ignored pocket" and its representation on Hastings county board is inadequate.

As far as Hastings is concerned, Deseronto exists only as a bit of a problem, a poor relation," he said. "Deseronto is cut off from expansion on three sides: by the Tyendinaga Reserve, by the Bay of Quinte and by the boundary line between Hastings and Lennox and Addington counties.

Mr. Layfield, Deseronto's representative on the Napanee district secondary school board in 1967-68, said the town's representation on the Hastings board is inadequate.

It's representative, Harrison Gunning of Tweed, has to represent five areas: Deseronto, Tyendinag, Hungerford, Huntington and Tweed.

"He thought so little of us that he did not come to Deseronto during the election campaign." Mr. Layfield said.

More than 100 Deseronto secondary students attend Napanee District Secondary School under an arrangement by which the Hastings board buys education for them from the Lennox and Addington Board.

Mr. Layfield told town council he fears that "through expansion or whatever" Deseronto students might in the future be excluded from the Napanee school and sent back to Hastings county.

To ensure their remaining in the Napanee school he believes the boundary lines should be redrawn to put Deseronto into the Lennox and Addington school area.

The department of education will consider changes in boundary area in June, said Mr. Layfield. If town council decided it wants a change, it will have to pass a resolution and forward it to the department of education in Toronto.

A liaison committee under the chairmanship of trustee Macdonald Smith has been set up by the Hastings county board to examine, among other things, the present board boundary lines.

Board chairman James Clark said this morning the Deseronto situation would be one of the first things looked into, and Mr. Smith will probably initiate discussion with town officials soon.

"In the bill setting up county boards of education, no boundary changes are permitted before 1971," he noted "All boards in Ontario will be examining the situation."

Mr. Layfield's comments were not restricted to education.

"Deseronto would be much better off out of Hastings, period," Mr. Layfield said.

Deseronto people are more closely associated with Napanee than any place in Hastings, he claims.

Regional government could throw Hastings and Lennox and Addington together in one big region, he added, putting schools in both areas under one administration.

Mr. Layfields asked town councillors to consider the suggestion. It will be discussed further Jan. 29 at a committee of the whole session and settled before the budget for 1970 is brought down.

Safety Course For Hunters

TRENTON — A two-night hunters' safety course will be offered in Trenton this coming week.

Instruction classes will be held in the court room above the Trenton police station Tuesday and Thursday between 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Students must attend both nights in order to qualify for course certification.

Santa Claus Parade Committee Picks Date

A bigger and better Santa Claus parade is in the works for 1970, according to organizers.

At a meeting held this week at EMO headquarters, interested Bellevillians met to elect a new parade committee executive to initiate and organize plans for the annual event.

Chairman is Frank Foley, vice-chairman, John Lewars, secretary, Peter Richardson, and Les Shore will be treasurer.

The primary reason for organizing early in the new year, said one official, was to ensure that the new committees had ample time to carry out their functions prior to the parade date.

Many of those attending the meeting signified their willingness to work on the project and volunteered for work on specific committees.

The date for the parade has been set for Saturday, Dec. 5. Organizers extended the invitation to citizens in Belleville and district to participate in the planning of the parade.

South Marysburg Still Seeks Mutual Fire Aid

PICTON — South Marysburg reeve Allen Ralley said today that an open community meeting conducted last night in the township hall, focused on discussion of alternate plans for fire protection.

"With Sophiasburg township turning down the proposed (fire protection) agreement with Picton we were lost and had to invent our discussions," said the reeve.

Because of Sophiasburg's withdrawal a proposed fire protection agreement between Picton and four neighboring townships became a financial impossibility for the remaining municipalities.

Although no decisions were reached at the meeting, Reeve Ralley says he's convinced that municipal fire protection is urgently needed in the area — and perhaps, can still be achieved.

He referred to the possibility of a mutual aid with the reeves of Athol and North Marysburg to further consider a fire protection plan.

Labels Indicate the Quality of the Goods

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Labels mean everything, they encompass quality, and of course, a certain standard.

And it is the maintenance of this standard that is of prime importance, for the consumer, as well as the producer. One body that acts as a guardian is the department of agriculture's fruit and vegetable division which must insure this "standard" status quo.

Tucked away on the second floor of the Federal Building, the division is primarily interested in ensuring that the grades of more than 25 fresh fruits and vegetables are up to par, whether locally grown or an imported crop.

Although almost all actual grading is completed by the producer or packer, division inspectors must make certain that the grade standards established are adhered to as closely as possible.

"Our inspectors check and certify that the grade stamped on the package meets the necessary requirements, and it is in this certification where the bulk of their work is concentrated", explained supervising inspector C. J. Shannon.

"However, it is essential to realize that for each commodity the criterion differs, as does the tolerance limit for defects."

It is through the grade system that the division strives for the uniformity needed to promote the sales of agricultural products, while at the same time acting to protect the public health and regulate trade.

"When it comes to establishing a grade for products the primary producer organizations usually work to assist us in setting them up," said Mr. Shannon.

"This is true in every area where a particular crop is dominant, and it works to assist us in our efforts to maintain grade standards".

The greatest percentage of inspection takes place at the packing house, where inspectors pick random samples of the product. Regular inspections are made on shipment of fresh fruits and vegetables entering or leaving the country, or the province.

Mr. Shannon pinpointed the general characteristics of a routine inspection.

"Primarily, we look at the color of the product, amount of waste involved, packaging and the general look — all of which must fall within the various tolerances set up."

The division is also responsible for the classification of processed foods, such as honey, maple products and canned goods.

"Every canned fruit and vegetable processor is registered with the department of agriculture, and each receives a regular visit from one of our inspectors," said the inspector.

Usually during each visit random samples of the canned goods are picked up, and then transported to division laboratories for testing.

"At the laboratory, the contents of each can are checked for the correct weight, as well as condition and appearance.

The processor, in turn, receives a complete record of the results of the inspection, and whether any adjustments must be made.

Division inspectors also do spot checking in retail and wholesale outlets, to ensure that grade standards are maintained.

The division has established, and works to maintain grade standards for some 100 canned, frozen and dehydrated fruits and vegetable products, in addition to honey and maple products.

"One of our prime purposes is to recommend procedural techniques to isolate and eliminate the cause of processing defects. We operate 13 grading laboratories across Canada where samples of products are graded and tested," Mr. Shannon said.

"We are interested not only in maintaining the high grade standards, but insuring uniformity in grading, in both processed and fresh products, and in so doing providing the consumers with quality and safe foods," he concluded.

Siberian Visit

Well it has been cold out there, but what is 20 below zero compared with the 96 below reputed to be the world record — in Siberia. We have also heard mentioned a figure of more than 100 below in that region, but do a few degrees make any difference?

Certainly Raphael Green's fascinating film of Siberia, in the Trenton Kiwanis Club's current series, was illuminating, although not from a standpoint of winter. For that we must rely on our recollections of the scenes in Dr. Zhivago — and anyway they were filmed not in Russia but in Finland and yes, right here in Canada.

Made during the spring and summer seasons, Mr. Green's film showed many facets of Soviet life, from apartment construction (both good and bad), and people and traffic in downtown Moscow and other cities, to the arts (ballet and theatre) and the Russians at play (beaches, bikinis and all).

The film was uncensored, a fact Mr. Green explained in part by his young interpreter's "weakness" for sleep and for girls. Thus while "Peter" (not his real name) was asleep or pursuing the fair sex, Mr. Green took more film than he might ordinarily have been permitted. As it was, none of it was of a particularly classified nature, other than military trucks near the Chinese border.

Even so, the American visitor underwent an uneasy three hours in Vladivostok — at the end of his seven-day trip on the Trans-Siberian railway — being questioned by police, a situation from which the former Major high school teacher and U.S. government official finally extricated himself.

In Moscow earlier, there had been a misunderstanding with his 17-year-old girl interpreter who knew only one meaning for the word "shoot," when Mr. Green told her he would like to shoot Red Square and even some of the people inside the walls of the Kremlin. Later they joked about it.

Mr. Green has been in Siberia three times and his film also included scenes of Lake Baikal which at 140 miles long, 46 miles wide and some 5,000 feet deep covers an area as large as the entire Great Lakes region on this continent, as well as majestic mountain country.

One way he found useful to make contact with ordinary Russians was to film flowers in city parks; people would approach him and talk. Thus he learned for example that the Chinese are not too popular as neighbours, and there were conversations with workers and officials on collective farms, and with small boys who asked if it were true there were "graveyards" for cars in America, and officials at a camp for the Young Pioneers, rather like the Boy Scouts only with political overtones; and an attractive group of boys and girls they were too, enjoying the outdoors.

It was a remarkable film, of a region seen by few westerners, and all the more interesting for Mr. Green's dry New England humor.

Breathing Space

Canadian National Railways staff threatened with transfer from Belleville to Montreal have been given a reprieve, or a temporary one at least.

Railway officials say a further study of regional boundaries is being made. This suggests that if a move is to be made then it may be to some more appropriate centre in this area of the province, rather than in Quebec where political and language problems could cause difficulties.

Officials say political pressure did not enter into it (an explanation which in the circumstances seems hardly credible), but in any event a decision had been postponed until September. It gives the local staff breathing space at least.

A Fortunate People

We Canadians are a fortunate people. We don't have to let our children starve as in Biafra, we don't have a government like that in Iraq which is busy executing people accused of plotting against the regime, and our public figures run little risk of suffering a fate like that of U.S. union official Joseph Yablonski, shot dead in his bed last New Year's eve along with his wife and daughter. Three men have been arrested and charged with the latter slayings, two of the men have criminal records. But there is no reason for us to be complacent — we must work to maintain our political freedom and our largely law-abiding society.

Post Office Crown Corporation
Will It Mean Efficiency—Or Bureaucracy?

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Look what Communications Minister Eric Kierans is doing to the Post Office now.

Putting it in the hands of a whole new team of top industrial, financial and commercial management men.

He is already on record with the proposal to change the whole old postal service from being just another federal government department into a keen new crown corporation.

Eric Kierans, who prefers to be known as communications minister rather than postmaster general — actually, he is both, wearing two administrative hats — has warned that unless some solid business sense infiltrates bureaucratic thinking in the Post Office, the first class letter rate in a few years could soar from the current six to 25 cents or higher.

Being the cabinet's - man - in - a - hurry, more infiltration of the business syndrome is not fast enough for "Electric Eric," so he is giving the Post Office the shock treatment with his new management team taking it by storm.

The dreams of the PO as a money - spinner, like Polymer, with a gleaming corporate image like Air Canada, a sort of pimp model of federal crown corporations.

By the time his new breed of management - mandarins has completed its occupation of the place, he will have installed some 80 of these new executives, many of them from the executive suites of business and industry.

For this type of management talent he is paying an average annual $30,000.

And this has to mean that somehow he has managed to sell these executives on the intangible rewards — self-fulfilment, satisfaction and the feeling of accomplishment — of public service. They can not all be joining the new Kierans go-go postal team for the money, because in almost all cases, private enterprise, at least at these heady elevations, does better in the salary department.

The immediate apparent difference between these business boffins and the senior civil service administrative types found in almost all other government departments is that they never had to work their way up the ranges of the bureaucratic seniority ladder.

With a hand up from Eric Kierans, they are making it to the top in one giant jump.

The long-term difference in the two types — the stylized civil service Mandarin of the federal bureaucracy and the executive from the command posts of business and industry — should be in the performance of the Post Office. Or that is what Eric Kierans hopes.

What he has going for him most, probably is the conviction that the Post Office has no place to go but up.

In recent years it has become the unwanted child in the government's family of public services.

Parliament, the public and Eric Kierans himself have cuffed it around for its clumsy inefficiency, its poor labor relations and its awkward handling of the mail service.

Kierans lamenting that it gives less attention to its more money has seemed to have wanted to discern it, changing both the organization and its own title. Communications, both ministry and department sounds as if they move sloppy than postal service.

So who are the men who must have the magic touch to turn the whole new gleamingly efficient mail service?

Among the Nun ribbon band from the bustless world, for starters, are:

Gordon Sinclair, in command of administrative and financial reorganization at the Post Office, brought in from Massey Ferguson where he was executive assistant to the vice-president in charge of finance.

Arthur Bourgneuf, recruited from the Canadian Pacific Railways as director of corporate accounts.

Garth Campbell, the new senior postal marketing executive, enlisted from the Canadian National Railways where he was director of sales and passenger sales and service.

Gordon Wayte, hired from the executive staff of Imperial Oil and Chemical and the St. Lawrence Corporation to lead up Post Office transportation operations.

Harold Rightsdale, senior productivity supervisor at the T. Eaton Company, now assigned to "development of programs for people and systems" at postal services.

Edward Churchill, the dynamo of Dupont of Canada and more recently of Brinco, now in charge of rebuilding the entire postal engineering system.

John MacKay who left the presidency of International Telephone and Telegraph (Canada) Limited to direct postal service in the department's mail-swamped Central Canada district.

There are more, and more are to come.

Why management hot-shots like these in the posts of postal commissioner, something good, finally, has to happen to Eric Kierans and the mail service.

Fashion or Warmth?
Hair, Clothing and Winter

Owen Sound Sun-Times

Men have not realized that, as long as the head is warm, then one does not feel the cold. It's a splendid thing to know these bitter cold days. The female sex, particularly the younger members, are fully aware of it. And they put it into practice.

At the same time, the girls wear big furry hats, fastened below the chin, completely covering their heads, part of their faces and necks. This in addition to long flowing hair. It all adds up to a quite snug situation. Many add to it with long scarves, which they wind about their necks and often up over the face.

In this manner it does not matter that their lower bodies are pretty well bare, except for a thin webb of nylon, including a goodly portion of their thighs. Their heads are warm, no doubt. It may seem a bit strange that their legs get brilliant red, as they are quite cold. There are some, of course, who have long coats, right down to the pavements. But they are generally allowed to flap open to reveal the long lengths of leg beneath. Some of those legs, by the way, are rather skinny, others quite chubby and some are quite shapely.

And the gloomy side? It could add up to a lot of arthritis later on. But it's all good fun now.

High Schools
Principals and Deputies

Hamilton Spectator

Five city high schools each have two vice-principals, seven have one each and Hamilton Collegiate Institute, for great it only, has no vice - principal. A board of education committee has a recommended appointing a second vice-principals for three more schools. The schools weren't specified.

Before the board approves the proposed three additions to administrative structure — taking qualified teachers out of the classrooms in the process — the need for more vice-principals ought to be demonstrated.

Hamilton has had time to assess the valu- of having two vice-principals in Delta, Ellis Park, Southmount, Westdale and West mount Secondary Schools.

Officials, recommending expansion of the system, say that it prevents disciplinary problems and strengthens staff relations. (One vice-principal attends to student affairs; the other, to instruction.)

If instances can be shown that the set-up has yielded results commensurate with the cost, and that the duties proposed for second vice-principals at other schools can't be handled by existing staff, then additional administrators should be considered.

But valid doubts have been raised. Trustee Doris Gasse told her colleagues: "I don't think we have any proof that in schools which already have two vice-principals, there are fewer discipline problems than there were previously."

While doubt exists, the trustees cannot justify adding more weight to Hamilton's crushing school tax burden.

Cigars Gain Favor Among the Ladies

Regina Leader - Post

If any power on earth can bring back the proverbial long - sought-after five-cent cigar it may well be the weed's newest batch of devotees. A recent news item says that there are an estimated 100,000 women cigar smokers in the U.S. and more feminine fans are anticipated.

No doubt the current trend in downgrading the cigarette as a possible health hazard has caused the switch to the bigger and more offensive weed. Consequently the manufacturers are hastening to redesign a new brands of cigars to make them slimmer and more graceful in appearance. There are membalated brands on the market now and even such exotic flavors as Bergandy, rum, cherry and other fruits. To appeal further to the feminine fans plastic tips are provided.

A former beauty queen has been named as assistant director to the New Institute of America as a further move toward gaining feminine support.

The new fascination for cigar smoking that even the best intentioned promoter will be unable to combat is the unmistakably lingering odor of the cigar. Unlike wine, this bouquet does not improve with age and the very but left unattended in an ashtray can soon lend an odor to even the best air conditioned room.

The smell of cigars also has a habit of lingering on the clothing; of its devotees. Originally this was considered a virtue to be cultivated by smokers.

According to writers in the early part of this enlightened century the scent of cigar, smoke was considered an essential part of every man's attire if he wished to win the affections of some members of the opposite sex. Tweeds, leather and the smell of cigars were as an intrinsic part of the male sex as smelling salts, chiffon and chiffon scarves were the mark of the female. The women who changed all that were the Dutch and Scandinavians. They have been smoking cigars for many years.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

January 24, 1848 . . .

James Marshall discovered gold 122 years ago today—in 1848—on the site of a mill he was building for John Sutter in California's Sierra Nevada. The news leaked out and soon the advance guard of the gold rush of 1849 swarmed into the area. Ironically, Sutter and Marshall both died penniless.

1918—Eighty-eight men died in the Elmo Mine disaster at Stellarton, N.S.

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—United States Superfortresses attacked Iwo Jima targets and Pacific naval and producing area of Sumatra; British troops north of Aachen cleared Germans from St. Joost and took Obstrinen in Germany; Russian troops took Oppeln, capital of Upper Silesia.

Jan. 25, 1870 . . .

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—the Germans opened a new offensive on the Western front in Alsace-Lorraine, crossing the Moder River at places 15 miles south of the German frontier; Japanese forces took Yingtak and Kunming in Kwangsi province in drive to strengthen their corridor bisecting China; Americans opened Clark Field and adjacent Fort Stotsenburg on Luzon.

18... 21 or What?
When Is A Man A Man?

Winnipeg Free Press

The anxiety with which some people view the introduction of the 18-year-old franchise has its amusing side. So has the exception to the British decision that 18-year-olds may now legally do everything a 21-year-old could do the day before yesterday. In Britain they may incur every legal obligation — sign leases, incur debts and be sued for it if they run foul of the criminal law between 18 and 20, they must still be referred to the juvenile courts. The reasoning is elusive.

The Latey committee report on which the British legislation was based turned up one interesting thing about the long established and mysterious 21 franchise. It always was, for example, difficult to say why it should not have been 20 or 25. It appears that the reason was a rule of thumb estimate of the physical age at which the average young gentleman was capable of bearing arms, as a knight. This was deemed to be the age of majority, because in general the youth at 21 was capable of fighting der the burden of a full suit of armor—this involved the bearing of a lance while carrying the burden of the armor.

Majority for all others was deemed to be that age at which an individual was able to carry out the physical duties to which his station in life called him. In those days that could be very young indeed. This did not cause any severe political problems since they had no votes. When the present franchise was established, apparently the knightly rules were simply transferred, since they had survived, re-examined and accepted, for centuries, their origins forgotten because they no longer of any interest to anyone, not even to the knightly classes.

It appears that, without knowing why, those who have argued that since boys of 18 are physically ready to fight for their country they should be able to vote is it had some kind of folk memory working in them unawares. For they have chosen to argue for an 18-year-old franchise on the same grounds that in more ancient times the franchise was denied to young men of 21. It is dangerous to despise the wisdom of the past; it may creep in on you when applied up without our being aware of our ancient debt.

Too Many Presbyterian Elders Rigid, Inflexible, Firm Finds

TORONTO (CP) — Too many elders in the Presbyterian Church in Canada are rigid, inflexible, "actively inhibiting new ideas and congregational participation and involvement," says a profound appraisal of the church today.

The elders are too old and the church is not communicating with youth, therefore excluding the 80 per cent of the Canadian population that is 25 years of age or younger.

Presbyterians themselves say their church is too proud of "tradition and past glories." They say it is "conservative, stodgy, slow to change, more concerned with identity than ministry, out of touch, ingrown, in need of renewal."

The hard facts are given in a 125-page, 40,000-word report by a management-consulting firm commissioned by the church to look into its problems. The survey took almost a year and it covered a random sampling of the 197,000 church members across the country. The report, released at a news conference Thursday, compiled a brief summary of its conclusions Monday.

The survey, conducted by P. B. Ross and Partners, said: "Sessions and the eldership were perhaps the most criticized body.

"Sessions are predominantly men over 50 years of age—two thirds are in this category. Of 179 elders responding to the questionnaire for communicant members, only eight were women and only two were under 30 years of age. . . . Term eldership, which has strong support among members of the church, must be considered as one approach to making sessions more representative and effective in the church's changing environment."

In the Presbyterian Church, committees of session, which look after the spiritual needs of a congregation, are elected for life. Vacancies occur only through death, church removal or through resignations. A move is under way in the church to change this system.

In the United Church of Canada, members of session are elected for five-year terms at staggered periods, a fixed proportion being elected each year.

The survey was commissioned by a committee on recruitment and vocation which is to make recommendations to the general assembly opening in Halifax June 7.

Of the ministry, the survey found that about 80 ministers in the last 30 years have left pastoral posts for secular work. Eighty-eight—31 of them under 40 years of age—are seriously considering leaving the pastoral ministry for secular employment.

Ministerial salaries were criticized but it was noted at the press conference that as a congregation, are elected for life. Vacancies occur only through death, church removal or through resignations. A move is under way in the church to change this system.

Ministerial salaries were criticized but it was noted at the press conference that as of April 1, 1969, men in the ministry for nine years now receive a minimum salary, after income tax, of $6,500 annually, plus use of a house and travel allowance. Minimum salary for graduate ministers is set at $5,100.

Of youth, the report said:

"They see the Presbyterian Church as too rigid and staid, lacking in tolerance. . . . Worship is accepted as a primary function but . . . youth believes the church must take more initiative in social action. It believes that many church members are hypocritical; . . . young people's groups are also frequently cold, unfriendly and cliquish."

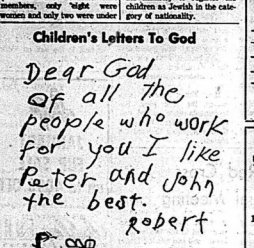
Some suggestions from young people included more variety and experimentation in worship and music and less reliance on the Bible, more variety and experimentation in worship and music and less reliance on Sunday 11 a.m. worship.

Of women, the report said:

"Women feel that they are not well represented on church boards and committees."

Court Rules Jew Denotes Nationality

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — The Israeli Supreme Court today settled by the margin of one vote the thorny question "who is a Jew?" by deciding that the term Jewish referred to a nationality and not necessarily a religion.



The court voted 5 to 4 on the ministerial decision which has racked legal and religious brains for years.

The question was posed by Israeli naval Lt.-Cmdr. Binyamin Shalit who married a non-Jew of French-Scottish descent nine years ago and has two children.

Under Jewish religious law, only children of a Jewish mother or a woman religiously converted to Judaism are regarded as Jews. On these grounds, the interior ministry declined to register the two children as Jews.

The Supreme Court ordered the ministry to register the children as Jewish in the category of nationality.

Chinese and Koreans First To Decorate Porcelain

The Chinese and Koreans were the first to develop and decorate porcelain. In the 17th century the Japanese began to copy Chinese styles. Today in Japanese porcelain flourishes, particularly in Arita where Dutch merchants purchased the porcelain for European consumption.

Arita developed a distinctive style, (still considered to be Chinese in Japan); which became known as "Imari" after the name of the port of Arita from which the porcelain was shipped.

Many special orders for the ware were placed from Europe. European tastes preferred heavy cobalt blues, iron reds and golds in heavily decorated combinations — still referred to as Imari, or sometimes Japan. Ultimately the Chinese too, began to copy Imari wares also for export.

The rich cobalt blue, iron red and gold of Imari was one of the first patterns to be copied in Europe, one of the inspirations for the early English porcelain manufacturers of Chelsea. The factory was established about 1745 and continued until 1769 when the stock, molds and equipment were sold at auction.

William Duesbury, proprietor of the Derby porcelain factory was the principal buyer and he continued to manufacture at the same site until 1784. He died in 1786 to be succeeded by his son, another William, who in turn sold out to found from both the Chelsea and Chelsea-Derby period.

Imari ware was made by Worcester in the Chamberlain period, after 1786, Coalport in the early 1800's, Mason Ironstone from 1813, John and William Ridgway from 1814 to 1830, Grainger, Lee and Co. from 1812, and Spode in the same period.

To capitalize on the demand lesser potters used inferior bases and unskilled decorators. Children were used to apply the colors which they frequently applied with a heavy hand. This ware is often thick and crude and dates about 1820 to 1840.

The plate illustrated is made by Derby, Crown Derby as it was then called in the period it was controlled by Robert Bloor who purchased the factory in 1810. This particular pattern seems to have been popular from 1810 to 1820.

Imari wares were produced later in the century by Davenport from 1870 to 1887 and one of the patterns seems to have been the inspiration for Royal Crown Derby "Traditional Imari" — sometime after 1877. The pattern still continues to be one of the most popular and one of the most expensive.

Rules for the Parents of Hyperactive Children

EDMONTON (CP) — Routine repetition and relaxation are the most important rules for parents who have hyperactive children, says an Edmonton psychiatrist.

Speaking at a meeting for parents of children with learning disabilities, Dr. Ivan De Coutere described traits of severely hyperactive children — those who, in addition to being excessively active, are easily upset by anything unusual.

Dr. De Coutere, who is head of units for emotionally disturbed children at both the University of Alberta and the Glenrose Provincial hospitals, said routine is essential for the hyperactive child.

"Breaking his routine and habits can cause confusion for him and throw him into a tantrum," he said.

"Repetition is also necessary, because what appears to be a refusal to learn on the child's part is really his inability to understand.

"By relaxation, I mean that parents should have the ability to smile instead of becoming impatient or angry," he said.

These three simple rules would reduce the feelings of failure and anger in the home, he says. Hyperactive child, he added.

The environment that such a child lives in also is important, Dr. De Coutere told the group of parents. The fewer distractions the child has to stimulation, the better. Even the manner in which the child's room is decorated should be simple, and he should not have too many toys or vivid clothes.

Dr. De Coutere said the degree of activity or passivity in a child is not initially caused by the environment, however, although it may be affected by it

VICTORIA WILLING WORKERS

Miss Audra Brickman was hostess for the Jan. meeting of the Victoria Willing Workers group recently. There were ten members and five guests present.

The president, Mrs. Wetherall called the meeting to order and a number of business matters were brought to the attention of the members. Notes of appreciation were read for remembrances during sickness. Mrs. H. Knox invited the group to her home for the Feb. meeting.

Mrs. Melvin Pulver had charge of the devotional which had as its theme New Year's.

Miss Audra Brickman conducted a contest on menus and afterwards lunch was served.

MARMORA WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Twenty-two members of the Women's Missionary Society of the Free Methodist Church of Marmora and Beaver Creek attended the Jan. meeting on Tuesday at the home of Russell Wells. President, Mrs. Ritchie Wells, brought the meeting to order.

Study book leader, Mrs. Ron Brown, gave another interesting talk on missionary work in Nigeria. Colored slides on Africa entitled "Black Gold" with missionary Mrs. Wesley DeMille as commentator were shown and narrated by Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Hardy. A musical number in the form of a guitar duet by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Potts was enjoyed. Mission study secretary, Mrs. Everett Berry, gave details of a reading contest which could be held among them of 3-4 members to encourage reading of more missionary literature. The meeting was brought to close, after which a period of fellowship and lunch served by the hostess, Mrs. Stewart Hardy, was enjoyed.

GAMMA MU CHAPTER BETA SIGMA PHI

A general meeting of Gamma Mu Chapter was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Peter Anderson.

Mrs. Donald Deacon introduced the speaker for the evening, Eugene Lang. Mr. Lang gave an informative talk on "Drugs Into Music," outlining the history of dramatic music from the religious influence around 1600 up to present times. His program was interspersed with examples of musical masterpieces of such artists as Handel, Schubert and Wagner.

Mrs. Larry Smith thanked Mr. Lang for a most interesting and enjoyable talk.

During the business meeting Mrs. A. Robb reported on the meeting of the executive re-coordinating committee. A show of hands was called from those planning to attend the Founder's Day banquet in Kingston in April. An excellent attendance is expected.

The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served by the hostess and Mrs. Stu Muirhead.

New Officers are Presented at Meeting

The president Mrs. Floyd Armstrong was hostess for the January meeting of the Horticultural Society held at the Rines' Valley Women's Institute centre. There were 34 members in attendance.

The meeting opened in the usual manner, Mrs. Raymond McConnell reported 173 members for the year and read several messages and displayed nursery catalogues. At the front of the room was the large banner made for Centennial year by the president and her assistants.

Mrs. Grant Hubble gave a full financial statement and reported a good bank balance to carry on the work of beautifying the village of Stirling.

Mrs. Harry Waite read messages of thanks and gave a report of various cards which had mailed since the November meeting. The president thanked everyone for their co-operation during 1969.

Mrs. Ray Rose presented the slate of officers which Mrs. Violet Rose had arranged for 1970. They are as follows: president Mrs. Floyd Armstrong (re-elected); 1st vice-president Mrs. Raymond McConnell; 2nd vice - president Mrs. Ivan Caldwell; recording secretary Mrs. Edward Reynolds; assistant secretary Mrs. Harold West; treasurer Mrs. Grant Hubble; creel secretary Mrs. Harry Waite; friendship secretary Mrs. Ivan Conner; new directors Mrs. Carman Nix; Mrs. Harry Morrow; Mrs. Gordon Apperley; Clemon Hogle and George Heasman.

Mrs. George Heasman will be hostess at the RVWI centre on Feb. 16 for the afternoon meeting. The premium for 1970 will be the usual box of plants.

Several fees were paid at the meeting.

The program consisted of several interesting items pertaining to gardening and were read by the president; Mrs. Raymond McConnell; Mrs. Edward Reynolds; Mrs. Grant Hubble and Mrs. Harry Waite. One item suggested that metal beds cages make a good substitute for drainage material. One should cover the bottom of the pot with the crimped edges down which ensures adequate drainage.

Mrs. Harry Morrow conducted the sing song. Refreshments were served cafeteria style after which Mrs. Gordon Apperley thanked the hostess.

TIES OF ANOTHER KIND

"I never thought I'd live to see the day when there would be a shortage of ties." — Myron Ackerman, of Men's Tie Foundation.

* * *

"Yes, the neckwear industry seems to be winning in its battle against the men's turtleneck threat of several years ago," admits Mr. William Venhola, manager of Walkers Men's Wear Department in Belleville.

"This year," Mr. Venhola continues, "is mainly due to the wider widths and new fibres of ties. Even the shirt industry has taken a cue from the new ties and designs the collars to accommodate the new widths; colors, also blend in with the suit. Not only is the world of fashion for men, but many are adapting to it with enjoyment. Evidence of this is seen on any corner, be it country, town or city.

"It establishes the fact that the four-inch and five-inch varities of ties are replacing the traditional two inch and three inch width ties, and instigate in most cases a replenishing of men's wardrobes. This trend has been upward for the last four years or so." say Mr. Venhola.

It is recorded now as a fact according to the synthetic industry estimates that men spent a substantial amount of money extra to purchase ties last year, and it is believed 1969 sales of better neckwear will increase. "Men, you see, just need a little encouragement, as far as style and color go," adds Mr. Venhola.

Of added interest, we are told, is that new synthetic fibre — a modified nylon with silk-like appearance is just being introduced in the tie business. Its goal is to replace silk that. Its name is Qiana, — (pronounced key AHN — a) and produced by Dupont.

"We selected the tie market as a place to present Qiana in men's wear, as the best selection, for wide customer exposure," states Dupont's Men's Furnishings manager, Mr. Stuart McConaghy. "Since there are just three weavers of the fabric at Dupont's, this is an ambitious market to strive for, along with the hope of adding significantly to both volume and dollar sales."

Such was the care in introducing the new fabric, one leading tie manufacturer made a conference call to 100 presidents of leading departmental and specialty stores to alert them of the Qiana neckwear and to lay down ground rules whereby no Qiana ties would be marketed to the public before a certain date just before the 1969 holidays.

Selling at $6.50 each, it will be interesting to follow the success of the Qiana ties, in the months to come.

Thus fashior changes as it has done throughout the ages, and perhaps accounts for the college girls, this year, sending home their best dresses, their best pants suit, with a note explaining: "These are superfluous here; we just wear our everyday things . . ." and long ago, even Shakespeare noted, with truth, that "fashion wears out more apparel than the man."

Deseronto Red Cross Holds Annual Meeting

DESERONTO — Because of sickness, so few members were present at the annual meeting of the Deseronto branch of the Canadian Red Cross that few reports were given, and the election of officers for 1970 was postponed until February. Mrs. George Stuart was hostess for the last meeting.

Mrs. Frank Lloyd gave a good report for the work committee, in view of the fact that Christmas was so busy. Ten layettes had been completed in 1969, eight sweaters, 19 scarves, 18 shirts and 3-309 swabs, with some not yet reported. Five dresses are still to be made.

The loan cupboard continues to be useful, with 24 items, such as crutches and wheelchairs, on loan during the year.

For the senior citizens committee, Mrs. Hood reported that she had sent 350 cards during the year. A great many thank-you cards were received from those who had received baskets of fruit at Christmas time. Eighty baskets were sent to senior citizens of the town and to town residents or former residents in hospitals and nursing homes in Belleville, Napanee and Kingston; and to the two resident homes and two nursing homes in Deseronto.

At the senior citizens' tea in October, 87 guests were entertained. The campaign for funds brought in $350, it was reported.

The members set the budget for the year, and decided that the Red Cross Outfitting should be a continuation of the annual meeting.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

New Look In Fashion

TORONTO (CP) — Ken Coupland has an idea for a new 1970 fashion — old 1940 fashion.

For years the 33-year-old Toronto photographer has been intrigued by women's fashions of the 1940s — dresses with zippers heavy enough to wear as flight suits and bras machine-stitched with the delicacy of an army tent.

So he and a group of friends decided to buy about 150 garments they found hanging in an abandoned downtown dress shop. They paid $150 for the lot and, mostly for their own amusement, hung them gallery-fashion in an old house.

Now the house is open to bargain hunters and the current year finds 23 to 26[illegible]. Mr. Coupland hopes to appeal to the costume-oriented young.

"The young women I know want fashion to be funny even more than fun. They're not reverent about fashion. That's why you see girls wearing all those freaky old coats; they're absurdly decorative."

Women's Institute Has Games Night

Rylstone Women's Institute held another games night in the WI hall recently. There was a small attendance and only four tables of progressive euchre were in play.

Prize winners were; men's high, Mrs. Stanley Kerr playing as a partner; men's low Stanley Kerr; women's high, Mrs. James Gray; women's low, Mrs. Harry Osborne. Birthday prizes were won by Mrs. Annie Dutton and Henry Redcliffe.

The next games night will be held in the hall on Saturday, Jan. 31.

O.E.S. Event Is Well Attended

A most successful luncheon and bridge and euchre sponsored by the Belleville Chapter No. 55 Order of the Eastern Star was held Thursday afternoon in St. Thomas' Parish Hall.

A large number of visitors enjoyed the event with 53 tables of cards in play. On arrival at the hall guests were welcomed at the door by Mrs. Marjorie Grey, Worthy Matron of Belleville Chapter No. 55 and Mrs. Dora Elvidge, chairman of the ways and means committee.

The general conveners for the first endeavor of this type for the chapter was Mrs. with a beautiful POSCH assisted by Mrs. Margaret Finnegan as co-convener. They were assisted during the afternoon by many willing workers including the male members of the chapter.

The hall was attractively decorated for the occasion with a beautiful centrepiece of flowers, a donation from a local florist, decorating the tea tables.

Ticket conveners were Mrs. Bessie Shore and Mrs. Thelma Liddle.

Bridge prize winners were Mrs. Messacar, Mrs. D. McGlashon; low, R. Cournyea and hidden score, Marg Bussey, for euchre, Mrs. Myrtle Vivian, Mrs. Maude Dempsey; low, Mrs. Reta Pirson and low hands, Mrs. Rita Way.

Door draws were won by Mrs. Bessie Shore, Mrs. Maude Dempsey, Miss Ann Lafferty and Mrs. Loretta Ryan.

Church Groups

WESLEYAN WMS

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Wesleyan Church of Belleville was held in the church, January 15. Mrs. Nellie Greenwood welcomed everyone. Mrs. Helen Spearman led in a hymn and a chorus. A devotional talk was given by Mrs. Vivian Trotter. A short business session was conducted by the vice-president, Mrs. Nellie Greenwood.

A talk on the Great Commission was given with a reading of a portion of a book "God's Smuggler" by Brother Andrew. This part concerned his call to go to a convention in Warsaw, Poland to speak about Christ among some Communist youth.

A quilt was started which will be sent to a needy family in northern Ontario.

Refreshments were served by the social committee.

Hazards of Spoiling Children

By DORIS CLARK

What does it mean to "spoil" a child?

An only child who was exceptionally alert was idolized by her parents. They decided her nothing in the way of material advantages. She graduated with high honors from law school. Is an accomplished musician, dresses beautifully, and outwardly appears to be a tremendous success.

But her engagement to a promising young engineer has just been broken. Why? Because she was trained to be so self-centered that she had no conception of what it means to share anything possessions, time, interests, and perhaps, most important of all, anyone else's interest.

When we spoil children, we actually indulge ourselves. We can't bear to say no to them. Let's love them without reserve, but also let's control ourselves enough to give them a heritage of good behavior. For ultimate happiness, this is our best indulgence.

Dear Doris: Should a woman pay for her husband's food bill? We have discussed this and he thinks that I should do this along with paying my own way (as he says). I pay for my food.

He makes a fairly good wage. Is it the law for a man to support his wife? If I did quit working, would he be responsible for my bills and so on? — A Frustrated and Nervous Wife.

Dear Wife: Yes, husband are liable for the support of their wives and families. But for various reasons, wives work too.

1. To provide comforts or conveniences not otherwise within range.

2. To buy a house or car or take a holiday;

3. Because their talents are better expressed in work outside the home.

Or for any assortment of similar reasons.

I have a sneaking suspicion your husband pays for a few things you don't mentioned; or how does he justify expecting you to meet the food bill?

Money management is a vone of contention in many many homes. Marriage counsellors can and do help sort this out, and that's where you should go.

Dear Doris: For the would-be reporter for the Youth Page, a paragraph or two for the paper each week would feature the Kindness Club and would carry cold and animal and bird anecdotes — all fascinating material at any age. — Aida Flemming.

Dear Aida: Trust you to keep your beloved animals in mind!

Note to Youthful Reporters: Want some good longhaul old material for items like this? Mrs. Aida Flemming, president of The Kindness Clubs, 223 Waterloo Row, Fredericton, N. B., can send you some candies.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Sue: "Why can't I go to Jane's party? Other mothers trust their kids."

Mother: "Well, I guess it will be all right. I don't like the idea of a party when the parents aren't there, but you are all such mature young misses Jan's mother must think it is okay."

Fact: "mature" teen-agers may get carried away when the crowd gathers, or party crashers may make trouble. Don't let your child persuade you against your better judgment just because "everybody else is going."

Mother: "It's not that I don't trust you to act with good judgment, but too many things could happen to cause trouble when a party is unsupervised. I'm sorry you're disappointed. You may have some of your friends here for dinner if you wish."

QUINTE W. I.

2ND THURLOW — The Quinte W. I. held their January meeting at the W. I. hall recently with 24 people present. The president, Mrs. C. Reid opened the meeting with Mrs. J. Parrott at the piano.

Secretary Mrs. Charles Woods read the minutes and thank - you notes from those who received cards and fruit at Christmas time. Two minutes silence was observed in memory of Mrs. Geddes Bradshaw who recently passed away. She was a long time member of the Quinte W. I. In the absence of Mrs. R. Vivian the hostesses for the evening Mrs. Asa Cook and Mrs. W. Miehaud arranged the program with Mrs. Cook in charge. Mrs. Harry Harrison gave the motto. She also led in community singing and a contest was also enjoyed. Mrs. E. Fleming had the most correct answers.

Mrs. Cook introduced Mr. Robert Horwood who is a member of the board of education of Hastings County. He said there were four areas in the county with 4,500 elementary students in the Thurlow area. There are 2,300 pupils and 1,100 teachers and 70 schools in the county. He also explained how the board operated.

He was thanked by Mrs. J. Parrott. Mrs. Cook added her thanks as well.

A lunch was served by Mrs. Michaud, Mrs. E. Vivian, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. E. Vivian and Mrs. Lisle.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: All through childhood, I suffered because my parents were partial to my sister. I kept telling myself I'd grow out of feeling hurt, but here I am in my late 20's and still suffering.

ANN LANDERS

Since I have always been the left-out child, I am extremely sensitive to similar family situations and it is amazing how much of it I see. Just last night we were having dinner in a restaurant and I watched the little family the the next table. The parents were catering to and fawning over the little girl while her older brother sat silent and ignored throughout the entire meal. He looked so lonely and lost it broke my heart.

I wonder how parents can be so oblivious to the damage they are doing. Not only are they being cruel to the left out child, but invariably the favored youngster grows up to be self-centered, unappreciative and grasping. — which is a normal by-product of too much attention.

Reword this any way you see fit, Ann, but please, get the message to those who play favorites — not only parents but grandparents, uncles, aunts and teachers. Thank you. — ATTENTION PLEASE: HOUSTON AND SAN ANTONIO.

DEAR ATT.: May I add a thought? Those who are inclined to play favorites should remember that the child on whom it is easiest to lavish extra attention usually needs it least, while the one who lacks charm and magnetism needs it most.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son was killed in Vietnam. On the day of the funeral, the flag that was draped over his casket was handed to his wife. It was an impressive gesture but it broke my heart. I feel the flag should have been given to me.

I will never be able to replace my son, but his wife has already replaced him. In a matter of months she remarried and seems happy as a lark. Losing that boy was a shattering blow and I will never get over it. The flag that covered his casket would mean the word to me and I don't think it would be very difficult for my ex-daughter-in-law to part with it. Should I ask her? — A GRIEVING MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: The flag belongs to the wife. Don't ask her for it. When a widow remarries it does not mean the memory of her first husband has no importance to her. You do not know what is in this young woman's heart.

Life is for the living and you should not resent the fact that your son's widow wasted no time in picking up the pieces and making a new life for herself. "

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is it good manners to answer the telephone in someone else's home? My cousin was spending the weekend with me. I had to go to the drug store and was gone only fifteen minutes. When I returned my cousin said, "I'm sorry you missed Martha's call." (Martha is my daughter who lives in Grand Island.)

I was very upset because Martha had called station-to-station and had to pay for talking to a shoe-string relative whom she doesn't like very much. I say my cousin had no business answering the phone in my home. She should have known the call was for me and not for her. Am I right? — STILL BURNING.

DEAR STILL: No, you are wrong. The natural reaction to a ringing phone is to answer it. Your cousin thought she was doing you a favor. Next time you leave someone in your home, instruct them not to answer the phone.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Spudnut Doughnut Recipe

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Can you please send me your recipe for "Spudnuts" that appeared way back in the '50s. I owned my 18-year-old son into furnishing my deep fat fryer (approx. 30 years old) and he agreed (and did it) if I would make him some doughnuts — the "spudnut" kind. Lo and behold, I get out my favorite recipes clipped over the years and naturally, wouldn't, you know it, this one is missing! Can't find it anywhere or even a faint facsimile of it in any of my umpteen cookbooks. I would like to keep my promise to my son, seeing as how he kept his! — Margaret S.

ANSWER: Spudnuts were given here in 1958.

SPUDNUTS

Soak 1 pkge. dry granular yeast in ½ cup warm water with ½ tsp. sugar 10 min. To 2 cups milk scalded and cooled to lukewarm add 1 cup mashed potatoes, ½ cup soft butter or margarine, 3 well-beaten eggs, ¾ tsp. salt, ½ cup sugar, 1 tsp. nutmeg, and add to risen yeast liquid along with enough flour for a soft dough — about 6 cups. Let rise until double in bulk, punch down once, then using well floured board roll out, cut out with doughnut cutter, and let rise on board about ½ hr. Fry in shortening at 360 deg. Fahr. turning when bottom is gold. At least 3" of fat should be used.

QUESTION: Would you give your recipe for unbaked cookies called Mud Pies? — Annabelle

ANSWER:

MUD PIES

2 cups white sugar
½ cup milk
½ cup shortening

5 tbsps. cocoa
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. salt
2 cups quick-cooking oats
1 cup fine coconut

In a saucepan, bring all but oats and coconut to boil. Remove from heat and at once add oats and coconut. Stir well. Cool a little then drop by neat spoonfuls approximately 1½" in diameter, onto wax-paper-covered cookie sheets — about three. Allow to harden. Then keep well in covered cookie tin. They must be 1 or 2 hrs. old before serving.

TWEED — Ray Phillips of Thomasburg was elected president of the Tweed Agricultural Society for a second term at the recent annual meeting held on Jan. 17. The majority of the executive was also returned to office for a second term.

William Woods, of Tweed, is the 1st vice-president and Stanley Greenwell of Tweed is the 2nd vice-president. Mr. Frank Bowers, will continue as secretary-treasurer. Gil Cotton and Doug Spencer are the auditors for 1970.

Mrs. William Woods is the president of the ladies' section for 1970.

The honorary directors are: Bernard J. Hunt, Hedgon Bush, Ross Hunt, Ketcheson, W.S. Hain McCrea, Wilbur Bateman, Thomas Lynn, Arthur Robinson, Barbara Allen and Kenneth Smith; and directors are: Orval Ray, Stanley Ireland, Grant Elliott, Mitchell Rannie, Patrick Rush, Roy Tukley, Walter Hackner, Edmund Rankin, John Rose, Hodgins, William Elliott, Gerald Gaffney, A. V. Palmateer and Ralph Thompson. Associate directors are: S. Arthur McCrory, Burton Dunbar, Dr. Keith Harrison, Wesley Farrell, Lloyd Price, Donald Martin, Thomas Kelly, Ray Woodley, Dewey Spencer, Ambrose Hunt, Albert Martin, Joseph Langevin, Fred McCrae, Justin Fleming, Clyde Bell, Harold Casselon, Merrill Rush and C. J. (Toby) Cournoyer.

Concluding the society did very well, and reported an exceptionally good fair, with an crossed attendance over the previous year.

The amount of prize money paid in 1969 was down slightly. Peter Wadden, secretary to the secretary, Frank Bowers. Several improvements were made to the grounds during the past year.

Guest Speaker to Discuss Drugs

TWEED — The R. H. Conner Home and School Association, for its first meeting has obtained as its guest speaker Mr. M. Mahoney of the Drug Research Department, Ontario Hospital, Kingston. This meeting will be held Jan. 29 in the Tweed Hungerford District High School Auditorium at 8 p.m. Mr. Mahoney, who is also a lecturer at Queen's University, comes highly recommended by all who have heard him.

He spoke to the Madoc Home and School Association in the autumn and has also been in Trenton.

In order to stop the use of drugs by our children we must know something about them. Mr. Mahoney can help us to know the facts about addiction and will answer any questions asked him. He has requested that the pupils of grades 6, 7 and 8 attend this meeting with their parents.

Fire-fighters Purchase New Truck

TWEED — The Lord O'Lake's Fire-fighters of Northbrook, have purchased a used pumper truck from the Sheffield Fire Brigade through the good offices of the Northbrook Businessmen's Association and private contributions.

The truck, complete with a 650 - gallon tank, will service the townships of Barrie, Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham and parts of Kennebec and Abinger Townships.

A public meeting will be held in Tweed, Jan. 21 in the Northbrook Public School at 8 with interested persons invited to attend.

The district has been without adequate fire protection up to this time. At the present time volunteers are needed to man the new equipment.

The truck will be centrally located in Northbrook hamlet, which has a system of good roads connecting the hamlet with the Kaladar, Flinton, Cloyne and Harlowe areas.

New Nudity Has Effect On Burlesque Business

TORONTO (CP) — The new nudity is supposed to have killed the burlesque business.

"All the kick has gone out of it," moaned one stripper. "If they get much filthier I'll be out of business. A stripper in a G-string and the blood about as much as a mid-Victorian dame in five layers of petticoats."

At a local show the cast of Hair stands totally, frontally nude on stage at the Royal Alexandra Theatre here, the proprietor of the Victory burlesque theatre has his own opinion of the new nudity.

"Garbage," said the gentleman, who wants only to be known as Leo.

At the Victory an interviewer found they like to talk about the days they dropped the pasties last summer.

Laurie Lane did her usual strip and then—pop-eyed—took the pasties.

But the audience didn't react. It's sophisticated now and knows as well as anyone that accidents happen.

Only when the master of ceremonies—if ceremonies they be —asked: "Did you see anything new?" did they realize it was a planned effect. Then came the spontaneous applause.

A morality squad representative attended the show the next day, watched a girl remove her pasties and said if one more pasty went he would be forced to lay a charge.

Leo said there were "conversations" for a week or so between lawyers and morality squad and theatre officials but nothing was resolved.

"They wouldn't condemn and they wouldn't condone," he said. "So we grabbed the bull by the horns."

The girls haven't worn pasties since.

Said Leo: "We're talking about the real thing—no camouflage. We felt the time was ripe. We have a little slogan here: 'Bring back the bare.'"

Now comes the '70s.

Because of the competition from Hair, they are having "conversations" with lawyers and morality men about plucking the G-string.

January Active Month For Humane Society

NAPANEE — There was a reunion recently when 27 pure bred Pekingese dogs were returned to Mrs. Mildred Lockridge after having been cared for by Mrs. Chester Wemp in the Ontario Humane society shelter at her home south of Napanee.

Mrs. Lockridge has been breeding these animals for several years.

January has been a particularly active month at the shelter, with the 104th animal admitted since the New Year. There is rapid turn-over, fortunately. Twice a week men from the Belleville Humane Society come for an consignment, and usually all dogs have been adopted before they come for another lot. On the 15th they took nine, and all had found new homes within two days. Belleville citizens seem to want dogs and more dogs.

The unusual activity in the Napanee shelter is attributed to a rabies scare. Mrs. Wemp has several animals under quarantine at the present time, but none have so far shown any symptoms of the disease.

Workers, Technocrats Under Fire in Russia

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet workers and technocrats are bearing the blame for major economic failures during the last year as a press campaign to revitalize the economy picks up steam.

In recent days, the Soviet Press has loudly demanded new methods in management and a tightening of slack labor discipline.

The criticism bears all the marks of party directive and probably reflects the findings of a hitherto unpublished report by Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev, presented in December at a plenary session of the central committee on the eve of the Soviet Union's 1970 budget statement.

Brezhnev is understood to have called for tighter state control over planning, increased similarity measures and stricter factory discipline.

According to reliable Soviet sources, he virtually admitted that the economic reforms adopted in 1965, one year after he replaced Nikita Khrushchev as party leader, had not lived up to expectation and their goals had not been reached.

Even the offer of financial incentives to encourage greater production does not appear to have had the desired effect of stimulating it.

In speeches made Dec. 16 at the budget session of the Supreme Soviet both Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov and the national planning chief, Nikolai Baibakov, bemoaned the sluggish rise in productivity.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda disclosed recently that this was one of the main failings discussed at the party plenary session, which had subjected the Soviet economy to "a profound and wide-ranging analysis."

Almost certainly echoing the gist of Brezhnev's report on the economy, Pravda called on the various ministries to master new management techniques as soon as possible.

It warned that wages were rising faster than production growth rates in some branches of the economy and added that "intolerable practices" were widespread in industry and administration. Among these it listed the habit some ministries have of lowering their production targets in the first months of the year, frequent changes in production plans and uneven factory production.

Sovietskaya Rossiya, the central committee newspaper, said national discipline was primarily a question of taking "a serious attitude" toward production targets and realizing that they were fundamental to efficient economic development.

Mo-Hawks Clinch Play-Off Spot with 5-1 Win

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Before last night's 5-1 win over Owen Sound Crescents, some of the Belleville Mo-Hawks must have been wondering if they would have the chill Canuck dancing girls lift to themselves at tonight's "must-for-players" party.

But after snapping their four - game losing streak by hooding the Crescents to the puck, punch and playoff spot, chances are the Belleville seniors assured tonight's $30 Bacon - Bingo - Beer - Dance.

Playing - coach Davey Jones handled most of the puck chores, collecting three goals — two near - solo efforts — to lead the locals to their fifth win over the Crescents in six meetings.

Al Ferguson's 22nd of the season, a back-in effort from around the back of Owen Sound goalie Charlie Schultz, opened the scoring. Georges Godson added a second-period goal, his 16th of the year — more than his 1968-69 total.

But by far the most popular Mo-Hawk of the evening was Ralph Plane, who paced the ice in minute - long stints alone in fine style.

With less than four minutes remaining in the game, Plane found about 20 fans in Bob Foster's boxing style, pummeling the Owen Sound defenceman nearly senseless.

That earned the hard-nosed winger a standing ovation from the 1,000 spectators, frustrated after 56 minutes of watching Foster dish out a plain and fancy assortment of roughhouse.

Another loser in the Memorial Arena popularity poll was Crescent defenceman Wes Rydall, who drew a match penalty early in the second period for intentionally swatting Mo-Hawk rookie Ray Johnston across the forehead with his stick.

Thanks to his helmet, Johnston returned to the game in the third period with only three stitches to show for his misfortune.

However the most important piece of surgery was the deft Mo-Hawk removal of the Crescents from further contention for one of the six OHA Senior A playoff spots.

Their win put the locals in a tie for fifth spot with idle Oakville Oaks at 24 points, only four back of second-place Galt Hornets.

With only 15 points to show for their first 31 outings, Owen Sound were mathematically eliminated by last night's loss.

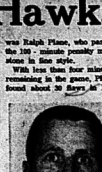
Wondering if it's with three wins in 31 games, are unbeatable in last spot.

An indifferent crowd watched the Mo-Hawks build a 2-0 first-period edge, pad it to 5-1 after 40 minutes, and play it cozy in a scoreless third period.

The Crescents managed 30 shots at Steve Rexe, who lost his shutout midway through the second period when penalty-killer Mayo Paquette intercepted Greg Marchen's pass-out in no-man's land.

It was the third shorthanded goal against the Mo-Hawks in their last four games.

Other than that, Marchen played an exceptionally rugged and steady game along the Belleville blueline, helping veteran Lionel Bolty and forward Billy Armour make up for the absence of defence regulars Lou Kazowski, Wayne Brown and Bob Wilson.



Newcomer Lorne Ferguson was slapping his stick in disgust, again failing to relish in on several good scoring chances as in his first Mo-Hawk game Tuesday night against Kingston.

The 26-year-old National Hockey League veteran skated better last night, earning an assist on Jones' early second - period power - play goal.

Ferguson played on the Jones - Johnston line, taking fin - ridden Wayne McConnell's right wing spot.

Jones, a for points thanks to two - thirds of his hat trick on power - play individual efforts.

The Mo-Hawks now enter an 11 - day layoff with their next game Feb. 3 Tuesday night Kingston affair.

Soccer Fans Go Overboard Again

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Each year across Canada the cry goes up to "stop the brutality in hockey," or "ban boxing." Football is a game which appeals to the baser instincts."

Compared with soccer, hockey and football and boxing are about as wild as the Olympic two-handed discus-powder throw.

For example:

An excited London housewife once administered a flying tackle to a referee and proceeded to beat him up in front of 26,000 cheering fans.

A Mexican player who had scored four goals was stoned by a fan of the opposing team who fired four bullets—one for each goal—into his kicking leg.

Infuriated fans in Italy chased a referee 18 miles out of town.

Some soccer fields in Latin America now are ringed with moats to protect the players and officials from the fans.

A soccer match last year between El Salvador and Honduras was used as an excuse to start a war.

A member of the Rockefeller mission to Latin America was startled to hear an official of one country plead that one of the greatest contributions the United States could make would be to donate 5,000 soccer balls for children.

A study in Sao Paulo, Brazil, showed that when the city's most popular team wins, production rises 12.3 per cent; when it loses, work accidents increase 15.3 per cent.

After Brazil lost to Portugal in the 1966 World Cup, police guarded the wife and home of Brazil's super-star, Pele. The team manager's home was stoned and he stayed in Europe an extra two weeks to allow passions to subside.

A 19-year-old Brazilian girl on a cruise jumped from her ship in mid-Mediterranean shouting "I hate Pele."

Brazil is one of the countries where soccer is a state of mind.

It begins with children kicking a rag ball on dusty streets and progresses up through a semi-pro arrangement to the pro leagues where some 5,000 of the country's best players average $5,000 a year.

Pele, the world's highest-paid athlete at $341,000 a year, was offered $650,000 and a mansion to defect to Mexico.

His government had him declared a national asset so no other country could lure him away.

Printers Gain Tie from Hungry Hawks

4-4 Stalemate

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

If last night's 4-4 game in Trenton was any indication, then the guy who said a tie game was like kissing your sister must have been a kissin' kin of Raquel Welch.

Both coaches were pleased with their team's play and the fans witnessed a close - checking, hard hitting brand of playoff hockey that was within reach of either team right up until the final whistle.

New coach Charlie Drake, of the Trenton Golden Hawks put it this way, "I was very pleased with the team's play it was a good game that could have gone either way." The Trenton team shook a four game losing streak and despite losing a three goal lead, came out of the game confident they can take the final playoff spot.

Floyd Crawford of the Ellis Printers could also gain some satisfaction as the Belleville club erased a 3-0 first period lead and held on to the spit in a Trenton - dominated third period. The Printers are now three points up on Cobourg and four ahead of Trenton.

Bim McFail opened the scoring at 6.16 of the first period, skating through the entire Ellis team and hauling the puck over a cleanly-beaten Ron Jury.

The solo effort by McFail seemed to give Trenton the lift it needed as they kept Belleville on the ropes, adding goals by Pete Utman and Andy Terwilliger as Jury appeared to be screened on both goals.

The Ellis team preferred to play shinny on many occasions and the Golden Hawks were taking advantage of the lack of position play.

Belleville hit the score sheet late in the first period as John McConnell connected on a drive from the point, with two Trenton players in the penalty box. Seconds later Terry Meagher picked up a free centring pass from John Mulvihill to narrow the lead to one goal.

The shot-handed goals, and in all likelihood a few well-chosen words from coach Crawford worked wonders for Belleville, as they stayed on their wings and out of the penalty box, in the second period.

"Toody" MacCormack scored after only 26 seconds of play to even the match and Meaghe's's second goal gave the visitors a 4-3 lead.

Utman's second marker came at 13.08 of the period as who had made the initial save on Steenburg.

He lifted a rebound over Jury.

The last period was a close checking affair, although both teams missed some good scoring opportunities.

Trenton had a wide edge in play, but just couldn't connect for the go-ahead goal, thanks to some fine forechecking by Reed Mallory and Danny Lapensette and the strong defensive play of John Mulvihill, who stood out all game. Ted Brown did a strong job for checking for the Golden Hawks, after being called up from the Trenton Juvenile team for the game.

Crawford was pleased with the work of Lemieux, Jarbeau and David Smith, on the third line, when they were called upon to spell the regulars

Belleville Ellis Juniors' wingman Ted Waite winds up for a slapshot against the Trenton Golden Hawks, in Trenton last night. The Printers overcame a 3-0 first period deficit, to salvage a 4-4 tie and remain two games ahead of Trenton.

Charger Broom Sweeps Clean in Napanee Gym

The Centennial Chargers charged to the lead in all three divisions of the Bay of Quinte League's western section, last night.

A clean sweep of the Napanee cagers allowed the seniors and bantams to increase their first place margins, while the juniors were moving past the idle Quinte Saints.

The senior game saw Centennial come back from behind in the final quarter to stop Napanee 47-41, largely on the strength of Wes Chow's outside jumpers. Chow hooped 19 points to lead the closely - bunched Charger scorers. Norcus and Wilson each had eight points. Glenn Mallory was a defensive standout as well as contributing seven points to the offense. Cunningham had a big 18 point night for Napanee.

The juniors came through with a big 31 point second half to bomb their Napanee counterparts 82-30. The lead scorers were Sensat (15), Henderson (12), Dunn (11) and Thompson (9). Lea scored nine points for the home team.

Vahe Parmakzagian continued to endear himself to his coach, if not to league statisticians, pouring in 23 points to lead the bantams to a 54-38 victory. McIntyre with 14 points and Morphy with 9 were the other high men.

Seals Hand Drowning Leafs Anchor

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League tonight heads into a hectic weekend schedule of 11 games with the prospect of upheavals in the standings of both divisions.

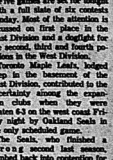
Five games are set for tonight with a full slate of six contests Sunday. Most of the attention is focussed on Dallas in the East Division and a dogfight for the second, third and fourth positions in the West Division.

Toronto Maple Leafs, lodged deep in the basement of the East Division, contributed to the uncertainty among the expansion clubs when they were beaten 6-3 on the west coast Friday night by Oakland Seals in the only scheduled game.

The Seals, who finished a strong second last season, climbed back into contention for a playoff spot by trouncing the Leafs. They now have 38 points, one behind the fourth-place Pittsburgh Penguins.

Only six points separate second and fifth place in the West Division. Philadelphia Flyers currently hold the second rung, 15 points back of the front-running St. Louis Blues and two points ahead of Minnesota North Stars. Pittsburgh is three points behind Minnesota.

New York Rangers face a challenge to their East Division lead today at home to Boston Bruins. The Rangers have 58 points, two more than the Montreal Canadiens, Canadiens who are at home to Chicago Black Hawks tonight, sit in third place four points off the pace. All three leading teams have played 62 games.



Detroit Red Wings are also in danger of losing their hold on the fourth and final East Division playoff spot.

Currently sharing fourth place with Chicago, with one game in hand, the Red Wings visit St. Louis tonight and take on Montreal at home Sunday.

In other NHL action tonight, Philadelphia visits Minnesota and Los Angeles faces the Penguins in Pittsburgh.

Other Sunday games involve Toronto at Chicago, Los Angeles at New York, Pittsburgh at Boston, St. Louis at Philadelphia and Oakland at Minnesota.

The Bruins will make their run for first place without the services of three forwards.

EARL INGERFIELD
"Wears The Hat"

Ken Hodge is out of the lineup with a badly bruised left knee. Wayne Carleton and Wayne Cashman both are suffering from a virus.

The Bruins Friday called up Frank Spring from Oklahoma City Blazers of the Central Hockey League and Don Marcotte from Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League as emergency replacements.

The Seals used the power play effectively Friday night to defeat the Leafs.

The expansion club opened up a 2-0 first period lead on goals by Earl Ingarfield and defenceman Doug Roberts. The scoring opportunity came when Leafs Jim Harrison was handed a double minor penalty for charging. Oakland's Carol Vadnais joined the Leafs' penalty box shortly afterwards.

Toronto rallied in the second period with goals by Jim McKenny and Bob Pulford. The Seals then moved ahead 4-2 as Ingarfield scored again in the second and third periods for his second three - goal effort of the season. Defencemen Harry Howell and Dick Redmond also scored for the winners. Toronto's Ron Ellis rounded out the scoring in the third period with his 20th goal of the year.

Sand Shot Saves Par

Canada's George Knudsen explodes a shot out of a trap on the 17th hole of the Spyglass Hill course during the opening round of the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Thursday and got close enough for one putt and a par 4. His 68 for the round, four under par, left him only one shot off the pace. (AP Wirephoto)

Sports On All Fronts

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department will sanction and support a Canada Summer Games in 1973, the department said Friday in a brief news release. Official invitations for bids from cities interested in staging the games will go out March 15 from the Canadian Amateur Sports Federation, the department said. A period of 90 days would be allowed for submission of bids. The 1973 games would be the fourth in a series. Quebec City staged the first Canada Winter Games in 1967. Halifax and neighboring Dartmouth staged the first summer games in 1969 and the 1971 winter events are to be held in Saskatoon.

ST. GERVAIS, France (AP) — Francoise Macchi of France today won the giant slalom of the 22nd international women's Grand Prix counting for the World Alpine Ski championship. Annemarie Proell of Austria was second and Judy Nagel, of the U.S. third, according to unofficial results. Miss Macchi was timed in 1:36.11 down the 1,700-metre course which had a drop of 359 metres. There was a thin layer of new, wet snow on an extremely hard base. The weather was slightly below freezing and thinly overcast. Miss Proell was second in 1:36.12 and Miss Nagel third in 1:36.46. Florence Steurer of France was fourth in 1:36.60 and Barbara Cochran of the U.S. fifth in 1:36.88. Betty Clifford of Ottawa was the top Canadian, finishing 19th in 1:41.70.

EDMONTON (CP) — A three-goal performance by Steve King led the Canadian Nationals to a 5-1 victory over Edmonton Monarchs of the Alberta Hockey League in an exhibition game before 2,250 fans Friday night. The clubs were to meet in the second game of the series tonight. Canada's coach Jackie McLeod says the team had no other games planned and the future of the club, following their withdrawal from international competition, remains a question mark. George Watson scored for the Nationals on a power play in the second period and Richie Bayes added the other goal in the first period. Ron Tookry got Edmonton's lone goal on a power play in the second period when he knocked in a rebound past Canada's goaltender Ken Dryden.

Duff Dealt

MONTREAL (CP) — Dick Duff, a veteran National Hockey League left winger, Friday was traded by Montreal Canadiens to Los Angeles Kings in exchange for a player to be named at a later date.

Duff, 34 next month, had been with the Canadiens since Dec. 22, 1964, when he came here from New York Rangers in exchange for Bill Hicke, now with Oakland Seals.

A native of Kirkland Lake, Duff had not played with the Montreal club since a Dec. 31 game at Pittsburgh against the Penguins. He missed a New Year's Day practice here and had been benched by coach Claude Ruel since that time.

Earlier this season Duff told the Canadiens management he intended to retire. However, after minor surgery, he returned to the club.

He played in 17 games and managed only one goal and one assist.

A club spokesman said that Duff had talked over the trade with assistant general manager Floyd Curry and had indicated he was looking forward to the move.

Boost from Burka

OTTAWA (CP) — Former world figure skating champion Petra Burka has been tagged a one-year contract with the Canadian Figure Skating Association to promote the sport in Canada.

John McKay, vice-president of the association, said at a news conference Friday that Miss Burka would represent the association in co-operation with the fitness and amateur sport directorate of the department of national health and welfare.

Mr. McKay said Miss Burka's duties will include promotional work, emphasis on skating clubs in various regions in Canada and promotion of the Arctic Games in Yellowknife, N.W.T., in March.

"Petra has been through the clubs and knows the problems that face our association. Her knowledge and personality will act as greatly as skating figure skating an even bigger sport in Canada."

Health Minister John Munro said Miss Burka's involvements with the directorate and the association comes as a result of the special study on sport. Its recommendations were tabled in the Commons last May.

"They recommended that we involve athletes who had given Canada recognition in world and olympic events in organizational and promotional work once they retired," Mr. Munro said.

Signed

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference today announced the signing of Sam Singletary, a 22-year-old first-team middle guard from North Carolina Central University at Durham.

J. I. Albrecht, the Als assistant general manager, said that with the professional football draft in the United States fast approaching, the Montreal club has pulled out all stops in an effort to sign those players it has researched among the top 100 pro candidates.

Singletary, six foot two inches and weighing 240 pounds, is a must in the Als plans, Albrecht said.

Schranz Goes Downhill Fast

MEGEVE, France (CP) — Austrian veterans Karl Schranz and Heidi Messner held France at bay Friday to take the first two places the last international downhill event, which counts towards the World Cup, before the world championships next month.

Schranz, *31-year-old World Cup holder, was always faster and finished over a second ahead of Messner, himself a half-second in front of France's Henri Duvillard in the Emile Alais Cup.

Schranz's return to form comes at an opportune time just before the world championships at Val Gardena in Italy.

There were seven falls—one of them fatal—on the difficult 3,328-metre course with a 942-metre drop.

French hope Michel Bonn, 19, fell heavily, fracturing his skull and died. He was in a coma when brought to hospital Sallanches hospital and died shortly after being admitted.

A 15-year-old Austrian, Werner Grissman, also was severely injured in the race, the hospital sources said. At first diagnosis indicated a fractured pelvis.

Keith Shepherd of Lake Louise, Alta., tied for eighth with Bob Cochran of the U.S. with identical times of 2 minutes, 16.36 seconds.

Schranz, an Olympic veteran, sped down the precipitous track in 2:12.80 and Messner had 2:12.83 and Duvillard, 2:14.35.

World Cup leaders:

1. Patrick Russel, France, 135
2. Gustavio Thoeni, Italy, 107
3. Karl Schranz, Austria, 106
4. Dumeng Giovanoli, Switzerland, 96
5. Jean-Noel Augert, France, 75
6. Henri Duvillard, France, 66
7. Heidi Messner, Austria, 37
8. Andrzej Bachleda, Poland, 31
9. Werner Bleiner, Austria, 28
10. Jakob Tischauser, Switzerland, and Henri Brechu, France, 25.

Yancey Up-Wind Of Pack at Pebble Beach

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Even the ducks were looking for shelter.

But not the golfers, who played through whipping wind, and cold and the ocean spray.

Bert Yancey proved most able to handle conditions and shot a two-under-par 70 Friday and took over first place in the $125,000 Bing Crosby pro-am with a 36-hole total of 137.

He held a two-stroke lead over Jim Wiechers and former Masters champion Bob Goalby, each at 139. Wiechers had a second round 71 and Goalby a 72.

Three Monterey Peninsula courses are being used for the first three rounds, Spyglass, Pebble Beach and Cypress. 9 George Knudson of Toronto is a second-place tie at 68 after the first round, added to a 73 Friday and slipped to a major traffic jam at 141, four strokes off the pace.

But he was in good company there with Miller Barber, Paul Harney, Homero Blancas, Arnold Palmer and George Archer.

The only other Canadian in the field, Al Balding of Kitchener, was much deeper in the pack at 147 after rounds of 72 and 75.

Will Wilcox is in the field of 168 broke 70 in Friday's cold and gale - force winds. Some scores went out of sight: Ron Cerrudo, one of the first round leaders, went to a 78. Bob Murphy, who had an opening 67, took a 78. Frank Beard, last year's leading money winner, had an 81. Hugh Royer went from a 68 to 82.

An expected rain — is forecast again today—failed to show, but the wind more than made up for it. The blasts off the Pacific yer strong enough to ground the sea gulls, swept the decks off their usual haunts at the Pebble Beach links and knocked players off balance as they lined up shots.

Cypress Point's Bernard Hunt, 70, and Tom Shaw, 71, both at Spyglass, and Don Massengale, 70 at Cypress Point, are three strokes back at 140.

Jack Nicklaus had a 72 at Pebble Beach and is much in contention at 142.

Under the unusual format for this prestige-laden event, the teams of 168 pros and amateurs — many of the latter show business celebrities—all play the three days, then the field is cut and the finish Sunday are played over Pebble Beach only.

String Snapped

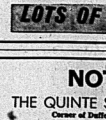
Orillia Terriers, holders of a 12-point lead in the eight-team Ontario Hockey Association Senior series over Galt Hornets, finally were beaten on home ice.

The stretch of 15 consecutive games without defeat at the Orillia Community Centre this season ended Friday as the Hornets, defending Allan Cup champions, tripped the Terriers 4-2.



In other Friday games, Barrie Flyers bounced Woodstock A's 6-1 and Belleville Mo-Hawks snapped a four-game losing streak, defeating Owen Sound Crescents 5-1 in Belleville.

The Hornets brought down the Terriers on two goals by Pat Adair with one each from Vance Millar and Bruce Reier, although the league leaders held a 41 to 30 edge in shots.

Grant Moore and Ray Dupont scored for the Terriers, who suffered only their sixth defeat, against 34 wins and a pair of ties.

At Barrie, Ray Cyr scored two goals as the Flyers took over sole possession of third place, one point ahead of Belleville and Oakville Oaks. Jon Weeks, Mike Dubeau, defenceman Jim Thompson and Corky Adams added one goal each to hand the last-place A's their 28th loss in 31 starts. Bob Bradshaw had his only Woodstock goal in the final period.

English Falter in Defence of World Soccer Cup

LONDON (CP) — Cheers have turned to boos and hopes to ashes as 11 English soccer fans gloomily watch the national squad's unsteady progress towards its defence of the quadrennial World Cup this June.

The roaring crowds that shook Wembley with chants of ecstasy when England captured the cup for the first time four years ago roared again when the rebuilt squad fought a muddled scoreless draw against a low-ranked Netherlands team—this time expressing their derision.

As the England team muffed chances, the bored crowd whistled, slow-handclapped and churned its stinging verdict: "What a load of rubbish."

Equally biting were the comments from sports writers who could hardly believe the team was selected by manager Sir Alf Ramsey, who was knighted for his success in the 1966 competition.

Peter Wilson of The Daily Mirror said the team seemed "as though it had been made up of the parts from two different jigsaw sets which never looked like interlocking."

Despite the desperate mid-match substitution of two players, Wilson said the team utterly resembled "a troupe of mish-mash amateur actors suddenly caught unguished in the spotlights of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, with their parts completely forgotten and looking desperately to some prompter in the wings to tell them what to do."

In The Evening Standard, J. L. Manning said the English squad looked about as nippy "as a three-legged hippopotamus."

Prospects for the cup competition could hardly look blacker. The stalemate at Wembley closely followed the draw in Mexico City which placed England in the toughest of the four four-team groupings.

Both Czechoslovakia and Romania in the same group are expected to provide stiff opposition, but the hardest flight is predicted from Brazil, twice holder of the prized trophy.

Unless England can grab either first or second place in its group, fans will have to wave goodbye to the cup for at least four years.

There is likely to be a lot of head-scratching at British football headquarters during the next few weeks.

In the face of it, England's record is not bad. Its strong defence has let in only three goals in six games and the team can claim it hasn't lost any of its last 13 matches, but the fumbling forward line just doesn't seem to be able to score the goals that count.

They netted only five in six matches.

Despite almost-feverish tinkering with the lineup—for the Netherlands' game Ramsey made seven changes in the team that beat Portugal in December—he has yet to find a cure for what commentators are calling the "goal famine."

Knudson Hopes to Flex New Muscles

TORONTO (CP) — A few George Knudson, claiming to be stronger both mentally and physically, is off again on the United States professional golf tour, convinced he's headed for his best year yet.

"If you've got the strength, you've got to win," the Toronto golfer said before taking off for the winter circuit.

After 10 weeks of training with weights and gymnastic equipment, he is stronger. He can lift 440 pounds with his legs and 190 with his arms—23 pounds more than his own weight.

His shoulders have increased to size 42 from 39 and his legs are so big "I can't get into any of my old pants."

The main advantage to this training, he said, is swing control. During last year's tour, "I didn't have the knowledge that when I wanted a certain type of shot I would be able to reproduce the swing."

Knudson also did some serious study of his putting, which he considers the "weakest part of my game."

"I did a one testing and found out some interesting things.

"I putted balls from above, below and beside the hole. . . . I discovered I could make 90 per cent from above the hole.

"Uphill was no good. That's supposed to be the best place to be but I can't bang in the ball."

He is also taking his wife and baby with him on the tour and "that's a change for the better."

He tried it solo last year and had a poor year.

His best finish was second in the Masters' Tournament in Augusta, Ga. He finished with a 72-hole score of 282, one stroke back of George Archer.

The $12,333 he won increased his winnings up to that point to $20,000.

One thing that hasn't changed is Knudson's dress. While most pro golfers resemble peacocks, Knudson sticks to his banker-style clothes.

FOR SALE

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best".

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have for sale. Don't say "Have for sale a nice piece of furniture" but say "Chesterfield for sale, that nice" Space is limited, so be brief.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers cannot spend money on articles unless they know complete or definite information. Don't say "Typewriter for sale" but say "Underwood typewriter for sale".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the readers to reply. Don't say "Phone 962-2555 after 5 p.m." but say "Phone 962-2555 after 5 p.m." Don't say "Write Box A-1" but say "Write Box A-1, The Intelligencer".

4—THE GREATEST READER APpeal comes to anyone who can use the article or service you offer. You can stop your ad in the event of needs, but it is always best to run it for a few days.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know before you would answer such an ad. Then you will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying, your used or new merchandise. These people are looking for what you have to offer. Don't overlook the buy. Give your price. Many sales are lost because the reader doesn't know the price.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so because they say lack of readership, but because they are not attractive worded and do not contain enough information.

Entering Nuclear Age

Hydro continues as Canada's No. 1 source of electrical power but nuclear plants are expected to make a major contribution to expansion over the next 20 years. Graph shows proportionate contributions by various sources between 1960 and 1990. (CP Newsmap)

Wolves Win Out

BANCROFT, Ont. (CP) — A sheep farmer in Wingle near Bancroft's Bay has gone out of business after 15 years sheep farming because he can't compete with the wolves. Ben Madigan lost 16 sheep out of a flock of 250 since September. Dogs got two and the township compensated him for them. But when he went to the government about the loss to wolves they told him they could not reimburse him. He said: "I can't afford to feed the (department of) lands and forests wolves so I just had to go out of business."

Intelligencer Subscription Rates

Effective January 1st, 1970 the Intelligencer is delivered by carrier in Belleville, Trenton and surrounding districts as well as across Canada in Stirling, Marmora, Havelock, Norwood, Campbellford, Colborne, Brighton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa.

Motor Route Delivery is available in Belleville, Trenton and surrounding areas payable in the following periods: Three months $5.25; six months $10.50; one year $21.00.

Lower Great Lakes Clean-up Primarily U.S. Responsibility

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The clean-up of the lower Great Lakes is primarily the responsibility of the United States, counsel for the Canadian government Friday told the International Joint Commission on pollution in the Great Lakes.

"But Canada is certainly willing to do its part," said D. Courtney Kingstone, saying that the federal government has already begun to investigate what action should be taken concerning phosphates and other substances entering the waters of Canada."

A report of the IJC's technical advisory board claims phosphorus is one of the major causes of pollution in Lake Erie's western basin. Phosphorus is a nutrient which stimulates plant growth. When a plant dies oxygen in the water is depleted.

Mr. Kingstone referred to the Canada Water Bill of the federal government and said "preliminary discussions with Ontario have begun for the development of a joint approach to the urgent problems of the Great Lakes."

Donald Collins, chairman of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, proposed to the commission that on Ontario's part of the lake compact be formed between Ontario and the eight states, bordering the Great Lakes to crack down on agencies that don't do their share in pollution control.

His call for a strengthening of water control administration was among comments at the opening of a one-day hearing by the International Joint Commission.

The commission is the Canadian - U.S. government body set up 60 years ago to deal with problems affecting boundary waters of the two countries. It is currently holding public hearings on measures to fight pollution in Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

Mr. Collins said each of the eight bordering states should set up water control agencies which along with Ontario would establish uniformity and standards and regulations for the Great Lakes system. He was particularly critical of Ohio, which has no state agency.

"Water pollution control really has to get beyond political boundaries," he said. "People must have an agency they can hold accountable."

But even it could be straightened to ensure that the Detroit pollution problem is not treated as a separate situation, he said.

In his brief to the IJC, D. S. Caverly, OWRC general manager, criticized proposed restrictions on population and industrial development in the Great Lakes basin as a step towards cleaning up the lakes.

Mr. Caverly said Ontario's stand is that it has half of the lake and should be able to develop up to its fifty per cent proportion by its ownership.

"I would hate to see that we are denied purchase of water the U.S. is fully developed," he said.

Will Cost Billion to Clean Filth from Lake Michigan

CHICAGO (AP) — An expert estimated Friday that the cost of cleaning the filth from Lake Michigan would be more than $1,000,000,000.

President Nixon pledged in his State of the Union message Thursday a $10,000,000 drive to combat water pollution.

The state of Illinois alone "has spent over $1,500,000,000," C. Wallace Poston, director of the Great Lakes region office of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration said.

Poston becomes commissioner of Chicago's environmental control department Feb. 1.

Poston estimated the cleanup cost for Lake Michigan at upwards of $1,000,000,000.

"But this is a difficult figure to come by," he said. "I would say it's going to be a very expensive one."

Others in his organization pegged the cost at $2,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000.

Federal officials, together with authorities of the four states which border the lake — Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Michigan — agreed on a cleanup plan in 1968.

By December, 1972, all communities are supposed to have waste treatment facilities. Industries are required to have completed pollution control devices. Phosphate bans on pesticides, combination sewers and storm drainage and dumping are scheduled to be enforced.

This will cost at least $1,000,000,000, but it's not clear where that money is coming from.

"I don't think Lake Michigan is particularly sick," Poston said.

"There's a lot of clean water in the middle of the lake. But there are localized areas where you're giving it hell. We have to act and act fast.

Unofficial groups are not so optimistic.

Anthony D'Amato, an assistant professor of law at Northwestern University and an adviser to the Northwestern Students for a Better Environment, said it is impossible to put a dollar figure on the cost of cleaning up Lake Michigan. The current proposals, he said, are avoiding the issue.

"They're talking about municipal treatment plants while they're ringing the lake with huge atomic power plants," D'Amato said.

He said the heat and radioactive pollution from atomic plants "could kill the lake even faster than what's being done now."

"I don't feel you can use more technology to undo what technology has done," D'Amato said. "Instead of treating the wastes and dumping them back in, they should process them into organic fertilizers. And instead of building dangerous atomic power plants, they should develop new power sources."

Hard to Get Rid Of Plantar Warts

Mumbo-jumbo. Silly incantations. Anything you say or do (even a waving of the hands) will make some warts disappear.

The reason? They would have disappeared without medication or any sort of physical or mental therapy — given time. Warts are like mysterious guests: they come and go unbidden.

But there are, of course, exceptions. For example, consider plantar warts. It takes more than mumbo-jumbo to remove them. They are painful and stubborn and almost incapacitate those whose work demands they be on their feet most of the time.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been suffering for over a year now with plantar wart. I have had surgery, but even in the hospital for eight days. But weeks later the wart returned. I am now using a cane to relieve the pressure on my foot when I walk. I am even getting pains up the back of my leg.

I hope there is some way of removing it completely so it doesn't recur again. I am now in the process of traveling X-000 miles to another doctor to see if his surgery will cure it as I won't suffer alone any more. I would appreciate any information you can give. — Mrs. D.

* * *

Comment: I know you are not exaggerating. I receive many letters from readers which attest to the stubbornness of plantar warts.

These warts basically no different from other warts except that they occur on the sole of the foot, the plantar surface. The scientific term is "verruca plantaris." The reason for its being painful is because they sustain the pressure of the body's weight.

Many orthopedists and skin specialists believe that treatment of a plantar wart by X-rays or by surgery should not be considered until more conservative means have been tried, such as special shoes and padding to diminish the pressure on the wart. Some try freezing; others suggest the use of repeated warm foot soaks nightly; still others use medications like salicylic acid, or advise the use of electrocoagulation to burn out the wart.

Whichever method is used, most sufferers will agree that a good measure of patience and forbearance are also essential. However stubborn, most patients at last become free from these painful warts.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been to two doctors. One gives me digitalis for my heart and the other has me taking nicotinic acid. Which one is more injurious? I know they are both wrong. Will they cure or will I have to take them the rest of my life? I am 65 years old. — Mrs. A.

Comment: I am reprinting your letter for two reasons. First to reassure you that proper use of digitalis and nicotinic acid under your doctors' supervision will not harm you.

Second, as an example for those who act as if life is all over for them when they reach the "ancient" age of 50. Nothing could be further from that an 65-year-old is still interested in "the rest of my life"?

For Mr. U.: I am glad you found something out. Ears "jammed up with wax" is a job for an ear specialist or family doctor. Self-treatment has damaged many an ear.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 25

Your birthday today: Your progress in the coming year depends on your ability to learn from experience and a steady effort to improve your skills. Past errors should be dropped once and for all. A turning point comes in late spring. Activity increases, your earnings tend to improve. Family life runs in cycles. Circumstances which indicate changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Join with your neighbors in community unity. Children swarm about and create noisy confusion in your home. Cut-ins in timing makes the difference today. Exercise a little within reason.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Gambling would not work out even as a rationalization this Sunday. Take a formal manner, dress well but not beyond normal for the situation. There should be some news for an evening celebration.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Family conferences are favored. Fresh ideas about the future and what can be done with your share of it probably come up almost casually. Invest some time and perhaps a bit of money in getting up to date.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): After your share of the community expression of faith, make an hour of your convictions to see the latest changes. Some of it does not appeal to your sense of humor, but probably something can be done yet. A quiet home evening is preferable.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Competitive action is indicated strongly. Select your rivals, seek a chance to work out the ground rules. Gather support for your side of any debate. By evening you should be tired enough to simply sit and enjoy your home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Strangers, outsiders have comments to offer. However you are more aware of the reasons things are as they are. The overall fills with gusty, humorous conversation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): A longstanding secret with shows signs of coming true. Work at it quietly, and keep your self counsel until later. Make the day a pleasant exercise in moderation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Be straightforward and, in turn, take everything at face value. Keep any reservations to yourself. Avoid definitive conclusions to prevail. The evening is good for modest entertainment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Set out early in good humor for a day of exploration. Make plans you have not seen before, new acquaintances. Hidden social or political backing is available — strange if you don't make a specific effort to organize or direct it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You receive an unexpected favor and have no ready way of acknowledging it. Exercise is needed. Catch up with your favorite sports and pastimes. Make an estimate of what is settled in long evening discussions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): An idea that comes to you in early regardless of what road you were suffering when it occurred. Make use of every connection you have to check facts, to find further information for your new plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You are called on to understand more than most people do, and meet the demand. Take your share in the community's expression of faith. Catch up on all the news. Spend the evening reflecting on what you have learned. Visitors may distract you.

For January 26

Your birthday today: Personal and professional advantages are featured this year. Strive to make use of every opportunity for advancement and to put aside a tithe of your earnings in a sound investment. Your ideas of what is fun and what sort of individuals interest you may show a shift as events bring you into contact with a wider circle of people.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You now become aware that a intangy around you have more or less psychic gifts and you cannot long hold much of a secret from them.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Emotional interests awaken suddenly. Take a good look at yourself; do something about any feature or quality that distresses you.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Business with official agencies goes more smoothly now. Be well ahead of those whenever you have appointments. Gather your best friends and compare notes, as shopping together.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): A great deal is gained from conversation with others in similar lines of business. Long trips should be in advanced stages of planning by now. Begin a campaign to expand business contacts and improve existing connections.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Some long forgotten favor you extended comes back to you now. Get estimates on work really needed in your property or home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): In an atmosphere of good humor, ask for whatever you really want and make the most of the answers you get.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Seek favors where needed for yourself and your friends. Impromptu arrangements come off more easily today; keep matters simple to permit greater freedom of movement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): A pleasant surprise comes in the midst of your routines. Proceed with original plans, prudently but firmly. Social and romantic ventures thrive beyond expectations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The restless you begin now may take three months to complete, just enough thought into your planning to take the time element into account.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Unpredictable friends are probably up to some delightful mischief. Catch up with correspondence; finish neglected projects, and balance your cheque stubs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): It's a long pull to September, but some actions come to a conclusion, about that time. Get busy now to meet a worthwhile deadline — a course of study or a creative project.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): If official matters, legal concerns come up today, settle them promptly. Go shopping for clothing and perhaps a gift for someone you love.

Boys Didn't Want Charge Laid

Crown Lawyer Says He Was Told to Stay Away

TORONTO (CP) — John Kerr, assistant Crown attorney, testified Friday a policeman said he stayed away from a court case in 1966 because he had been told to do so by Deputy Chief John Murray.

Mr. Kerr told a police commission inquiry that although he had withdrawn the impaired driving charge he wanted to bring it in court again. But later he decided not to press the matter.

But he said that Insp. George McGowan, senior detective in the case, told him: "The boys don't want it tried. A couple of detectives downtown this man has done favors for."

Mr. Kerr said the impaired driving charge was against George William Astle, a vice-president of Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd.

The public inquiry, which opened Jan. 5, was called by the Metropolitan Toronto police commission to deal with allegations by Constable Ian Samuel and former policeman Peter Lott that senior police officials had interfered with charges against influential persons.

Mr. Kerr and Austin Cooper, inquiry counsel, produced court records indicating Astle was arrested in July, 1966, and that his case went to court five times before it was disposed of Oct. 28 of the same year.

Mr. Kerr said that on Oct. 17, date of Astle's second last court appearance, he (Kerr) had spoken to Constable Samuel "and that's what alerted me."

Earlier Friday, Deputy Chief Murray denied interfering in a drunk driving charge against bank manager John Ferguson Stein, dismissed May 1, 1968, when police witnesses did not appear in court.

Insp. Harry Fielding, named in Lott's allegations as the person who relayed the deputy chief's orders to Patrol, Sgt. John Bulmer to stay away from court, also denied interference in the case.

Quebec Doctors Plan Work Stoppage

MONTREAL (CP) — The 2,135-member Quebec Federation of Resident Doctors announced Friday night it will start a partial work stoppage Feb. 1 unless the provincial government makes an acceptable new wage offer in current stalled contract negotiations.

Dr. Georges Cartier, federation president, told a news conference that the resident doctors and medical interns in the group will curb night guard duty if the dispute is not resolved. They work from 80 to 100 hours weekly, he said.

The action would affect most hospitals in Quebec.

Talks between the federation and the provincial health department have reached an impasse after stretching for nine months, Dr. Cartier said.

The doctors are asking for a 37 per-cent wage increase, reduced from an original demand of 44 per cent. The government is sticking to an offer of a 22-per-cent increase.

Dr. Cartier said current pay ranges from $4,500 a year for junior interns to $6,700 for residents with at least four years of seniority.

This compared with an Ontario salary range of $6,350 to $9,800, scheduled to increase in January, 1971, from $7,000 to $11,000.

The previous two-year contract covering Quebec residents and interns expired last June.

Stocks Move Lower

Profit-taking Erases Earlier Gains

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Heavy profit-taking in two sessions on Canadian stock markets this week erased most of the gains made last week.

An oil strike in the Northwest Territories by Imperial Oil announced Jan. 15 sent prices soaring that session and the next.

However, profit-taking sliced away most of those gains Monday. The market advanced steadily for the next three sessions before profits were cut again Friday.

Part of Friday's losses were blamed on President Nixon's State of the Union address Thursday.

Observers said investors, who eye the United States economy as carefully as the Canadian situation, seemed confused by Nixon's statements that he would reduce federal spending and, at the same time, spend $10,000,000,000 for pollution control and double spending for law enforcement.

Nixon's budget message later this month should give the details.

This week, as last, stocks of companies with interests in the Arctic, and particularly around Imperial's Mackenzie delta find, were the most actively traded.

Imperial said Monday that the oil found at Its Atkinson Point well in the delta was medium-gravity sweet crude, or with a low sulphur content.

Oil with a low sulphur content is easier and cheaper to process than sulphurous oil.

Sweet oil is also desirable because of concern over the contribution that sulphurous gases make to air pollution.

The Atkinson Point oil was found at 5,700 feet, about the same depth as the Initial Prudhoe Bay discovery on the North Slope of Alaska.

Drilling and coring at the well have been suspended to permit the well to be cased and to enable logs to be run to gain more information about the thickness and other characteristics of the rock strata.

However, Imperial made no reference to the volume of oil found.

P. N. H. White, head of Imperial's production department, said:

"We will not know the volume until we have deepened the well. Volume depends on the thickness and general characteristics of the reservoir."

Statistically, on index at the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrials were down 1.77 to 182.55, western oils 6.81 to 215.09, golds 1.89 to 156.45 and base metals 1.62 to 115.86.

Volume was 16,145,000 shares compared with 18,302,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 518 to 248 with 233 issues unchanged.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite Index was down 1.67 to 179.21. Volume was 6,542,000 shares compared with 8,974,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 212 to 128 with 116 issues unchanged.

Saltfish Marketing Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave quick second reading Friday to a bill setting up a federal marketing and regulatory agency for saltfish before referring the measure to its fisheries commitee for detailed study.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said the proposed agency—to be known as the Canada Saltfish Corporation—will enhance the incomes of saltfish fishermen by expanding their markets and advising them on the best methods of production.

The corporation should be able to tell fishermen before the season begins in May what prices will be paid for saltfish. Fishermen will be paid for their catches when they are delivered by the corporation, he said.

The Commons also gave second reading to four other bills reforming federal regulations governing trust and insurance companies with assets totalling $19,200,000,000.

The bills, followers from the last session of Parliament, were referred to the finance committee for further study.

Indians and Metis Win Fight For Federal Training Program

LAC LA BICHE, Alta. (CP) — A sit-in by Indians and Metis to force resumption of federal financial support to a training program for native people has apparently worked.

Federal and provincial officials met with the protesters at the Alberta NewStart dormitory school Friday to hear their grievances.

The furore in this tiny community 180 northwest of Edmonton began a week ago when 250 Indians and Metis—people of mixed Indian-white parentage—gained peaceful access to the school when granted permission to use it for two days of meetings.

Alberta NewStart was shut down Dec. 31 after about 18 months of operation because of a federal decision to decrease funds for the federal-provincial program.

The chamber of commerce voted almost unanimously in favor earlier this week of contributing $400 to the cause, for use by the Metis Association of Alberta "as they see fit."

Jack Shields, executive-director of Alberta NewStart said in a telephone interview early today Ottawa would make some funds available to re-open the centre immediately.

"The people pressed their demands . . . they certainly made their point," Mr. Shields said. "The federal officials were in tune with what the people wanted."

Anesthetic Is Blamed For Fatal Liver Cases

MONTREAL (CP)—Administration of the anesthetic halothane can result in an allergy so severe that further use will cause rapid liver failure and death, Dr. Charles Trey, assistant professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, said Friday night.

Dr. Trey reported a hospital survey that showed that of 64 patients who had liver trouble after receiving halothane, 57 suffered severe liver failure and only two survived. Fifty had had the anesthetic previously.

In Canada, 14 fatalities had been reported among patients who had had halothane. Eleven of these were patients with two or more exposures to it.

Libya Gets Advisers

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Egyptian advisers, technicians, teachers and others have been streaming into Libya to help the young officers who toppled King Idris last Sept. 1. Many of them are moving into key positions.

The influx has paralleled Libya's abrupt change in its basic foreign policy from a generally pro-Western course to one of militant pan-Arabism.

Another indication of the growing influence was the disclosure in Paris last week that several Egyptians were members of the Libyan group that went to the French capital in December to negotiate the sale of 100 Mirage jets to the new regime.

'Don't All Talk at Once'

Things are never quite this bad around the Vincent home in Carrying Place. Not all the offspring talk at once — despite the fact they're champion speakers. For instance Billy, 12, (left) and Lisa, 11, (right) often test their speeches on big sister Heather, 15, who started family's public-speaking tradition. Saturday, the young 'uns added more trophies to Vincent collection at Canadian Legion speech contest in Belleville. (For details, see Page 2.)

Separate Jordan Peace With Israel Suggested

LONDON (AP) — A former Conservative minister urges the Western powers to unite trying for a Middle East deal with the Soviet Union and to promote instead a separate Israeli-Jordanian peace.

Julian Amery, an influential opposition member of Parliament, also suggests that in an Israeli-Jordanian settlement Jerusalem, or at least the Old City, should be given a special status similar to that of Vatican City.

Another element of a separate Israeli-Jordanian peace, Amery says, would have to be plans for resettling the estimated 1,500,000 Arabs displaced in the wars of 1948, 1956 and 1967. The United States and Britain should help finance their resettlement, as he sees it.

"The Soviets may not want war in the Middle East," Amery said in an interview after returning from a visit to the region. "But the last thing the Soviets want is an Arab-Israeli settlement."

Amery held misjudgment posts under former prime ministers Harold Macmillan and Sir Alex Douglas-Home.

He is a friend of King Hussein of Jordan and Israeli officials, including Defence Minister Moshe Dayan.

Israel Promised U.S. Aid

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Against a background of charges that the United States was abandoning Israel to its enemies, President Nixon Sunday night promised Israel additional arms if needed to counter a power shift in the Middle East.

Praising Israel as a friendly government, Nixon said:

"We would prefer restraint in the shipment of arms to this area, but we are maintaining a careful watch on the relative strength of the forces there and we will not hesitate to provide arms to friendly states as the need arises."

His statement of U.S. policy came in a letter to delegates at an emergency meeting on the Middle East called by presidents of major American Jewish organizations.

"The United States is prepared to supply military equipment to support the effort of friendly governments, like Israel, to defend the safety of their people," he said.

Israelis Bomb Egyptian Bases

Israeli jets made an hour-long strike against Egyptian military positions in the central sector of the Suez Canal today, the Israeli command said, hitting army camps, and mortar and anti-aircraft positions.

A spokesman said all planes returned safely to base.

Israeli and Arab forces battled on all fronts during the weekend, and Israel denied reports that Arab forces shot down three Israeli planes and attacked a radar station.

Ontario Water Study By U.S. Army Is Hit

WAWA, Ont. (CP) — The Northern Ontario council of the New Democratic Party passed a resolution during the weekend urging an official federal protest against "encroachment" by the United States Army Corps of Engineers on Canadian territory.

The motion said Northern Ontario residents are "increasingly disturbed" about the possibility of northern waters being diverted into the Great Lakes system.

The resolution was passed Saturday after Jack Stokes (NDP—Thunder Bay) told 41 delegates to the council's third annual convention that the U.S. Army has been paying more than 40 persons living along the north shore of Lake Superior and Lake Nipigon to conduct ice and water surveys.

The motion calls on the NDP to insist that any surveys conducted should be under provincial supervision and that Northern Ontario residents be given assurance by the federal and provincial governments that "our water is not for sale."

It said surveys were being done without the knowledge of the provincial and federal governments and that Ottawa should protest to the U.S. government.

Nigeria Denies Army Misdeeds

By James Pringle

LAGOS (Reuters) — Nigeria today appeared determined to defend the conduct of its troops and its relief efforts in the war-ravaged former secessionist region.

A statement issued Sunday night by the federal information ministry said charges of looting, raping and indiscipline levelled against the 3rd Marine Commando Division "are unfounded in their totality.".

The 3rd Marine Commando Division, which captured the last secessionist capital of Owerri and the airstrips at Uli and Uga, has been accused of excesses by correspondents who visited the area last week.

The statement launched a fierce attack on the British Broadcasting Corp. and the Voice of America for their reporting of the final days of the war and its aftermath.

It said that both organizations were bent on causing confusion among the victorious troops but added that their "heinous propaganda has failed."

The government statement acknowledged, however, that there had been a redeployment of troops of the Marine Commando Division and the 1st Division, a mainly Moslem force which is the core of the original Nigerian army.

Earlier reports had indicated that the marine commandos had been withdrawn from Orlu province, and that the 1st Division, which is made up mainly of Hausa soldiers from northern Nigeria, had moved in.

Wilson, Trudeau Confer

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain arrived here Sunday for talks with Prime Minister Trudeau and said that problems in Nigeria "will be high on the agenda."

"I know we shall cover a great deal of ground," he said shortly after he stepped from a Royal Air Force jet aircraft.

"We'll be discussing all aspects of world affairs."

An external affairs department spokesman had said earlier that East-West relations and the trade implications of Britain's possible entry into the European Common Market would be the main subjects discussed during Mr. Wilson's 28-hour visit to Ottawa.

"There will be some time for discussion on our friendly and fruitful bilateral arrangements," said Mr. Wilson, adding that the list of bilateral problems is "much shorter" than it has been in the past.

Nursing Home Aid Planned

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Thomas Wells said Sunday the Ontario government plans to pay some or all the cost of nursing home care.

Mr. Wells said in an interview the needed legislation is being prepared for cabinet approval and will be presented to the legislature early in the next session which begins Feb. 24.

The health minister said any new program probably would not come under either hospital insurance or the medical care plan. He indicated it would be under a separate scheme.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A storm that brought up to half a foot of snow as well as some drizzle and freezing rain in parts of southern Ontario Sunday evening and night is moving eastward toward New England. In its wake a few snowflurries are occurring. Another disturbance is heading this way from the Dakotas. This one is weak but some light snow will likely overspread most of the province from the west late tonight or on Tuesday.

Leader Voices Appeal

TORONTO (CP) — Relations between the federal government and its employees have been embittered by the government's attitude at the bargaining table, Claude Edwards, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said today.

"The high hopes we had for an almost exclusive use of arbitration—have begun to fade," he told delegates at the opening of the alliance convention which continues until Friday.

"This is the principal reason why we (the executive) are asking you to establish a contingency fund which could be used for strikes and extensive arbitration procedures."

Mr. Edwards said the government's attitude is leading alliance membership to believe that it takes the threat of strikes to effect just settlements. If such a belief grows, he said, then "settlements will inevitably be secured by the threat of illegal strikes or other unlawful disruptions."

Under federal legislation civil service bargaining groups may adopt either an arbitration or a conciliation—strike route in reaching agreements with the treasury board. Most bargaining groups in the past have opted for arbitration.

Mr. Edwards said creation of a strike fund would enable federal employees to force the government to adopt a more reasonable approach to arbitration.

The Spotlight Is on Youth

Vigorous participation of young people in community theatre was in the spotlight in Belleville during the weekend. A two-day conference on youtheatre drew attendance from around Eastern Ontario. Conference brought to city such leaders of the movement as department of education's youtheatre director Candice O'Connor, here engaged in impromptu discussion at Theatre Guild's Pinnacle Playhouse.

Father and Two Children Among Snowmobile Fatalities

PELHAM, Ont. (CP) — The death of a man and his two children in a car-snowmobile collision at an intersection in this community 10 miles southwest of St. Catharines has brought the weekend snowmobile fatality total in Ontario to four.

Since Christmas, at least 19 Canadians have been killed in snowmobile accidents, all but two on the highways.

Albert McCready, 25, of Fenwick, Ont., died in Welland County hospital early Sunday following the Saturday night collision. His children, Raymond, 4, and Laurie, 2, were killed at the intersection when the fuel tank on the snowmobile ignited. A police spokesman said the fire was caused by sparks resulting from the collision.

Sunday, Fraser McClement, 31, was killed when his snowmobile crashed into a parked car in Listowel, 30 miles north of Stratford.

Last week new regulations for the vehicles were discussed at a meeting of Ontario transport department officials and the Ontario Safety League.

Transport Minister Irwin Haskell is expected to announce new regulations after the next session of the legislature opens Feb. 24. These will likely restrict Ontario's estimated 100,000 snowmobiles to the shoulders of rural secondary roads and some northern highways.

Wow! You Won, You Won

Winner of the Canadian Cancer Society's Miss Hope, 1970 contest (right) was named at the society's campaign seminar held in Toronto Jan. 24. Coming out on top was Miss Judy Sharpe, 21, of Picton, who represented East Central District. Judy is a student nurse attending St. Joseph's, Peterborough. Congratulating her is Miss Mary Packard, 19, of Colborne, who is attending the Belleville General Hospital's school of nursing. Miss Packard represented the Quinte - Thousand Island District.

Air Base Isolated, TV Off Due to Two Power Breaks

A broken conductor at the Sidney Transformer station north of Trenton, combined with a pole-top fire in another Sidney township area, completely isolated the Canadian Armed Forces base at Trenton with result that the air station and Bayside area were without power for nearly four hours Sunday afternoon and evening.

The power interruption also cut of cable TV reception in Belleville, the break starting about the middle of the afternoon hockey game.

"It was a real co-incidence," stated Norman Manning, information officer for the area Ontario Hydro office at Belleville.

Mr. Manning said the initial interruption at the transformer station was caused by two broken conductors.

But during switching operations to restore power to the interrupted areas it was found there was a second break in another area which completely isolated the air station and Bayside district.

The second interruption, caused by a pollution arc which set a transformer pole afire, prevented an alternate supply of power being switched to the air station.

The result was that the air station was forced to switch to diesel operated emergency power until hydro was restored.

The initial power interruption came at 3.41 p.m. and power was off for three hours and 40 minutes.

Mr. Manning said it took two crews less than two hours to do the actual repairs, with the other one and a half hours being taken up in isolating the trouble and getting the necessary materials to the two interruption areas.

Power was not interrupted in Belleville, but cable TV service was interrupted for the duration of the Sidney power break.

Cable TV officials said it may seem odd that cablevue can be off in Belleville when there is no power interruption but this was actually the case Sunday.

The reason is that cablevue receives its transmission power from the Frankford hydro area which was not involved by the dual power break.

Sunday's cablevue interruption was the second experienced in Belleville over the weekend.

Friday evening a broken conductor on a hydro line at Foxboro interrupted cablevue service for two 15-minute periods. The hydro was off for better than an hour before service was restored.

Youth Provides Stimulus For Community Theatre

There's always been more to community theatre than meets the eye — even from the front row.

But now, even more exciting things are happening behind the scenes — active participation of young people.

That active participation is the public view for the first time during the weekend as Belleville Theatre Guild acted as host for Eastern Ontario's first ever conference on youtheatre.

For two full days — Saturday and Sunday — several score young people conferred on mutual problems, heard lectures and participated in workshops.

The activity also was significant for what it symbolized, says Candice O'Connor, who heads the department of education's youtheatre program.

The new style and attitudes of youth's participation in community theatre — an arena once almost exclusively adult — is making a basic change, she believes.

"It's bringing theatre back to the people," she says. "Somewhere it hasn't been in years."

Eventually such widespread participation by today's youth means a raising of critical standards among tomorrow's adult audiences, she points out.

A relatively new phenomenon, youtheatre now is gaining increased attention as an integral part of the cultural scene.

Growth has its dangers, however.

Youtheatre must be wary of becoming totally professional, she warns. It must remain an accessible organization for community youth.

Its acceptance on the community theatre scene was emphasized at the Belleville conference by a high attendance figure of adults.

This was one of the things that set the event apart, believes Roy Higgins, the Guild's artistic director who launched the youtheatre movement here.

"It was the first actual conferences where adults and young people confronted each other and discussed their problems," he said.

Students Speak Out In Legion Contest

The Vincent family brought home more public speaking trophies to Carrying Place during the weekend.

So did the LaChapelle girls in Belleville.

But only some of the faces were familiar as the city's Canadian Legion launched its annual public speaking contest. Most important, the themes of the youngsters' speeches were new — and contemporary.

The offsprings of Mr. and George Vincent are veterans of the speaking arena.

The eldest — 15-year-old Heather started in county school competition back in 1966.

Saturday, her brother Billy, 12, won first prize in the Legion's junior section for Grades 7-8.

Sister Lisa, 11, who last year went all the way to the provincial finals at Niagara Falls, took second prize in the grades 1-6 section.

She was also helped by Madoc for the Legion's zone contest next Sunday, where he will compete with winners from other area communities.

Also representing Belleville will be Lana LaChappelle, 17, and her sister Sandra, 14, who won both senior discision in the Belleville contest.

Fro Lana, it was the second successive year she has taken first prize in the contest.

Held Saturday and Sunday it drew participants from various local public and secondary schools:

Themes of their presentations were equally varied and up-to-date — ranging from wigs to snowmobiles to body language.

There also wa. an appeal against prejudice — an address that won 16-year-old Jacqueline Whiting of Quinte Secondar School a second - place prize.

"There's enough hurt in this world without letting it continue," she warned the audience.

"We have to stop prejudice now . . . before it kills the very heart of society. Don't fight prejudice . . . Don't be devoured by it," she appealed.

YMCA Open House Designed To Show Program to Public

This is the week the citizens of Belleville have a chance to have a close up look at what their YMCA is doing for the community.

And not just from the outside looking in, either.

Today saw the beginning of YMCA week, and an open invitation to the public to drop in and have a look see at what the Y has to offer.

And of course, participate, free of charge, in the scores of programs that tie apart of the daily routine.

According to Dave Hahn, men's and boys' program secretary, a full week of activities is planned to give everyone the opportunity to get involved in Y week.

This evening, it is awards night for some 150 separate school students taking part in the learn to swim program.

"On Wednesday, Mr. Hahn related, "there will be a bridge party at 8 p.m. for anyone who enjoys the game. Then on Friday, we will be holding a teen euchre party from 7 to 9 p.m.

The end of Y week will be culminated with a number of displays put on for the public, starting at 1.30 and running until five.

"We are planning synchronized swimming exhibitions, judo and baton twirling demonstrations," added Mr. Hahn.

Mr. Hahn sees the Saturday program as a chance for many of the Y members to let the public in on the skills they have developed through YMCA programs and activities.

He emphasized all facilities and classes are open to the public during this week.

Stressing that Y officials are hoping for a good turnout, Mr. Hahn indicated the sole purpose of the week, "to promote the idea of the YMCA by giving people a chance to see what their Y does."

"Perhaps we can interest some of the citizens in our community into becoming active participating members in the organization by putting their skills to work."

General Secretary of the Y, Bert Messecar said that in addition to the open house activities during this week, luncheons are being planned for Wednesday and Thursday, to include board members of the United Community Services and members of City Council.

"At these luncheons, we will be explaining to our guests exactly what the YMCA is doing, and what programs we have to offer", said Mr. Messacar.

"We are interested in passing on as much information as we can about our organization, as well as inviting any questions city council members or UCS board members may have," he continued.

"Of course, we are equally as interested in any suggestions the public may have to offer, on how we can improve the programs and activities we already have, or initiate new ones," emphasized Mr. Messacar.

Quinte Weather

More and More Snow Here

Don't put those snow shovels away yet!

The weatherman says we are in for more snow flurries for the next few days and then heavier snow on Friday.

And that on top of 3.3 inches of snow received in the Belleville - Trenton area over the weekend.

The duty forecaster at the Trenton armed forces base today said the five - day weather reported called for about normal temperatures for this time of year with daily snow flurries and heavier snow to end the five - day period.

But the weekend snowfall and moderating temperatures was a big relief from the zero weather which Quinte area residents have suffered with for the past five weeks.

So far this year there has been 5½ inches of snow at Belleville.

But the total for the season has been a whopping 36.2 inches. The three feet of snow received has been reduced by occasional mild weather to only eight inches currently on the ground.

The weekend snowfall brought city snow removal equipment out in full force.

"We've got everything out," stated a works department official this morning.

And "everything" means seven roadway plows, two front end loaders to clear intersections and a grader.

In addition four of the five sidewalk plows were on the job. The fifth sidewalk plow is in the repair shop for a new motor.

Alan A. Foote Installed Head of Eureka Lodge

The installation of Alan A. Foote as worshipful master of Eureka Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 283, G.R.C., was held recently in the Masonic Temple before a large turnout of past masters and members of Masonry from the city and district.

Mohawks Plan Language Revival on Tyendinaga Reserve

TYENDINAGA — An adult education program to restore some basic features of Indian culture is being drafted at the Mohawk reserve here.

Its first gets under way next month with study classes in the Mohawk language for adults.

Also being planned is a course in Indian art and crafts work.

The project's success could stimulate a vital concern of reserve leaders, Chief Earl Hill indicated yesterday.

The concern is most apparent over language in the use of Mohawk on the Bay of Quinte reserve has been dwindling for some time, he says.

Had the situation been allowed to continue, the Tyendinaga Mohawks might have lost the use of their native tongue, he fears.

"Our language is the most basic thing we need from this program," says the chief.

"Had we waited much longer it would have been extinct."

Such education programs had been pondered for years. But no funds were available to make them a reality.

The restoration first became visible this year, with availability of a $2,000 federal grant for adult education, Chief Hill said.

"We'd have been busy before if we'd had the money," he added.

Now, the process is under way. Circulars have been mailed to the reserve's 1,050 inhabitants.

The reserve has 1,050 inhabitants, although the precise number of adults is not immediately known.

Already there's been a response — about 45 people have filed forms indicating their participation and this is a heartening initial reaction, Chief Hill says.

"I expect the final registration will be more than we estimated," he believes.

The language study will be conducted by instructors from other Six Nation reserves — probably Brantford. Necessary books will also likely be made available from the Brantford Mohawks, where the native language is even taught in the schools, says the chief.

By contrast, Mohawk has been on the decline at Tyendinaga.

This has particularly been evident for about the last 30 years, says Chief Hill, although he can give no one ready explanation for it.

"I can remember quite well when a lot of our people talked Mohawk," he recalls. "When the older people wanted to keep anything from the children they spoke their own language."

Eventually, language classes might also be introduced into reserve schools, he says.

However, this would depend on centralization of school facilities making possible classes on a rotating basis.

Language restoration is more a matter of cultural preservation, Chief Hill doubted if Mohawk would replace English as a working language on the reserve.

"I don't know if we'd ever go that far," he says. "The idea is that everyone should be able to speak his own language and pass it on to upcoming generations.

"It's time we brought Mohawk back. We feel it's essential we know our own language."

The chief expects the classes to begin some time "early in February."

The reserves' recreation committee meantime is also exploring details of the arts and crafts course, which the chief expects to begin "within a short period."

After the Impact

Family of eight narrowly escaped serious injury when automobile was hit by freight train at Sidney township level crossing Sunday. Impact swept car down embankment.

Train Hits Automobile, Eight in Narrow Escape

TRENTON — A single second may have made a lifetime of difference for an airman, his wife and six children near here yesterday when their car was wrecked by a freight train.

Police say "just another second" and the accident at a CNR level - crossing in Sidney township a mile east of here could have had more serious implications.

The Sunday drive for Cpl. Harold Rutledge — recently posted to CFB Trenton — and his family ended "very, very luckily," said an investigating OPP officer.

Most of the Rutledges escaped with minor injuries when the automobile was brushed 45 feet down an embankment by the eastbound 91-car CNR freight, say police.

The ones most seriously hurt, police reported, were three-year-old Tracy Lynn, with a broken leg, and Kim, 12, who suffered a broken arm and lacerations.

Cpl. Rutledge escaped with bruises, his wife with a sprained ankle. Clarke, eight, had a cut chin, while Dale, 10, Hal, seven and Tony Lee, six, escaped injury.

The mishap occurred during a break in a day - long snowstorm.

Police say Cpl. Rutledge spotted the train as he drove up to the crossing and wrenched his car aside to avoid an impact.

The freight, with 75 cars filled with cargo, slammed into the rear of the automobile.

Injured members of the family were treated at Trenton Memorial hospital.

Passengers On Buses At Record

The Belleville Transit Commission last year carried the largest number of passengers to use city buses since the inception of the commission back in 1950.

Figures presented at the commission's inaugural meeting showed a 6.55 per cent increase in passengers last year over 1968 with the count of paying passengers — 950,- 221 — being the largest in the Commission's 10 - year history.

The figure does not include transfer passenger or charter work carried out during the year.

Mrs. Marylea Burtt was reappointed commission chairman for 1970. The other two members are Ronald Moorman and Frank Follwell.

'Watch Your Step'

Pedestrian crosswalks have been initiated in three locations in Trenton as an aid to those stepping out in heavy traffic. To explain crosswalk procedure, police have begun a crosswalk education campaign, with posters such as this one shown by St. Sgt. R. A. King.

Raise Arm Before Crossing Trenton Pedestrians Told

TRENTON — The town's police force kicked off the new council-directed crosswalk education program Friday evening.

Police distributed leaflets to pedestrians and inserted them under car windshield wipers in the downtown area both Friday night and Saturday.

Saturday, Sgt. Steenburg patrolled Dundas St. West in a van equipped with a public address system. His mission was to broadcast the proper crosswalk procedure for both pedestrians and motorists.

This weekend's activity was the initiation of a continuous program to educate people to use crosswalks, rather than jay-walk," clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry said this morning.

Starting today, posters will be distributed to the town's merchants for display in their stores.

The posters and leaflets ask the motorists to look for pedestrians who have their arms raised or outstretched, and come to full stop to let them cross the street.

Pedestrians are requested to raise their arms, signifying their desire to cross the street, and then proceed to cross after the cars have come to a stop.

Trenton's three crosswalks of this nature are denoted by lighted orange overhead signs and "cross X walk" warning lights.

The location of the cross-walks are Dundas St. West at King St., Front St. at Elgin St. and Dundas St. East at Ontario St.

Put It to Use

Remember the Bonaventure, Canada's erstwhile aircraft carrier?

The Belfast-built vessel was recently phased out of service, as part of the government's economy drive.

Now Ottawa is busily engaged trying to get rid of it. Crown Assets Disposal Corporation and the trade and supply departments are all trying to sell the ship. And, in a move that seems to reflect desperation in Ottawa, a number of foreign governments have been invited to bid for purchase.

All this, while one obvious use seems to present itself — the tragedy of sick and starving children in Biafra.

Yes, why doesn't Canada just give the Bonaventure away — to the International Red Cross — for refitting as a hospital ship? The Biafran situation demands some such imaginative action on behalf of the suffering there. On board such a vessel children could be nursed back to health away from the horrors of the mainland and the petty bickering over infringing Nigerian sovereignty. And if and when the medical problems of the population are eased, the vessel would then be available for help elsewhere, say when an earthquake strikes. Better this than being scrapped, as will be its fate if there are no takers.

Meanwhile if there has ever been any doubt that the camera does not lie, the agonizing pictures of starving Biafran babies should dispel it. The pictures make a mockery of the official reports of Nigerian and foreign observers who claim the situation is not as bad as had been thought.

However, at least one group of children, flown to the Portuguese island of Sao Tome (from which relief supplies until recently were flown into Biafra) has already been nursed back to health in a hospital run by Irish nurses. Seen on CBC television last week, the kiddies were singing happily as if they had never known the horrors of the previous weeks, months and years. It is an interesting blend of International co-operation, that is being involved here, but from whatever the source, this is precisely the kind of help that is needed.

Nigeria itself is clearly incapable of coping with the situation on its own; rather, the emergency is one which can be met only by getting food and medical aid to the starving. Nigeria should permit the assistance already offered by other countries; to refuse to do so is to perpetrate, yet another crime against humanity, of the kind once known in Nazi Germany.

Ferry Danger

The rescue of five passengers of a car which ran over the ferry dock into the water at Wolfe Island has led to a plea by Island reeve T. D. O'Shea to the Ontario government to provide chain link barricades.

On the mainland too, at Kingston, there has been evidence of slackness in maintaining the barriers. A newspaper picture showed the safety chain buried in snow at the ferry dock; next day it was up across the ramp leading to the Wolfe Islander.

Safety on board is another matter to which the authorities should pay more attention. There are no warnings to drivers to apply their emergency brakes for example; it is surprising how many fail to do so, with resulting damage to other vehicles if not to passengers.

Ferries provide an indispensible service to the islanders, but they do pose some problems, and these are among them.

Another serious matter is the lack of medical facilities on the islands. Recently a Wolfe Island farmer received serious neck lacerations when his snowmobile ran into a barbed wire fence at night. He recovered, but the delay involved in having to get to Kingston hospital by ferry could have proved fatal.

The sooner bridges are built the better. There has been talk of providing such links and there is no doubt about their potential. As it is, island life means isolation and always the threat of emergencies of the kind mentioned above.

Keep Them Going

These mid-winter days are hard on a car, but treat it right and the chances are it will not let you down. Ignore essentials like plugs, points and battery, or leave it out all night in the cold and forget to plug it in — and you may be in trouble. The bigger the vehicle the harder they seem to fail, as it were. Yes, the big eights and a tow truck are not infrequent companions at this time. So big or little, cars need that extra special care to keep a fellow mobile in winter.

Congress Urged to Act

War on Crime and Pollution Among Nixon's Priorities

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon Friday dispensed his first State of the Union message, a concoction that could have been labelled "strictly for domestic consumption."

Breaking with the tradition of recent decades, the speech was not aimed at the Kremlin, Peking or Hanoi but at the hearts and minds of Middle America — the voters who could tilt control of Congress in the Republicans in next fall's elections.

He told them his administration will give top priority to the war on crime and pollution — emotional territory that has already proved Nixon fertile in voter support.

With runaway inflation already high on his list of priorities, Nixon said that law enforcement agencies will be the only ones to receive increased funds in his forthcoming budget. On that subject, he said he has trimmed $7,000,000,000 in government spending and will have a balanced budget to present later this month.

It was pretty much of a campaign speech, with jabs at the two preceding Democratic administrations and an uncharacteristic lashing of catch phrases and slogans.

The past, he said, had produced too many visions and too little vision. If the country continued to put good money into bad programs it would end up with bad money and bad programs.

On inflation, which is of major concern to Americans find they must go into debt today because the federal government plans to go into debt yesterday.

In accordance with his reading of the scale of public interest in contemporary America, he hardly mentioned the space program and assigned foreign affairs to a separate message to Congress later.

What he did say on foreign matters, however, seemed somewhat at an echo of the reasoning Canada presented prior to her cutback in NATO commitments and the closing of several foreign diplomatic posts in the name of economy.

"The direction of our new policies" he guided by the fact that Europe and Japan have regained their economic strength and developing countries have "a new sense of pride and . . . determination to assume the responsibility for their own defence."

The U.S. will be faithful to commitments but "we shall reduce our involvement and our presence in other nations' affairs."

With all 435 seats in the House of Representatives and one-third of 100 Senate seats on the line in next November's "off-year" elections, Nixon offered a mild rebuke to the Democratic-controlled Congress for foot-dragging on legislation he has proposed.

He noted particularly that none of the 13 anti-crime bills submitted by the administration last year had yet become law.

The administration, he suggested, has its hands tied in this field until Congress moves.

In general, the speech was a calm reflection of Nixon's orderly concept of the presidency as a place where priorities are set and goals determined.

As an astute politician he has rallied the nation's priorities in an order most likely to appeal to "the Silent Majority" that elected him and may give his party control of Congress in November.

It would be unfair to suggest his only motive is political, but he has adroitly pre-empted Democratic issues, particularly on environment, and there can be little doubt that as of now he has seized the campaign initiative for his party.

"Golly — real magic beans?"

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 26, 1878 . . .

General "Chinese" Gordon and an Egyptian garrison were massacred at Khartoum 85 years ago today—in 1885—by Mahdi Mohammed Ahmed, trying to throw the Egyptians out of Sudan. Khartoum was besieged 317 days and relief arrived two days late. Gordon earned his nickname putting down the revolution of Tai-Ping' in China and was popular in Britain where a day of national mourning was decreed.

1788—Sydney, Australia, was founded as a penal colony.

1956—India became a republic, the first within the British Commonwealth.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—the Russians took Allenburg, Nordenburg, Lotzen and Lyck, Pagian on approaches to Koenigsberg in East Prussia; British 2nd Army and United States 9th Army troops cleared the entire west bank of the Roer River for 40 airline miles from Holland to south of Duren.

Parole System Enjoys 90 Per Cent Success

Hamilton Spectator

A record was set by the National Parole Board last year when it granted parole to 4,796 prisoners. The board now approves about half the number of applications made from eligible prisoners.

After 11 years experience, the parole system has fully justified itself. Slightly over 10 per cent of parolees fail for one reason or another; or, to express it in a more positive way, almost 90 per cent of paroled prisoners complete their parole periods satisfactorily.

The purpose of a penal system in a modern state must be the rehabilitation of the offender and his return to society as a law abiding citizen. Parole is an important element in this process.

It is not a soft or strictly moral way of looking at the problem, but the parole system has reduced Canada's potential prison population, and therefore the cost to the taxpayer. In the 1950s, penitentiaries were seriously overcrowded and, as later experience has shown, need not have been had there been a parole system in operation.

Parole will have the sympathy — or at least the neutrality — of the majority so long as it is closely observes its duty to the public and does not develop into a rubber stamp, as it has so often become across the border.

There will be failures, which is to be expected considering the nature of the work. So long as the board wisely bears in mind that the public is apt to be unforgiving, and to the too early release of criminals convicted of violent crimes against the person, its work will retain a measure of sympathy.

Adults' Unexpressed Interest

Owen Sound Sun-Times

A fact youth is prone to overlook is the great interest many adult church people have in them, a real desire to draw them into that fresh vision they themselves have received such satisfaction and blessing. Unfortunately many adults are not given to expressing themselves verbally or in their lives, in a manner to either show such interest or to reveal what Christianity has really meant to them.

No doubt this inability to provide indication of the fullness of the life they have found has a role in what must be recognized as a general rejection of the church as it is today by young people.

At the same time, however, youth is also failing to communicate, in this instance to reveal in recognizable form what they really expect of the Church.

If young people are serious in their quest for truth, if their proclamation of love as the answer to all man's ills, then they owe it to themselves, and to a changing church, to examine that that movement has to offer. To do so, of course they must give up some of the activities for which they are prone to deride adults, have to make some sacrifices, which they accuse adults of refusing to do . . . must get with it and recognize that life really is no bowl of cherries, that materialism, with which they accuse adults, does not provide a full life. Nor do contest and mere talk.

Adults are quite probably in a poor image for them to follow, at least as it appears on the outside. But not everyone boasts of their good works, informs the world what they are doing. Nor, unfortunately, are they inclined to publish the amazing experiences actually theirs.

Canarelief's Great Efforts

Canarelief, an operation organized to aid the suffering victims of the Nigerian civil war, has begun to phase itself out of existence. As Dr. Eoin Mackay, Canarelief chairman said recently, "We've tried everything we can think of to see if there isn't some way we can help and we've really come up against a brick wall. We have sent telegrams to Gen. Gowon (the Nigerian leader), we've had consultations with the Canadian Government and it's clear that there is nothing more we can do."

It should be noted that Joint Church Aid, a group formed by 37 international church organizations, including Canarelief, has also announced plans to end its activities. Since the civil war broke out in 1967 Joint Church Aid carried about 1,300 chartloads of supplies into Biafra. Canarelief, a venture founded by Dr. Edward Johnson, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, Jack Grant, a Toronto developer and Kenneth Davis, a boiler engineer trouble-shooter, began its operations in January, 1969. Canarelief delivered 11,000 tons of food, seed and medicine to Biafra at an average cost of 14 cents a pound. It received no financial assistance from the federal Government, but received a lot of operation. Canarelief spent $2½ million carrying relief supplies to starving civilians. Most of the money was contributed by individuals, the Presbyterian Church and Oxfam.

Gen Gowon dismissed offers of Joint Church Aid and Canarelief assistance as "dubious and insulting." But, as Dr. Mackay put it, "all we had to do it all over again we would certainly do what we have done." Just like many Biafran men, women and children are living today thanks to the efforts of the relief agencies organizations we will never know; we do know that more than 2 million people died in the civil war. By the politics of war and the protocol of nations, Canarelief may, arguably in the eyes of the Nigerian officials. By the standards of humanity Canadians can be justly proud of the efforts made by this organization.

White Paper on Taxation

Canada's Middle Class Would Suffer

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am concerned about the White Paper on Taxation. The issue is not taxation but a complete social and economic reorganization of our country.

May I quote directly from the objectives of The Canadian Council for Fair Taxation, Suite 1000, 200 University Avenue, Toronto 2, Ont. I concur, for it expresses my apprehension.

"The proposal is a political document which will destroy the middle class of Canada. The end result of this can only be to create a state where initiative and enterprise and a whole way of life will disappear.

The White Paper is a document which re informed Canadian can possibly accept. If its proposal become law, many small businesses will either be forced to close or sell out to foreign interests. Home ownership will be penalized. Investment capital will leave the country, along with thousands of Canada's most able citizens. Inflation will receive even greater stimulus. The state will be in every room of every dwelling of the nation — from volution day to doomsday. Middle - income Canadians would no longer be able to enjoy the fruits of their own enterprise, nor pass these on to their families. The White Paper is an attack on entrepreneurship. If it becomes law, the incentive to borrow to take risks, to expand will disappear.

The White Paper will not, as its authors claim, reduce taxes for almost three million Canadians. On the contrary, the inflationary impact of the proposals would before long force the majority of Canadians to pay more in taxes than they do under the present structure."

Time Magazine, The Financial Post and the Globe and Mail have all carried articles about this organization which has mushroomed from an ad (for his family business) placed by Mr. John Bullock, a 27-year-old Toronto teacher of business management. The response has been phenomenal. In a month's time thousands have joined the crusade and the groundswell is spontaneously rising right across Canada. The aim is a million members.

I am disturbed by the apathy and lethargy of some who whom I have talked. The two enemies of good tax reform are silence on the part of individuals and haste on the part of the parliamentary committee. The tendency to observe; "What can I do? I'm just one man or woman: my writing won't change the Government's mind" perturbs me. But it can make a difference. Unless we make our views known, Government is entitled to assume that silence means acceptance. Therefore I have written to Mr. Benson twice, on December 5 and again on January 17.

Furthermore, I have joined the Canadian Council For Fair Taxation. Such an organization can represent the great middle segment of the population that embraces all political philosophies and occupations. It is dedicated to ensuring a responsible attitude to fiscal policy by government and the maintenance of democratic institutions. I feel that here is a vehicle for uniting the individual Canadians in a common effort to make their weight felt regardless of party.

It is time to be articulate. I urge concerned citizens to write to Mr. Benson. To his credit he has said he will listen. And I also urge them to contact the Canadian Council For Fair Taxation.

JANE FORRESTER

Ibos Must Get Home Before Rains to Sow Yams

LAGOS (AP) — Fallen Biafra's homeless Ibos must get back to their villages before the spring rains, or Nigeria could be faced with a refugee problem akin to that of the Palestinian Arabs, a U.S. relief co-ordinator said today.

"This is the yam planting season," he said. "Unless the seeds are put in before the rains begin in April, the people from the war zones will be dependent on relief supplies until the fall of 1971.

"If these people can get their crops in the ground now, there will be a harvest to feed themselves in September. If not, they will be refugees for another 20 months, existing on relief supplies.

"In that time a refugee psychosis could develop, saddling Nigeria with an African equivalent of the Palestine Arab tragedy."

The expert refused to be quoted by name because the federal government, through hourly radio broadcasts, tells the refugees in the bush to stay where they are until food reaches them.

Already, government figures say 600,000 displaced persons are in refugee camps, a jump of 20 per cent in the week since the war ended.

Long files of refugees, growing in number every day, are streaming down the roads. Some relief workers think it will swell into the millions.

Yams are a main staple of the Nigerian diet, especially in the rural villages. The great yam growing areas were the Ibo lands beyond the Niger River, in the war-devastated northeast corner of the Eastern Region.

Despite the constant movement of refugees along the roads in the conquered secessionist state, towns and cities have been slow in regaining their former populations.

Before the war, Enugu had a population of 180,000. In federal hands for more than 18 months now, it still has less than 4,000 people and no municipal services.

Only a handful of Ibos has returned to the northern cities of Kano and Kaduna, from which the Ibos fled after the Moslem majority killed thousands of the southerners in 1966. Until then the aggressive, ambitious Ibos held most of the government jobs in the northern lands bordering on the desert.

Caoutte's Creditistes Plan To Enter Quebec Election

QUEBEC (CP) — Real Caouette's Ralliement des Creditistes decided Sunday to enter candidates in this year's Quebec general election.

This comes as the separatist Parti Quebecois lays plans to fight its first election as a party.

The entry of the Creditistes was supported by 500 and opposed by only 12 delegates at a weekend convention here.

Mr. Caouette said the Creditistes, strong federally since 1962 in the same rural regions where the governing Union Nationale draws its vote provincially, "would cut the Union Nationale into tiny pieces so that they'll never rise again."

The federal Creditiste leader also threatened to raid Liberal ranks and divide that opposition provincial party by inviting Claude Wagner to lead the provincial Creditistes.

Mr. Caouette forecast "a minimum of 25 seats" in the 108-seat legislature but said:

"I am convinced that if Mr. Wagner became our leader we would get more than the balance of power in the elections, we would come into power."

Mr. Wagner last weekend lost his bid for the leadership of the Quebec Liberal Party and has remained silent about his plans.

But some of his supporters, after election of Robert Bourassa as Liberal leader, have muttered about joining the Creditistes.

"It's time for Wagner to give people a lesson," Mr. Caouette said, referring to the Liberal establishment which he claimed "gypped" the former justice minister of the Liberal leadership.

"It's time for him to come over to us and give Quebec law and order, honesty and justice, and all those things Mr. Wagner says he stands for."

In Montreal, Mr. Wagner could not be reached for comment. His wife said: "He's not here and I wouldn't call him if he was."

Mr. Bourassa, a 26-year-old economist, has been touted as the Liberals answer to Parti Quebecois chief Rene Levesque in his appeal to young urban voters who might otherwise be attracted to the separatist cause.

Vice-president of the Party Quebecois is former Creditiste MP and Caouette lieutenant Gilles Gregoire, secretive president of the Ralliement National, a separatist offspring of the Creditistes and several which field candidates in the 1966 provincial general election.

Gilbert Rondeau Creditiste member of the Commons for Shefford said in an interview:

"Many Creditistes went into the PQ with Gregoire because they wanted to get into provincial politics. Now that the Creditistes are entering the provincial field, these people will all come back to us."

Chickens with Cancer Viruses Safe to Eat Say U.S. Experts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. government committee of poultry disease experts says safety no longer requires federal inspectors to reject chickens containing cancer viruses.

The eight-member committee has recommended a change in poultry inspection standards to limit condemnation to chickens that might look disgusting.

Agriculture department officials say the basis for the recommendation is the failure of recent experiments to show poultry cancer viruses present any danger to humans.

Department officials are awaiting an opinion from the U.S. surgeon - general before making any decision on the recommendation of eight veterinarians and animal disease specialists.

"Virtually all birds harbor the virus in differing degrees. When the virus gets out of control, birds become diseased. Some die. Those which survive often develop lesions and tumors as an after-effect.

Traditionally, inspectors accept the tumors as evidence of excess virus and reject the chicken.

Under the proposed new standard, only chickens whose internal organs showed the disease was active would be considered unsafe for humans.

Leukosis is the major cause for rejection of frying chickens by federal inspectors. Of the 176,000,000 fryers slaughtered under federal inspection in November, inspectors condemned 2,000,000 for leukosis.

Harold Ford, executive secretary for the Southeast Poultry and Eggs Association, estimates leukosis costs the U.S. poultry industry $200,000,000 a year.

Dr. J. Spencer Munroe,a New York University professor who injected an artificial leukosis virus into monkeys in 1963 and found the animal developed tumors, said he has some doubts about the recommendation.

But Dr. Caro E. Luhrs, the agriculture official working closest with the specialists on the recommendation, said later research has superseded Munroe's findings.

Recent experiments by department researcher Dr. Ben R. Burmester, probably the most respected specialist in the field, have shown the results obtained with the artificial virus probably were caused by other, unspecified elements.

Journalists Are Out-voted in Guild

OTTAWA (CP) — Journalists are an "out-voted minority" in the American Newspaper Guild, says Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate.

In a written submission Friday to the special Senate committee on the mass media, Mr. Keate said there can be no doubt the ANG has achieved important reforms in the way of improved salaries, reduced working hours and longer vacations.

But in expanding its membership from professional journalists to take in business office personnel, telephone clerks and janitors, the guild had departed "very far" from founder Heywood Broun's original concept.

"One result has been that the journalists find themselves an out-voted minority, frequently tied in wage negotiations to the aspirations of the non-professional majority.

"This is patently ludicrous. The logical but unlikely resolution of this situation is for the journalists to break away from the guild and form their own association.

"A few tentative overtures in this direction have been successfully howled down by guild executives in Washington, D.C., and at home."

Mr. Keate said that in his view most Canadian dailies do a decent, balanced job of conveying the news.

"We may lack the sparkle of a Los Angeles Times or the literacy of The Guardian. We have no 'paper of record' to compare with the New York Times.

"But we do not have any 'penny dreadfuls' ready to pay for, and publish, the memoirs of a call-girl. In Senator Davey's phrase, the press of Canada appears to be doing 'a pretty fair job.'"

Senator Keith Davey is chairman of the media committee.

The press would perhaps be improved by the establishment of a press council, said Mr. Keate. His reading of the British experience with such a council led him to believe it could be a "useful nuisance."

Public Service Union Picketed

TORONTO (CP) — A handful of Toronto-area employees of the federal government got in the first note of dissidence Sunday before the opening today of the first national convention of the 124,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada.

At least a dozen men, many skilled workers at Toronto International Airport, picketed the hotel where the convention was to begin today. They carried signs saying the union leadership is out of touch with the grassroots membership.

"We're not getting what we pay for with our dues," Donald Munavish, a department of transport electrician, told reporters.

"Prime Minister Trudeau up in Ottawa can talk about letting go 25,000 civil servants—that's intimidation, that's what it is—skilled workers at Toronto Inhim get away with it."

Similar expressions of frustration and concern are likely to be repeated throughout the five-day convention. It is the first national convention of the PSAC since it was founded in 1966 as an uneasy marriage of two sharply differing civil servant organizations.

U.S. Polluters Will Have to Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Businesses that pollute the air and water will bear much of the cost of President Nixon's campaign to clean up the environment, Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel said Sunday.

"The polluters will have to pay," Hickel said. "But it will be the cost of doing business."

The levies will be in the form of a tax on polluters, plus government-required equipment for waste treatment, administration sources have indicated.

Interesting Hosiery Ideas for Spring

NEW YORK (CP) — Every year gets a label from its biggest fashion impact, such as the year of the chemise or the year of the maxi look. In the case of hosiery this has been fairly simple up to now, with one theme or another having dominating each season.

In 1968 it was the fishnet look. In 1967 it was textured and exaggerated patterns. The stretch nylons came up extremely strong in 1968 and last year it was the sensational boom in the sales of pantyhose.

Indeed so popular has the panty-hose become (some 6,000,000 dozen sold in Canada in 1969) that now, when teens-into-20s ask for stockings at a store counter, they automatically mean panty-hose.

"The 25-and-over have been a little reluctant to move into the panty-hose class," says Mae Clarke of Hanes Hosiery. "But this coming year we believe all women will become panty-hose wearers even if only with certain costumes, especially sports clothes."

And for 1970 there are even more interesting hosiery ideas. For the economically minded, Hanes has introduced what they call the Panty Pair, a pair of replaceable stockings and a stretch panty that you pull on over them. The panty has a knitted-in elastic band instead of garters. It is ribbed on the outside, and the inside rubber grips over the stocking and holds it up.

These can also be obtained in what is called Panty Pair Plus, with more figure control. It's practically a short panty-girdle.

Earlier this winter Elizabeth Taylor was evidently intrigued by this idea of the Panty Pair, for Hanes' Fifth Avenue office got an order from her for a pair, to be picked up en route by the messenger from Cartier's Jewellers taking that famous diamond to her, the gift from husband Richard Burton. Mae Clarke says she's sure no hosiery has ever been delivered under such glamorous auspicies.

What has spring in store in hosiery? For one thing, we'll see mostly the matte finish of the stretch hosiery. But some women still like a sheen, so manufacturers will still produce some. In colors, Hanes believes the neutral shades of butterscotch, camellia, pearl and porcelain will be bought in both panty-hose and stockings, and has also added wisteria to the pastel shades. Patterns will be delicate, such as a petal effect.

But not all women are panty-hose wearers. For those who prefer more control from a foundation garment, regulation stockings are still important. But women don't like the garter bulge under the newer clinging fabrics such as crepes and the knit jerseys. So last year Burlington Cameo Hosiery, which has a factory in Lachine, Que., introduced a new idea called Loop-a-loop.

The stretch stocking has a loop in the top band through which a flat enamelled stainless steel clasp is inserted. The other clasp end slips through the garter tab, so there is no bulge. Its success will probably bring other innovations during the 1970s for women who still want the combination of foundation garment and stockings.

On the market in March will be Burlington's new "couple" panty-hose, with designs by Peter Max who started in posters, moved on to scarves and now has been invited by Burlington to design this line of decorative hose. There are abstracts, floral or geometric designs, some at knee or thigh length and a fascinating one in a modern version of the laced Greek effect. One style, called Light Years Away, has small stars and planets circling the thigh, to show under a mini.

The garment industry is noting the desire for a smoother-than-smooth look, so Formfit has introduced new fabrics in its panty-girdle, weightless tricot-finish elastics combined with controlling areas of lightweight antron. They have come up with a foundation panty-girdle that has hose support in silk-finish elastic which holds up the stocking without a binding action.

What will happen to panty-hose if skirts are lower as predicted? The consensus in the hosiery trade is that panty-hose wearers like the comfort and close fit so well that they will continue to wear them regardless of skirt length.

New Fashions Feature Long Length

ROME (AP) — The new long length is the lasting impression left at the end of Italian couture showings of spring-summer fashions.

Every house dabbled in it, nobody more than Valentino. His entire collection concentrated on skim, low-cut-length skirts.

Loel and Taylor, which makes Valentino copies under licence, said it was happy to go along.

Several designers featured long skirts slashed to reveal a mini-dress underneath, to make the changeover from mini to maxi gradually.

Pants were the biggest casual. Although Mila Schon and De Barentzen continued to champion them, the majority of houses showed just a few pants outfits for sportswear.

For evening, long dresses were preferred to pyjamas almost everywhere.

Another craze on the wane is the gypsy look.

The Experts Say

Majority of Snowmobile Accidents Caused Through Carelessness

TORONTO (CP) — People have driven snowmobiles off 50-foot cliffs, into open water, into trees and other snowmobiles. They have done damage to themselves and other people that ranged from minor sprains to fatal injury.

To find out what kind of injuries are occurring and why, a study has been made of three years of snowmobile accidents as they show on Peterborough, Ont., hospital records. They have shown a marked increase, from eight four years ago to 105 last year.

Dr. L. J. Calvert of Peterborough, provincial surgeon for the St. John Ambulance, requested the report. St. John is providing courses in first aid for snowmobilers and is increasing the number of snowmobiles for its own people in the snow belt.

Dr. Calvert says: "There were probably about twice as many people treated by independent doctors as by hospitals. It looks as though, in addition to car and motorcycle accidents, there is a third."

"Three-quarters of the group were men, usually older than the snowmobile is not a child's toy, though people are treating them like outboard motors. Letting kids run around in them."

A snowmobiler himself, Dr. Calvert says the machines are not dangerous unless they are used dangerously. He says most of the accidents in the report were unnecessary, the result of over-confidence or thoughtlessness.

There were 42 soft-tissue injuries, eight ankle sprains, five knee injuries, two cases of bursitis and 25 fractures, some of them severe.

"People dangle a foot going around a curve. One girl's foot got caught in the automobile's track and twisted right around backward. She had to lie face down in the snow while someone freed her.

"It behooves somebody to know how to take these things apart."

There were 18 head injuries, mostly caused by people falling or being catapulted over the top of the machine. There were eye injuries caused by branches, fence wire or broken glasses.

"This would indicate safety glasses should be mandatory. We think 20 per cent of the injuries would have been prevented if people had been wearing hard hats and safety glasses."

The accidents took assorted forms. People ran into ditches sharply and tipped the machine or collided with things. Some of them ran into open boards while cruising on ice.

"Two people drove out into space at high speed—one off a 50-foot cliff. One went up a ramp and fell into a burned-out barn.

"We know of 28 deaths in Ontario in association with snowmobiles. Six of them were by drowning—lack of exposure because he was too far from help.

"Nighttime injuries accounted for 30 per cent of the total accidents in our report.

"One way to prevent accidents is to know the trail you are going on. You don't go full-throttle down a trail you don't know—you might hit a pothole just filled with snow.

"You should have snowshoes with you on the snowmobile in case you get stuck. Don't travel in pairs. If you do get into trouble far from help, you should have an axe, cut down a tree, start a fire and relax, get mentally cooled off. You can't walk through deep snow, and the numbing factor of cold impairs your judgment, even if it is normally good.

"You should, of course, wear suitable clothing, including proper mitts and footwear.

"You should know how to run the machine properly. People think it's a toy, and it's not.

"And they are not as easily handled if they are pulling something. One man towing a toboggan cracked the whip and threw two kids under a car."

Agricultural Society Elects New Executive

CAMPBELLFORD — Seymour Agricultural Society held its annual dinner meeting at Consy's Restaurant recently. Re-elected president was Clayton Thompson of Hoard's Station. Also re-elected were Mordan McMillan and Everett Parr, first and second vice-presidents respectively.

In his address Mr. Thompson expressed thanks to all the members and conveners of various sections who had contributed to the success of the fair.

He stressed the fact that members and conveners would have to put on a concentrated effort to update the fair with more interesting and modern innovations, particularly in the obtaining of better attendance figures. He also pointed out that a new grandstand was needed but doubted if it could be built this year. Horse races might be held on Sunday thus leaving the track free for the showing of horses on Monday. The fair is held on the Saturday preceding Civic holiday in August.

The women's division also held their annual meeting at the same time. Mrs. Stanley Keer is the retiring president. She also expressed appreciation for the help she had received during her two years as president.

The display of women's craft and cooking was moved from the old building into the larger space at the civic arena.

The new president named was Mrs. Everett Parr and first and second vice-presidents elected were Mrs. Ron Parr and Mrs. Maurice Brunton respectively. Secretary is Mrs. W. A. Hume, and district representative is Mrs. Clayton Thompson.

Delegates to the women's convention in Toronto, Feb. 25 and 26 are Mrs. Everett Parr and Mrs. W. A. Hume with Mrs. Jack Watson as alternate.

Delegates to district three annual meeting in Belleville Feb. 5 are Mrs. Everett Parr and Mrs. Gordon McCulloch.

Mr. Mel Wright, who served as secretary last year, announced that he was retiring.

The president and first and second vice-presidents were named as a committee to hire a secretary and were asked to have the office filled within the next month. Alex Linn was named as the Society's representative on the Community Centre Board.

A highlight of the meeting was the presentation of a long service diploma to Kenneth Parr for his service to the fair over a period of 20 years. He worked with the heavy horse division.

Church Groups

ST. THOMAS' ACW MARMORA

The annual meeting of St. Thomas' ACW was held at the rectory in Marmora recently with a good attendance. The meeting was opened by the president in the usual manner.

Mrs. Colden, secretary read the minutes of the last annual meeting. Then Mrs. Preston thanked Rev. and Mrs. Saunders for hospitality and expressed thanks and appreciation to all members for co-operation during the last year. A letter from Rev. John Savarimuther was also read. Miss Edna Tanner presented the treasurer's report showing a healthy balance.

Mrs. Saunders thanked everyone and congratulated all members and fellow workers for their successful year.

He then presided for the election of officers which resulted as follows: president, Mrs. Ted Preston; vice-president, Mrs. Mabel Ray; secretary, Mrs. Ed Colden; treasurer, Mrs. Edna Tanner and dorcas supply secretary, Mrs. Mabel Ray.

A vote of thanks on behalf of the members was extended to the officers for their loyal and efficient leadership.

Presbyterian W.M.S. Ladies Aid Meeting

DESERONTO — The women of the Presbyterian Church of the Redeemer met at the home of Mrs. Donald MacMillan for their Jan. meeting with Mrs. Kay Hood, the new president, in the chair. Mrs. Charles Griffiths and Mrs. Hood each read part of an article on the work of missionaries in China.

Announcement was made of the annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society in St. Columba Church in Belleville Feb. 4.

The women then turned to the work of the church under the Ladies' Aid.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. Griffiths.

Turning to the business, the women made plans for the meeting of the Kingston Presbytery which is to be held in the Church of the Redeemer Feb. 11. It will be an afternoon and evening session and plans were made for the dinner for the ministers and elders who will be in attendance.

Usually the Ladies' Aid holds a pie social early in Feb., but decided not to do so this year. This was partly because of the Presbytery meeting, and partly because they will begin making their Easter eggs so soon afterwards. Easter falls on March 29 this year, and they must begin their egg-making early. This is the fourth year for this project, which has grown by leaps and bounds. The first year they made fewer than 100, the second year, 396, and last year 575. They are now in demand in many places besides Deseronto.

To make up for the pie social, they decided to hold one or more bake sales later on.

Refreshments were served during the social hour following the close of the meeting.

SOCIALS

OPEN HOUSE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Taylor, 54 Cannifton Rd., will hold an "Open House" for friends and relatives on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary, on Sunday, Feb. 1, from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

Reports Given at Manor Auxiliary Meeting

The Hastings Manor Auxiliary held their first meeting in January. The new president, Mrs. Dorothy MacLean opened the meeting with a poem and then welcomed the members.

The new treasurer, Mrs. Harden gave the financial report. All bills have been paid: Mrs. Kingston sent a report on the many rose bushes sent to Belleville General Hospital: Mrs. Bongard thanked the members for articles sent in and Mrs. Helen McLaren reported on the visits to the home by the organizations. Mrs. Atkins reported on the social activities and thanked all who helped with the lunch.

Mrs. Ray, the tuck shop convener, said the shop is expanding every month and thanked all her women for their help. The president reported on entertainment — five films and bingos. Mrs. Davidson, convener for the new coffee shop, reported she had purchased a 35 cup urn. She also said she was pleased about the help the organizations were giving her.

Mrs. Fern Loney will buy Valentine cards to be placed on the table on that day.

After the meeting closed the women went to the dining room to meet the women and men who celebrated a birthday in January. The three residents cutting the birthday cake were Mrs. Weese, Fred Davifer and Lloyd Warner.

Points for Parents

By MARY BETSON

Mother: "I can't watch Little Joey all the time so I put him in his crib or playpen and he entertains himself happily. He won't go to bed without crying unless the crib is full of toys. Sometimes he plays for an hour after I put him to bed for the night."

Cribs are for sleeping in, baby will learn those facts of life early if mother sets the pattern. Regular sleep routines ease as time goes on.

Child psychologists advise putting a small child in the crib only when it's sleeping time and he will form the habit of drooping off to sleep quickly without much fuss. Don't make a habit of letting him fall asleep in the playpen at his regular nap time.

Playpens for playing in — and baby will learn those facts of life early if mother sets the pattern. Regular sleep routines will make life easier for everyone as time goes on.

Savory Baked Chops

By MARY MOORE

Your enthusiasm for casseroles has begun to convert me to their virtues. What a satisfaction it was to assemble this pork chop dish. It required 1 hr. baking time but I made it early in the afternoon before a guest dinner at 6:30, set the timer to ring at 5:15 to alert me to turn on the oven and went on with some bread baking.

I was taking advantage of a "special" on pork chops in our area which added to my satisfaction.

SAVORY BAKED PORK CHOPS

(Serves 5 adults and 2 children)

½ cup raw long grain rice
1 cup boiling water
¾ tsp. salt
Twelve ¼" to ¾" thick pork chops (about 2½ to 3 lbs.)
½ small onion chopped
One 10-oz can cream of celery soup
1 tsp. salt (second amount)
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ tsp. savory
2 tbsps. catsup

1 soup can full of hot water

Cook the rice first in the boiling water with the ¾ tsp. salt, covered, 25 min.

Trim the excess fat from the pork chops and arrange in one layer, overlapping, in large shallow baking dish.

As soon as the rice is cooked gently stir all remaining ingredients into it and blend. Using a big berry spoon, ladle the sauce evenly over the top, covering all of the pork chops.

Now cover snugly with foil. (If you prepare this in advance as I did store it in the refrigerator until baking time.) Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hr., covered with foil throughout entire baking period.

We served this with broccoli and diced turnips and it was an easy and popular meal. My guests licked the pork chop platter clean.

How to Make Money at Home

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: How to make money at home has been a keen desire on my part. I usually read the "business opportunities" portion in the ad section and there never seems to be just the right opportunity. Perhaps I am too particular — or too versatile.

I am interested in electronics (though in the learning stage) but would like to get into some assembly of equipment. I am also interested in woodworking and have done sheet metal work and soldering. — Jack Be Nimble.

Dear Jack: Did you know you can learn radio work by correspondence? Since you have a bent in this direction, the 20-lesson course might be just the thing to get you going. Write to the Ontario Department of Education, Correspondence Courses Branch, 559 Jarvis Street, Toronto 5, Ontario. Ask for details about the two courses offered in Radio Theory and Practice. Each is priced at $10.

Also useful may be my 10-cent leaflet on Part Time Work at Home or in Community, which is being mailed to you.

* * *

Dear Doris: I would like to comment on your answer to the woman who wrote for advice because her parents belittled her in front of guests. She had a history of mental illness.

Your answer was thoughtless. Surely, with your experience as a social worker you realize that this woman's parents were likely an important contributing factor to her emotional troubles in the first place. I bet they belittled her as a child, too!

Why don't you give some realistic advice— like telling the girl to move away from the whole environment, not just to "friends in your Y or church group." This woman needs to develop a sense of personal worth and she'll never manage it at home, especially at age 32! — One Who Fought Back and Won.

Dear One: Was your experience like that of I Give Up? Moving out may indeed be the answer for her but this is the kind of advice that could only follow a counsellor's detailed examination of the situation, the girl, the parents, and a contact with the psychiatrist.

It would be terrible if she were to move out on her own and then make a failure of things. Far better for her to start with the less-threatening challenge of a membership at the YWCA.

Dear Doris: I wonder if someone could help me find a song my mother used to sing, "Tying Apples on the Lilac Tree."

As for Just Pat, I would also like to see the poems written in the paper, but I would probably want every poem placed there. But as they are not, I am glad to send 10 cents for "Albert and the Lion" and "Untrodden Ways". — Lover of Poetry.

Dear Poetry: I had a young cousin who sang about the lilac tree to the delight of a large audience.

It seems a certain little boy wanted a kiss from his youthful girl friend. She indignantly declared she would not kiss him until apples grew on the lilac tree. Later she relented and the next morning he saw her actually tying apples on the lilac tree. I hope he took the hint.

I know the poem off by heart and will send it to you.

Ann Landers

Mixed Up 20-year-Old May Lack Confidence

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 20-year-old girl with a big problem. I care too much about everybody. I am not a nymphomaniac but I have this overpowering desire to be warm and affectionate. I really do love humanity. Especially men.

ANN LANDERS

I am forever knocking myself out for people — doing favors, going out of my way to be kind. I feel sorry for everybody. If a fellow asks me to go to bed, I say yes, even though he doesn't appeal to me. I'm so afraid of hurting someone's feelings. I'm especially nice to the jerks because I know they must get turned down a lot. I figure one more rejection might trigger a mental breakdown, or a suicide. One never knows how close to the breaking point the other person might be.

Please don't talk to me about morals. I am not a bad girl. What this world needs is more love and I want to do my share. But the results have been very disappointing, Ann. I am greatly misunderstood. Please help me put my thoughts in order. — MIXED UP LASS.

DEAR LASS: Your problem is that you don't know the difference between love and sex. What you describe as "generosity" is sexual promiscuity.

You need me not to talk about morals so I won't. I will, instead, talk about your lack of self-confidence. A girl who gives her body to cheer a guy up needs to learn why she has such a low opinion of herself. Some fellows would happily settle for conversation. She also needs to learn why she is so hungry for love that she is willing to hop from bed to bed and settle for shoddy substitutes. Get professional help, Honey. You need it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What can I do with a husband who refuses to make out a will? Albert is 64, in excellent health, and has no physical complaints. Yet, one never knows what tomorrow will bring. Whenever I broach the subject of a will he says, "You have been trying to bury me for the last twenty years. Do you have your next husband picked out?

Albert is a good man. He stays home with me every night of we go out together. He has always handed over his cheque and I pay the bills. We have no debts and we own our home free and clear. Please tell me why he is so stubborn about making a will? If he would spend just one hour with a lawyer and get it over with, I would have peace of mind forever — FORTY YEARS A WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: Many people avoid making a will because it requires them to think about death. Ask Albert if he will give you as an anniversary present or a birthday gift (whichever comes first) the one hour you need for your peace of mind. Once he does it, he'll be glad he did.

Winter Games Bring Mountain to Saskatoon

SASKATOON (CP) — How did a city justify getting the 1971 Canada Winter Games when about the nearest things it had to a ski hill were frost heaves on some of the streets? This was the question of many people when they learned the central Saskatchewan prairie city had applied for and been awarded the Games. "Saskatoon? You've gotta be kidding!"

But a visit to the city and talks with many of the people involved in setting up the Games are enough to convince the most hardened sceptic—the enthusiasm is contagious.

And, as J. J. Charlebois, general chairman of the Games executive committee, explained, skiing isn't the only sport involved.

"Skiing is only one of the 16 sports that go to make up the Games. We will have speed skating, fancy skating, curling, boxing, wrestling, judo, basketball, volleyball, gymnastics and other activities which will all help make up the most elaborate and exciting sports undertaking in the history of our province."

The other sports are synchronized swimming, badminton, table tennis, weightlifting, fencing and hockey.

But back to the original question. How did the city justify its application? It's simple—they are building a mountain.

"Our idea of having the initiative to build a mountain has caught the imagination of people all over the continent and it makes them aware of the go-ahead and vibrant spirit that exists with the people of Saskatoon," said Charlebois, also Liberal MLA for Saskatoon City Park-University.

While the "mountain" won't, as Mayor Syd Buckwold says, "put Jasper and Banff out of business," it does prove the drive that exists in Saskatoon.

It's 11 miles south of the city on the southeastern shore of Blackstrap Lake, an artificial body of water just off the main highway to Regina.

Contract specifications call for it to have a vertical rise of 300 feet and a 1,400-foot main run. It will also incorporate a 50-metre ski jump and will have a T-bar lift running to the peak as well as an 800-foot double rope tow lower down for beginners.

More than 800,000 cubic yards of earth are being moved and the mountain is well past the half-way stage. The design itself, by noted freak of nature, no natural snow should fall for the Games—if the Games are held next year from Sunday, Feb. 14, to the next Sunday.

The lodge, however, $70,000 day lodge is also being built.

The total budget for the Games is expected to be more than $1,500,000—including the $500,000 allocated for construction of the mountain and provision of the facilities. Organization and administration takes a $130,000 bite and the rest is for provision of other facilities and extra expenses.

Mayor Buckwold estimates the Games will attract thousands of spectators as well as the 3,000 athletes expected.

Asked about the financial benefit to Saskatoon, he said; "It's estimated that there should be between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000—it's hard to pin down—coming into the city as a result of these Games. When you have the eyes of Canada on you for 10 days, you can't help but reflect that it would do the city some good."

There may, however, be some accommodation problems.

Mayor Buckwold says the athletes, spectators, officials and the news media are going to tax the capacity of the hotels and motels.

"But we're hoping to solve it with some unique ideas that the board is working on. Such as, perhaps, putting athletes up in a trailer city or utilizing railroad sleeping cars as a means of housing several hundreds of the athletes. They don't all need accommodation at the same time . . . so there will be very careful programming of the timing of accommodation requirements.

"I would guess too that the citizens of Saskatoon would open their homes where necessary, and through our accommodation bureau we'll probably have a large amount of private accommodation for those who are prepared to stay that way.

"Unfortunately, we'd find it difficult to put everybody up in first-class hotels."

He says citizens are providing overwhelming support.

"We have a vocal small minority that complains we're spending money and that the only ones who will benefit are the hotels and the restaurants. anyone who's asked to serve and this represents hundreds—is one of unqualified co-operation.

"As a matter of fact, one of the big problems of the committee is to accommodate all the people who want to help."

The provincial government is also behind the Games and has proclaimed 1971 as Homecoming Year in Saskatchewan.

"During these 12 months, the largest tourist promotion ever undertaken by Saskatchewan will show the new Saskatchewan to the rest of Canada and to many Americans as well," said Premier Ross Thatcher. "I am certain the 1971 Winter Games and our Homecoming would strengthen and generally benefit each other."

The mayor sees the Games as a unifying force for Canada.

"This is an exercise, of course, in Canadian unity and one of the real programs is to bring all of Canada into it by including the Northwest Territories and the Yukon."

Silver Stick Goes South

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — American teams captured the Silver Stick North American hockey championship the first time Sunday as a week-long midget and squirt tournament came to a close.

Warren, Mich., defeated Newmarket, Ont., 2-0 in the squirt A final while Mount Royal Metal defeated Scarborough, Ont., 4-3 in overtime in the midget AAA final.

In the other squirt finals, St. Catharines, Ont., won the AAA crown with a 2-1 victory over Oshawa, Ont., in overtime, and Essex, Ont., defeated Port Huron, Mich., 2-1 in a similar sudden-death overtime period.

The midget AA championship was won by Orillia, Ont., with an 8-1 victory over Sarnia. The Midget A championship went to Dresden, Ont., which defeated Newmarket 5-4.

Keith Crowder, a defenceman on the Essex Squirt A championship team, was voted the most outstanding player in the week-long, 36-team event.

Leeds Pours on the Coal in Fourth-round Cup Match

LONDON (CP) — Sutton United, the last non-professional soccer team in 1970 English Football Association Cup competition, was crushed 6-0 by league champion Leeds United in a fourth-round game Saturday.

Last year's winner, Manchester City, was knocked out of the competition by Manchester United, losing 3-0.

Leeds, remembering a close call in the third round against Swansea Town of Division IV, was in no mood for charity against low-rated Sutton.

A capacity crowd of 14,000 filled Sutton's stadium on the southern fringe of London, but their hopes of toppling the Division 1 giants were dashed as Leeds steamrollered to victory with four goals by Allan Clarke and two by Peter Lorimer.

Manchester United, reviving memories of two years ago when the team won the European Cup, hammered Manchester City, Brian Kidd scoring twice and Willie Morgan once.

Other First Division clubs did not have it as easy. The biggest upset of the round was the 2-1 defeat of Sheffield Wednesday, three times Cup winner, by Scunthorpe United of Division IV.

Watford, of Division II, also joined the giant killers, beating Stoke City 1-0. The winning goal came from 18-year-old Colin Franks.

Second-Division Blackpool, which upset First-Division Arsenal in the third round, lost 2-0 at home to Mansfield Town of Division III.

Chelsea, rated just behind Leeds as a Cup contender, led Burnley 2-0 on goals by John Hollins and Peter Osgood, but was forced into a replay when Burnley's Martin Dobson scored twice in the last 11 minutes.

Powerful Liverpool trailed Fourth-Division Wrexham 1-0 at halftime but second-half goals by Bob Graham (2) and Ian St. John carried the Merseyside team into the fifth round by a 3-1 margin.

Queen's Park Rangers pulled off a 3-2 victory in a Cup battle with Charlton. Trailing 2-0 after 20 minutes, Rangers roared to victory with two goals by Rodney Marsh and one by Frank Clarke.

Ten Division 1 clubs were knocked out in the third round of English Cup play. Only eight top teams certain so far of a place in the fifth-round draw are Leeds, Manchester United, Derby County and Liverpool. Five matches were tied and will be replayed this week.

While attention centred on the Cup, Everton missed a chance of regaining the English First-Division leadership. A scoreless tie with Newcastle United left Everton even with Leeds at 46 points, but behind on goal average.

Slalom All French

MEGEVE, France (AP) — Patrick Russel of France continued his domination of men's World Cup skiing competition by winning the special slalom of the 20th Megeve Grand Prix Sunday.

Heini Messner of Austria, who was 10th over-all after a second-place finish in the downhill Friday, won the combined title, with Bob Cochran of the United States second after an eighth-place finish in the special slalom.

Russel, in mourning with the French team since Friday's death in the downhill of teammate Michel Bozon—probably Russel's best friend—was clocked in a total time of 1:25.85 for the two runs.

He led another French sweep as Alain Penz placed second in 1:26.98 and Henri Brechu third in 1:27.30.

The victory increased Russel's World Cup point lead to 140 points to 107 for second-place Gustavo Thoeni of Italy, who did not race Sunday.

Nats Not Free Spirits Yet

WINNIPEG (CP) — Members of Canada's national hockey team, except those on loan from other clubs, are not free to join other teams, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association ruled Sunday.

The matter came up following reports that Chuck Lefley, a standout on the team, had been approached by Dauphin Kings of the Manitoba Junior League.

Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., CAHA president, said players have commitments for several exhibition games.

"A lot of junior and senior teams are always looking for players to strengthen their teams at this time of the year and we're just making the situation clear to them," said Dawson.

No Canadian Team at Helsinki

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada will not be represented at the Universaide Hockey Tournament in Helsinki in April.

The decision was made Saturday at the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's semi-annual meeting of the board of directors.

Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., president of the CAHA, said the tournament of university teams is played every three years with Canada's representative determined through intercollegiate hockey play.

The decision not to send a team this year conforms with statements made by Dawson when Canada withdrew from the 1970 world hockey tournament.

At that time Dawson said Canada would not send teams to Europe for any further exhibition games and European teams would not be welcome in Canada.

Aces Blow Lead Over Oaks

Kingston Aces ran into a third-period barrage Sunday night that stalled their rise toward second place and ended a victory string that included 10 wins and two ties in the last 14 Ontario Hockey Association Senior games.

Oakville Oaks, trailing 1-0 after two periods, got goals from Obie O'Brien, Don Currie and Ron Robinson in the final 20 minutes to defeat the Aces 3-1 and climb into a two-way tie for fourth place with Barrie Flyers.

In other action, Kingston had defeated Owen Sound Crescents 6-1 and Barrie battled to a 5-5 tie with Galt Hornets Saturday.

Eddie Long scored the lone goal for Kingston, while Boat Hurley stopped 29 shots from the Aces. Neil Perry stopped 26 shots from Oakville.

Bob Collins, Fred O'Donnell, Doug Senior, Garfield Ball, Charlie Convery and Bob Rawson were the Kingston marksmen Saturday as the Aces scored four power-play goals.

Annual Assault On

Lemaire Big Gun For Surging Habs

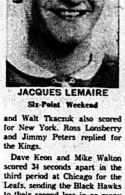
By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jacques Lemaire's three goals and three assists spurred Montreal Canadiens to a pair of 4-1 National Hockey League weekend wins as they continued what has become their annual second-half assault on the East Division lead.

The Canadiens trimmed Chicago Black Hawks 4-1 at home Saturday and downed Detroit Red Wings by the same score in Detroit Sunday night.

Boston Bruins blew a chance to threaten New York Rangers grip on the division lead when they were shelled 8-1 by the Rangers in New York Saturday afternoon, but they recovered to drop Pittsburgh Penguins 3-1 at Boston Sunday.

The results left the Bruins and Canadiens sharing second place with 58 points, four behind the Rangers.



In other Sunday action, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Chicago 3-2, New York nipped Los Angeles Kings by the same score, Philadelphia Flyers blasted St. Louis Blues 2-0 and Oakland Seals downed Minnesota North Stars 4-1.

Saturday, Philadelphia clubbed Minnesota 6-0, Detroit topped St. Louis 5-2, and Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles 4-2.

Lemaire was a key figure in both Montreal wins. He produced one goal and two assists against Chicago. Bob Sheehan, the Massachusetts-born rookie, Bobby Rousseau and Mickey Redmond also scored for the winners and Bobby Hull fired his 19th goal of the season for the Black Hawks.

Sunday in Detroit, Lemaire kept going with two goals and one assist. The Red Wings grabbed the lead on Wayne Connelly's power-play goal, but Serge Savard and Yvan Cournoyer struck back for Montreal while Lemaire raised his goal total to 28.

Rookie Bill Fairbairn's 16th goal of the season Sunday for the Rangers broke a 2-2 tie with the Kings. Jean Ratelle collected his 20th goal of the year and Walt Tkaczuk also scored for New York. Ross Lonsberry and Jimmy Peters replied for the Kings.

Dave Keon and Mike Walton scored 34 seconds apart in the third period of the Leafs' win. Leafs, sending the Black Hawks to their second loss in as many nights, Bobby Hull and Pit Martin struck back for the fifth-place Hawks and Bob Pulford scored the other Toronto goal.

The home ice loss was the first for Chicago since Nov. 16.

Rookie Bob Clarke and Reg Fleming scored for Philadelphia against the Blues Sunday as the Flyers recorded consecutive shutouts for the first time in their three-year history. Bernie Parent stopped St. Louis shots for his shutout. The win also was only the second for Philadelphia against the Blues in the last 19 games.

Mike Laughton scored three goals and Gary Smith turned back all but one of 43 North Stars shots in front of 11,856 Sunday, the smallest Minnesota crowd of the season. Ted Hampson scored the other Seals goal and defenceman Leo Boivin replied for the losers.

Fred Stanfield's power-play goal in the third period gave Boston its Sunday home win over Pittsburgh, breaking a 1-1 tie. Bobby Orr raised his league-leading point total to 68, scoring into an empty net in the final minute when Pittsburgh coach Red Kelly removed goalie Joe Daley for a sixth attacker. Don Awrey scored the first Boston goal and Bryan Hextall scored for the Penguins.

A major penalty to forward John Bucyk at New York Saturday proved costly for the Bruins. The Rangers took advantage of the five-minute power play by scoring three times, pulling away from a 2-1 lead.

Captain Bob Nevin and Ratelle both collected two goals for New York. Defenceman Rod Seiling, Fairbairn, Vic Hadfield and Dave Balon completed the rout while Bucyk gave the Bruins a 1-0 lead early in the first period with his 22nd of the year.

Jacques Lemaire of Montreal Canadiens completed a six-point weekend to take over sixth place in the National Hockey League individual scoring race.

Boston Bruins defenceman, Bobby Orr maintained his 11-point lead over team-mate Phil Esposito with a goal and an assist Saturday. Ratelle of New York Rangers, tied for seventh at 45 points with Boston's John Bucyk and Chicago's Stan Mikita, scored his 20th goal of the season Sunday.

Ignorance Bert's Bliss

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — "If I'd known Jack Nicklaus was shooting a 65," said Bert Yancey, "things might have been different. I might have taken the big apple."

But Yancey, blissfully ignorant of the record-setting mound ed by the awesome Nicklaus, calmly cut out a final round 69 Sunday and won the $25,000 first prize in the Bing Crosby national pro-am golf tournament.

Yancey finished with a 279. Nicklaus, who moved past 15 players on the final day with his sterling, seven-under-par effort, had to settle for second, one stroke back at 280.

The $14,300 cheque for second pushed Big Jack's career earnings past the $1,000,000 mark. He joined Arnold Palmer and Billy Casper—who had some difficulties on the final round—as the only players in the game's history on the exclusive list.

Nicklaus started birdie-eagle, toured the front nine at the oceanside Pebble Beach golf links in a six-under-par 36, moved into a share of the lead with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 15th, then parred in.

Yancey, a tour regular for seven years who had won five previous professional titles, was over par on the 11th, where he was buried in a trap, about the same time Jack birdied the 15th.

George Knudson of Toronto shot a final-round 74 and finished with 288, two under par. He picked up $2,187 for his share of 13th place.

Canadian Olympic Association Disagrees with Contamination Theory

WINNIPEG (CP) — Should an athlete's Olympic eligibility be tainted if he or she competes against or plays with professionals?

The Canadian Olympic Association doesn't think so and it is willing to lend its support in clearing the air on the issue.

"I don't agree with that," said Harold Wright, president of the COA, when he was asked his views on contamination of amateurs.

"I think it is an opportunity for young athletes to compete against pros. They're bound to learn from them and I don't think they would be contaminated at all."

Wright made the remarks following a joint COA-Canadian Amateur Hockey Association meeting in Winnipeg.

The CAHA is striving to get a clear definition on the issue following the loss of the 1970 world hockey tournament that was scheduled for Montreal and Winnipeg in March.

Following the joint meeting Saturday, the COA agreed to lend its support to the CAHA in obtaining a clear definition on the eligibility rule.

Some representation will be made at the International Olympic Committee executive board meeting next month in Lausanne to seek that definition.

"We also will ask to help us obtain a meeting with (IOC president Avery) Brundage next month in the cause," the COA said Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., president of the CAHA.

"We tried to get a meeting with Ahearne to clear up the matter but he said he didn't think a meeting would serve any purpose."

Dawson was referring to J. P. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

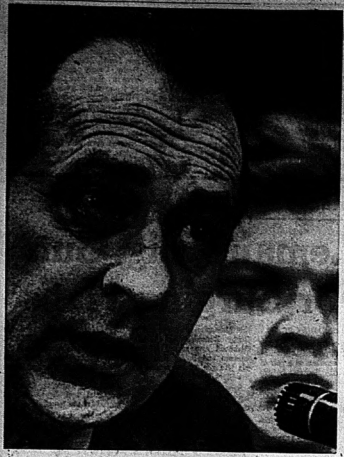
Members of the A pool of the IIHF earlier this month reversed a decision to allow any country to use nine professionals in the 1970 tournament.

The about-face was attained by an opinion by Brundage that teams playing against professionals might lose their Olympic eligibility.

Canadian officials were incensed over the change of rules and abruptly withdrew from the tournament.

Spokesmen for the COA were confident that the international body will ease its restrictions on Olympic eligibility as it is affected by playing professionals.

Wright said in an interview the Olympic code is being revised and the eligibility clause is being liberalized to better reflect the social and cultural makeup of all countries.



In Canada, for instance, it almost is impossible for a hockey player not to play against or with a professional at one time or another.

Dawson said if the February meeting of the IOC executive does rule amateurs can compete against professionals without being contaminated, the CAHA would carry the ball further.

He said a presentation then would be made to the March congress meeting of the IIHF in Stockholm.

The IIHF congress would be asked to replace Canada in the A pool in 1971 and allow the use of professionals.

"We want back in the A pool and we want to be able to use pros," Dawson said.

Maybe Next Year

Canada will definitely not take part in the 1970 world hockey championships but the boycott might be dropped in 1971 if the International Ice Hockey Federation relaxes its ban on former professional players, Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said at an Ottawa news conference. Real Rubber Flies at Goalie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was fair to say that goaltender Bill Woodyatt of Toronto Marlboros stopped even more than expected Sunday night.

Woodyatt stopped 22 shots and a shoe rubber that flew out of the stands at Montreal Forum and caught him on the back of the head as the Marlboros edged Montreal Canadiens 5-4 in Junior A action.

Evidently the rubber pitcher was more accurate than the Canadiens shooters and he also scored a direct hit on the face of Marlboros' Steve Durbano.

Meanwhile, coach Eddie Bush was thrown out of the game at St. Catharines as the Black Hawks stretched their undefeated string to 13 games with a 4-2 victory over his Hamilton Red Wings.

In other action, Oshawa Generals trounced London Knights 8-3, Peterborough Petes defeated Kitchener Rangers 5-2 and Ottawa 67s shutout Niagara Falls Flyers 9-0.

The 11,858 fans at Montreal watched the Marlboros pick up their third win in four games with the Canadiens. Toronto tied the other game.

Graham Wise paced Toronto with two goals, while Gary Crosby, Mike Amadeo and Gavin Kirk added the others. Robert Guindon, Bob Lalonde, Ian Turnbull and Normand Gratton replied for Montreal.

Bush was arguing with referee Tom Brown that a shot by Hamilton's Tom Williams had actually gone into the net. Brown ordered him out of the game and trainer Jim Frail filled in for the rest of the contest.

Al McDonough scored two goals for the Hawks, who have 12 victories and a tie in their last 13 games. Marcel Dionne and Duane Wylie got the others.

Rick Kehoe and Williams, with one that did count, replied for Hamilton.

The 67s scored at a goal-a-minute for the first six minutes of the third period en route to their 9-0 shutout over the Flyers.

Peter Laframbroise scored three, Bill Clement two and Brian McSheffrey, Paul Tosh, Pete Gaw and Doug Keller the others.

Ottawa took 55 shots on goal, 23 in the final period.

Pete Sullivan scored three goals for Oshawa, while Terry O'Reilly added two and Steve Cardwell, Hank Nowak and George Ferguson got singles. Dan Maloney, Darryl Sittler and Mike Craig replied for the Knights.

The Petes got single goals from Mickey Donaldson, Skip Foster, Jim McMahon, Ron Plumb and Dennis Patterson. Glen Siddal and Joe Norris were the Kitchener marksmen.

Montreal's Paduano Helps Renew Traditional Italian-Irish Ring Rivalry

NEW YORK (CP) — The traditional rivalry between the Italians and the Irish will be renewed at Madison Square Garden tonight when Donato Paduano of Montreal, the Canadian welterweight boxing champion, meets Irish Pat Murphy of West New York, N.J., in a battle which will probably lead to a world ranking for the victor.

Both youthful fighters are undefeated—Paduano is 16-0 and Murphy 25-0-1. A victory should move the winning fighter into a position eventually to challenge world welterweight champion Jose Napoles of Mexico.

Paduano moved to Montreal 10 years ago from his native Italy, fought there locally and represented Canada in the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City. He turned pro after that and has been a favorite with Italian fight fans in Montreal and New York since.

Murphy grew up in a family of Irish fight fans and was encouraged by his father, older brother and younger brother.

Aside from their youth-Paduano is 21 and Murphy is 20—the two fighters have at least one other thing in common—a victory over Pablo Lopez, a rugged Puerto Rican-born New Yorker.

Lopez picks Murphy.

"Lopez says I can beat him," says Murphy. "Lopez . . . says I can win by crowding Paduano.

"I've seen Paduano, too, and he's a good fighter, a real boxer. I'd like to outbox him to prove to some skeptics I can box, beating him at his game, but instead I'll probably take Pablo's advice and stay on top of him all the way."

Paduano injured his right hand in the Lopez fight and ended the battle with a battered right eye.

However, both fighters have also beaten Dorman Crawford with Paduano winning an easy victory and Murphy settling for a close split decision.

Paduano is confident of beating Murphy.

"I expect trouble from Murphy for the first four or five rounds," the Canadian champion said. "After that, it will be all Paduano."

Paduano won the Canadian welterweight championship over Joey Durelle in Montreal last month.

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (AP — West Germany's Horst Floth and Josef Bader won the 1970 two-man world bobsled championship Sunday as the Italians were shut off without a medal for the first time in 14 years. Hitting almost 70 miles an hour on the famous horseshoe bend, the Olympic silver medalists decisively defeated the field of 24 bobs from 13 countries with a total time of 5:05.39 for the four heats of the two-day event. The No. 1 Canadian team of Hans Gehrig and Peter Blakely finished 17th in 5:13.67, and the No. 2 team of Bob Storey and Michael Hartley placed 18th in 5:14.21.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver industrialist George O'Brien Jr. said today he has purchased the Australian yacht Dame Pattie, the second-fastest 12-metre boat in the world. "I bought the boat, first of all, because I like it," O'Brien said in an interview. "My second reason . . . is that I want to get a group together and use Dame Pattie as a trial horse to build a new 12-metre boat which would be entered as Canadian challenger for the America's Cup." Dame Pattie challenged for the America's Cup in 1967 and lost to the U.S. choice, the Intrepid.

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Golf Association will stage 12 amateur and professional golf tournaments this season. At its annual meeting today, the association said the season will open May 29 with the Champion of Champions event and close Sept. 12 with the George S. Lyon Club team championship. Both events are 18 holes and will be held in Toronto. Featured events will be the 54-hole Ontario Open at Guelph June 25-27, the Ontario Amateur at Aurora July 15-17, the 36-hole Ontario Junior at Mississauga July 30-31 and the Ontario Senior at Port Colborne Aug. 6-7. Other major events will be the 36-hole Ontario-Quebec Junior matches Aug. 11-12, location to be announced, and the Ontario Parent and Child championship in Georgetown Aug. 19-20.

Hawks' Goalie Can't Be Blamed

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks' hopes of gaining a playoff berth in the National Hockey League rest largely on rookie goalie Tony Esposito who has tied the club record of 10 shutouts in one season and needs four more to break the league record of 13.

"Don't blame the goalie," said Coach Billy Reay after Sunday night's 3-2 defeat by the Toronto Maple Leafs.

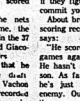
"It could have been 10-2 if it hadn't been for Tony. The team was just tired.

The Hawks drafted Esposito from Montreal.

Tony, younger brother of Phil Esposito, Boston's record breaking forward, won first-half honors for the Vezina trophy for the least number of goals scored against him.

With Esposito in the nets three-fourths of the time, the Hawks yielded 86 goals in the 37 games, one less than Ed Giacomin of New York Rangers.

It wasn't surprising that he was available in the draft Montreal had Rogatien Vachon and although Esposito recorded two shutouts in the 13 games he played, he isn't exactly stylish in the nets and at times was considered lucky.



"Hawks when we got lucky," grinned General Manager Tommy Ivan whose selection of Esposito is now being considered a stroke of genius.

Esposito has worked 2,283 minutes this season and in addition to his shutout run has given up an average of only 2.04 goals a game. Duck calls last that long in big league competition.

"I know I'm not stylish," said Esposito. "I play the way I think. If I feel I have to come out, I do it. If I think the situation calls for me to flop, I do it. If I think I can stop it standing up, I do it.

"Every play is different and if they figure you out and you commit yourself, you're dead."

The scored four goals in four games against me last season. He hasn't scored any this season. As far as I'm concerned, he's just another one of the enemy. Out there on the ice there are no relatives."

Ellis Juniors Doing First-rate Job of Convincing Doubters

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

The Ellis Juniors answered one question last night and just may have posed another for future opponents.

Anyone doubting the authenticity of back-to-back wins over Kingston and Peterborough got their reply as the Belleville team handed the first - place Oshawa Crushmon a convincing 6-3 setback, that helped them maintain their two - game lead over Trenton for fourth place in the Eastern Ontario Junior B League standings.

The question - seeking may not be over however as, "are the Juniors for real?" could very well be replaced by "could the real 'Big M' please stand up?"

The Oshawa team did an excellent job of hitting up high scoring right - winger Terry Meagher, holding him to one assist, but were faced with a couple of other problems, named Mallory and McConnell.

Reed Mallory, who was moved from centre to left wing four games ago, was Exceedingly headache number 9 for the Crushmen, pumping in four goals and doing an excellent defensive job.

Meanwhile John McConnell wasn't exactly shoe-horning twice and assisting on all of Mallory's markers.

McConnell opened the scoring at 4.39 of the first period tapping a long loud pass from Greg Barkhill and lacking a breakaway goal behind Crushmen netminder Tom Christie. Christie gained some measure of personal relief for the game as he twice stopped McConnell, when he was in the clear.

Backchecking was the Oshawa pitfall all night, as their wingers continually let their checks slip behind them to take lead passes from the Ellis defence.

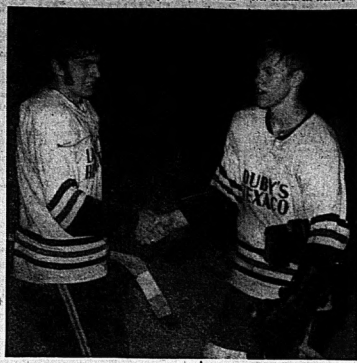
Christie of Oshawa and Belleville's Ron Jury both came through with outstanding efforts, as the Crushmen had a 38-34 shots-on-goal edge.

The Printers took a 4-2 lead into the final period, only to see it threatened as Oshawa narrowed the margin to one goal at the 11-minute mark.

Two goals by Mallory, late in the third killed any hopes the visitors had of a comeback.

Coach Floyd Crawford, understandably pleased with his team's effort, received more good news when he learned that right-winger Ron Fuller may commute from his Rochester job for the team's remaining weekend games. Fuller took several turns on the ice and looked very impressive after his long lay-off.

Speedy centre Danny Lupcostte did a brilliant checking job, despite being held off the scoresheet, and was continually disrupting the Oshawa attack.



Belleville's "Bopsy Twins," Dalton Lambert and Greg Burkitt, had visiting forwards looking for licence plate numbers all night as they handed out more hits than the Montreal Expos' pitching staff. Despite taking what could have been some costly penalties, the pair had a lot to do with shutting up the high-flying Crushmen forwards.

Mallory, who added an assist to his four - goal effort, has now scored eight goals in the last four games, while McConnell's six points moves him well up in the league's scoring leaders. Dalton Lambert was the only other Belleville player to pick up more than one point as he added a pair of assists.

Chris Rose had two goals for Oshawa, with scoring ace Jim Robson adding the other.

Belleville drew seven of the game's thirteen penalties. Next Ellis game is Thursday night, when they face the Quinte League All-Stars in an exhibition bout.

Give and Take

Left Winger Reed Mallory, whose stellar play gave the Ellis Juniors four of their goals, gets congratulations from centre Danny Lupenette after Sunday's 6-3 win over the Oshawa Crushmen. Lupenette took away many of the Oshawa scoring chances with a strong forecheckig effort.

Golden Hawks Stay in Running By Beating Byes

PETERBOROUGH — Charlie Drake kept his season coaching record intact, as the Trenton Golden Hawks climbed out of the Eastern Ontario Junior B League basement with an impressive 5-3 Sunday win over the Peterborough Don Byes.

The win kept Trenton on the heels of the Belleville Ellis Printers. The Golden Hawks are only four points out of a play-off spot and have a game in hand over Belleville.

Terry Brown, who was called up from the Trenton Juvenile team for the game, opened the scoring to give Trenton a 1-0 first period lead, converting a pass from Steve Gerrard.

After the Don Byes had tied the score, defenceman Wayne Kemp put Trenton in front, with Pete Ulman and Jim McFall drawing assists. Peterborough knotted the score at 2-2 to end the first period scoring.

After the team traded second period tallies, Brown connected for his second goal of the game assisted juvenile teamate Dune Armstrong, which proved to be the winner.

The pair later combined for an insurance goal that put the game out of reach for Trenton.

Terry Brown led the scorers with his hat trick and Kemp and Carey Webb added the other Trenton goals. Armstrong and centre Bill McFall each picked up two assists.

Murray, Gibson and Inglis scored for Peterborough, who failed to pick up ground on the second-place Kingston Frontenacs.

Brian Wilson did a fine job in goal for Trenton as he and Gerry Jewell seem to have solved their netminding troubles.

Trenton was assessed eight penalties against five for the home team. Tonight the Golden Hawks travel to Cobourg for a game against the Cougars, who trail them by only one point. Time of the game is 8 p.m.

Kinsmen Tie Opener

The Belleville Kinsmen Bantams played to a 4-4 tie with their Trenton counterparts Sunday, in the opening game of the best two-of-three OMHA playoff series.

Goals by Andy Ricketts and Phil Kirby erased a 3-2 Trenton lead late in the third period, but the Kinsmen couldn't hold Trenton off the scoresheet as Don Armstrong scored an unassisted goal at 18.41 of the final frame to knot the score.

Andy Ricketts had two goals for Belleville, with Steve and Phil Kirby getting one apiece. Armstrong notched two Trenton tallies and Curtis MacLean and Mark Klemencic each scored once.

Flu Bug Costs Braves Overtime Loss

Despite missing seven of their regulars, who were victims of the flu outbreak, the Bata Braves managed to take Sunderland into overtime, before dropping a 13-11 decision to the home team, in Intermediate C action.

After trailing 2-1 at the end of the first, Bata scored nine times in the middle period to open up a 10-7 lead. Andy Faulkner was the major factor in the Bata outburst counting four goals within five minutes.

Sunderland rallied to tie the game in the final period and took most of the overtime play away from the shorthanded Braves.

Faulkner, a recent addition to the team, counted five goals for Bata, giving him a total of seven in three games. Dan Dixon had three of the Braves' total and Roger Smith picked up a goal and five assists. Bob Bartch and Doug Potts were the other Bata scorers.

The loss dropped the Braves into a second-place tie with Sunderland.

Youth Bowlers Settle Score

The Bowl-O-Drome Y.B.C. leagues held their annual family Twosome Tournaments with 128 children and parents participating. At the Beginners level, the father-and-son high scores were turned in by Mr. Bill Savage and son Darren, Kim Nolan and Mrs. Nolan won the mother-and-daughter category.

In the bantam play, John Boothby and his father Norm had the high scores for the father - and - son competition. Daryl Gordon and Mrs. Gordon won the mother-and-son, while Mrs. Knott and daughter Shari won the mother-and-daughter division.

Paul Wilson and Mr. Wilson were high in the father-and-son part of the junior section, Mrs. Wilson and Peter Wilson won the mother-and-son and Mr. Robb and Patti, the father-and daughter, Debbie Fradette and her mother were best in mother and junior daughter competition.

What makes Olds Delta 88 Custom so Custom?

All the extras that aren't extras. Olds touches—at no extra cost—that customize an already impressive car. Exclusive fluted wide side moldings. Bold grille. Sweeping front bumper. Larger vertical tail lamps. Subtle chrome highlights. And massive rear bumper.

Inside, deeper foam padded cushions. Deluxe front and rear armrests. Snug pile carpeting in every nook and corner. And under the long hood, the heftier 310 hp Rocket 455 V 8. All at the modest price for which Olds 88s are famous.

What makes Delta 88 Custom so custom? Oldsmobile does. For those who want to escape from the ordinary in the style to which they'd like to become accustomed.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"
Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your ad with what it is you have to offer. If you have a car, truck or tractor, if you have a piece of property for sale, start your advertisement off with that item.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond quickly to ads that are clear and given complete or definite information. Be sure to include your PHONE NUMBER.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the readers to respond to reach you. Always be sure your telephone number is correct and complete. If you do not have one, or if you prefer that people not have to phone, suggest that they call at your home.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using convincing headlines.

You can sing, your ad in the crowd of many, and the price may only say for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and tell yourself what you would like to know about the item you have for sale, you give, will make a good Classified ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying, your need or new merchandise. Your results will be greater if you tell them what you have to offer. Tell them every advantage you can in good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfactory results, may be repeated next week for continuous, low cost insertion. Be sure to change wording and do not contain information that is misleading.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a local improvement the following watermain, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

Street	From	To	Estimated Cost	Corporation's Share	Owners' Share	Estimated Cost Per Front Frontage	Estimated Amount Or 1 Per Front Frontage
Hanna Street	An existing watermain	490.5 feet westerly	$17,521.81	$6,803.41	$10,718.40	$10.926	$1.315709

EXAMPLE: Lot with 50 ft. frontage would be assessed as follows:

50 ft. x $10.926 — $546.39

If paid over a period of 15 years at 8½% per annum, the cost would be:

50 ft. x $1.315709 — $65.79.

2. The special assessment is to be paid in 15 equal annual instalments.

3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work, and any owner may, within 21 days after the first publication of the Notice, file with the Clerk of the municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.

4. The said Board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when any objection to the said work will be considered.

Times Says Trudeau Not Easy to Know

LONDON (CP) — The Times says in an editorial that Prime Minister Wilson's trip to Ottawa may give him a better insight into the personality of Prime Minister Trudeau.

The Canadian leader "is not the easiest of Commonwealth leaders to gauge or understand," the newspaper says.

"Informal talks may help."

H. B. Boyce, political correspondent of Daily Telegraph, reports that few British MPs expect Wilson's trip to Canada and the United States "to yield much political advantage."

"Many of them think that publicity, valuable for the run-up to a general election, is the main reason why Mr. Wilson chose to fly the Atlantic," Boyce writes.

The Telegraph correspondent says Wilson "cannot have anything urgent to say in Ottawa, apart from sounding Mr. Trudeau about the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference."

Mod. British editorial comment about the Wilson trip has glossed prime place to his American visit.

The Guardian emphasizes the economic side of his reported plans for the Washington talks with President Nixon.

Any recession resulting from Nixon's efforts to deflate the U.S. economy may spread to Europe, The Guardian says.

"With an impending election and a still fragile improvement in the British balance of payments, Mr. Wilson will want to add his voice to those urging President Nixon not to overdo the deflationary medicine," the paper says.

There are widespread predictions here that Wilson's visit to Washington may prove decisive in the prime minister's ultimate choice of an election date.

If Nixon tells Wilson the U.S. government plans drastic efforts to curb inflation, the prime minister would see his hopes for producing an electorally-advantageous budget this year sharply curtailed, the Daily Sketch says.

It also argues that "an American squeeze would hit British exports."

Recent rises in exports have been proudly cited by government spokesmen as indicative of the economic recovery Wilson hopes will win him re-election when the country next goes to the polls.

The Sketch finds Wilson's election-date dilemma a question of whether to defy unfavorable public-opinion surveys and call an early vote, or "to wait until the autumn and find the pound hit by a shaky dollar."

Viet Cong Asks Posts In Cabinet

SAIGON (Reuters) — The information ministry said today Saigon's newspapers will not be affected accurately" a speech by its minister, who said the government is prepared to offer one or two cabinet posts to the Communists.

But it stopped short of denying the wording of the speech, tape-recorded by Vietnamese information minister Hoai Minister Ngo Khac Tinh addressed 200 handset information cadres Sunday in the Mekong Delta province of Bac Lieu.

The statement also hinted at secret talks between the two sides in the Vietnamese war in saying Communists had been demanding a number of ministerial posts in addition to a cabinet.

Informed sources said they had no recollection of where or how a demand for ministries was made.

In the tape recording, Tinh told the cadres:

"If the Communists demand one or two ministries in the cabinet we are ready to give them. But on the other hand, if they demand a coalition throughout the infrastructure from village and hamlet level right up through the government, or in the military, then this we cannot accept."

No Progress Is Made In Curing Heart Ills

TORONTO (CP) — For 25 years, researchers have had no new ideas on how to approach the problem of heart disease, says Dr. W. Stanley Hartroft, research director of the Hospital for Sick Children.

"Heart disease is the only major disease in which some progress has not been made. Cancer has its fine surgery, diabetes its oral insulin but heart disease—nothing."

The unchecked spread of fatal heart disease could mean reduced life expectancy for Canadians, he said in an interview Sunday. The life expectancy of Scandinavians has already begun to shrink—only by a few months so far but it is nevertheless statistically significant."

The cause is heart disease, he said.

Average life expectancy for Canadian men is 68 years, for women 70.

He said doctors hand out advice on how to minimize the chances of heart disease—stop smoking, eat less animal fat, lose weight—yet there is no proof that these measures are effective.

Dr. Hartroft's own research in nine years at the hospital has shown that atherosclerosis, a form of hardening of the arteries, begins in childhood and by the end of puberty "the stage is set for heart attack in 85 per cent of the population."

In July, Dr. Hartroft will become professor of experimental pathology at the University of Hawaii in Honolulu.

Woman Found Stabbed

CLINTON, Ont. (CP) — Inspector L. G. Lyle of the provincial police Criminal Investigation Branch, Toronto, has been placed in charge of the investigation into the stabbing death of Miss Katharine McGregor, 70, a retired high school teacher who was found Friday.

"The woman died of multiple stab wounds," he said. "I can't say how often she was stabbed but it was quite a number of times."

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange dropped sharply in active mid-morning trading today following a steep decline Friday.

The market opened fractionally lower and continued to fall under pressure from New York.

On Index, Industrials were down 1.13 to 181.42, western 1.65 to 213.43, base metals .41 to 113.45 and golds .82 to 124.19.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 936,000 shares compared with 1,000,000 at the same time Friday.

Losses outnumbered declines 174 to 91 with 200 issues unchanged.

Thirteen of the 17 industrial components were lower, led by oil refiners. Chemical, communication, real estate and general manufacturing issues were slightly ahead.

In oil refiners, Imperial Oil dropped ⅛ to 20¼ and Gulf Canada ⅜ to 19. Shell was up ⅛ to 16¾.

Trading in Inspiration was halted at the opening today. Trading was halted Friday at the company's request. The stocks closed Thursday at 35 cents, down 8 cents.

Balloon Is Poised For Trip to Wales

WICKLOW, Ireland (CP) — A balloon named the Pride of Thunder Bay was poised Sunday night for an attempt by a two-man Ca adian crew to fly the Irish Sea for the first time in a hot-air bag.

The balloon, called after Canada's newest city, was waiting for a favorable wind to lift off with Capt. Ray Munro of Lakefront Dist., and Norman Jones of Montreal.

Munro, a 48-year-old air force and army veteran, said Sunday night the over-water flight is planned as practice for a flight next month from Vancouver Island to the British Columbia mainland, which is to be followed by one over the Rockies.

After the Irish Sea venture, the pair plan to float over the Straight of Dover between Scotland and England and to cross the British Channel between Wales and southeast England.

The Irish Sea flight, from this point, 28 miles south of Dublin to Wales, could be anywhere from 65 to 200 miles, depending on the wind. The balloon will carry enough propane gas fuel to keep it filled with hot air for an estimated six hours.

The balloon, registered as Canada One, already holds the world record of about 40 miles for a distance flight made under test conditions set by the International Aviation Federation.

Munro and his wife Jones will race a westerly wind blowing at 50 knots at 15,000 feet. He did not know it will uplift turn up.

"We had it for a time early this morning," he said, "but the wind veered and it we'd taken off we'd have wound up in the sea. However, it's a very simple matter if it's headed right. I don't intend to get hurt."

The balloonists are accompanied by Cmdr. Jack Sloan of Ottawa, a former Canadian navy pilot who is aeronautics adviser, and George Shaw, editor of the Armed Forces Review in Ottawa.

Auschwitz Is Grim and Grey 25 Years After

OSWEICIM, Poland (AP) — Fresh snow covers the ground around Auschwitz but a grey grimness hangs over the Nazi death camp, liberated 25 years ago this week.

It is a deserted hell, made into a museum and monument to 4,000,000 victims of Adolf Hitler's inhumanity. The thick wire fences still stand. So do the wooden watchtowers, once manned by soldiers rifles of the Third Reich's biggest factory for annihilation.

In places, human ashes and bone fragments are still visible. The "arbeit macht frei" sign, so hideously ironic, still reigns over the entrance way to Auschwitz I, the main camp. It means "work brings freedom."

Below the sign have passed more than 7,500,000 visitors, including 1,000,000 foreigners, since the Polish government made the camp a museum in 1947.

Inside the gate are the redbrick blockhouses in which prisoners lived. They now are filled with the remnants of mass murder found after the camp was reached Jan. 27, 1945, by the Soviet army.

One display has two tons of hair cut from 40,000 gassed women in the last days. Another is filled with shoes, another with artificial legs, another with shaving and clothes brushes. One shows a great heap of suitcases bearing the names of Jews who were brought like cattle in freight cars from all over Europe to be liquidated in Auschwitz's gas chambers.

The camp was opened in June, 1940, to hold Poles arrested for resistance to the Nazi occupation of their country. Later it was expanded and designated by the Nazi hierarchy to be the centre for the "final solution of the Jewish question."

Three-quarters of Auschwitz's victims are believed to have been Jews, but in nearly five years of operation some 28 ethnic groups from 24 countries were counted among the dead.

From the main camp the visiting car go by bus to Auschwitz II, the camp known as Birkenau, 1½ miles away. Here were located four gas chambers with crematoria, and here the Nazis before they fled, but preserved as ruins. Here, under a watchtower crossing a long, low barracks, came the trains bearing human cargo to the death factory.

Under a cover of snow, the outline of the tracks can still be seen. Here the selections were made by doctors—those who were to go directly to the gas chambers or those deemed capable of hard labor, which meant usually a slow death by starvation or disease.

Rudolf Hoess, the commandant of Auschwitz, stated at the Nazi war crimes trial at Nuremberg in 1946 that Birkenau's gas chamber could hold 2,000 victims at one time. Hoess was hanged at Auschwitz by the Polish government in 1947.

Hundred Were Killed As Bridge Blown Up

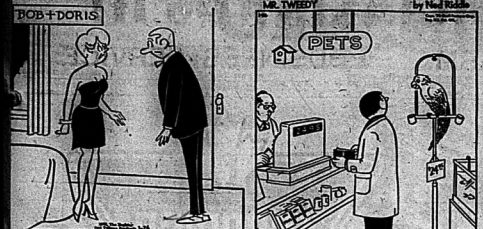
LAGOS (Reuters) — At least 100 persons, including women and children, were killed Christmas Eve when an officer of the former Biafran army blew up a bridge to head off advancing federal government forces, a reliable source said today.

The source, an eyewitness, said a young secessionist captain personally detonated the charge on a bridge across the Niger River to the east of Onitsha, because federal troops were only 25 miles away. The source said the captain then appealed to about 200 fleeing civilians to get off the bridge but many of them paid no attention.

"It was a terrible sight," the witness said. "Bits of the structure of the bridge flew and human bodies were blasted in all directions. Many people were swept away down river."

Several days later many bodies were still lying wedged in the struts of the wrecked wooden bridge as the corpses of others faced each other across the water, he added.

The captain had been under orders to destroy the bridge before advancing federal forces reached it.



Early in the afternoon of Dec. 24, the first federal soldiers, shouting "One Nigeria, One Nigeria," neared the 70-yard-long bridge mingling with a large crowd of Biafran refugees fleeing before their advance.

The bridge was the only escape route in ebel Biafra after troops of the Nigerian 3rd Marine Commando Division, overran Umuahia and Aba provinces.

This was during a pre-Christmas drive which eventually led to the collapse of the secession ist region.

In 1945, the retreating Nazis destroyed most of the plant. But on the site the Polish government erected one of the country's largest chemical works, which produces chemical complex, producing more than 120 varieties of synthetic rubbers and plastics, employs some 11,000 workers.

Most of the 42,000 inhabitants of the town of Oswiecim, where Auschwitz is located, earn their living either directly or indirectly from this plant.

Your Car

When It Comes Time to Trade, Remember Honesty Two-sided

By RAY STAPLEY

Much has been written about the dangers of getting stung when buying a car and, as with practically any other commodity, car dealers have their share of shady characters who would not pass up the opportunity of making a fast buck. Undoubtedly, if we rush out and make a deal impulsively without using common sense we can wind up being stung.

However, I know several conscientious car dealers who have been in business for decades, and they are still selling to customers who deal with them in their first year of operation. They would not enjoy this repeat business if the price was not right and the service was below par.

When making a deal, it should be remembered that honesty is a two-way street, and dealers do not hear about some of the tricks that the public pull on the dealers. To a few journalists, trading is a sort of game and the plan of attack has been carefully worked out over the previous 12 months—challenge and outwit the dealer.

The car has been allowed to deteriorate, maintenance work ceased long ago. Only bare essentials have been done to keep the old bus breathing. The speedometer (odometer) has been "adjusted" to a more acceptable mileage (usually (sometimes wound so far back that the dealer actually has to advance it again to a more realistic figure).

The automatic transmission has been doped with chemicals to temporarily hide the expensive fluid leak, and the leak in the radiator carefully sealed with stopleak. The front brake linings have been replaced with the cheapest material (the rears aren't scraping yet), and scored brake drums are left unturned. The major rust holes in the body have been plugged with putty and blown over with paint. All in all, a masterful piece of camouflage has been accomplished. Now to enter the ring and entrance the dealer.

The match of wits begins by collecting figures from half a dozen dealers. Sometimes weeks are spent analyzing the trade - in allowances offered by various dealers and deciding which appraiser failed to catch the skilful patchwork and which salesman was talked into offering the most "extra" free of charge.

The dealer is allowed about 10 minutes to look over and road test the car, while the owner has been preparing for the contest for 12 months. In the boxing ring, there are rigid rules and a referee, but when it comes to the sport of car trading, no holds are barred.

There is no liability on the part of the customer if, after a deal is made, the dealer discovers a cracked block. The same customer would howl like murder and brand the dealer as a low-class crook if he had been stuck with the cracked block.

Similarly, doctoring up old faithful prior to heading for the auction block is usually a waste of time. The appraisers are wise to all the trading tricks and have a sharp eye and ear for camouflage. Some conscientious motorists invest money in first-class repairs before trading, but I've found that a $100 investment in repairs usually nets perhaps $50 more on the trade-in allowance.

Twenty Die in Mexican Crash

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) — Twenty persons were killed Sunday when a plane carrying relatives of candidates in the campaign of a Mexican presidential candidate crashed near Vera Cruz, the Mexican news agency Informex reported.

The dead included five members of the crew of the Convair airliner, operated by the ruling Institional Revolutionary party, the agency said.

It was first reported that there was one survivor, identified as Jesus Cramsky, a reporter for El Heraldo newspaper. But the news agency later said he, too, had died.

The candidate in the presidential election in July, Luis Echeverria, was travelling in another plane which landed safely.

The plane, carrying reporters and photographers representing most of the major Mexican City newspapers, was trying to land at Posarica Airport near Vera Cruz through heavy clouds when it hit a hillside near the airfield, sources there said.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

In response to the mother who felt lonely and ignored by her family, I have received the following enclosure from Mrs. H. who has written: "I must remember that her children did not ask to be born and she cannot ask to be loved" — she can only love."

As loneliness and loss of affection by children are common causes of depression and nervousness in the elderly, I think it may be helpful to reprint Mrs. H's words taken from The Prophet, written by Kahlil Gibran:

You children are not your children.

They are the sons and daughters of Life's longing for itself.

They come through you, but not from you,

And though they are with you yet they belong not to you.

You may give them your love but not your thoughts.

For they have their own thoughts.

You may house their bodies but not their souls.

For their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow,

Which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams.

You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you.

For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday.

You are the bows from which your children as living arrows may go swift and far.

Let your bending in the Archer's hand be for gladness:

For even as He loves the arrow that flies so,

He loves also the bow that is stable.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My sister is 35 years old and smokes constantly. She complains of occasional shooting pains in the ribs. Could this be cancer?

I am 17 years old and she is my legal guardian. She makes me more than any sister was meant to, as she has also been my "mother," too. She has me scared silly that she may have cancer. — Worried Sister.

Comment: Statistics show that more women are getting lung cancer, most likely because of their increase in smoking cigarettes.

I doubt that your own sister has cancer, but it wouldn't even want to guess. If she loves you as much as you say she does, she'll agree to go to your family doctor for a check-up and X-rays. Meanwhile you can only hope she will give up smoking to prevent future trouble.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My doctor has suggested I take tranquilizers for a few weeks to get me over a rough spot in my life. Although I have confidence in him, I wonder if I should take them. I've heard that they sometimes produce side effects. — Mrs. U.

Comment: Any drug may produce a "side effect" in some persons. This is not sufficient reason for depriving the majority of the use of a helpful drug.

For example, some people "can't take" aspirin. Think of the millions it helps. Some can not take morphine or codeine. Instead of calming these people and reducing pain, they cause reverse effects: wakefulness and restlessness.

But consider how many are helped. My suggestion is that you have confidence in your doctor and in the drug prescribed. If you have side effects he will stop it.

For Mr. Y.: Yes, it is possible to have cirrhosis of the liver as you have at the age of 66, even though you have never touched a drop of alcohol in your life.

Nevertheless, you can understand people's belief that you have never taken alcohol: One estimate is that at least 90 per cent of cirrhosis victims have a history of alcohol intake.

Sometimes the hardening or cirrhosis is due to a history of infectious hepatitis or a family diet. Here you have been exposed in your occupation, to fumes from hydrocarbons used in phenols, cleaning fluids, etc? Sometimes these may damage the liver.

For Mr. T.: Yes, pasteurization is important. It is accepted that many infections, including tuberculosis, may be transmitted by raw milk.

Sin Is Not Unlawful

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I make no brief for cigarettes. As an inveterate smoker for more than 30 years, I think they are bad for you in many ways, and not good for you in any way. Let me make this clear at the outset.

But everything that is bad should not be unlawful; this is the Puritan conception that is private sin and public transgression, which has been responsible for more evil than the evils it has sought to eradicate.

In a recent editorial in the New Republic magazine, "Cyclamates and Cigarettes," the editors try to draw a parallel between the government's swift ban on cyclamates and its tender handling of cigarettes, when there is more medical evidence that the latter are harmful to human than the former.

This censorious and thoughtless editorial ends on the indignant note that "No one in Congress or HEW has the guts to suggest cigarettes be banned." It is not a question of guts; it is a question of logic. Banning cigarettes would be as foolish and futile as our recent absurd endeavor to prohibit liquor.

An argument might be made that cigarette companies should not be permitted to advertise their wares, as they are not in some countries. Or even that tobacco should be turned into a government monopoly, as it is in some other lands with socialistic controls. Such measures would be harsh perhaps unjust, but at least they would fall within reason.

There is no real analogy between the cyclamates and cigarettes. In the first case, there are substitutes for cyclamates, and the consules using them will doubtless find something even better, and safer, before long. Secondly, smoking is an addictive habit (I won't even say "pleasure"), which millions of people are not going to give up no matter what kind of law is passed.

If we are going to drop bad habits, it must be by a campaign of education and persuasion, not by law or edict. People have a right to abuse themselves if they want to, so long as they know all the facts and all the possible consequences. Nobody has ever been made better by forcibly preventing him from indulging in his vices.

Here, the so-called "liberals" as with the New Republic, would themselves be just as rigid and arbitrary and narrow as the conservatives they are so fond of lambasting. You can legislate public morality — as, in the matter of fair housing or employment opportunities — but to legislate private morality is to sin against the spirit.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 27

Your birthday today: Bringing things into balance is the keyword for the oncoming year and a half. There may be long periods in which you need more than ordinary privacy or even isolation. Meditation brings a deeper intuition which makes a gre- deal of difference. You may make a sizable amount of money incidental to your efforts to level the obstacles in your path.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Intellectual curiosity may lead you into strange places today. A fin investment in fine arts or something of beauty may pay off handsomely later, depending on quality of work and-care in selection. Your mood now runs to confidence and expansive good humor.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Tactful inquiries into possible order. Good buys can be had in appliances, furnishing, clothing.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Cater to your health and its protection. Light and leisurely dining and exercise will serve you well. Mechanical gidgets, cars are to be checked for function, possible need of repairs or maintenance.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Acquaintances provide you much interesting information on the Stock Market and related and scholarly subjects. Impulsive decisions should be held in suspension, at least overnight, if possible.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your plans now have smoother sailing. Minor details are given the morning. Shopping is favored to produce long-wearing bargains.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Take more initiative; clear up confused working conditions; start additional projects. Partnerships formed today should have a long and interesting future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Use your power to charm others past a general petulant mood. Treating everyone like naughty children seems silly but will work better than trying to reason today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Tensions between co-workers are inevitable but needn't get out of hand. Don't become involved: stick strictly to what you've agreed to do. Quit at the earliest reasonable time. Seek an entirely different atmosphere this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You have a great deal of leverage today. You can achieve much, including the resolution of some long-standing annoyances, by staying precisely with the issues and not getting into any other discussions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Mystery and mischief is abroad today. Much of it suits you to a tee. Sensitive observation reveals many strong emotional threads under apparently casual superficialities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): The search for inner peace continues amid some stress. The Aquarian trait of seeking externally for the patterns of ultimate truth helps you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): During odd moments today, you really don't know what to think. Potential gains exist; something you own has possibly increased in value.

Health Authorities Believe Typhoid Carrier Isolated

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal government health authorities are reasonably certain they have isolated the carrier responsible for a typhoid outbreak on the P. and O. liner Oronsay, a line official said Saturday.

Alexander M. Stirling, a director of the line here from London, said he was informed medical proof should be completed in a few days.

P. and O. officials have set Feb. 2 as the 28,000-ton liner's sailing date, to complete a cruise from Britain to Hawaii and Australia interrupted 11 days ago by the infectious disease.

Mr. Stirling also said arrangements are being made to allow passengers who wish to disembark here to leave the ship within a few days.

Canadian passengers, he said, will be required to report to their local health officials and those leaving Canada will be required to provide the country of their destination with a residential address.

About 250 of the ship's 900 passengers have indicated they want to reach their destinations before the Oronsay sailing date. They will leave the vessel early this week.

"We hope to get positive guidance from the medical authorities about a sailing date in the very near future," he said.

The toll from the infectious fever now stands at 71 confirmed or suspected cases.

Medical authorities said they have been conducting extensive tests on five crew members thought to be possible carriers.

P. and O. company officials said it is costing them $20,000 for every day the liner remains in Vancouver.

School Board Budget Under Stiff Pressure

Health, School Budget Vetoed

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — In his first veto since assuming office, President Nixon Monday night tossed back to Congress a money bill that would have provided nearly $20,000,000,000 for health, education and welfare.

Nixon signed the veto at the end of a short television address and explained he was blocking the measure—which included a $1,300,000,000 increase added by Congress—because it would jeopardize his battle against inflation.

"I believe that the increase is not in the best interests of the American people," explained the president. "I believe it is the wrong amount, for the wrong purpose, at the wrong time."

Supporters of the $19-700,000,000 appropriation for the department of health, education and welfare would need to muster a two-thirds majority in both the House of Representatives and Senate to override the veto.

Although congressional observers figured the Senate with its 57 Democrats and 43 Republicans probably would block the veto, its fate is less certain in the lower chamber, where there are 245 Democrats and 188 Republicans. Two seats are vacant.

The House votes first, and if it lets the veto stand, the matter will not go to the Senate.

Noting that other federal departments, including defence, had made budget cuts for 1970, Nixon said that "if we are to stop the rise in the cost of living . . . we have to cut spending by the federal government."

It was his first veto since assuming the presidency last year, and the first veto any president has signed before a television audience.

Nixon promised that if Congress sustained his veto, he would work with it "to ease the transition to reform without inflation."

"We spend morcon education than any country on earth, but we can spend ourselves poor," he said. "Therefore, no matter how popular it is, if it raises your prices I will not approve it."

Low Income Housing Objective

KITCHENER (CP) — Robert Andras, minister responsible for housing, said Monday the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation's capital budget in 1970 is aimed at producing low income housing quickly.

Mr. Andras told a news conference that the capital budget will be the highest in the corporation's history but refused to discuss details.

He said the budget will emphasize quick low-income housing but not the urban renewal schemes that several Canadian cities have been planning.

Indonesian Fire Kills 55 Persons

JAKARTA (AP) — Fifty-five persons were killed and another 41 badly burned in the central Java port town of Semarang when fire roared through a crowd collecting gasoline from a leaking pipeline, police reported today. They said most of the injured were expected to die.

More than 100 persons were packed around the leaking pipe when the gasoline suddenly erupted into flame.

Nineteen men, women and children died in the first searing blast of flame. A sea breeze fanned the fire and it spread quickly across the gasoline-soaked ground as the frantic crowd tried to escape.

Trustees Face Busy Fortnight

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Rising costs of supplies and equipment, teachers' salary demands and normal strains on the educational system are going to push Hastings county school trustees into almost continuous sessions in the last two weeks of February.

Things don't look too rosy as board members settle down to settling the budget for 1970.

Director of education Eric Runacres said this morning he had warned trustees to reserve every evening during the last two weeks of February to discuss the budget.

Costs of equipment and supplies will rise five per cent in 1970, he indicated.

"Because of inflation, the board's buying power is five per cent less this year than in 1969," he said.

Last year the board allocated $587,900 for supplies and $132,000 for equipment in its $14,690,000 estimated budget.

Teachers' salaries cost the the board $9,242,464 this year. Fringe benefits added another $124,000 to the amount paid teachers.

Board - teacher salary negotiations are just beginning, and as yet there is no indication of the extent of the teachers' demands — a vital factor in this year's budget calculations.

In Toronto, secondary school teachers have asked for a 35 per cent salary increase.

"A similar increase here could cost us in excess of $3,000,000 million and raise taxes over 20 mills in Belleville," trustee Macdonald Smith told the board last night.

"I don't think teachers' salaries will go up that much here," Donald Williams chairman of the board's salary negotiating committee, declared flatly.

The board of education is not alone in its salary difficulties. City council is now negotiating new salary schedules with firemen and civic employees, and the police commission is negotiating salary increases with the police.

Although their demands have not been made public some reports suggest they seek increases in the neighborhood of 10 per cent.

Mr. Runacres said this morning the board can't come to grips with the budget until the provincial grants are announced. The department of education has promised the grant system by Jan. 31. Last year it was delayed until mid-April, long after the deadline of March 1, the date set by law for presentation of school board budgets to municipalities.

The director of education hopes to present the Hastings county budget to contributing municipalities by March 1 this year.

With it will go a pleasant surprise — in the form of a surplus from the 1969 operating expenses.

Size of the surplus is not determined yet, as business officials complete their year-end calculations.

"But indications are that we stayed well within our 1969 budget, and I'm proud of everyone responsible during this first difficult year of operation of the county board," said Mr. Runacres.

PMs Talk at Ottawa

Better Life Is Aim Of Talks - - Wilson

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson says he came to the United States to explore with President Nixon how to create a better life for the world's people — not to find ways to more power.

The British leader, whose first of two days of meetings with Nixon was scheduled today, said Monday the door demand a recasting of the "special relationship" that has bound the two nations in this century.

"It will be in no inward-looking or purely bilateral sense we shall discuss the special relationship I have called for," Wilson told an audience in New York before arriving in Washington. He flew to New York from Ottawa where he held talks with Prime Minister Trudeau.

"For unlike what some feared about our special relationship in the past, we seek not to be exclusive in our dealings but to join with others in a common endeavor to solve the problems of human society."

Although Wilson said the overcoming of social evils will dominate the talks, diplomatic sources indicated the discussions just might cover the more worldly matters of international conflicts and economic problems.

Air Pollution Reduced

Natural Gas Fine Auto Fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trials with a natural gas auto fuel have been so successful in eliminating pollution that plans are under way to convert as many as 1,000 government cars to the new system by the end of the year, Congress was told today.

In testimony prepared for a Senate commerce environmental subcommittee hearing, General Services Administration head Robert L. Kunzig said 12 cars already use the new, low-emission fuel with 70 more to be converted in the next two months.

"I emphasize to the committee that I hope to do this at little or no cost to the federal government," Kunzig's statement said.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Philip A. Hart (Dem., Mich.) is considering a bill providing government purchase only of those automobiles certified as giving off the lowest possible pollution.

The initial GSA experiment was begun last October at a government motor poll in Los Angeles.

Kunzig said 24 autos were used in all, 12 operated with a natural gas converter, and 12 similar vehicles operated on regular gasoline for comparison.

A GSA spokesman told a reporter the converters cost $340 a vehicle to install and take about four hours to attach.

Describing the bill before the subcommittee, Hart said the proposal was "innovative because it does not depend upon regulatory restraint."

"Rather it utilizes economic incentive to stimulate changes which will benefit the environment. It will succeed, if it succeeds, by rewarding the most resourceful and responsible manufacturer, rather than by penalizing the hindmost."

The GSA as custodian of most government buildings and the government's chief purchasing agent operates more than 51,000 vehicles in 97 motor pools across the country.

Kunzig said besides the fuel experiment, the GSA is developing a program with Ford Motor Co. to test the effectiveness of pollution control equipment on production model cars after they have been in normal operation for one or two years.

Nigeria Believed Deporting Irish Missionaries in Biafra

LAGOS (AP) — Thirty-two Irish missionaries from Biafra are being brought to Lagos and "almost certainly are being deported from Nigeria," a source close to the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Lagos reported today.

They said the commander of the 3rd Marine Commando Division, Col. Olusegun Obasanjo, had ordered the priests out despite protests by an emissary of the Irish ambassador, and that other priests and nuns in the area were being taken to Fort Harcourt for screening.

By contrast, in the northern part of the former Biafran territory the 1st Division has asked missionaries to stay and help with the relief work, the source said.

But Catholic authorities hold little hope that any of the 100 Irish priests and nuns who worked inside the short-lived Ibo state can escape deportation. They said even the 23 doctors and nurses who worked with Catholic medical teams on the federal side of the war have not been allowed to help out inside the fallen republic.

Pride of Thunder Bay Dunked in Irish Sea

HOLYHEAD, Wales (CP) — The Pride of Thunder Bay wound up in the drink Monday, but the two-man crew of the hot-air balloon remains undaunted.

"We're pretty rugged characters," Norman Jones of Montreal said after he and Capt. Ray Munro of Lancaster, Ont., were plucked from the chilly Irish Sea. "We're also a bit goofy."

The two Canadians were forced to bring down their wind - buffeted balloon prematurely on Monday's try at soaring from Wicklow, Ireland, to a point in Wales 65 to 200 miles away, depending on the winds. No one has ever crossed the Irish Sea by means of a hot-air bag.

In the water, Munro stayed with the balloon for about an hour until he and the Pride of Thunder Bay were picked up by a tanker and transferred to a helicopter.

The next step, Jones said, is to get on the telephone to find out where their Pride has gone.

Heart Fund Campaign Being Planned for City

Belleville organizers have started things rolling for the city's upcoming Heart Fund Campaign.

Although the actual campaign won't begin until the week starting Feb. 22, officials are organizing details well in advance.

A door-to-door canvas will begin Monday, Feb. 23 and run through the following two weeks.

Gerald Hyde, public relations officer for the campaign explained that Feb. 22 will be known as "Heart Sunday", to be observed in both the community and its churches.

This year's Heart Fund campaign objective is $8,000.

Money is needed for research into the cause of heart disease, and the development of new methods to ensure heart attack patients a swift return to health.

"The Heart Fund campaign is province-wide", explained Mr. Hyde, "and the big kick-off provincially will take place on Feb. 2 at a dinner for campaign organizers participating on behalf of the Fund."

This year's campaign will not only include the city of Belleville, but also three other areas, namely, Tweed, Madoc and Marmora.

Money collected in these three areas will be added to the total gathered from the citizens of Belleville.

Heart Fund Campaign Chairman is Mrs. Dorothy Howell, and vice-chairman Mrs. Isabel Hartz, will be heading the Fund drive this year.

Mrs. Howell and Mrs. Hartz will work together in organizing door-to-door canvassers who will ask Bellevillians to give donations to "help your heart."

UCS Problem Pondered

City to Seek Guidelines For Community Fund

The city of Belleville will seek information from other cities on community chest programs and municipal grants to their fund-raising campaigns.

The suggestion that outside information be obtained was made yesterday by Alderman Jack Ireland. It came mainly as result of last week's presentation to council by the Belleville United Community Services which said it had an accumulated deficit of approximately $18,000.

The UCS said its deficit could total $32,000 by the end of 1970. It told council that last year UCS agencies got only 89 per cent of their approved budgets.

In the meantime, Alderman Donald Gostner has come up with an eight-point program which he suggests could get the UCS out of its difficulty.

In a letter to UCS president Mgr. J. P. Sullivan, Alderman Soutter suggests that the city include $3,000 in this year's budget for the United Community Services. Some $1,000 of this should be earmarked to complete a survey of UCS operations which is discontinued. The balance would help offset the salary of an executive director.

Other suggestions from Alderman Soutter: (1) Member agencies be asked to review their budgets and be prepared to operate this year on 90 per cent of the revised approved budget.

(2) That it be agreed there be no additional fund drives or an appeal return on an individual agency basis.

(3) That the city loan the UCS the money required to bring budgets of member agencies up to 90 per cent of the revised approved budget.

(4) A publicity campaign be launched to advise Bellevillians that the campaign fund drive in 1970 will be for money to meet the 1970 city loan — as well as 1971 agency needs.

(5) The business and professional community be asked to review their 1970 pledges with the view of revising them upwards if possible.

(6) Citizens who have agreed to payroll deductions be asked to consider voluntarily increasing their contribution by five cents a week.

(7) The accumulated deficit of approximately $18,000 be paid off over a five-year period.

Copies of Alderman Soutter's letter to Mgr. Sullivan were given to aldermen at yesterday's council meeting but there was no discussion on its contents.

Council Approves Budget Committee

City Manager J. R. Reynolds advised city council yesterday that preparation of the city's 1970 current budget and its five - year capital works budget would be a difficult and complex operation.

He recommended the appointment of a special budget advisory committee.

Council agreed after Mayor Russell Scott noted that a similar committee had proved successful last year.

Included on last year's budget committee were chairmen of the parks board, recreation and arena committee, and traffic committee, along with advisory representatives from the city works department and public utilities.

Mayor Scott said the membership on this year's committee would follow the pattern set last year.

Litter Problems Pondered

The city parks board yesterday received a pat on the back for design of locally made litter containers but another knocked in many city parks.

Alderman Enos David suggested that more of the woodslatted containers be provided for city street litterers to combat litter problems.

"If you have no place to dump litter what are you doing to do?" he asked.

But parks board chairman Alderman Paul Russell said parks employees were fully engaged in building containers and park tables for use in city parks

However, he said design plans for ascetaliers would be provided the public works department — if it wanted to make its own contracts.

The discussion was prompted by Alderman Arthur Keegan who said that wrappings from newspapers at drop-off points were still creating a problem.

He wondered how effective a city edict would be forbidding the delivery of papers after 5 p.m.

Instead, he suggested they be dumped at the home of the newspaper carrier or nearby residences.

City Clerk Adam Stalker said he had contacted all newspapers last year about this problem and had received good co-operation.

The trouble was that sometimes carrier boys were in a hurry and wrappers got scattered. Also, complimentary papers sometimes were discarded instead of being delivered to home owners.

Alderman Keegan commented that it was outside newspapers, not the local ones, which were at fault.

OWRC Claims

Pollution Control Is Best in America

By BARRY McCULLAGH
Staff Reporter

Through the endeavors of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, supported by industry and the general public, Ontario's pollution abatement program is farther ahead of any other jurisdiction in North America, Merrill Cathcart, assistant to the general manager of the OWRC, told Belleville Rotarians yesterday.

Pollution, said Mr. Cathcart, was the result of industrial and technological progress and our failure to "act responsibly as far as the environment is concerned."

Canadians, he said, would not want to return to the 1800s when there were few industries, no cars and no jet aircraft. Pollution nonetheless was an insidious thing now grown to serious proportions. Society was changing its values and beginning to recognize that quality of life rather than quantity of possessions was what mattered.

Mr. Cathcart said that by the 1950s the problem of pollution had become acute and it was then that the water resources commission act came into being. Today only a handful of municipalities in the province were dumping raw sewage into the water supply.

Some, he added, have only primary treatment plants. He named Belleville as one of the centres in which secondary facilities are being installed.

But, even then, a problem may exist because of detrients causing growth of algae, said Mr. Cathcart envisaged further measures to control this problem.

Rotarian Jim Hare was hope for the Bay of Quinte and even Lake Erie which he said was not a "destroyed lake" by any means, the OWRC official expressed optimism that a solution to the whole problem of municipal waste would be found in the not too distant future. There had been a real change in the thinking of industrial management, although some "major offenders," notably in pulp and paper, remained.

Mr. Cathcart said other aspects of the problem being watched by the OWRC included farm operations where use of fertilisers were concerned, cottages and septic tank installations, and waste from pleasure boats.

President Bob Lanning welcomed to the luncheon Belleville's "Mayor of the Week" Jane Douglas.

A Grade 12 student at Belleville Collegiate, Miss Douglas is a top student and enjoys dramatics and sailing. A competitor in next month's Rotary Music Festival she spoke of co-operation and involvement as the two big things in school today; aimed at fostering a greater degree of school spirit.

Police Commission Seeks Increase

Belleville Police Commission feels that it should have an increase in the $600 honorariums received by its three members.

The increase was requested in a letter received by city council yesterday from commission chairman Judge J. C. Anderson who said it was 10 or 11 years since the honorariums had been fixed at $600.

The letter said that police commission members in other cities received as high as $2,100 with several in the $1,200 to $1,500 bracket.

Council referred the Commission request for consideration during budget discussions.

Councillor Queries Cost of Winter Salt

Salt application on city streets is determined by the amount of snowfall but not in the order which would be normally expected.

At city council yesterday Alderman Mrs. Jean Smith commented on expenditure of close to $7,500 this season for salt and suggested that the amount seemed high.

City engineer Arthur Purcell admitted that maybe more salt was being used this winter.

If so, however, it was because of the relatively light snowfall, but for clearing it away anow was most effective in light snow, he said.

Salt expenditure depended on how far a municipality wanted to go in its bare pavement policy, said the city engineer.

"Some people want bare pavement over the entire 90 miles of city streets while others don't even want it in the downtown area," he said.

"We get calls both ways."

Mayor Russell Scott, however said he had received many calls commending the city on the conditions of the city's streets.

Fatal Parasite Is Prevalent

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. R. J. Julian, a Belleville veterinarian, told the Ontario Veterinarian Association Monday that a parasite previously thought rare in Canada, is wide-spread in Ontario cattle herds.

The parasite described by Dr. Julian is a variety which causes slurping sickness and death in African cattle.

In the past three years, blood samples taken from 18 Ontario herds showed that 85 out of 146 cows sampled were infected with the parasite.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Officers and Members, Lake of the Woods Lodge No. 1, Associated Grocers of Ontario Ltd. are requested to attend a Memorial Service for our late brother, Hall at the Grant Funeral Home, Bancroft on Sunday, Jan. 25th at 2 p.m.

Harold Bowery, Secretary.

IN MEMORIAM

PARKHURST — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Miss Geraldine Parkhurst, who passed away January 27th, 1969.

Sadly missed by husband, children and grandchildren.

McLAREN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Donald McLaren, who passed away on Jan. 27th, 1972.

His life was a beautiful story,
His death a sad one to write,
He sleeps in God's beautiful garden,
For the rest of his life.

In the sunset of perfect peace.

Sadly missed by wife, children and grandchildren.

BRADFORD — In loving and loved memory of a dear mother, Betty Ann Bradford, who passed away January 27th, 1968.

God knew that she was suffering,
So He closed her weary eyelids,
And whispered softly, "Come to me."
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
Is the shelter of rest at last,
One time, some day, we know and hope,
We will meet our loved one.

Lovingly remembered by daughter Dolores, husband Frank and grandaughters.

COPELAND — In loving memory of a wonderful father and grandfather, Ernest Copeland, who passed away Jan. 27, 1969.

Dearest father, you are gone,
And secret tears still flow,
What it meant to lose a father,
No one will know.
They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time so far has only proved,
How much we miss you yet.
When we are sad and lonely,
And feel we cannot cope,
We think of you in silence,
Then talk to you in hope.
Cheer up and carry on,
You know the rest, dear picture,
You seem to smile and say,
We'll try my lonely dearest,
We'll meet again some day.

Lovingly remembered by daughter Dorothy, son-in-law Jack and grandson Alan

Fewer Hospital Donors

Flu Affects Blood Banks In Belleville, Trenton

Both the Belleville General Hospital and the Trenton Memorial Hospital have found their blood bank supplies running behind due to the flu outbreak in the Quinte area.

The situation is far from critical, but a blood-bank spokesman at Belleville General Hospital indicates that Bh has put many regular and potential donors in the position of not being able to give blood.

"And this is the major reason why we are running a little behind.' It is becoming difficult to get even emergency donors because they have the flu", added the spokesman.

"However, we have adequate supplies to be able to deal with any emergency that could come up."

In Trenton, all elective surgical operations have been postponed until the flu outbreak subsides and blood bank supplies return to the normal level, Mrs. W. Berry said this morning.

However, Mrs. Berry, chairman of the Trenton Blood Donor Committee for the Canadian Red Cross explained that all emergencies would be handled during the current situation.

"It is re-assuring to know that no patient who needs immediate surgery will have to wait due to lack of blood for transfusions," she said.

"When requested by the hospital, we can supply donors of all blood types, who will go to the hospital lab immediately to give blood until the current shortage at the central depot is relieved".

Cause of the low blood supply is the influenza virus in Ontario which has affected many donors.

Mrs. Berry said that supplies of blood at the central depot in Toronto are running only a half - day supply. Normally they run about a week ahead to meet the needs of the province's hospitals.

At the same time, Mrs. Berry had some good news.

Trenton and area residents produced a total of 796 units of blood last year, which is a record for our town. This is 71 units above the quota set by the Canadian Red Cross Blood Transfusion Centre for our area."

The first of the three regular blood - donor clinics this year will be held at the Legion Hall on Monday, March 2, from 2.30 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 6.30 p.m. to 8.30 p.m.

Carpet Cheaper At Firehall

Carpeting for the city firehall offices?

That was the question asked in city council two weeks ago when an item for more than $400 appeared in the city accounts.

Payment of the account at that time was held up to allow the city solicitor to make enquiries. However, it appears everything was in order.

City purchasing agent Gerald Hyde said that last year's fire budget provided funds for floor replacement at the Moira Street firehall where 22-year-old floor tiles were deteriorating.

It was cheaper to replace the tiles with indoor-outdoor carpeting rather than new underlay and tile, said the purchasing agent.

"It was a reasonable price," commented Mr. Hyde.

Operation on A Main Artery

Snow plows grind into residue from two-day flurries on Pinnacle Street last night as city works department launched major mop-up operation in downtown area. The project had some impressive backing from men and equipment. In all, the overnight street-cleaning mobilized 12 trucks, two graders, a loader, a sander, a snowblower and 30 workers.

Hastings Board of Education

Runacres Outlines School Priorities

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
(Staff Reporter)

It's budget time again for Hastings county board of education — and everyone who wants a portion of the educational dollar is making a bid now.

Priorities proposed by director of education Eric Runacres last night were: professional development, maintenance of the present pupil-teacher ratio, improved libraries, and initiation of an outdoor education program.

Two groups carried presentations to the board's regular meeting for consideration, and one, in the interests of in-service training for teachers, was scratched from the agenda because of lack of time.

Seeking increased budgets for 1970 were teachers representing outdoor education and inter-school athletics.

But the administration, headed by director of education Eric Runacres had already presented its view of priorities in education in 1970.

"We recommend that top priority is a professional development program to upgrade our present staff," the director said in a report to the board.

He suggested that the pupil - teacher ratio be held at its present level. To bring it to the ideal level in both elementary and secondary schools would cost $215,000 at the present salary schedule, he said.

Emphasis in 1970 should be put on increasing the supply of learning materials and improving resource centres (libraries and audio - visual banks) in schools.

Elementary school education should be improved through the addition of more special education teachers, and library and guidance services.

Fourth in the list of priorities for 1970 was the institution of the first phase of an outdoor education program.

Mr. Runacres suggested that the board delay further action in the areas of instrumental music in elementary schools and additional grades of oral French.

"In the first stages of our program we must accept difference in schools in our county," he said.

But trustee Donald Williams of Stirling questioned the differences between schools in our system in regard to oral French."

"Oral French should be offered in the same number of grades in each school in the county to ensure equality of educational opportunity," he said.

"We'll have to be careful that, as we stagger forward in some fields, we don't stagger backward in others," warned Mrs. Jean Hutchison of Trenton.

Favors Agreement With OHS

The chairman of the special council animal shelter committee would be in favor renewing city agreement with the Ontario Humane Society.

Committee chairman Alderman Ben Corke told council yesterday that the committee had met once since it was formed and will meet with Thomas Hughes, OHS general manager, before making a recommendation to council regarding agreement renewal.

Following investigation of the operation at the Humane Society shelter west of Belleville, Alderman Corke said it was "away ahead" of the former dog pound at the fairgrounds.

Any alternative to the humane society operation of the animal shelter would be worse, the alderman said.

A Positive Approach

A positive attitude to life — by making things possible through personal and collective endeavour, rather than by crying "it can't be done" is a necessary characteristic of individuals and governments.

In Expo 67 we saw the fruits of such an attitude. More recently, in Belleville, A Christmas parade was held which Earlier vacillated between on again and off again, and finally made the scene due to the initiative of one citizen.

As a result, the impetus was provided for early planning of this year's parade. Organization for next December's effort is already under way.

Now a parallel situation seems to be affecting another city enterprise — one with even wider ramifications and significance in the community — the United Community Services.

The UCS, which supervises the distribution of funds to 13 member agencies, faces a potential deficit of $32,000 by the end of this year.

Several suggestions have been offered to remedy this situation. One is abandonment of the UCS, but this would be a negative, defeatist way out.

A better idea, advanced by Mayor J. Russell Scott is the hiring of a full time, professional director. The USC had one until a year or so ago, in the person of Mr. Robert Porter, and fared well under his direction. Mr. Porter subsequently resigned.

The time has come we feel, to consider hiring another director. As Mayor Scott points out, "if he is an expert on campaign collecting, he can pay for himself."

All that is needed is the impetus, a fresh start — and as the cheerful young man who introduce the Jackie Gleason show would say, "Away We Go."

Of course it needs something else too — strong financial support from the community as well as from officials, for the services of several agencies are available to the surrounding area. The anticipated deficit by the end of the year represents about a dollar per head of the population; a determined effort by all concerned should go far toward meeting this and putting the campaign on its feet again.

Deseronto's Problem

The town of Deseronto, accordi~g to Councillor Jack Layfield, is a "forgotten and ignored pocket" of Hastings county.

Mr. Layfield has a point. We hear little about the community on the shores of the Quinte, east of here. The Mohawks landed there a couple of hundred years ago; but beyond that, its historical and contemporary fame remains largely hidden from the majority of us.

We hear of regional government, of Belleville moving into closer liaison with surrounding townships, of new industry coming in, of anticipated development west toward Trenton. Does Deseronto fit into these visions of the future? If so we have not heard of it.

Where education is concerned, more than 100 Deseronto high school students attend Napanee district secondary school, in Lennox and Addington. With this is mind, and the certainty of increased population which could put a strain on Napanee's facilities, to the detriment of the Deseronto students, Mr. Layfield is suggesting the boundary lines should be redrawn. This would maintain the educational status quo.

Deseronto council plans to discuss the matter further on January 29 in committee of the whole. The town may well feel its future lies more naturally and agreeably within Lennox and Addington; but one way or another, whether it remains in Hastings or not, it deserves a better break than it enjoys at present.

Driving Tuition

High school students receiving driving tuition are a familiar sight in Belleville. Like other extra-curricular forms of education which tend to interfere with regular schooling and which many feel should be the responsibility of parents, they evoke mixed reactions. But then, safe driving practices are a matter of life and death, and it is encouraging to see so many students interested in taking the course. We are certain it will pay dividends in making the highways safer and saving lives.

Forty-two Departments Out of 52 Spend More

Ottawa Spends $600 Million More To-date Than in 1969

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Difficult though it may be of understanding Finance Minister Don Benson cannot comprehend why his credibility is wearing thin.

He moans and groans that the federal government is fighting inflation is hindered by big money-bit and then some.

And nobody really seems convinced.

Prime Minister Trudeau has backed him to the hilt; repeating every time he has a press conference he will do so when he has not — that if all Canadians tightened their belts like the federal government, the inflation problem would come back to earth.

To hear Benson and Trudeau tell it, the federal government's self-denial has been carried to the point of martyrdom.

The way they have been cutting and hacking, trimming and axing, paring and chopping in the great new game of federal non-spending has been utterly heroic.

Never in the history of government has an administration carved so close to its own bone.

Or that is what the Prime Minister and his Finance Minister have been crying in exhortation to business, industry, labor and the taxpayer — at - large to do only half as well.

So how is it all stacking up?

Incredible as it may sound, despite this most publicized economy drive and superficially stringent living federal government money, Ben and the Ars in the Cabinet have managed to spend $600,000,000 more so far this year than they did last.

The Treasury Board has blown the whistle on the supposed Big Savers, and all but a tiny minority of Ministerial ments turn out to be Bigger Spenders than ever.

There are the figures! — in the accounting of the Treasury Board for the first eight months of the current federal financial year — precisely $573,700,000 more down the spending drain than last year when the government was not making such a Big Thing of the Tight Money Belt.

Of the 52 departments, boards, bureaux, commissions and assorted agencies, only 10 have spent less this year than last.

And the running for most of the 11 still forced in a bit of spending stubble on the federal face.

But there are one department that put its money where its mouth is.

The Defence Department, of course — the agency that is say government's built-in sacrificial spending lamb — where $4,000,000 was chopped from a billion dollar budget.

But in a four per cent cutback really anything to turn financial handsprings about!

Reductions were also shown by the departments of Public Works, Veterans Affairs and the Chief Electoral Officer (he does not happen to be faced with getting the federal election show on the road this year) and by such agencies as:

The Medical Research Council, the National Capital Commission, the Cape Breton Development Corporation, the National Film Board, the Governor General's Office, National-Harbors Board and the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority.

The departments which cut themselves a bigger slice of the supposedly smaller tax pie included Manpower and Immigration, Regional Economic Development and the Secretary of State, headed by Gerard Pelletier who himself says he is really "The Minister for the French Fact." Next in charge, as he is, of the federal language bilingual program with its many many curious involvements.

And, oh yes, the Prime Minister's own office is spending more.

But all this preaching economy and practising anything but economics can completely account for the yawning depth of Ben Benson's credibility canyon that so dismays him.

For despite spending $600,000,000 more so far this year of the Great Measures and the last year of Easy Federal Living, Benson is still shaping to pile up a $300,000,000 surplus.

Says something about overtaxation, does it not?

But that is not the real rub.

Where it scrapes is in the bills and the boys are going to do with that $300,000,000. Use it to cut the interest rate and thus stop crippling interest charges against the Treasury?

Uh uh. That should really be saving, for it would take that $300,000,000 out of the money stream of disposable federal income.

Instead, the half billion is going to be transferred to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and other such federal lending agencies. And this, of course, defeats the whole purpose of a federal surplus and makes a funny out of these austerity stories Ottawa has been telling. So who can take Ben seriously any more?

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 27, 1970 . . .

Ottawa became the capital of Canada 102 years ago today—in 1858. Four other cities—Quebec, Montreal, Kingston and Toronto—had been in the running but Queen Victoria chose Ottawa because of its location, away from the United States-Canadian border and at that time safe from attack.

1820—Novelist Thomas Edison was granted a patent for his incandescent lamp.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—it was announced that the Red Army was only 20 miles from Danzig, 75 to 85 miles from Berlin on the Oder River front; Stalin announced that German permanent defences in the Masurian Lake area of East Prussia were smashed; Berlin announced that Marshal Gregory Zhukov's Russian army had invaded Germany on the central Front.

Computers Check Continental Drift

BBC London Letter

A new use for computers is to check the old theory of drifting continents. This is the idea that the world started with one or two great land masses. These split up, probably some 120,000,000 years ago and gradually drifted apart, moving at perhaps just an inch a year.

Some scientists believe the continents are still moving, but there is no technique yet for measuring such small amounts over great distances; it would be a matter of an inch a year over several thousand miles.

Reporting recently in a BBC World Service program, Arthur Garratt explained that the use of a computer has already pretty well established the idea that Africa fits into South America neatly. Now an American scientists in Miami have used a computer to study the possibility of fitting the southern coast of Australia against Antarctica.

The fit seems remarkably good, and they have found three little submerged islands which fill in exactly like completing a jig-saw puzzle. The only area missing is about the size of England and Wales, but when you consider the geological changes over millions of years you can hardly ask for an absolutely perfect fit.

'Inquiry and Research' Program Will Be Combined With Traditional Schooling

Brockville Recorder and Times

Brockville Trustee O. K. Keene asked a question at the meeting of the counties board of education that has been on the minds of a great many parents who are watching carefully all the sidelines as the educational process is changed: What happens to the student who can not learn under the new system of inquiry and research? Mr. Keene said the rest of us learned something in the reply to his question. The boy or girl who has difficulty with the new method may be given individual instruction, similar to the traditional approach.

This information will come as a relief to those concerned parents who are doubtful of their children's ability to get an education under the new approach. Indeed, we gather from conversations with some parents, that they are still skeptical about the new approach to education in itself. They feel that the old method wasn't all bad.

The new regime appears to share this view too, to some extent. Mr. Keene said that it was the intent of the new "vogue" to retain all the good traits of the old style and to offer individualized programs to meet the needs of as many students as possible.

Lloyd Dennis, the director of education, said "we should" provide such instruction. But require para-professional people in the schools to help students who are having difficulties with their math, English or any other subject.

For children who require this type of help, it will, in essence, mark a return to the "old classroom" that Mr. Dennis seems to loath. Mr. Dennis feels the old classroom only provided for the student who needed the security of a rigid program. Despite what he feels towards the old or how enthusiastic he is about the new, the real key to success is still a good teacher. And a good memory also helps. It is just as essential today as it was in grandpa's day.

Parents should commend Mr. Keene for his interest. More questions will be put asked by him and other board members when they are presented with a more enlightened electorate.

The Food Crisis in Nigeria

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The big question in Nigeria is whether the victorious federal regime is capable of mounting the huge relief operation necessary required in overcome intense suffering in many parts of the former war zone.

Amid all this disorganization and confusion, the clearest picture is that many people in Nigeria that many persons are unable to obtain food, or sufficient varieties of it, to maintain their survival. Children are suffering and dying from lack of proper food and medical attention. Undoubtedly some of these were already suffering before the war ended. The chaos that followed the end of the war probably added to their suffering.

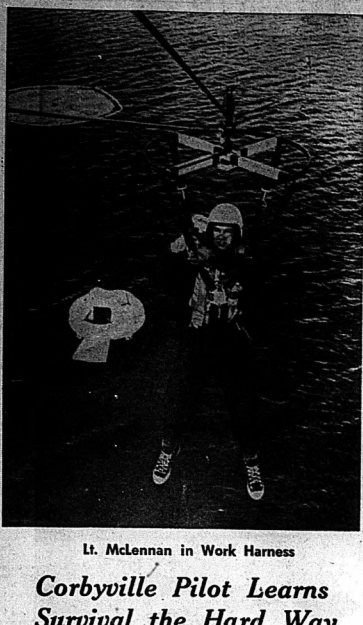
Both Prime Minister Wilson and his Nigerian emissary, Lord Hunt, maintain there is sufficient food and all that is required is more transport for local distribution. In accusing reporters of not providing a full, balanced picture of the whole situation in former Biafra, Hunt and Wilson speak of large quantities of cassava, the basic food item, growing in and around the war-ravaged region.

Cassava is a starch-producing root crop. Dr. Frank Wolters director of the British Vegetarian Nutritional Research Centre, says cassava doesn't have much nutritional value. It lacks protein, thus contributing to the widespread malnutrition disease among children. And cooked properly, it contains some poisonous cyanide.

Cassava therefore may not be enough to overcome the food crisis in the eastern region. What seems to be required is a huge flow of highly nutritious food distributed through a massive transport network.

The world is ready to help, with organization and equipment.

The issue still confronting Gowon is whether—as he insists —the Nigerian government will attempt to retain the full organization and direction over the distribution system or whether he will allow more experienced international agencies to take over.



Whither Mr. Wagner?

Montreal La Devoir

In a Liberal party led by Robert Bourassa, will there be a place for Mr. Wagner, a man who, responding to the importance of his candidacy? Will Mr. Wagner be interested in playing a role in a party led by a man he considered dismissed to the desert of opposition? On this subject the opinions are divided. Mr. Bourassa, he expressed the hope that Mr. Wagner would remain in the Liberal party, but he did not make any move toward promising him a top-level position if the Liberals triumph.

To consider only the objective content of the speeches Saturday, it would have been paradoxical for a man with a style as dangerously messianic and authoritarian as Mr. Wagner's to have been raised to the head of the Liberal party. . . .

It must not be forgotten that Mr. Wagner obtained the votes of one out of three delegates and that, if there had been a second ballot (which was barely avoided), he could very well have emerged the winner. If such a possibility could have been raised. It is because there is very little current of opinion in the Liberal party to which Mr. Wagner's message corresponds.

Lt. McLennan in Work Harness

Corbyville Pilot Learns Survival the Hard Way

EDMONTON — Dangling from the gallows on the hanging tree and jumping from terror towers is all in a day's work for Lieutenant K. R. McLennan, a Canadian Forces pilot from Corbyville.

He is attending the Canadian Forces Survival Training School at CFB, Edmonton with 21 other young pilots.

One week of the three-week course is spent at the sea survival section at Goose Spit near Comox, B.C. It is designed to increase individual potential to survive in a mishap over water.

The terror tower is a 60 - foot high support for a 300 - foot cable. Lt. McLennan must slide down this cable in parachute harness, hitting the water at a speed of approximately 25 miles an hour. He must then: Release the survival seat pack, close the harness, swim under a floating parachute canopy, swim to a life raft and experience being winched from the water by a helicopter rescue hoist.

A framework built over the stern of the hanging tree, a 75 - foot naval vessel, is the gallows. Lt. McLennan is dropped at a speed of six knots into the sea to experience the sensation of a parachute drag and to learn how to clear the harness.

When the sea survival phase is completed the young pilots move to Jarvis Lake, 200 miles west of Edmonton, for the winter bush portion of the course. It is usually 40 degrees below zero at Jarvis Lake.

London Has A Bit of Hong Kong Bustle

LONDON (CP) — A visitor wandering off cosmopolitan London's Charing Cross Road tracks into Gerrard Street and there sees Chinese restaurants; three Chinese herbal shops; a beauty salon; several book stores; a Chinese supermarket selling authentic ingredients for traditional dishes mostly imported from Communist China; a Chinese accountant, and a couple of Hong Kong companies offering special rates to Chinese seamen.

Some display signs warning non-Chinese they will not be welcome.

The Chinese are almost as avid newspaper readers as their British hosts. One news dealer brings in 2,000 copies of a Hong Kong paper by air freight each day; another circulates several thousand copies of The Overseas Chinese Daily News all over Europe.

On streets radiating off Gerrard Street are other Chinese-run establishments nestling among the seedy clubs, strip joints and coffee shops which typify the lenglossy area of London's West End. Curiously enough, there isn't a traditional Chinese laundry.

Rumors about Chinese-run heroin and other drug rings are discounted by the police who report that the community is probably the least troublesome in the city.

"The last opium raid we made was years ago," said a police official. "But we do look in on gambling from time to time."

Like Chinese everywhere, the ones in London love a banquet. The several hundred waiters footloose after the lunch rush, and before the pre-theatre dinner serenade, crowd the legal and illegal gambling clubs catering exclusively for them, playing mah-jong and a dice game called pai kau for stakes sometimes ranging into hundreds of pounds.

Other money-makers include roulette and a peculiar game described as a cross between bingo and the French Loterie Nationale.

Although many of their parents were driven out of their homes in mainland China by the Communists after the 1949 takeover, forcing them to live in slum conditions in overcrowded Hong Kong, militant young Chinese here are strong supporters of Red boss Mao Tse-tung.

The Hong Kong government's London office recently tried to launch a campaign to counter the flood of propaganda films and books distributed by the Communists and supplied to Chinese workers' clubs.

"Usually they have a tremendous respect for Mao," says Chinese-born journalist Erik Chen, once imprisoned by the Communists and now living in Britain.

"They adore the prestige that he has given China."

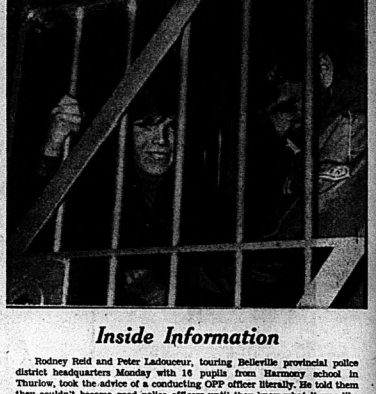
Displaying inscrutable Chinese logic, Howard Chin, owner of the Leon Fung supermarket, doesn't see any conflict arising from Communist supporters living and earning good pay in a capitalist society.

"Why, not?" he asks. "If you live in a capitalist society, you might as well be a good capitalist."

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

18th PARKDALE CUB AND SCOUTS L.A.

A meeting of the 18th Parkdale Cub and Scout Ladies' Auxiliary was held at the Community Centre on Jan. 21 with 14 women present.



Plans were finalized and conveners obtained for the annual skating carnival to be held Feb. 7 at 6.30. Mrs. Alice Melton volunteered to become secretary for the balance of the year.

Mrs. Ann Rice, physical education instructor at Quinte Secondary School, was the guest speaker. She outlined the aims of "general fitness" — a level of physical fitness which allows one to carry on the day's activities without excess fatigue. She also said that getting in shape and staying in that condition does not require expensive material and programs. However, it does require a great deal of motivation and a regular, although not lengthy, daily period of exercise. She stressed that the benefits of looking and feeling much healthier are worth the extra effort that a regular program requires.

With the assistance of three of her students she used a record "Chicken Pat" to demonstrate the exercises outlined on the record.

The women present then joined in and found that exercising with music was enjoyable.

There will be no meeting in February.

Inside Information

Rodney Reid and Peter Ladouceur, touring Belleville provincial police district headquarters Monday with 16 pupils from Harmony school in Thurlow, took the advice of a conducting OPP officer literally. He told them they couldn't become good police officers until they knew what it was like to be a prisoner. The tour, for boys who had expressed an interest in police work as a career, was part of the school guidance program.

Alabamian Finds Sale to Muslims Brings Troubles

PELL CITY, Ala. (AP) — "My life has been threatened, my car dealership burned out and state authorities have arrested me.

"But I don't make baby deals. I sold the land. I gave my word. No matter what the pressure, I won't back down."

That is Ray Wyatt, 41. He says when he makes a business deal he sticks to it.

Wyatt's life has changed since he sold nearly 1,000 acres of land to Black Muslims, who say they will farm the acreage and sell the produce in northern cities.

Residents of Pell City, about 30 miles east of Birmingham, have held heated gatherings in an effort to thwart the deal.

Wyatt claims his main reason for selling the land is the black group—was because St. Clair County needs industry.

Wyatt said the Muslims will employ nearly 200 local persons in their farming operations, packing plant and cannery.

"Some of the finest people in America live in Pell City and St. Clair County. I think they will welcome an opportunity to work in the new industry even if it is operated by Negroes," said Wyatt.

In the meantime, Wyatt's life is in turmoil.

He conducts business in a housetrailer next to the building which until last month housed a new car showroom, a parts department and a repair and body shop.

One night the place caught fire.

Damage was estimated at $200,000 and Wyatt said he was covered by insurance for only $100,000.

On Dec. 4, Wyatt, a former state senator, was arrested for the first time in his life as a result of the land sale.

He was charged with representing an out-of-state corporation doing business in Alabama without a licence.

The land sold by Wyatt was purchased by Progressive Land Developers, Corp., which is controlled by the Muslims but not licensed in Alabama.

Authorities charge that Wyatt is a representative of the company. He is free under $500 bond.

Wyatt says his brother, Wallace, 46, no longer speaks to him.

Wallace said this is not exactly true. "We have not talked and it is probably my fault. But, I am more hurt than mad."

Green Light Budget Down To $11,500

The Belleville Public Utilities will spend an estimated $11,500 for new street lighting this year — about one quarter of the capital cost for new lights in 1969.

Reason for the reduced expenditure is the need for money to provide electric service to new industry and new housing sub-divisions during the coming year.

New street lighting proposed for this year includes: Hanna Street, Dawyer Road, Sidney Street from Tracey Street to Hanna, the new Gowanbrae sub-division - which calls for 35 lights - Harlecourt sub-division, Pine Street to the end of the town housing and Joyce Crescent from Freemount to Haig St.

The new lights will be mercury vapor, most of them 250 watts.

Friendship Considered Precious as Jewel

By DORIS CLARK

We are the weakest at speed-thrifts if we let one friend drop off through opposition, or let one push away another, or if we hold aloof from one for petty jealousy or some rumor.

Would you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? One good friend is not to be weighed against all the jewels of the earth. — Will Carleton, in "To Be A Friend"

* * *

Dear Doris: Mother says I can have a combination Valentine's Day and birthday party. What can we do? What should we eat? What about invitations and decorations?

I could do some of the cooking myself. — Fifteen — Almost

Dear Fifteen: The more you and your pals do to prepare for and run the party yourselves, the more fun it will be. My new leaflet about it will guide you, and I am sending it along.

Readers: For a Valentine's party full of fun, with games like Heart Hunt, Valent i n e guessing games and a lunch featuring cupcakes, send in 18 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask for "Hearty Party for St. Valentine's Day." Hurry it on its way to me, as time is short.

* * *

Dear Doris: Have you heard of postal chess? The idea of playing chess by mail causes strangers to the game to think that it would be done only by persons of genius or idiots. Both play it, mind you, but there are many thousands who are just average people, who 'enjoy it as a chance for a bit of mental exercise and an exchange of correspondence.

All it costs is the postage, although most clubs do charge an entry fee of $1 per match, which generally gives you six games versus the opponents.

After that, many continue to play "exchange" games with their favorite opponents.

I have played with a Tennessee Hillbilly, a Mexican psychoanalyst, a multi-millionaire industrialist, and people all over Canada, Wales, Sweden, New Zealand, East and West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Monaco, etc. Most speak English, but the language of chess is international. — Chess By Mail

Dear Chess: It's a fine game. One player I know developed a fine friendship with his corresponding opponent, and both shared intimate confidences with the other through their letters. There's something about the anonymity of the mails which relieves one of self-consciousness.

We'll be interested when readers want further details from you.

* * *

Dear Doris: I vote for the thoughtful words which usually precede your letters and answers.

Once you answered a letter from someone who was considering becoming the wife of a clergyman-to-be. My life has been interesting. Husband and friends, so I found it depressing to move to a small farm to be known as the minister's wife and to be treated as someone different. It was even worse if an isolated mining community.

Now that we are in the city, where one can become anonymous, I am enjoying friendships at the Y, a sewing class, and a part-time job.

Nobody knows or cares what my husband does. It also helps if you have a husband who encourages you to be yourself rather than what the parishioners think you should be.

My contributions to the congregational life include teaching with two others in an intermediate class, fielding the many calls that come to the house, and maintaining complete secrecy when my husband just has to get some counselling session off his chest. — Not Lonely Now

Dear Not Lonely: No reason on earth why a minister's wife should lose her identity in his work. Yet it does happen. What you are doing is the way of healing bias, so, right now, seems to me to be thoroughly adequate.

Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Many Extra Hours of School For Young Ballet Performers

OTTAWA (CP) — For some people, the word ballet conjures up visions of beautiful people in lavish costumes, performing gracefully on a brightly-lit stage.

For Jennifer Orr, 13, of Toronto, and Stephanie Earle, 16, of Ottawa, it means extra hours of school every day, summer classes and little time outside activities. Ballet is their life.

Both students at the National Ballet School in Toronto, the girls play the role of Clara alternately in the ballet company's production of The Nutcracker, performed at the National Arts Centre recently.

Dressed in identical school uniforms—white blouses, plaid skirts, bottle-green V-necks and tights—and sipping ginger ale, they talked about their life at the school, where Jennifer has lived and breathed dancing for the last four years.

Her day starts at 8:10 a.m. with classes in ballet and dancing and theatre arts intermingled with regular academic subjects. She likes ballet the most, but admires Nadia Potts and Veronica Tennant, while Stephanie's favorites are Mary Jago and Karen Bowes.

Almost half the present company members are graduates of the school, and students usually attend a summer class before they are accepted in the regular term. It helps to make the adjustment from once- or twice-a-week dancing to everyday practice. Jennifer finds the summer sessions condition her for "the same regimen life at the school," and she's attended them for four years.

But Stephanie took last summer off and went to Paris. Her father, Tom Earle, CBC parliamentary bureau chief, once was stationed there, and she became fluent in French during her stay.

The highlight of the trip, of course, was a night at the Paris Opera—to see Swan Lake.

The girls have their own special stars in the ballet company, the ones they choose for inspiration. Jennifer admires Nadia Potts and Veronica Tennant, while Stephanie's favorites are Mary Jago and Karen Bowes.

Wedding Day Spoiled By Abuse of Drink

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My hat is off to nthe bride who knew how to deal with those clowns who signed themselves "Outcasts From Dry Gulch." Some people cannot be trusted around free booze. When such is the case, they should be excluded.

ANN LANDERS

My wedding was in the private dining room of a hotel. We had the liquor on a table with soft drinks and mixers. Three jackasses (I didn't want to invite them but my fiance insisted) waited out with four bottles of Scotch before the party got underway. They ditched the bottles in the potted palms and came back to enjoy the festivities.

When the dancing started they were completely stoned. One of the jocks stepped on my gown and ripped it. Then he had the nerve to say, "You'll never wear this dress again so what's the difference?" Ha, ha."

When they started to fight, my father asked them to leave. They left, but not before one of them put a fist through the wedding cake.

What should have been my happiest day was ruined because of three drunken fools. I hope you'll print this letter for the benefit of other brides who are having arguments with their fiances about the guest list. — WRECKED NUPTIALS.

DEAR NUP: It's a wise lady who knows the liquid capacity of her friends and acts accordingly. If someone's got to end up mad, let it be them.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently our entire high school student body was given detention for one hour. Kids did something they had no business doing. The ruling was made by the principal. Several of us think it is unjust. What was once a free period is now a compulsory study period because a few kids goofed off.

Shouldn't the pranksters have been punished individually? We'd like your opinion. — N. V. OF DANVILLE.

* * *

DEAR N.V.: Punishing the group for the bad behavior of a few is an extremely effective technique. It'll have you so fury like the wrath of one's peers. When the entire student body must suffer for the sins of a few, you can be sure the culprits will ride herd on the guilty and apply a little moral suasion.

I hope the principal will consider shortening the term of punishment. I'll bet if he gives the student body another chance, there'll be no more goofing off.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I comment on Generation Gap — the pregnant bride who thought it was rotten of her parents to voice disapproval of a church wedding because she was in her fifth month?

Parents do not owe a daughter a fancy wedding. A wedding is a gift, not an obligation.

Perhaps the friends of the bride and groom might think it is groovy to see a bride, heavy with child, waddling down the aisle, but relatives and friends of the parents might not enjoy such a sight.

The expect a girl to hang on to her virginity until she is married is, of course, wildly unrealistic, according to a Vassar senior who visited us recently. But I don't feel it is unreasonable to ask a girl to refrain from starting a family until she is married. Thanks for letting me have my say. — SQUARE CLARA.

DEAR SQUARE: About 2,000 other parents had their say, too, but you said it best. Thanks for writing.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

"Mother: "I hate to take the children — visiting in cold weather. It's such a problem keeping track of galoshes, mittens and wraps. We always lose something when we go to the movies."

"Mother: "Put your mittens, scarves and caps in this shopping bag until the movie is over. I'll hang coats big so everything will be together when we're ready to go home."

Even adults find it easy to lose such possessions as gloves and scarfs. A little planning will help keep the children's outdoor items from being dropped or scattered when they are visiting or at an entertainment.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

REDNERSVILLE W. I.

Mrs. A. Cairns opened her home and was hostess for the Jan. meeting of the Rednersville W. I. Mrs. C. Smith president, opened the meeting in the usual manner. A letter from the border boy in Hong Kong was read by Mrs. W. Cairns. He thanked the W. I. for sponsoring him again this year. She also told about the food forum to be held in St. Magdalene Church, Picton, Feb. 10. It was decided we would again be group members of the county home auxiliary. The district annual convention will be held in Albury Church in May. Mrs. G. Waterhouse gave a report of what was sent to the residents of the county house at Christmas. Convener for health was Mrs. H. Weese and she provided the program. Mrs. E. Young read some old remedies; Mrs. F. Carter read about toiletries and Mrs. C. Cairns provided a piano solo.

Mrs. K. Green read about allergies. Riddles and spelling were given by Mrs. H. Weese and Mrs. E. Young.

The meeting closed followed by a lunch.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Prices Fluctuate According to Demand

By MARY MOORE

Watch out for fluctuating prices in the produce department of the supermarket. From first hand observation my secretary Betty noticed that when tomatoes were dear the price of potatoes was lower than when crowds started to shop later in the day.

I was amazed at this sneaky trick for I want to give our Canadian potatoes a good deal this month. So you potato buyers, beware.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Roast Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb; Caper Sauce; Fluffy Rice; Buttered Brussels Sprouts; Celery and Carrot Sticks; Apple Betty with Cereal Cream; Coffee.

I have a lovely professional potato dish for you today that you will be proud to serve to dinner guests. You are a career woman and need to know all of the shortcuts. Here is one with two 20-ounce potatoes drained in this recipe instead of cooking your own.

POTATOES au GRATIN
(Serves 7)

7 medium-sized potatoes
1 chicken bouillon cube
½ cup boiling water
¼ cup mayonnaise (not salad dressing)
¼ tsp. garlic salt
1 cup shredded old Cheddar cheese (slightly packed)
Paprika (for garnish)

Scrub the potatoes very well and trim out blemishes. Cook covered, in boiling water until tender-slightly firmer. They should not be soft: Drain, cool and peel. They must be very cold and their shape. Cut into ½" to ¾" cubes. Turn into large shallow baking dish which can be carried to the table.

Dissolve the chicken bouillon cube in the boiling water in a bowl and cool to room temperature. Stir in all remaining ingredients and spoon evenly over all of the potatoes in baking dish. Sprinkle top rather generously with paprika.

Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 30 min.

NOTE: It is my prediction that you will adopt this potato dish and use it often for it is such a professional method but if you would like to change it a little occasionally you could use Canadian Gouda Cheese instead of Cheddar.

UCW MEETINGS

MOUNT - PLEASANT - RAWDON UCW

Thirty women enjoyed a dessert luncheon on January 14 in the church hall with Mrs. Ralph Jaffe and Mrs. James Hoard as hostesses.

Mrs. Burton Sharpe opened the meeting with a new year's greeting.

The 1969 officers Mrs. Harry McAdam, Mrs. Grant Hubble and Mrs. James Hoard gave their reports. Rev. W. C. Coy installed the 1970-71 slate of officers. Mrs. Garth Dutton then assumed her duties as the new president. Delegates were appointed to attend the annual presbyterial meeting in Napanee.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Harry McAdam and Mrs. Margarete McMullen. Others assisting with the devotional were Mrs. Archie Bailey, Mrs. Robert Merrick, Mrs. Oscar Merrick and Mrs. Clarence Scott.

Mrs. Howard H. Hoard contributed a vocal solo. Mrs. Mac Sharp rendered piano music and Mrs. Margaret McMullen read two poems written by the late Helen B. Anderson of Wellington.

Preparation for City Life

University Students Tutor Indian Children

EDMONTON (CP) — About 70 students from the University of Alberta are spending about two hours a week tutoring Indian children in an effort to smooth the transition from isolated northern Alberta high schools and more-sophisticated big-city schools.

The free tutoring service is provided to Indian students — most of them at the high school level—by the university's Wauneita Society. The department of Indian affairs also provides textbooks and a bus to transport students to the university.

The Indian students have shown great enthusiasm for the service.

"We've still receiving applications from the Indian people—and accepting them," said Joan Irving, one of the university's co-ordinators for the program.

Miss Irving said in an interview that English and "new math" are the most requested subjects, but the university has trouble finding students to tutor in new math, possibly because many left high school before the new system began.

"Many of the Indian students have a poor background in English."

Another problem was that many students from small, isolated towns are not prepared for city life.

"Some kids come down here cold. They don't know how to get from point A to point B.

"They don't get enough guidance about their programs either. When they decide what they want to do in future, they have a hard time switching programs."

The Indian students who come to Edmonton are boarded with white families during the school year and problems often arise there, Miss Irving said.

"There were about 250 of these kids in the city in September, but I imagine most of them have gone home by now. They get really disillusioned."

"I'm lonesome. I'm going to school at home," said one 16-year-old girl.

"It's a smaller town and when you're in a small town you know everybody and things are cheaper. You don't have to pay for everything you do."

But, she says, there are only about 80 high school students from home "and the government didn't want to build a high school there because they said there weren't enough people."

"I think the government would be saving money if they just built the school. Then they wouldn't have to pay the travel, board and allowance of all the students they send to Edmonton and Yellowknife."

Homesick when she arrived here, she said the situation in her boarding home didn't help.

Mrs. J. E. Krenes, supervisor of the government's Edmonton boarding home program for Indian students said there had been about 250 students in the city in the fall.

"About 20 or 25 of them have gone home. Some were too young, some too ill-prepared, and others just plain homesick."

The 'New Look' of 1940 Is Back

PARIS (AP) — Remember the "new look" of the late 1940s, the ankle-length skirts that swept the late Christian Dior to the top of the fashion world overnight? It's back.

For almost a quarter of a century after Dior's hemline explosion, the trend was in the opposite direction, up and up, until skirts finally became little more than wide belts.

But now, the advance word from the Paris fashion shows is that Dior's long look, or something much like it, is making a strong comeback.

The miniskirt has not yet been ousted, but the downward trend that began with successive coats last year has spread to skirts in almost all the major spring-summer collections.

As yet, there is no unanimity among the Paris designers. Some even say every girl should decide her hemline for herself, depending on her fancy, mood, silhouette, personality and the time or occasion.

But there is no doubt about it: The 1970 spring look generally features skirts brushing the ankle. Again and again, Cardin, Saint Laurent, Patou, Ricci, Givenchy and Lanvin echo the same feeling as though they were bored by the sight of female legs.

At the same time, they lay stress on a new, soft, romantic femininity featuring dreamy chiffons, flowered organdies, billowing sleeves and spectacular decolletes—al in dramatic colors.

The most explosive colors will be shown by Courreges, who recently spent some time on the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe and was overwhelmed by the local color.

"Paris needs brightening up after all I saw over there," he says. "I am about to do it."

He says he is more interested in colors and see-through effects than in hemlines.

"Hemlines are no problem," he says.

Interesting color ranges are also found in the Dior collection, stressing beige, brown, copper, egg yolk and saffron. For evening wear, Dior's Marc Bohan has pastel shades of soft Parma violet, mauve, rose pink and rosewood. He also has some striking contrasts such as poison green with plum or yellow.

The tailored suit has disappeared from many collections this spring.

"It's as dead as the dodo," announced Cardin, who replaces it with a supple two-piece.

The pants suit also seems to be on the way out.

Marmora Chapter

IODE Plans Fashion Show

MARMORA — Members of the Marmora Chapter, IODE, met recently for their January meeting at the home of Mrs. Eugene Brady, with the Regent, Mrs. William Regan, presiding.

Plans were made for a fashion Show to be held March 5 with fashions from Marett's of Marmora being shown. Mrs. Howard Bleecker is convener for this event.

The annual report as presented by the secretary, Mrs. G. A. Wentworth, showed a successful year. The Chapter concentrates on educational, welfare and community work.

Last year, for the first time, the Chapter sponsored a Science Fair for all pupils of the Marmora elementary schools, with over 600 students participating. This was a resounding success and it was decided to make this a yearly event. Two loans of $200 each were made from the Student Loan Fund.

Emergency supplies of medication and clothing were provided for several local families. Shipments of used clothing were also sent to the Scott Mission in Toronto. Cash was donated to the Marmora Public Library, to the bulletin board, and the Legion for Christmas cheer baskets. A donation was also made to the Marmora Agricultural Society.

Members of the Chapter served as conveners and participated in the canvass of the C.N.I.B. and the March of Dimes.

The slate of officers for 1970, the same executive as for 1969, was presented by Mrs. Vaughn Glover, as follows: Regent, Mrs. Wm. Regan; 1st Vice-Regent, Mrs. Vaughn Glover; 2nd Vice - Regent, Mrs. Leonard Bidwell; secretary, Mrs. G. A. Wentworth; treasurer, Mrs. Douglas Miller; education secretary, Mrs. Gordon Bennet; Echoes secretary, Mrs. Granville Meiklejohn; services secretary, Mrs. M. H. Berlend; standard bearer, Mrs. Howard Bleecker.

Committe Chairmen were also appointed.

Letters of appreciation for the encyclopaedia and the Christmas parcel were read from Father Peters of the Chapter's adopted school at Davis Inlet.

Feux Follets Director Auditions Many Dancers

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Lund, artistic director for Les Feux Follets ballet troupe, has learned to accept bad dancers at auditions.

He estimates he saw nearly 400 dancers at auditions during a 10-day visit to major Canadian cities, seeking Canadian talent in an effort to make Les Feux Follets as impeccable a dance organization as the Moiseyev dancers of Russia and the Ballet Folklorico de Mexico.

"Some dancers were very good; some I'd like to see again in about two years," he said. "There was one incredibly talented girl dancing in Winnipeg —and only 14 years old. Too bad, her parents wouldn't let her join the tour."

When those he auditions are nervous, Mr. Lund cajoles them in a low key.

"If you don't understand the step, ask me again."

The girls who comply stand a chance of being added to Mr. Lund's list of hopefuls who eventually could form the permanent company of 42 dancers.

The company is to start rehearsals in March, dividing into two groups. Twelve members are to perform at the Canadian pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, for 26 weeks. The remaining 30 will embark on a European tour from May through July, making stops in The Netherlands, West Germany and the Soviet Union.

The Montreal-based Feux Follets began in that city 10 years ago under the guidance of Michel Cartier, a folklore expert who brought Indian and Eskimo folk dance traditions into the group's repertoire.

Under Mr. Lund's direction, the troupe continues to represent Canadian folklore with dances of the West Coast and Plains Indians, the Eskimos, and such features as the Acadian clog dance and theatrical Highland dances.

But despite its cross-Canada character, it is still identified with Quebec, a feature Mr. Lund is trying to change.

"I'm trying to get across the point that Les Feux Follets is a national folk ballet troupe," he said. "Many people seem to think . . . that this is a Quebec company."

Financial support for the group at present comes from both private contributions and grants from the Canada Council. Last year the council contributed $115,000.

Couple Honored

On Saturday evening, Jan. 24 Mr. and Mrs. Grant Hubble entertained in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sarles who are leaving the community.

Guests included the president and directors of Central Cheese factory and their wives. The evening was spent playing cards and in conversation.

Tom has been the cheesemaker at Central factory for 20 years. He has now retired and they are taking up residence in Trenton.

Lindsay McKeown read an address on behalf of all the Mount Pleasant community and also the factory patrons who live outside the area.

A presentation was made from the factory patrons as well as one from the United Church Women.

Mr. and Mrs. Sarles thanked those present and then refreshments were served.

Cobourg Cougars 'Raise Caine' with Hawks

COBOURG (Special) — The Cobourg Cougars "raised Caine" with the Trenton Golden Hawks last night, moving past them into fifth place in the Eastern Ontario Junior B League, on the strength of a 4-0 home-ice win.

Goalie Mike Caine was the Cougar standout, handling 35 Trenton shots to record the shutout. In addition, his cousin, Mike Caine, scored one of the four Cougar tallies, and assisted on another.

The first period was a scoreless affair, that was highlighted by the fine work of Caine in the Cobourg nets.

Alan Fenton scored the only goal of the second frame at 2.05 to give Cobourg all the scoring punch required.

Fenton, juvenile replacement Mike Woods and the "other" Mike Caine scored in the final period for Cobourg.

Trenton drew nine of the game's 17 penalties. The loss was the first for Trenton coach Charlie Drake, whose club had tied Belleville and beaten Peterborough in previous outings.

Cobourg now trails the fourth place Ellis Printers by three points, with Trenton four back in the league cellar.

The arrangement may be different, but the tune of the Belleville Hockey Fan's Lament never changes.

Remember last winter when these were the excuses for staying away from Belleville Mo-Hawk home:

"It's too cold in that old barn (Memorial Arena) — and who wants to sit on those old seats?"

This year's current version of the Market Street Bowl has been "It's too hot in that old barn — and who wants to sit in those new seats?"

Although installation began weeks ago, the new seats did not become a contentious issue until the Mo-Hawks were stricken with their first slump of the season.

Coincidence?

It should, incidentally, be pointed out here that Belleville Mo-Hawk management is the proper clearing house for complaints by season's ticket holders.

The club was 100 per cent aware before the season's start that new seating arrangements were to be implemented. Granted, they did not have the proposed new seating plan, but neither did anyone else.

There are only 200 Mo-Hawk season's ticket-holders and no reason why they cannot be accomodated in the first two rows of 400 unobstructed-view new seats.

There will always be the cranks who throw a tantrum because their posteriors may no longer be able to occupy the same 576 square centimeters they have in previous seasons.

But we always thought people went to arenas to watch hockey games!

Much of the current hoopla is being generated by people who are all too common some hockey season in Belleville.

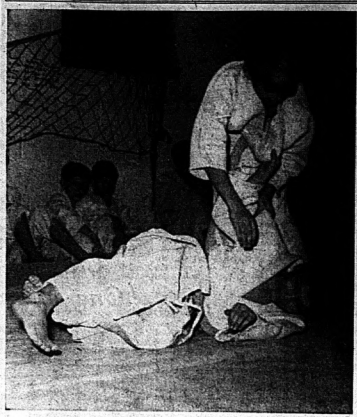
This fine specimen is known as the "Detractor Species," commonly known as the Great Speckled Moaner.

You've all seen the Moaner. He complains about the price of admission, the dilapidated state of the arena (light, bleachers, sewage, etc.), the Mo-Hawk losses, the Mo-Hawk wins, the Mo-Hawk ties, and the fact that there are 52 weeks in the year.

The Moaner, never, ever supports anything. If he complained about getting slivers in his stacks from the old arena benches; he says the new seats hurt his knees, even if he holds down a part-time job as a caraival midget.

If he heckles a particular player all night who scores three goals, the Moaner says he should have had four.

If the Mo-Hawks beat the defending Allan Cup champion 4-2 (which they did in the Memorial Arena this season), the Moaner says "School time!"



The nicest thing the Moaner ever has to say about a Mo-Hawk player would be something like: "There's no sense trading him right now."

Last year's rumors about folding of the city's senior hockey franchise by Christmas was one of the Moaner's finest pieces of work.

He'll also tell you that every member of the Mo-Hawks has a weekly take-home pay of $300 a week, and that the club is moving to Peterborough next winter.

Moaners have nothing good to say about anybody and don't even get along with each other.

All in all, the sporting community would be much better off if the Moaner would make like the rest of his fine-feathered friends and flock off southward at this time of year.

Take That

Brother combination John and Robert Smith demonstrate that nobody plays favorites in YMCA judo classes. Part of the warm up period is spent preparing for this kind of landing.

'Pampered Youth' Not Evident in YMCA Judo

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Child psychologists, who have been taking it on the chin from the "spare the rod and spoil the child" believers for years, should perhaps take a deep bow for sparing thousands of parents.

While they cleverly pretend that a lick to the woodshed would seriously damage junior's tender id or ego, the fact is that after watching a few of Jim Driscoll's proteges in action, their greatest concern id for junior 'ole pop, who could quite easily get his tender arm broken.

Mr. Driscoll has been instructing youngsters in the science of self - defence known as judo, for the past 19 years and currently conducts classes at the YMCA.

Just watching the twists, turns, bangs, thumps and crashes of scores of the more than 80 boys enrolled in the Y's program is enough to knock the average unconditioned adult for a loop.

Judo is a scientific application of weaponless self - defence originally practised by Japanese priests, who were forbidden to carry weapons. It differs from karate, which means "open - hand fighting", in the fact that it is primarily concerned with body contact, rather than kicks and punches, and is less offensively - minded.

A progression of different colored belts marks the varying degrees of proficiency in the sport and is determined largely by tournament competition. The order of ability from lowest to highest is: white, yellow, orange, green, blue, brown and black.

Most of the boys, who are under 14 years of age hold either white, yellow or orange belts. A few have made it to the green belt stage, which takes an average of two or three years, and four of the boys at the Belleville Y hold blue belts. Mr. Driscoll himself holds a second-degree black belt, which is exceeded by only a few higher degrees of black.

Aside from the obvious advantages of self-defence and the confidence this ability instills, the greatest advantages to the boys involved in the judo program are probably the high degree of physical fitness attained and the self - discipline required in the sport.

Calisthenics generally last 15 or 20 minutes and include mostly bending and stretching exercises. The warm - up period is followed by a series of simple throws in preparation for more difficult ones.

Driscoll who has taught hundreds of boys in his years as a YMCA instructor keeps a firm, but solicitous eye on the proceedings, demanding a full effort from everyone but making sure that nobody goes over - zealous themselves.

Former students of his include Dr. Roy Edwards, Gil Nesbitt and Mrs. Mary Way, all holders of the brown belt, who instruct different sections of the Y's judo classes. Another prize pupil is black belt Jim Wright, currently coaching judo in Winnipeg.

The program appears to do a great deal for the physical well - being of the boys involved. However, before allowing a child to come under the influence of Jim Driscoll and his judo cohorts at the Belleville YMCA, it might not be a bad idea to buy a reliable book on child psychology.

You'll Come Around

Shawn Osborne and David Walcott, two of the smaller class members, demonstrate the body contact aspect of the sport. Size is no indication of ability in judo, as they clearly demonstrate.

An Upsetting Experience

Everything wasn't quite according to plan as the Gas House League began its semi-final playoff series last night. The powerful Merchant entry, which finished in first place, had little trouble turning back Marysville 9-2. A big surprise, however was the Mulrooney's Sunoco team, who upset the Mustangs 3-2. Mulrooney's had been buried in the league cellar, while the Mustangs had finished close on the heels of the first place Merchants.

Carl Boomhower had two goals and an assist to lead the Merchant scoring parade. Brian Smith notched a goal and three assists, while Paul Goodfellow counted two goals. Single goal scorers were Bob Lloyd, Ralph Boomhower, Jim Woodcock and Ted Schwager. Wayne and Larry Pascoe scored for Marysville.

Two goals by rookie Kevin Allen, and one by Stan Woodcock gave Mulroney's their upset win. Gary Reid and Rob Mulvihill powered the Mustang goals. Mulvihill also had a chance to tie the game but failed to convert a penalty shot. The Mustangs drew three penalties against two for the winners.

Play Junior B's Thursday

All-Stars Bank on Defence

The old "irresistible force meets immovable object" line could sum up the way things appear for Thursday night's game between the Ellis Juniors and the Quinte League All-Stars.

The Juniors, who have averaged over four and a half goals per game and boast two players in the top ten Eastern Ontario league scorers, might find fewer opportunities against the Quinte League opposition.

Goalies Larry DiPietro and Dave Hicks of Belvedere Hotel, for instance, sport a stingy goals against average of 1.46, and should receive plenty of support from a defensive squad that is only slightly smaller than the Green Bay Packers.

Heavyweights like Bill Barberstock, Bob Ethier, Larry Potter and Paul Stinson could give the speedy Ellis forwards a long range view of the net, from a horizontal position. Meanwhile forwards such as Elmer Cain, Rick Denard and Doug Bolts will be trying to crack an Ellis defence that has been stopping the top clubs of the Eastern Ontario Junior B league, of late.

As the saying goes, "something's gotta' give."

Meanwhile, last night's Quinte league action saw Belevedere Hotel and Central Taxi continue to stretch their lead over the remaining two teams by pulling identical 3-1 victories, over Stinson's Construction and Aluminum Star.

The league - leading Hotelmen, who have lost only two games all season got goals from Bill Goodfellow, Larry Marshall and defenceman Larry Potter.

Marshall's goal, which proved to be the winner, came at a low scoring spot that goalie John French didn't see. Doug Moreau drew assists on two of the Belvedere goals.

Dennis Ray scored the only Stinson goal, with assists going to Duke Doran and Wayne Tumman.

Central Taxi survived 10 of the game's 14 penalties to stop Aluminum Star 3-1. Court Bradley, Ron Morgan and Andy Prudden were the goal scorers for Central Taxi. Ron Post counted for Aluminum Stars, who have averaged only 1.46 goals per game for the year.

Belvedere forwards Elmer Cain and Doug Hallam break past defenceman Paul Stinson in Quinte Hockey League action last night. All three players have been chosen to play for the All-Stars against the Ellis Juniors, Thursday night. The Hotelmen beat Stinson's Construction 3-1 to hold their league-leading margin.

Nate Leaves $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — National Basketball Association star Nate Thurmond, repeatedly clobbered by disabling physical injuries, announced Monday he is quitting the sport estimated to pay him $100,000 a year.

But he left the door open with three qualifications.

The 28-year-old San Francisco Warriors player, at a news conference at St. Mary's Hospital, said he would play again if he found he could not make it financially out of basketball; if superstar Rick Barry returned to the Warriors to share the lead with him, and if Warriors owner Franklin Mieuli needed him desperately.

But, he said, "as of now I am definitely retiring from basketball . . ."

Arnold Palmer displays the form that made him the pro golfer of the decade in the Associated Press poll. He's pictured competing in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am at Pebble Beach, Calif., last week. (AP Wirephoto)

Arnie Hands Down

NEW YORK (AP) — The rallying cry "Charge!" was the mark of the 1960s and the man who stoked fire into the word, Arnold Palmer, was the overwhelming choice Monday as Golfer of the Decade.

It was a runaway.

The long-hitting son of a one-time Latrobe, Pa., greenskeeper received 53½ of the 632 votes cast by sports writers and broadcasters in The Associated Press poll.

Jack Nicklaus, the golden-haired bear from Columbus, Ohio, who beat Palmer in a playoff for the United States Open championship in 1962 and who crushed his rival in other head-to-head meetings, was a distant second with 75½ votes.

Bill Casper, the master from San Diego, Calif., and South Africa's Gary Player tied for third with eight each.

Early Draft Choice Means More to Browns Than Warfield

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns, trying to land a top-flight quarterback from the current United States college crop, have traded away Paul Warfield, one of the top receivers in professional football, for an early choice in today's football draft.

The Browns traded the 27-year-old Warfield to Miami Dolphins Monday in exchange for Miami's top draft choice. That means the Browns pick No. 3 today.

Mike Phipps of Purdue is one of the passers the Browns are reported interested in to back up Bill Nelsen. The 29-year-old Nelson led the Browns to the National Football League's Eastern Conference title despite problems with his knees. However, the Browns were creamed by Minnesota Vikings in the NFL title game.

The Browns paved the way for the Warfield trade Monday by acquiring Homer Jones, New York Giants' ace receiver. Cleveland gave up rookie running back Ron Johnson, defensive tackle Jim Kanicki and linebacker Wayne Meylan to the Giants to get the 28-year-old Jones.

Browns' owner Art Modell said this year's "college crop of passers is the finest that Paul Brown has seen in all of his years as our head scout.

"We felt that we should try to land one of them even though the price might be high. Getting Jones established us to deal with Miami."

Jones and Warfield both are six-year veterans and have similar records. Jones has caught 214 passes for 4,945 yards and 35 touchdowns. In 1967 he led the NFL with 13 touchdowns. For 1969 he caught 43 passes for 744 yards and one TD.

Warfield has caught 215 for a career total of 4,346 and 44 touchdowns. His 1969 record was 42 for 866 yards and 10 TDs.

Warfield said the trade came as a "great surprise" but added that he is looking forward to playing for Miami.

Jones said he was not completely caught by surprise at the trade.

"I wasn't getting much satisfaction" playing with the Giants, he said.

Kanicki, 27, missed most of the 1969 season after having his leg broken in a pre-season game. He is a three-year veteran with the Browns.

The 23-year-old Johnson broke into the Browns' starting lineup as a rookie in 1969 but lost the backfield starting assignment to Jo Scott late in the season. Scott formerly played with Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League.

Meylan, 23, was used primarily on the specialty teams. The Giants plan to use him as a middle linebacker.

Darelle Next?

Paduano Closer to Title Shot

NEW YORK (CP) — Donato Paduano, undefeated Canadian welterweight champion, vaulted himself into contention for a crack at world champion Jose Napoles and he easily disposed of highly touted Irish Pat Murphy in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

But the baby-faced Italian-born Montrealer says he is not ready yet for such a match and doesn't want it pushed on him.

"I know they will try to push me for an early fight with Napoles, but I don't think I'm ready for him now," Paduano said.

"Maybe in 15 months, I will be."

Gardens matchmaker Teddy Brenner told Paduano's managers, Al Lang of New York and Roger Larivee of Montreal:

"I know you already have a fight scheduled for Donato in Montreal and after that you have nothing lined up."

"Then we will get down to business and talk about a fight in the $50,000 range," said Brenner.

The amount mentioned by Brenner led to the speculation that Napoles was what he had in mind.

Paduano, now 17-0, will meet Joey Durelle in the Montreal Forum on March 3 in a return bout for the Canadian title. Paduano took the title away from Durelle on a bruising 15-round split decision in the same ring last December. The fight drew the largest gate for a Montreal fight in years—$127,000.

Paduano, who "retired" as an elevator operator at the YMCA in Montreal at the age of 17, handed Murphy his first defeat after 25 straight wins as a professional fighter.

The fight was so lopsided that one official and two Canadian Press and The Associated Press, scored it 10 rounds to none for the popular Canadian. The other two officials scored it 9-1, giving Murphy the first round which was fairly close.

Despite his easy victory in the feature bout of the card, Paduano was not completely satisfied:

"I couldn't get everything to come," Paduano said. "I figure I only gave about 85 per cent of myself.

"I'm sure I should have dropped him, but he's very sneaky and has a good right hand and left hook and you have to watch him at all times.

"I wasn't surprised at how easy the fight went after the first few rounds but I expected him to be better."

Paduano said bad weather in Montreal curbed his roadwork.

Clay to Give One More Belt?

CASSIUS CLAY

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Cassius Clay said Monday he would present his championship belt to the winner of the Feb. 16 Jimmy Ellis-Joe Frazier bout in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Clay, made the announcement at taping of the Mike Douglas television show.

Clay, also known as Muhammad Ali, said he would make the presentation to "keep boxing legal and keep it going and direct all my followers, both black and white to the new champion."

Clay said it would be the first time a heavyweight champion ever gave the championship belt away.

The belt is made of red, white and blue cloth, and is fastened by a bronze medallion at the centre.

Football Boss Finds TV Terms to His Liking

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League has completed negotiations with both CBS and NBC for new four-year television contracts. Under the new deals the Super Bowl and all-star game between the American and National Conferences will alternate from year to year between NBC Super Bowl in 1971 and CBS all-star in 1971.

No figures were announced Monday by Rozelle or the networks who consider such information confidential. However, it was reported that the package including all three networks would be more than $130,000,000.

That works out to roughly $5,000,000 a team for the 26 clubs, all of whom share the combined booty equally under the merger agreement.

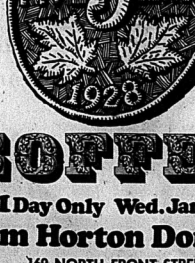
Lemaire's Debut Could Set Record

MONTREAL (CP) — Left winger Jacques Lemaire of Montreal Canadiens says he will be happy with 40 goals this season in the National Hockey League.

Lemaire, 24, appears on his way to scoring more goals in his first three NHL seasons than any other active player.

He currently is the league's leading goal-getter with 28 and a career total of 79. At his current pace, he could finish this season with 47 goals and a total of 98 for three seasons.

"Give me 40 goals and I'll be happy," Lemaire says. "Fifty? Who do you think I am? Bobby Hull?"



Only Jean Beliveau of the Canadiens scored more goals in his first three full seasons than Lemaire now has and Beliveau was aided a little with a five-game tryout as an amateur before turning pro in which he counted six goals.

Counting those five games and his first three full pro seasons, Beliveau had 97 goals, including 47 in his third season, 1953-54.

The all-time champion, however, was Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal, now retired, who scored five goals in 16 games in his first season and then added 82 in his next two seasons and 27 in the third for 116 goals after three full seasons plus the first campaign's five goals.

Lemaire, with 10 goals in Montreal's last 10 games, has moved from a four-way tie for seventh place into sole possession of sixth place in the NHL scoring race.

First Time in Decade

No Skating Champions on Defence

EDMONTON (CP) — For the first time in more than 10 years, no defending champions were on hand today when the 1970 Canadian figure skating championships began.

Doug Peckinpaugh, president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, said Monday night in an interview.

"Everything's going to be wide open and it certainly is seeing some tremendous skating."

The 1969 titleholders either have retired or turned professional.

Scheduled to end Sunday, the championships have attracted 150 regional winners from nearly all parts of Canada including, for the first time, two Maritimers.

Linda Campbel of Halifax and Linda Vahtra of Saint John, N.B., are entered in novice ladies' singles.

The only provinces not represented are Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

Eighty-five of the skaters are from Ontario. The British Columbia contingent of 50 arrived Sunday night, and the rest are divided among Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Quebec.

From a spectator's point of view, most of the attention will be focussed on the seniors.

Karen Magnussen of Vancouver's North Shore Winter Club will be back to reclaim the senior women's title she lost last year to Linda Carbonetto of Toronto.

The 17-year-old skater was sidelined for several months when stress fractures were discovered in both her legs on the eve of the North American championships last February.

She's the sentimental favorite but the lengthy layoff has enabled other seniors to polish their style and close the competitive gap.

But Karen has always been ful of surprises. In 1966, she nearly upset defending champion Petra Burka of Toronto with a dazzling freestyle display.

Cathy Lee Irwin, also 17, of the Toronto Cricket, Skating and Curling Club, is rated as her chief rival.

In senior men's competition, Eastern Canada's hopes seem to lie with David McGillivray of Tuller Cranston, two 20-year-olds from the Toronto Cricket club. Westerners have been eyeing Bill Marchyshyn of the host Royal Glenora club, and Patrick McKilligan of the North Shore Winter Club.

Monday night, for the first time in Canadian competition, the order in which the junior and novice skaters will perform was determined by having competitors' names drawn out of a basket.

Previously, a panel of officials met to determine the order and many skaters expressed disapprova because the fifist competitior on the ice usually works with a handicap. Judges usually use the first performance as a basis on which to award points to the rest.

The senior draw will be held Wednesday night because senior competition doesn't start until 8 a.m., Thursday with ladies' figures.

Today; competition begins with novice ladies and junior men's figures in the morning. Tonight, at the Edmonton Gardens, the first round of the novice pairs will be decided.

Wednesday, it will be novice men's and junior ladies' figures at the Royal Glenora rink in the morning and in the evening at the Gardens it will be compulsory junior dance, novice ladies' freeskating, junior pairs and the final in the novice dance.

Serviceman's Union Urged by Public Servant

TORONTO (CP) — More than a few union members have undoubtedly looked at the world's national defence establishments and envied them. They, even though forbidden, gardens for their activities.

The latest to propose a serviceman's union is Claude Edwards, national president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which already represents 134,000 federal public employees.

At a PSAC convention in Toronto this week, Mr. Edwards told delegates that the alliance should seek amendments to the Public Service Staff Relations Act to permit collective bargaining over wages and conditions to members of the Canadian Forces.

He agreed that many of his followers might think the proposal a bit radical. But, he said, limited rights of collective bargaining have been established in other countries.

The Norwegian armed forces have been represented by a union since 1947. More recently, unions have negotiated for servicemen in Germany, Denmark and Sweden.

PSAC officials said the Canadian figure—with more than 80,000 men not only lacking the benefits of union representation but also routinely subject to authoritarian discipline—as a logical place to expand.

Public Service Strike Fund Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of 134,000 federal public employees will be asked Wednesday to approve creation of a strike fund.

The strike fund was described Monday as a "contingency fund" by Claude Edwards, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada. But, in the context of his opening speech at the organizations first national convention since it was founded in 1966, the term indicated a new tenancy in dealings between the federal government and its employees.

Mr. Edwards told delegates that in the past year the government has appeared intent on using its employees as a sort of "health and safety channel" in its campaign against inflation.

Alliance members are prepared to make the same sacrifices as other citizens, he said but "we will resist with every resource available to us any attempt by the government to use us as special agents of economic policies."

He suggested the climate of labor-management relations in the federal field have changed substantially for the worse in the past year and hopes have faded that disputes could be settled through voluntary arbitration.

Parliamentary Committee Planned

Public's Views on Constitution to Be Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons began a two-day debate Monday aimed at getting more Canadians involved in discussion on Canada's constitution.

Spokesmen for the three opposition parties voiced agreement with a government motion to establish a joint parliamentary committee to review papers and decisions made by the continuing federal-provincial conferences to change the constitution.

Prime Minister Trudeau said it was time to take the issue "out of the wings and before Parliament and the people."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the discussions are making little progress.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) said the committee, in travelling across Canada, would involve opposition MPs in the constitutional discussions.

"Even more important . . . this is the only way in which the people of Canada, through their various organizations, can be heard on the subject of constitutional change."

Mr. Trudeau said unity of any country could only be built by a consensus of the people—"the desire of the people to live together within the boundaries of the same country."

Mr. Trudeau said that the provinces themselves started the constitutional debate and that the federal government had been criticized by other parties and by the press for not taking part in the constitutional conference called in 1967 by Premier John Robarts of Ontario.

Now that Ottawa was engaged in the debate, it was being accused of being "too hung up" with it to do other things.

Mr. Trudeau said it was important for Canadians to know that no federal program within Ottawa's jurisdiction was being held up while the long process of constitutional review went on.

The prime minister listed some of these programs as minority rights, pollution and the "Indian problem."

He said the federal government was guided by a number of principles before engaging in the debate.

One was that it shouldn't take place until it was recognized that economic conditions permit it. Another was that the country be stable—at a time when both federal and provincial governments were strong.

Mr. Stanfield said he agrees that constitutional change could only be achieved through consensus. This was lacking at the present time.

It is time, he said, elected municipal officials were involved in the debate. Through the parliamentary committee, their views could be made known.

He wondered whether Mr. Trudeau's heart really was in the process of constitutional reform. If the prime minister believed that failure to reach agreement on it would "work out, why didn't he say so?

Mr. Lewis said the desire for constitutional change came from the cities and was generated by the problems accompanying Canada's development into an urban and industrial country.

Mr. Trudeau failed to recognize this and was responsible, therefore, for the market-place haggling that went on at the conference.

He said the prime minister's refusal to admit that Quebec was a special problem demanding special solutions also could remain an obstacle to progress.

C. A. Gauthier (Creditiste—Beauce) said Ottawa has forgotten that it is the creature of the provinces and not vice-versa.

The federal government was responsible for the pollution of the constitution.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said there must be a stop to federal-provincial meetings in which all 11 governments tried to sell the power they had and add to it.

This wasn't good enough and such conferences would get nowhere using such tactics.

He also said Ottawa was using the constitution as a smokescreen in not pressing ahead with solutions to such problems as pollution.

Stan Schumacher (PC—Palliser) said he believes the present constitution is adequate to meet any demands made upon it. But it lacked the vital provisions to curb the powers of the executive.

An urgent change was to limit the curbs on the taking and spending power of the central government and the ability of the prime minister to ignore Parliament.

Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) said Ottawa is denying the provinces an opportunity to play a dynamic role in confederation.

Nothing had been done so far to meet Quebec demands. If Ottawa didn't allow Quebec to perform an active role, there was fears it would opt out of Canada.

Every time Quebec tried to improve its contacts with the French-speaking world, Ottawa made "faces and even objected."

Half Canada's Union Members Seek Pay Boosts

By CRAIG ASPINALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The federal government's efforts to obtain wage and price restraints in the fight against inflation appear to face a major obstacle in the shape of the working man.

The outlook for wage restraint appears dim as almost half of all unionized workers in Canada prepare to negotiate new contracts with major industries in 1970.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates that industry faces one of its toughest bargaining years ever, with organized labor opposed to wage restraint and skeptical of promises by big business to hold the line on prices.

Preliminary statements from labor leaders have described the government's anti-inflation policies as inhumane, inequitable and doomed to failure while business has been accused of being phoney and hypocritical.

Of the two major unions which have held conferences this month, one passed a resolution blaming Ottawa for forcing unions to intensify the struggle for higher wages. The other asked its members to approve creation of a strike fund to strengthen its hand in forthcoming contract talks.

The current militancy of organized labor comes in the wake of 1969 contracts which awarded average wage increases of 7.9 per cent and as high as 20 per cent in some cases—effectively shattering government attempts to prescribe a guideline of five per cent.

The federal prices and incomes commission hopes to obtain agreement from business and professional leaders at an Ottawa conference Feb. 9 to 18 to adopt measures of price restraint.

But organized labor has so far rejected the idea of wage restraints or arguments that wage increases are responsible for inflation.

Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, has called voluntary restraint by labor "inequitable and unworkable," and has said it is up to business to restrain prices.

Dennis McDermott, president of the United Auto Workers in Canada, has said Prime Minister Trudeau is using labor as a scapegoat in the anti-inflation battle and that the consumer is being "gouged" by auto companies.

William Mahoney, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America, has called recent promises by business to hold the line on prices until March 1 "a phoney gesture."

Stanley Little, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said this month's decision by railways, banks and copper producers to increase prices and interest rates was made because "they are assured of the profits they made last year."

Voluntary restraint is doomed to failure "and it starts," he added.

This is the attitude some labor leaders will take to the bargaining table this year as contract talks begin in these industries:

Aerospace—More than 8,000 machinists and auto workers employed by Canadair Ltd. and United Aircraft are seeking a new contract to replace expiring agreements expiring in August and September.

Automobile—About 45,000 auto workers at General Motors, Ford and Chrysler plants in Canada will see their present contract expire Sept. 14.

Electrical manufacturing — Contracts covering 6,500 electrical workers at Canadian General Electric and Canadian Westinghouse plants expire in March and April.

Forestry—Contracts covering 35,000 workers in the forest products industry in western Canada expire in June. Those covering 32,000 workers in eastern Canada expire in April and May.

Government—About 85,000 federal civil servants are seeking new contracts to replace those expiring in June and in September.

Railway—Unions representing about 100,000 employees of CNR and CPR will be seeking new contracts to replace those expiring Dec. 31.

Bertrand Says Quebec Could Speed Change by United View

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said Monday night that if Quebecers gave a strong and united opinion it might speed up the advent of what he called a "new federalism."

The new federalism would be more pliant and comprehensible and it would represent Canada's only chance of survival, he told the Quebec Chambre de Commerce.

"A constitution which is not acceptable to the Quebec people can never be imposed on us. The people will always be able to say yes or no when it concerns their collective destiny."

Mr. Bertrand said that although "the dialogues between Ottawa and Quebec often sounded like a dialogue of deaf people," he is "optimistic on the final outcome of the constitutional talks."

"Even when we are speaking on the same thing," he said, "we talk about it differently."

Nevertheless, the premier said, the talks had proved one important fact, the "duality" of Canada.

"Even if we wanted to speak and act as if our country had 10 similar provinces, and pretended that all Canadians are alike with the only difference being that some speak English and others French, the evidence will always end up showing that in Canada there is not only two ways of expressing ourselves, but also two ways of being, two societies, two majorities and two cultural communities of which one has its home in Quebec."

The premier said he does not feel Quebec should have a special status in relation to other provinces.

"An intermediary zone should be defined between Ottawa's exclusive power and the provinces' exclusive powers," Mr. Bertrand said.

"By common agreement, a delegation of power or some other mechanism, the federation's member states should be free to act on their own initiative or let the central government act."

He said such flexibility would permit centralizing or decentralizing according to the needs of each part of the country. Quebec would no longer be a problem to other provinces which, as a result, would no longer be a problem for Quebec.

"We have neither won nor lost our bet on the possibility of building a Canada for two . . . I don't have any illusions. The bridges between the two solitudes have still to be built."

Chretien Has No Desire To Impose Indian Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien says the federal government has no intention of forcing Canada's Indians to accept its controversial proposals for changing their status in Canadian Society.

"Much of the Indian reaction to the proposals has been based on fear and misunderstanding," Mr. Chretien said in a letter to The Star.

He said he has travelled across the country trying to reassure Indian groups that the proposals "are just that, proposals."

"I have said that we want discussion and discussion with Indian representatives. I hope that we will be able to set up a working group of Indian and non-Indian people to set the framework for a new Indian Lands Act."

Ottawa announced proposals last June to repeal the Indian Act and end federal trusteeship for Indian land, returning the land to the Indian people. It called for full citizenship for Indians and proposed a development fund to help Indians develop their own resources.

But Mr. Chretien said the Indians have expressed a fear that Canadian society is not open enough to accept them and that Ottawa will abandon them without ensuring that the proposals have the will and resources to help them make the change.

Mr. Chretien said that in dealing with the Indians the federal government had a choice.

"We could maintain existing policy, knowing full well that it set the Indian people apart and hindered their development, or we could change existing policy to enable Indian people to be free . . ."

He said continuation of the current system of separate services, double administration and separate legal status for Indians "leads up a blind alley which no amount of increased appropriations can avoid."

Public Assistance Standards Too Low

OTTAWA (CP) — Public assistance does not ensure an adequate standard of health and decency nor provide work incentives, the social welfare department for the Ottawa-Carleton regional government said today in a brief to the Senate poverty committee.

"In practice, public assistance has become a long-term form of maintenance for many," the brief said.

"Public assistance does not adequately take into account the needs of families."

The department says that access to adequate housing should be as much a matter of right as education or health or public safety.

The Ontario legislative definition of a person in need could not be regarded as acceptable by any social standard. "It excludes many people who are in urgent need of financial aid and a variety of supporting services."

Current Ontario legislative policies required people on assistance to benefit to appeal to municipalities for items of special assistance. This increases the financial and administrative burden of municipalities and needs were not met promptly.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1— IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your want ad with the most important word. Usually, it's the name of the article for sale. If you have a number of items to sell, start your ad with the heading.

2— Be CLEAR. Another important word means quality and dependability should be mentioned in your ad. Such words as: Reliable, Always Reliable, Dependable, etc.

3— MAKE IT EASY for the reader to prospect to reach you. Always include your telephone number or if your name and address. If you don't have a phone, have to drive a car, etc., say so.

4— THE GREATEST READER AT-tention is given to the first few lines of your ad. Choose the most attractive sentences.

5— Use your imagination in the way you phrase your ad. Be original. Be different. Be clever. Make a great ad.

6— CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used articles. Tell them why they should buy yours. Be honest. Be sincere. Be truthful. Be fair. Be reasonable. Be sure to include enough information to get prospects excited.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

By Peter J. Steincrohn M.D., F.A.C.P.

Fear Keeps Many Away from Doctor

One day you find a lump somewhere. What to do? Put it off? Unfortunately, "waiting" will not make it disappear. Better see the doctor early. For if a lump is the troublesome, you'll have to see him later. And later often spells more serious trouble.

I believe that fear (of knowing the truth) is what keeps most people away from the doctor's office. Some rationalize by saying it's the expense, or "I haven't got the time," or inability to stand a physical examination "with all those needles being stuck into me," etc.

But I think fear of knowing is the motivating factor in procrastination. Here is some advice from one who saw her doctor early.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: This might be of some help to Mrs. D. who wrote to you saying she was "scared, scared, paralyzed" because she had a small lump in her breast. For months she couldn't bring herself go go to a doctor.

Two years ago I was in her position. But I went in with my doctor the very next day after I found it. Mine was cancerous. I required an extensive operation — a complete radical down to the pectoral muscles and a gland cleanup.

As far as I'm concerned being scared was the worst part about the whole business. Radium treatments included! In spite of being in my 60s at the time, and having a coronary condition to boot, I made a good recovery with no pain to speak of.

I have full use of the affected arm and in a couple of months was doing everything I did before. Keeping house, driving a car and even swimming. That was over five years ago. I have had no further trouble and am told the doctors expect none for me.

I feel passionately that one who has a lump should take care of it right away. Prompt treatment, "et fear, is the answer. — Mrs. J.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have peeling splitting fingernails. During the past few months I have consumed about 120 packages of plain gelatin, two or three tablespoonfuls a day. But they don't get better. Any suggestions? — Mrs. T.

Comment: Your lack of relief is evidence that gelatin seems to help in some patients but is valueless in others. I wish I knew some specific treatment for splitting nails. I don't. Have you been to a skin specialist? Sometimes a fungal infection is the cause.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My husband has had pernicious anemia for years for which he has been having liver shots about every two weeks. Lately he has been having some reactions like bumps and inflammation at the site of injections. Isn't there anything else he can take instead? — Mrs. M.

Comment: Haven't you talked to his doctor about vitamin B12?

Strictly Personal

Welfare Cases Widespread

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

When the ordinary citizen talks about "welfare payments," he is customarily thinking about the slum population in a big city, mostly black, and unwilling to work. This is the stereotype of the "welfare" client in the minds of those who know little and care less about the poverty problem in the U.S.

Yet, this winter, Westchester County in New York State, regarded as one of the wealthiest and most exclusive areas in the country, was given a proposed budget for 1970 of $193 million — of which more than half was earmarked for welfare spending.

Westchester County does not fit any of the stereotypes: it has no big cities, no urban slums, no considerable crime or racial unrest, and a black population of less than eight per cent. But it apparently needs more than $95 million for welfare spending this year.

Indeed, welfare costs in this affluent suburban area have counsel for the largest increase in county expenditures in 1970, with "relief" payments alone projected at more than $87 million.

Out of a total population of 900,000, only four per cent receive welfare. Yet this four per cent, plus the administration of the program, will account for the largest single expenditure of the county budget.

And this is one of the main reasons that economists of both left and right are agreeing more and more that the whole present welfare set-up must be junked and replaced with some kind of direct payments to the needy — either in terms of a "guaranteed annual income" or a "negative income tax" or some combination of the two.

It is an ignorant and meanspirited libel that most people on welfare are equipped to work, but don't care to do so. Every careful study made of welfare recipients has shown beyond doubt that more than 90 per cent of welfare clients are unable to obtain employment — they are too young, too old, too sick, too blind or crippled, too unschooled and unskilled for even the manual jobs that are no longer in demand.

The present welfare system is not only expensive, wasteful, cumbersome and unworkable on the practical level; it is also a sore on the social and psychological levels, where it acts only to demoralize the spirit, humiliate the pride and alienate the personality from any true participation in our communal life.

When one of a nation's most prosperous suburban regions quickened because of its crushing relief load, then we must recognize that poverty is not just a city problem, a black problem, or a "lazy" problem — it is a human problem that will not go away until we begin to treat it humanly.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains a Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles". It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief — here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. In pain-relieving properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months! Among those suffering from this misery of hemorrhoidal conditions — even cases of long standing — this was accomplished by a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) developed by a well-known research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 28

Your birthday today: This year's symbol is for drastic change to occur at short notice according to timing factors in your individual horoscope. You may make a series of changes, each of them a bridge to another phase of personal development. Grasp every chance to move up to higher rewards, more feasible situations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): It is now easier for you to prevail in any reasonable question — with clarity of expression. You'll unless you know precisely what you want and how to ask for it properly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): There are good new ideas floating around, not to be dismissed abruptly, but not yet worked up into usable form.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Cover your search for better answers with an amiable surface. Current puzzles last over the next several days; some details elude you altogether. Trust intuition; if the general direction is right, don't worry about the fine points.

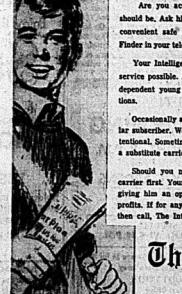
CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Approach life today as a stylized, pleasant ritual—every move a formality of inner double meaning. There is calmness satisfaction and plenty of laughter in such play - acting.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Talk fills the day but without much result. True, people come to know each other better through these encounters which may be more worthwhile than the business that never comes to pass.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Indirect approaches from you meet similar tricky questions from others in the crossfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Confident, extrovert behavior brings immediate benefits. None of today's deals carry very far into the future; expect open-end or negotiable situations. Neither make nor accept sweeping promises now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): What you learn now puts a different light on recent events. Think about it for a day or two before making radical changes in plans.



SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your intuition struggles frantically to tell you something, probably a reason for delaying action. Allow a moment of calm so it can come to the surface in usable voice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 — Jan. 19): The moon rather rapidly; not all are very significant but combined form a pattern which still lacks a strong direction. You can help form the essential local trend by your actions and reactions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your energies are quite scattered for the time being, so keep notes of where you are interrupted. This is not a day to sign any contract.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Where the main lines are already set, routine details are about normal. Major changes started now get out of hand and upset much earlier progress which needn't be disturbed. Light entertainment tonight brightens your mood.

Success Is Not Easy In World of Stage

For Negroes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Barbara McNair has no complaint; she's working much as she pleases with shows, never with movies.

"David Merrick put on the black Dolls, Dolly, with Pearl Bailey. That used up almost all the Negro performers in New York. There aren't very many. They call like 'Hello, Dolly!' a continuation of his character from In the Heat of the Night. She stars in the Barbara McNair Show, a variety series which is syndicated to 30 television markets by Metromedia. She also makes records and appears at the better supper clubs in Las Vegas and elsewhere.

But it wasn't always so.

"When I started out in the business, my ambition was to be in a Broadway show," she recalled. "I went to New York and made all the rounds of the casting offices, looking for chorus work. It never occurred to me that they would hire me because I was a Negro.

"But I found out that was true. Nor has the New York stage changed much. Oh, you see a few black faces in the chorus now and then, always in dance numbers.

She could have contented herself with a musical career. But she's thinking of acting, provided itself with a role on the television series, The 11th Hour.

"Someone in the show wanted to experiment with turning singers into actors, and that's how I got my chance," she recalled. "I found it fascinating, a real challenge.

"I suppose there is some connection between selling the lyrics of a song and performing a role. But, as a singer, you can only be engrossed in one song at a time; when you're doing a role, you must get deeply involved and sustain it emotionally."

Miss McNair said she fell in love with film on her first feature, If He Hollers, Let Him Go, which incidentally led to a spread in Playboy. Her other films have been Sidekick, Venus in Furs "still unreleased, and it may never be", Change of Habit with Elvis Presley, and The Lonely Profession, a television feature which she considers her best work.

Football Departs TV, Other Sports Get Time

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that football has departed, most other sports are having their time in the weekend television scene. On Sunday afternoon, viewers had their choice of basketball, hockey, golf or bowling.

Probably the most spectacular sports event of the weekend was the Bing Crosby golf tournament finals, live from Pebble Beach, Calif., Sunday afternoon on NBC.

Even non-golfers could enjoy that spectacle since the country by the side of the ocean is a scenic delight. Bert Yancey won by a single stroke over Jack Nicklaus in play that came right down to Yancey's final putts. The camera work was excellent, but the commentators chattered away like nervous magpies even when they had nothing to talk about.

ABC's American Sportsman series returned for a sixth year. The opening program starred Andy Griffith shooting snow geese in Texas, football star Gale Sayers fishing for marlin off Baja California and golfer Tom Weiskopf hunting for species of wild goat in New Zealand.

The hour may be a little hard to take for members of the audience who are not hunters, but one segment, Griffith and his party lay in a rice field, camouflaged by white sheets, and gleefully shot the big game out of the sky.

Later, NBC's Animal Kingdom consisted of a film showing primitive bushmen of the African desert hunting antelope in competition with lions and cheetah. At least these men with their primitive weapons were hunting to feed their families, not for sport.

The second Children's Hour in CBS's new series was broadcast Saturday afternoon. Summer Is Forever was the subject, as a young city boy's adventures in the company of an old lobsterman. It was a handsome program, filmed against the brilliant background of Maine in summer. The performances could have been as interesting to adult audiences as the first program of the series, but it may well have been more interesting to the young audience at whom it was, presumably, aimed.

Biggest disappointment of the weekend was the first On Stage dramatic hour of NBC's season. It was an original comedy by John Mortimer, the story of the reunion of an explorer, believed dead 10 years, with wife and children.

After some doubt that he was the real Colonel Jardine, the explorer established a few points. The snapper came when the widow decided that she liked the phoney better than the original.

Diana Rigg played the cool and clever widow and Robert Culp, affecting some strange accent alleged to have been Australian, was the imposter. The script was not kind to either performer and Culp, in particular was thoroughly unconvincing.

Steelers Make Louisiana Pivot First Draft Pick

NEW YORK (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers, getting the first pick in United States professional football's annual draft, today selected quarterback Terry Bradshaw of Louisiana Tech.

Bradshaw, 21, a six-foot three-inch, 215-pound Link All-America, threw for 39 touchdowns and gained 6,589 yards passing with a 53 completion average in his career with the Shreveport, La., school.

Quarterback Ray Brown, which got the No. 2 pick from Chicago Bears in a trade, selected Mike McCoy, huge All-America running back from Colorado.

Atlanta, picking 13th, took linebacker John Small, 6-4, 226-pounder from The Citadel.

Buffalo, picking fifth, named Al Cowlings, a six-foot-five defensive tackle from Southern California.

Philadelphia, with the No. 6 pick, selected Leroy Keyes, 225-pound tight end from Oklahoma.

Cincinnati, No. 7, picked Mike Reid, All-America defensive tackle from unbeaten Penn State.

St. Louis, picking eighth, selected Larry Stegent of Texas A. and M. He was the first running back picked.

San Francisco, ninth in the draft, picked Cedrick Hardman, a six-foot three, 240-pound defensive end from North Texas State. He was the first lineman picked.

New Orleans, going 10th, selected Kenny Burroughs, 215-pound wide receiver from Texas Southern.

Of the first 18 players picked, five were defensive linemen and two were quarterbacks; one was a wide receiver, another a running back and the third a tight end.

Denver, picking 11th, grabbed Bob Anderson, All-America running back from Colorado.

Atlanta, picking 12th, took linebacker John Small, 6-4, 226-pounder from The Citadel.

Work Simplification Course at Loyalist

A new course in work simplification which resulted in $8 million savings by one company in 1969 will be introduced at Loyalist College beginning Feb. 23, H. J. Butler-ill, director of extension, announced this morning.

The course is designed to impart the basic techniques of methods improvement and to prepare the participants for making an effective contribution to a work simplification program.

Co-sponsored by the Industrial Management Clubs of Canada (Quinte Chapter) and Loyalist College, the course will be led by F. A. Beeby, training administrator for Northern Electric Co., and will be conducted every Monday from 7 to 9 p.m. for 12 weeks.

During the course, emphasis will be placed on practical problem solving using problems and cases representative of actual work situations. The course is directed mainly to owners or managers of small companies, supervisors and foremen from both line and staff functions in manufacturing concerns, and supervisors in administrative, professional and technical fields.

The Friday evening social saw another good crowd having an enjoyable time listening and dancing to the delightful music of the Cameos. The chairman is arranging for a special treat for the members who like hockey. It is a film entitled "Fifty years of NHL Hockey" with close-up shots of all the big stars, past and present. Date of this showing will be placed on the notice board so watch for it.

The president has received a communication from the Dominion Convention Committee stating that, providing enough regulars attend, a greatly reduced fare will be available to any member and his wife who would like to attend the convention being held in Vancouver this year. Deadline for receiving such reservations will be Feb. 9. This is by plane.

Chairman of the sick committee makes the following report. Still in the Belleville General Hospital are Cdes. Elmer Scott, Room 718 and John Fisher. He requests to say that Cde. Fisher is allowed no visitors at present. Cde. Jim McKenna is slowly recovering at the Kingston General Hospital while Cdes. J. Clarke, A. Brown and B. Feather are resting at home. All have been visited and cheered after.

See Archie Jordan or Art Hobbs if you wish to have the Advocate sent to your home. A good way of getting the latest news of the Units across Canada and reports on events as they affect the ex-serviceman.

Bayonets Block Belfast March

BELFAST (AP) — British troops with fixed bayonets headed off a Protestant march on Roman Catholic areas of Belfast today amid a new upsurge of tension in the Northern Ireland city.

For the fourth successive night angry chanting crowds roamed the streets, bringing fears of another outburst of the sectarian rioting that last year produced more than 20 deaths and hundreds wounded.

Shortly after midnight Tuesday night, a mob of about 500 tried to charge the "peace line" of barbed wire and steel which divides the mainly Protestant Shankill Road from the Catholic Falls Road area.

The protestants were met by a line of troops with bayonets fixed. The troops were wearing gas masks, indicating they were ready to use tear gas for the first time since armed clashes last October.

The protestants first tried to march on Unity Flats, a mainly Catholic housing development at the far end of the Shankill Road.

The apartments were built as an attempt to break Belfast's pattern of segregated housing but their preponderence of Catholic residents has made them a focal point for the anger of the surrounding Protestant backstreets.

Protestants complain that the apartments are guarded by the British Army yet 6/7 of the flats of the neighboring Irish Republic.

John McQuade, who is the Protestant-based Unionist party's member of Parliament for the area, has demanded the apartments should be cleared and converted into offices or army barracks.

One of his supporters, former city councillor William Quigley, warned:

"Some day you will get a shot fired and we all know what will happen then. Something is going to erupt.

"At least a dozen incidents involving the flats have occurred in the past few months. The army does not go into the flats and the police are not allowed in."

Police reluctance to move back into Catholic areas which declared themselves off-limits during last summer's rioting is another cause of Protestant anger.

The British Army garrison in Northern Ireland, which is part of the United Kingdom, has been reduced by recent withdrawals to 6,000 men.

Authorities say this is enough to handle potential riot. The army's main worry is that it might find itself in the centre of guerrilla war between rival factions who both claim to be well armed.

Six Per Cent Jobless Rate Is Predicted

KITCHENER (CP) — Donald C. MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, Tuesday predicted a six-per-cent unemployment rate for Canada by mid-March.

At a news conference to announce a union-industry product show, Mr. MacDonald charged the federal government with over-reacting to inflation.

He said every economic indicator—including corporate profits, down 12 per cent through the last half of 1969—pointed to an increase to more than six per cent from less than five.

Public Housing Scale at Issue

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario has told the federal government it wants a more realistic basis for the Ontario Housing Corp. rent scale.

H. W. Suters, OHC managing director, said in an interview Tuesday that "we don't feel that the present rental scale, which is completely mechanical, is the proper one and perhaps other factors should be taken into account."

He said the scale Ontario is challenging—in a brief sent to Ottawa last November—is based on a tenant's gross monthly income.

Tenants earning $192 or less a month pay 16.7 per cent of it in rent on the scale which ranges up to 20 per cent for someone earning $501 a month or more.

Mr. Suters said Ontario called for an independent study of social and economic factors which might be considered when OHC rents are set.

Among these, he said, would be regional differences in the cost of living, the distances which 'tenants travel to work and situations such as those of single mothers faced with a choice between living on welfare or trying to earn their own living.

But Dan Coates, executive assistant to Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing who asked for the provinces' ideas on administering public housing, said in an Ottawa interview the federal government would likely continue to call for a national rental scale.

Mr. Suters said a proposal to relate rents to regional economies is the basis of Ontario's brief.

Ottawa Plans Twice as Many Low-cost Units

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Andras, minister responsible for housing, told the Commons Tuesday the government will expand its loans program for low-cental housing in 1970.

Mr. Andras said the government had committed itself to loans for construction of 27,650 low-cental units in 1969 through Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

This is double the previous highest yearly figure, he said, and there would be "even further emphasis" on low-income housing in 1970.

Irish Priests Urge MPs to Aid Biafra

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Irish missionary priests Tuesday night told a tale of famine and death in Biafra, the former breakaway region of Nigeria, and warned that a major catastrophe threatens unless a great international relief effort is quickly organized.

"You could not possibly overestimate the gravity of the problem," Rev. Kevin Doheny told a subcommittee of the Commons external affairs committee.

With his brother, Rev. Michael Doheny, he is on a crusade to Western countries almed at rousing support for such a multi-national relief operation. They were sent on the mission by the Roman Catholic bishop of Owerri three days prior to the Biafran collapse before the advance of federal Nigerian armies.

Owerri was a major town in the former rebel region.

Many Biafrans had died from starvation and disease before the collapse, said Father Kevin Doheny. The only possibility of averting a catastrophe lay in mounting a major airlift into the Uli airport.

Father Michael Doheny said an overland relief effort such as that being conducted by the Nigerian Red Cross is not adequate to deal with the situation. A convoy of 25 trucks from the former secessionist capital of Enugu would take a week to reach the heartland of Biafra.

And even if all got through, they would be able to deliver only as much food as Biafra used to receive in a single night from Joint Church Aid flights originating on the island of Sao Tome before the end of the civil war.

Father Kevin said that in his parish at Okpala, 30 miles from the Uli airstrip, there were 22,000 people in addition to 16,000 refugees from other areas.

As of Jan. 7, the day he left, he was tending to 600 children just hanging onto life." He was feeding 5,000 people, providing supplies and relief for 850 destitute families.

Then, with the approach of the Nigerian army, "all my people took to the road."

"Now, they were not only destitute but they didn't even have a place to sleep."

'Always Ways to Evade Law' Humane Society Is Told

BARRIE (CP) — Members of the Ontario Humane Society were urged Tuesday night to "avoid falling out with each other" over the province's controversial legislation on the use of animals for research.

"We've got to keep our cool," Tom Hughes of Toronto, general manager of the society, said in a speech to a meeting of the group's Barrie branch.

"The best we can do in the coming year is to avoid falling out with each other. There are always ways to evade the law. If we don't embarrass the government too much, they'll let us go through the loopholes."

He was referring to legislation forcing dog pounds to turn over unclaimed and unwanted animals for research purposes.

Mr. Hughes said society members with extreme views should form their own association to avoid tearing the society apart from within.

Aid to Biafra Prolonged War

FREDERICTON (CP) — Brig.-Gen. J. A. Hamilton, commander of the Canadian Forces Base at Gagetown, N.B., said Tuesday that Western humanitarianism for starving Biafrans was a factor which contributed to continuing the Nigerian civil war.

Gen. Hamilton was Canada's senior international observer in Nigeria for six months last year.

He said the action of relief organizations helped prolong the war.

Gen. Hamilton criticized the news media for one-sided accounts which placed Nigeria in the "permanent role of bad guys attacking the secessionist good guys."

He said he was "all for the media bringing to the attention of the world the plight of the Bio Biafrans but not in laying the blame against the Nigerian government."

He said the unco-operative attitude of Biafran leader Maj.-Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu was responsible for bringing death and misery to his people.

Nixon Likely to Win Battle with Congress Over Spending

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon today appeared likely to win the first major battle of 1970 between the White House and Congress when the House of Representatives votes on his veto of the $19,700,000,000 health, education and welfare money bill.

Republicans claim the president has enough votes to uphold the veto while the Democrats admit the issue will be close.

Most independent pollsters felt the House would go along with the president mainly through defections by southern Democrats who want included in the bill an amendment supporting freedom of choice in schools instead of forced desegregation.

A two-thirds majority in the 435-seat House is needed to overturn a presidential veto, plus a two-thirds majority in the 100-seat Senate.

Republicans charged with managing the vote claim to have 135 of the 145 votes needed to sustain the veto in the House, and they think about 35 Democrats would go along with them.

This would give the president a comfortable margin to sustain the veto.

Should it surprisingly be overturned by the House, it would then go to the Senate where the tide is expected to run much stronger against the president.

In a tough veto message to Congress in a bid to sway votes, Nixon warned Tuesday of inflationary pressures and pointed out the bill was $1,300,000,000 more than he had sought.

"These increases are excessive in a period of serious inflationary pressures," Nixon declared. "We must draw the line and stick to it if we are to stabilize the economy."

City May Order Study Of Flood Control Dam

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Belleville city council is expected to approve a feasibility study for recommended construction of an ice control dam in the Moira River. The dam would help alleviate possible springtime flooding.

Cost of the study is estimated at approximately $11,000. It would be eligible for a 75 per cent grant from the Ontario Government.

City council yesterday met with the Moira River Conservation Authority at city hall to hear the report from Toronto engineering consultants Crysler, Davis and Jorgensen, on a flood control study on the Moira inside the city limits last year.

The report, presented by Keith W. Lathem, recommended serious consideration be given an ice-control dam just above the old Loft dam site, opposite Belleville Crematories.

Cost of the dam is estimated at $600,000, also eligible for a 75 per cent subsidy.

Moira River Authority Chairman Graham Bell told the meeting that the engineering study was the first step by the Authority in a program for ice and flood control in the city.

Other Authority members attending the meeting included Guy Hughes of Tweed, chairman of the Authority water advisory board and John White, resources manager.

Mr. Lathem told the meeting that his firm had studied several possibilities for ice and flood control in the city. He emphasized, however, that precautions would have to be taken to assure that any ice control structures would not result in any increased possibility of summer flooding.

Under present conditions the river channel was large enough to handle any summer flow without flooding, a was stated.

Among the ice control measures studies were (1) A series of low dams to eliminate formation of frazil ice; (2) Ice storage dams; (3) channel restrictions to increase river flow velocity; (4) narrow low - flow channeling to reduce ice formation.

Due to cost involved and because of certain disadvantages, all ideas except that of ice control dams were eliminated.

For instance: Narrow low - flow channeling would restrict river mouth and the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway would cost an additional three-to-four million dollars while the series of low dams would cost around three million dollars.

Three possible sites for the control dam were considered. These were: Just south of the freeway; north of College street, utilizing a city owned quarry; and the Loft dam site, the recommended Loft dam site.

The Loft site was recommended because it provided triple the ice-storage area than the College Street site. It is also more than a half-mile closer to the river mouth, thereby controlling a longer stretch of the river.

The type of dam recommended for the Loft damsite is known as the Fabridam which acts like an inflated rubber tire section to hold back the water. An ice boom of chain - connected logs would prevent sheet ice from going over the dam.

Mr. Lathem said records showed a long history of spring flooding in Belleville caused by the jamming of ice either at the river mouth or in the downtown section of the city. The last serious flood was in 1934 which caused an estimated $250,000 damage.

Mr. Lathem said cost-benefit studies showed that the recommended ice control dam would be economically feasible.

The engineer didn't feel that the new Dundas Street bridge would increase present flood possibilities. However, he said the bridge might create problems in connection with ice-channelling.

A question and answer period followed the presentation.

Questions ranged from the reason for choice of the recommended damsite to whether any additional bridges across the Moira would have any bearing on flood control, and the possible choice of the College Street site, thus keeping the Lot damsite ice storage area to be used for recreational purposes.

Mayor J. Russell Scott observed that council would have to give consideration to the choice for the damsite.

"It will be up to the city to decide if we want it and where we want it," he said.

A feasibility study for the proposed dam would include foundation testing at the site, and construction of a scale model at Queen's University.

More than 10 years ago construction of an ice control dam north of College Street was proposed, and a scale model was constructed at Toronto.

Cost of the dam at that time was estimated at $450,000 but the available grants then were considerably less than what is now available and the project was dropped.

An Emergency Measure

Simulated flood emergency last night sent radio spotters along Moira River. Above, Vern Barnes and Harry Burley, near Belleville's Footbridge, make contact with emergency measures headquarters at city hall.

Surgery Not Cancelled

TRENTON (Staff) — Mrs. Clara Lowe, acting administrator of Trenton Memorial Hospital, said today that elective surgical operations have not been cancelled at the hospital.

Mrs. Lowe said there has been a shortage of blood at the hospital and also at the central depot in Toronto, but the situation is now easing. She said, however, the blood shortage had not been critical to the extent that any surgical operations were cancelled — as reported to the Intelligencer yesterday.

Flood Exercise Is Staged

Bellevillians and residents of the surrounding city area are assured of active emergency measures in the event of a flood — if results of last night's Quinte Emergency Measures Organization exercise Flood alert are any indication.

It was highly successful with only a few minor casualties and no loss of life", said Al Pinder, Deputy Co-ordinator.

The exercise began at 7 p.m. with a briefing of all participants at EMO headquarters on Dundas St. East. River watchers were given prepared messages to transmit periodically from their posts along the River from O'Brien Bridge in Thurlow township to the CPR bridge.

The communications exercise involved radio operators from the General Radio Service Citizen's Band, ham operators and EMO radios manned by officials.

Among observers in the control centre at city hall were police, fire and welfare departments representatives as well as members of City Council.

For purposes of the exercise, the areas from Front Street up to Pinnacle and Coleman Streets and all lowlying areas on both sides of the river to the CPR bridge were under water. Evacuation of all residents was successful with a few casualties being treated at Hastings County Manor and Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Exercise Flood was under the direction of EMO co-ordinator Angus Duffy.

Education Week Set for March

Education Week this year is scheduled for the first week in March, and plans for its observance are already under way.

Heading up the Education Week organization this year is George Patton, principal of Stirling senior school. He replaces B. D. Summers, chairman for the last two years.

Frank Tate, superintendent of school area 3, continues as secretary. Gary Stevenson, principal of Bancroft public school was elected vice-chairman last night, and Claire Rupnow of Sir John A. Macdonald School in Belleville is publicity chairman.

At a meeting at Sir Winston Churchill School the representatives from county schools reviewed the rules for choosing the winner of the Sir Mackenzie Bowell award for meritorious service to education in Hastings county.

This is the fourth year the award will be presented to someone active in education during the previous year.

Former winners of the award are E. A. Orr and L. A. Kells of Belleville and Guy Bentley of North Hastings.

The award will again be presented at the opening Education Week breakfast at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, scheduled this year at 8 a.m. March 2.

The candidates for the award are nominated by educational groups in the county, including the public and separate school board, teachers federations, Loyalist and Albert College, Edith Cavell School of Nursing, Ontario Business College, Ontario School for the Deaf, the Home and School Council and the parents' association of William R. Kirk School.

"It is felt that the people in education are having their say by nominating candidates," noted Robert Henwood, superintendent of southeast school area.

The person chosen to receive the ward is picked by the judges on the basis of merit, the tally is made of the number of ballot cast in his favor.

Frank Murray, general manager of radio station CJBQ will again act as chief judge, assisted by John Wilkes, Hastings County Warden, and former winner E. A. Orr.

No nominations will be received after Feb. 20.

The Education Week committee will ask the public and separate school boards for a total of $300 to cover the publicity budget for the week.

Events planned for the week include an address March 2 by Walter Pitman, MPP for Peterborough and education critic for the NDP and a church service March 8 at St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill. The service will be conducted entirely by administrators, teachers and students of the Hastings county board of education.

Dies While Towing Car

PICTON (Staff) — A Bloomfield resident died yesterday morning while assisting a motorist whose car was stuck near the village.

William Burt, 57, RR 1, Bloomfield died at the wheel of a tractor while attempting to tow the vehicle.

A neighbor, Mrs. Claude Marshall, saw Mr. Burt slide from the tractor seat and notified the Picton Detachment of the OPP.

Police said this morning that Mr. Burt apparently had suffered a heart seizure.

Wolves Increasing Threat Quinte Hunters Insist

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Lands and forests officials don't feel that wolves create any major threat to the deer population, but don't tell that to members of the deer hunting fraternity.

Last fall, many hunters reported seeing more wolves than deer in the bush. This winter many sightings of brush wolves have been reported in South Hastings and in Prince Edward county.

In fact, one brush wolf was shot this week within three miles of Belleville in Thurlow township. In less than a week there have been shot in Prince Edward county.

The wolf killed Monday in Thurlow was shot by Don Forsythe, son of Thurlow deputy reeve Borden Forsythe and Mrs. Forsythe, who saw the animal from their kitchen window.

When first spotted the wolf was in hot pursuit of a jack rabbit.

"Wolves can actually catch a jack rabbit", observed Mr. Forsythe.

In Prince Edward County Peter Vandenberg, a commercial fisherman at Consecon has shot two wolves in recent days — both of the first seen from his kitchen window.

Over at East Lake a female brush wolf was shot dead by Keith Woodward, R. R. 10 Picton, sitting on the snow-covered ice. Mr. Woodward summoned friends and gave chase into a marsh where the animal was shot by George Young.

Mr. Young says the wolves are a danger to sheep.

In Thurlow township a neighbor of Mr. Forsythe, Roger Buckbald, assisted in chasing the wolf.

Despite the claims of hunters and forest officials to the contrary, Mr. Forsythe says that brush wolves can, and do, kill deer. He said a deer was killed recently by wolves at Thurlow.

"We don't shoot them (the wolves)," says Mr. Forsythe. "Wolves have been a topic for spirited discussion in Hastings county council for many years, reeves always receiving the nod, only have decimated the deer population, but also attack sheep and cattle.

Wolliaston Reeve Albert Yoder said a Reeve was killed in the North Hastings area and hunters had actually seen calves being killed.

The Wolliaston reeve early in December organized a shooting of the pest which was attended by more than 200 hunters and lauds and forest officials.

Hunters unanimously passed a 13-point resolution declaring war on wolves and asking that the wolf bounty be increased to $75, or $100. from the present $25.

The same resolution was endorsed by Wolliaston township council and later presented to Hastings County Council.

During the December session county fathers named a special wolf committee to fully investigate the wolf problem in the county.

Committe members are reeve J. N. Brown of Bancroft, Albert Yoder, Wolliaston; Charles Gordanier, Delcro, Burton Morton, Rawdon, and Jesse Carr of Monsagle.

No report was made by the committee at the January session of council, but a resolution from Prince Edward county asking that the wolf bounty be increased to $100. was referred to the committee for consideration.

Linton D. Read Appointed

New School Gets Principal

Linton D. Read, principal of Moira Secondary School, has been appointed principal of the new composite school planned for construction at Bayside.

He will take up his new duties in September, 1970.

Although the new school will not be open until September, 1971, Mr. Read was appointed a year in advance to permit him to advise on the building, supplies, equipment and hiring of teaching staff for the new school.

"With remarkable imagination and courage, the Hastings county board of education is planning an open-space concept for the new secondary school," Mr. Read said this morning. "This is an exciting innovation with wonderful possibilities for a "new deal' for students".

"Individual time - tabling, inter-disciplinary learning, the quest method of study, greater student responsibility for his own progress — all these concepts will be part of the new school curriculum and policy."

The school will accommodate 1,200 students and the 200-acre site will eventually be part of an educational campus, including a junior and senior elementary school and administration building. Sketch plans have been approved by the board and cost of the school is expected to be about 2.5 million dollars.

"The future of the staff will determine the success of the new school," Mr. Read asserted. "We shall be seeking out the very best department heads an directors available — sound, competent, open-minded people with a keen desire to try something new and very believe there is a better way to educate young people for our changing world."

Because the Bayside school will be one of the first of its kind in Ontario, Mr. Read will be occupied during his first year on the job of visiting and evaluating other schools of a similar type.

Mr. Read is now completing 21 years as teacher and principal in Bedeville schools, and has been principal of Moira Secondary School since 1965.

Before coming to BCI in 1948, he graduated in English and French with honors from McMaster University and from the Ontario College of Education.

He has been involved in the editing of English textbooks, in writing grade 13 correspondence courses for the Ontario department of education, and in lecturing on teacher refresher courses.

He is a member of the board of governors of the Ontario Teachers' Federation.

Ribbon Nets Cash For Action Centre

The opening of Belleville's latest new restaurant, the Red Barn, netted Quinte Action Centre $98 last night. The bills were stapled to the ribbon that, when cut, officially opened the building.

On hand for the ribbon cutting ceremony were Mayor Russell Scott, Murph Warner, manager of the new restaurant, his wife and family, Bill O'Sullivan, treasurer of Quinte Action Centre, and mayor of the week, Jane Douglas.

Local industrialists, merchants and aldermen sampled Red Barn food at the opening of the Dundas Street East restaurant.

Jeff Carscallen, regional advertising manager of the Red Barn network explained that the Belleville establishment is its 41st in Canada.

The Red Barn system is a relatively young organization. The first restaurant opened in Springfield, Ohio, in 1961, and has grown to approximately 250 units in North America.

The Belleville unit will start with a staff of about 65 local people and for Mr. Warner, the first few months of operation will mean long hours.

Mr. Warner has resided in Belleville for 18 years and has coached minor hockey teams and umpired minor softball. His wife, Shirley, is vice-president of the girl's minor softball league in Belleville.

Your boy and St. Andrew's:

At St. Andrew's a boy has the benefit of excellent academic instruction in small classes; furthermore, he enjoys rich participation in a very active extra-curricular programme of sports, music, dramatics, cadets and a dozen school clubs.

St. Andrew's is fortunate in having a strong, well-trained staff of twenty nine masters who have graduated from sixteen different top universities in Canada, the United States and Great Britain. The median teaching experience is well above twenty years.

The school's educational philosophy stresses leadership training, character development and individual growth based upon individual student effort motivated by stimulating encouragement from masters, the headmaster, who is made of new audio-visual aids to assist boys in obtaining individual aims by means of self-discovery.

Examinations for entrance to Grade nine will be held March 20. Applications should be received by March 13, 1970.

For Prospectus apply to: The Headmaster, Mr. Lionel Lemaster, St. Andrew's College, Aurora, Ontario.

Medical Services

Canada is fortunate in the extent and quality of its medical services. That is not to say they are fully adequate to serve the needs of an increasing population; there are still gaps, particularly in the smaller centres and outlying regions.

Medicine is a very wide field, involving treatment all the way from the routine visit to the family doctor through hospitalization, the use of prescribed drugs (which have revolutionized modern treatment), research and specialist care.

Such care is available to large numbers. However the establishment of community health centres, in the view of a former Belleville physician, would go far toward affording more extensive and readily available medical care for a growing population.

Such centres, housed in special buildings with four or more doctors, nurses and assistants, could serve a relatively large area, Dr. Reginald Anderson, who is now assistant professor of medicine at Queen's University, told a local audience recently.

Something of the kind already exists, of course, in Belleville and other communities. As Dr. Anderson pointed out, 15 to 20 per cent of Canadian physicians are practising in some 400 formally organized clinic groups of from three to 30 members each.

But more are needed. Anyone who visits the doctor's office is familiar with waits of up to an hour or more. Doctors are extremely busy if not overworked; in such circumstances the chances of all concerned may be sorely tried — perhaps that is how a person receiving treatment got to be call a patient!

Wherever you have a doctor's office or a hospital you play the waiting game. In some of the bigger cities you are lucky if you can even get a doctor to make a home visit. It is easy to understand why. Consider Toronto for example, with its million or more people, its huge inner apartment complexes, its frantic, restless traffic, or Montreal.

Better then that the places where the action is — the doctors' offices and clinics and of course the hospital, not to mention that indispensible adjunct of medicine, the ambulance service, have the best of facilities, and in increasing numbers.

Thus, the increasing needs of the population will be served more adequately. Even then it will be a waiting game for the average patient — and tests, return visits and all the rest of it. But it does add up, even now, to medical services of which we may be proud.

Church Report

It is a courageous church which goes to the secular world to discover how others see it.

The Presbyterian Church in Canada has done just that — employing a management-consultant firm to look into its problems and reveal to it the way it currently feels requires a new look in these changing times.

The report has now been made public. Released last week, it is a 123-page, 40,000-word document stemming from a random sampling of a membership of close to 200,000 across the country. What it has to say could be true of other denominations caught up in the maelstrom of a rapidly changing era, new concepts, a growing permissiveness, and a society numbering thousands who have scant connection with the church or any religion.

In short there is the church on one side and the secular world on the other. In its attempt to be more relevant to the needs of the day, more compassionate in its dealings with people, more practical in the face of human needs, let it be said that the church is performing a very meaningful role.

The efforts of the church-based Canadreiler organization in flying food to Biafra is a heroic example, and although its operations have now ceased it serves as a precedent for an increasingly active role for the churches.

Nor should the dedicated work of missionaries around the world be overlooked. But to return to the report — here the day-to-day routine of the church is seen in mundane, less romantic light. It speaks of rigidity and inflexibility of thought, a too conservative, slow-to-change atmosphere among church elders.

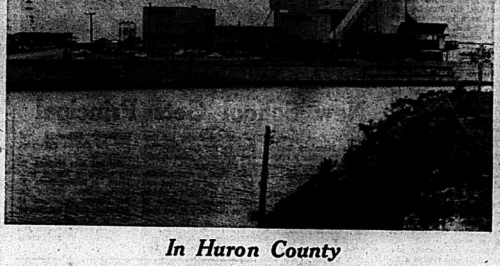
Phrases like "out of touch . . . ingrown . . . in need of renewal" dot the report. Where youth is concerned, the rising generation feels the church must be more initiative in social action. At the same time young people's groups are described as "frequently cold, unfriendly and cliquish."

The report is a significant one, a useful contribution to the continuing debate on the role of the church at large. It should prove invaluable in bringing the church still closer to the needs of modern society, embracing young people and the adult world alike.

Children's Books Sell in 18 Countries

From H.G. Wells to Information on Fishing and Hunting

BBC London Letter



An important area of publishing which does not always get the attention it deserves is that of books for children. "Bookcase", one of the BBC World Service programmes on books and writers, recently devoted an item to this, with a report from Alex Hamilton of The Times.

He noted that a number of established paperback publishers do have sections for children, but spotted one organization which specialises in producing for young readers through schools as well as in England, its name, Schofield and Sims. Publishers, could be misleading for it offers reading for entertainment, not textbooks for study. Its books are chosen from publishers right across the board. The scheme works like a framework of four separate state based on different age levels.

A child becomes a member through buying his first book from the organization, and there is no other commitment beyond the stipulation that a minimum order of 15 books should be placed by any one school in a year. A teacher is sent broadsheets to distribute to his class. These show the books offered, and come with an advisory memorandum for his guidance.

For each age group the book editors of the organization are helped by members of the world of education. A recent edition of Scoop News, listing books for Scoop Club, the oldest group, shows fiction from H. G. Wells, a quiz book, and guides to fishing and camping. Chip News, for eight - to eleven-year-olds, seems strong on facts about animals, and also includes a very popular reference book, "A Day Out" by Leila Berg and the "How It Yourself Books" are offered to the five clubs in the Lucky Club, while the Sea Saw Club families are asked such questions as "Who Took the Farmer's Hat?"

In the last five years Schofastic Publications have established themselves as well in England that this year they expect to sell 1,000,000 books to 100,000 children. They are expanded so fast that now they are reaching out into 18 other countries, and are now coming in not only from English-speaking countries such as the West Indies, but from English language schools in Finland, Holland, Venezuela and Italy.

In Huron County

There are salt mines and salt mines, depending on a fellow's affinity for his work. But here, in Goderich, is the real thing. Grain elevators, flour mills and a number of heavy industries have also been established in the Lake Huron community since the last war. Dr. William ("Tiger") Dunlop supervised the building of the town in 1828, and it was named after Viscount Goderich, Chancellor of the Exchequer when the British government sold to the Canada Company the land in the Huron Tract.

Teenager's Rescue Of Young Woman At Wolfe Island Dock

Kingston Whig-Standard

Frequently the mass media carry accounts of incidents in which individuals and groups of individuals display a shocking lack of ordinary compassion and concern for human life. We think, for example, of the mobs in the big American cities which encourage would be suicides to jump, and those who stand aside while assaults and murders are committed under their frightened or indifferent gaze. Fortunately, for every incident of this nature, there are countless acts of courage and self-sacrifice which serve to renew our faith in mankind.

Early last Sunday morning a 17-year-old Kingston high school student jumped into the icy water off the Wolfe Island ferry dock and saved a young woman from certain death. The woman was one of five passengers in a car which plunged off the dock. Nine Gurnsey claims that he is no hero, that he "just started at me. I had to do it," he said later. Whatever his personal feelings concerning his actions, Niles Gurnsey has earned the gratitude and admiration of his community. We join with other Kingstonians in commending this young man for his act of courage.

Swedes Taxed Still More

Winnipeg Free Press

Politicians who express admiration for the way they do things in Sweden (and voters, who are governed by these politicians) will be interested in the latest Swedish budget.

Swedish taxpayers have been among the most heavily taxed in the world. They had their burdens added to when the 1970 budget was brought down this month. It included new taxes which raised the price of beer (by about 10 per cent), cigarettes (by 12.5 per cent — a packet of "economy size" cigarettes will sell for around 70 cents), and many household goods.

The price on the latter went up as a result of the increase in the value-added-tax which was imposed a year ago to replace a selective sales tax. The added-value tax was 11.1 per cent; this will be raised to 16.2 per cent at the end of 1970 and will cover all consumer goods. But to head off a buying spree before the new tax rates effect, the increase becomes effective next month for a number of large items — packets of cars, boats, TV sets, washing machines, etc.

LOOKING BACK WARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

January 28, 1950.

Over 200 attended the concert and dance in the Oddfellows Hall sponsored by the Sons of Scotland, commemorating the anniversary of Robert Burns. Chairman Norman Meldrum, on behalf of the Chief, Mrs. J. Ingram, extended a welcome to those attending. The accompanists for the evening were Mrs. Alice Reid, Mrs. W. Grant, Mrs. Peter Mrs. Eva Thrasher, Mrs. L. Dutton and Leo Riggs.

The wives of the members of the Bank of Montreal staff, entertained at Golden Acres, in honor of Mrs. V. R. Stammers, who leaves next week to reside in Toronto.

Lois Benger, of Port Arthur, and Enid McClintock, of Cornwall, were recent guests of Mary I. Vivian, Shannonville. All are students at Queen's University.

30 YEARS AGO

January 28, 1940.

Brilliant young stars of Canada's figure skating world received a rofyal welcome at the Home Arena when 1,200 members of the community attended the annual VON Carnival, sponsored by the Belleville Y's Men's Club. Canadian junior champions and outstanding skaters of the Toronto Skating Club, the Minto Skating Club of Ottawa, and the Quinte Skating Club of Belleville, contributed to a program that had a varied appeal for the pleasure of young and old. The Commodores provided the musical setting for the evening.

Rev. Roy Rickard, dean of the Winter School now in session at Bridge Street United Church, and Mrs. Richard of Colborne, are the guests of the parents of the latter, Alderman and Mrs. H. J. Clarke, Foster Ave.

Federal Strategy on Inflation

Montreal La Presse: In peacetime, it is the provinces which hold the power to impose a freeze on prices. To get around the problem, the federal government, more determined than ever to slay the inflation dragon, must go about it on winding roads with its weapons well-bidden. A type of persuasion which does not rule out a certain amount of arm-twisting and which took the form of a two-month moratorium on price increases has just been deemed a success, since three sectors of activity have, as a result of these pressures, agreed to suspend application of recently announced increases in prices or interest rates. . . .

Nevertheless Mr. Benson has asked all industry to maintain prices at their current level, at least until March 1. Thus he has come to the rescue of the incomes and price of consumers, whose slender methods have proven inadequate for convincing people of the necessity of self-imposed restraints. He is also preparing the way for an anti-inflation strategy which will be put into effect during the meeting of the economic union with Canadian business leaders and, a few days later, on Feb. 16, at the premiers' conference on subjects as touchy as inflation and taxation. . . .

It must be hoped that, during the next federal-provincial conference, a formula or a strait can be adopted that will take into account the situation in each region. This is to avoid unduly increasing unemployment in the provinces such as ours where the situation is already bad, and to avoid thoughtlessly putting the brakes on any improvement in places where the economy is already in a state of stagnation.

Standard Sizes For Kids' Clothes

Hamilton Spectator

Consumer Affairs Minister Basford has an encouraging word for parents. He reports scores of children's clothing manufacturers are co-operating with Canada Standard sizes.

This means that all CSS Size Eights will be exactly the same dimensions in every factory, store and mail order house in the land. Buyers who know their children's CSS sizes then can be checked at any store selling the standard-size clothing can expect all clothes bearing the Canada Standard Size label to fit.

The voluntary scheme was designed to eliminate the needless confusion and expense — to buyers, retailers and manufacturers — caused by the haphazard variety of size designations in children's clothing.

Until the standards were introduced, sizes usually were set according to age. But all eight-year-olds are not the same size. So Size Eights have varied according to each manufacturer's version of eight-year-old dimensions.

If children are in the store for a fitting, size labels don't matter much. But many parents shop by telephone, by mail or by themselves. For these shoppers, CSS should be a boon.

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The climax of the effort that has gone into securing a rehearing of the North Front Street rezoning question will be reached Feb. 2.

On this date, the Ontario Municipal Board will sit to hear new evidence and evaluate written submissions on behalf of the major parties involved.

It is the view over a year since the citizens of Belleville were stunned by the OMB's contentious decision not to approve rezoning, followed by the illogical go ahead to a similar request from Thurlow township.

Not many people doubted that Belleville would be denied a much-needed regional shopping centre. However, lawyer Robert Macauley was able to persuade the Board that such an undertaking was "premature", on behalf of Oshawa Wholesalers who operate the Towers stores outside the city limits.

Since that time things have changed out of all expectations. Belleville, and the surrounding region have surged forward all over increasing waves of industrial and commercial expansion. Investment in new undertakings of all types has never been higher. Salutary notice of this boom can be found in the many glowing compliments paid to the city by senior officials of industries establishing here. Not only praise for Belleville's go ahead industrial policies, but high praise for the interest and community spirit of its people.

This latter attribute was exemplified by the manner in which 11,117 residents signed the petition to the OMB asking for a reversal of their unpopular decision.

It must be obvious to all, that under the prevailing circumstances, a new shopping centre will be built somewhere in the immediate locality, so why not in Belleville, the county seat, and the place the developer has repeatedly shown he wants to be?

The Belleville Citizens for Belleville Committee feel that Mr. Macauley will be back to plead a case of hard times for his clients, and, in support of the efforts of Belleville city council and all those who wish to see our city continue its growth, the Committee will be on hand with a brief to present to the Board.

We hope that all those citizens who feel they would like to address the Board in support of this undertaking will attend the hearing to show their support to those who have already demonstrated their convictions.

This is the era of citizen participation, or at least, this is what we are being told by all levels of government, so let us not be afraid to attend the hearing, and, if anything that needs to be said comes up, don't be afraid to stand up and say it.

DONAT CLEMENT,
Chairman, Belleville Citizens for Belleville Committee.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 28, 1970 . . .

The Franco-Prussian War came to an end 99 years ago today — in 1871 — with the surrender of Paris. It marked the end of the first all-out clash between a newly united Germany and France — a struggle that was renewed in 1914 and again in 1939.

1887 — London's Pall Mall became the first street in the world to be lighted by gas.

1902 — The Carnegie Institute was founded in Washington by steelmaker Andrew Carnegie.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today — in 1945 — the Americans captured Angeles in drive to Manila. Stalin announced the capture of Memel, Kalowice and Boskon; the Germans announced that Red Army forces were on the German frontier northeast of Berlin; Berlin announced fierce fighting for Schneidemuhl, Koenigsberg, Posnan and Torun.

Biafran Tragedy

Ottawa Journal

From Biafra, conflicting reports. Observers see no evidence of starvation or Federality. Correspondents see starvation, brutality and an ocean of misery.

War was ever thus. Always like must have been examples of chivalry to counter instances of inhumanity. Civil wars are specially cruel. Ask those in the United States learned that.

There may be discussion now whether there is exaggeration on both sides in Biafra. In Canada there is a plain duty which falls on all who want to ease Biafran anguish. It is to err on the side of doing more rather than less to help.

Rachel Carson Refuge Defeats Silent Spring

PORTLAND, Me. (AP) — To a Canadian duck flying south, Maine's Rachel Carson National Wildlife Refuge is an inviting way station.

Strung out along the southern coast between Kittery and Portland, it is considered one of the most appealing areas for waterfowl and birds in the United States because of its relatively unspoiled state.

It is a tribute to the late Miss Carson, renowned conservationist who had a summer home near the refuge, and did research for her books.

The U.S. interior department's Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife has acquired 1,309 of a planned 4,000 acres of valuable tidal marsh for the refuge, established in 1966 and first called the Coastal Maine National Wildlife Refuge. The name was officially changed Oct. 22.

It eventually will stretch 45 miles from Brave Boat Harbor above Kittery to the Spurwink River just south of Portland. The refuge is divided into a chain of nine units because of geographical barriers.

Miss Carson's now-classic book, Silent Spring, dramatically propelled the problems of pesticides and herbicides to the forefront in 1962.

Maine has an official government policy of development through conservation. Last November, a $50,000,000 water pollution abatement bond issue was passed by a public referendum, while a $21,500,000 issue for highway construction was defeated.

Without marshes as feeding and nesting grounds, migrating waterfowl in the Atlantic flyway eventually would disappear.

Richard E. Griffith of Boston, director of the northeast region of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, said the refuge "will do much toward preserving the quality of environment along the lower coast of Maine."

Without the refuge, the tidelands and open space would be lost in the near future."

Griffith said the refuge will serve as "an outdoor laboratory for conducting instruction in the field of natural resources, protection and management."

The idea came from Ronald A. Speers, commissioner of the Maine inland fish and game department.

"I told Washington that in Maine the immediate threat was not inland but on the coast where the marshes were going to be filled and turned into cottage sites," Speers said.

The state and federal governors met west into a partnership to preserve a string of tidal marshes.

Negro Says Integration Is Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the top-ranking blacks in the Nixon administration says the government should stop emphasizing programs to move Negroes out of the ghetto.

"After all, what's so great about white folks that you want to live next to them," said Benjamin F. Holman in an interview.

Holman, director of the justice department's community relations service, said he has been accused of heresy to the civil rights cause.

"Where integration will work, I'm all for it," Holman said, "But the fact is integration has not worked."

Therefore, Holman said, it is more important for the United States to improve the quality of life, especially education, in the inner cities.

Holman suggested the U.S. must "develop quality, all-black schools with black people controlling their own communities and their schools."

Four-month GE Strike Grips 130,000 Budgets

NEW YORK (AP) — As the General Electric Co. strike in the United States enters its fourth month, reports indicate a trickle of back-to-work sentiment, widening economic effects and a general belt tightening by 130,000 idle production workers.

"People are buying cheaper cuts of meat, thinner slices, stretching as much as they can," said the manager of a supermarket in Louisville, Ky., where GE wage losses are estimated at $26,000,000.

Pickets in Louisville get free beer soup every morning from Frank Davis, who has a restaurant near the plant. But he said the strike is costing him $200 a day in business losses.

Limited back-to-work action was reported by a small minority in Chicago, Lakeside, Vt., and Ontario, Calif.

The strikers were getting by mainly with part-time jobs, savings, credit, strike benefits, unions or welfare assistance.

A labor-backed national boycott of GE products appeared to have elicited a questionable response, at least in most areas surveyed by The Associated Press. Some union officials say it is being felt by the company, fourth-largest industrial giant in the U.S.

The strike of 12 unions began Oct. 26, spearheaded by the International Union of Electrical Workers and the United Electrical Workers. They rejected a company offer of a 28-cents-an-hour wage increase in the first year of a three-year contract, with wage re-openers in each subsequent year. Wages averaged $3.25 an hour.

Most GE plants in 135 U.S. cities remained open with non-union employees. But production was all but halted in most.

One effect has been to squeeze Schenectady, N.Y., high school pupils out of after-school jobs. The part-time labor market was described as flooded with 13,000 area strikers. Salary losses were estimated by the company at $25,000,000 in Schenectady, $10,000,000 in Syracuse, $8,000,000 in Utica, and $1,000,000 in Auburn, N.Y.

In Washington, since the strike began, the defense department has declined to discuss its effects on military materiel.

However, at GE's nuclear energy division in San Jose, Calif., 338 of 475 union employees were reported on the job, augmented by 2,500 non-union workers. The company called production normal—the unions disagreed.

An AFL-CIO spokesman estimated about 180 Ontario, Calif., GE employees have crossed picket lines.

U.S. Radio Censorship Is Denied

SAIGON (AP) — Charges that unfavorable news reports were censored by authorities at the American Forces Vietnam Network are "completely unfounded and unsupported," investigators for the U.S. command said today.

The command's inspector-general also denied that a former AFVN newscaster who made the censorship charges during a broadcast is being persecuted for his remarks.

The broadcaster, Specialist Robert E. Lawrence of Atlanta, Ga., was transferred from Saigon to Pleiku and made a chaplain's assistant.

A command spokesman said court martial charges of disobedience and insubordination pending against Lawrence have nothing to do with the censorship investigation.

A summary of the investigation reported released by the command said it classified the withholding of certain stories as "editorial selections."

The command statement said that the sensitivity of the South Vietnamese government must be taken into account when editorial decisions are made.

"Material which would offend the host country cannot be used," it said. But it added that "unfavorable stories" concerning Vietnam are not necessarily prohibited.

U.S. Agents Infiltrate Press Corps

SAIGON (AP) — Two U.S. government agents were infiltrated into the Saigon press corps but were withdrawn after their identity was exposed, U.S. officials said today.

The U.S. military assistance command for Vietnam said those responsible for issuing press credentials to the two men "have been admonished concerning the proper procedures to follow in accreditation."

The men could not be located today in Saigon. Officials who dealt with their accreditation and identified them as federal investigators gave their names as Howard Hetzcox and William T. Tucker and said they presented letters of introduction from the "American University Press."

Reporters inquiring about the case could not learn from what federal agency the men came.

Commons Approves Committee on Constitution

OTTAWA (CP) — Without a dissenting voice, the Commons Tuesday approved the establishment of a parliamentary committee to examine and make periodic reports on proposed changes in the constitution.

After a two-day debate, the House agreed that 20 of its members, along with others to be chosen by the Senate, form up the committee and that it travel across Canada as it sees fit to try to interest as many Canadians as possible in the constitutional review.

The only fireworks in Tuesday's debate came in a fighting speech by Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen. His target was a fellow Nova Scotian—Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

"What has happened to the party of Sir John A. Macdonald, of Borden, Meighen, Diefenbaker, when it is silent in this great debate and has no stand to put before the House," demanded Mr. MacEachen.

The minister said Mr. Stanfield was off the track when he said in the debate Monday that no progress is being made in the federal-provincial conferences on the constitution.

Mr. MacEachen said there has been agreement to examine such important questions as fundamental human rights, and that reduction of regional disparities should be an objective of confederation.

Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cardigan) said any new constitution must be clarified to allow the federal government to help the poorer provinces.

"The federal government must retain that right to help the poor provinces," said the former attorney-general of Prince Edward Island.

Justice Minister John Turner replied: "I am aware of instances that no program in which Ottawa has jurisdiction, is being held up by the constitutional review."

But in revision of the constitution lay the final solution to such gut issues as pollution, inflation and resource development.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said Canadians are concerned with everyday problems but that the government was putting these into the background.

He urged Ottawa "to reconsider its position and to come to the constitutional conferences with specific proposals."

"The people of Canada are not concerned whether the problems are solved by the federal, provincial or municipal governments.

"They are desirous of their problems being solved and their needs looked after and not being put off to another day or year because they are not the responsibility of one government or another."

Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin), an official observer at recent conferences for his party, said he saw first-hand Prime Minister Trudeau's purpose—a strong central government.

"Not strong in the sense commonly understood in the past but strong in the sense of a dominant and domineering central government that would control, not only the various regions of Canada, but individual Canadians to a great extent in their social and economic life."

Roch Lasalle (PC—Joliette) said Quebec needs a particular status in Confederation. It must have the power to discharge its special responsibilities to the French-Canadian citizens.

Adrien Lambert (Crediste—problems are more important than language. They could only be solved by a fairer distribution of tax revenue between the federal and provincial governments.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

QUESTION: On a trip to California, we are going to be driving from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles, via Route #1. Enroute we will be passing Zion National Park. Can you give us any information about the Park?

ANSWER: Zion National Park, spreading 229 square miles, features Zion Canyon, a spectacular multicolored gorge in southwestern Utah's dramatic desert and canyon country.

The area once known as Zion National Monument forms the Kolob Section of the park. This region of sedimentary rocks, some elevated more than 8,000 feet above sea level, contains the fingerlike, red sandstone canyons of the Kolob, narrower but almost as deep as Zion Canyon. Also here is the Hurricane Fault, a displacement of rock caused by the splitting of the earth's crust. Layers from the time of the Kaibab formation are clearly exposed by the fault. This semiwilderness region, the northwestern extension of the park, is reached via a spur road from I-15. Of special interest in this area are vantage points commanding views of the deserts and oases.

The park and its main roads are open all year, as is the south campground. Zion Visitor Centre, containing a museum, auditorium and information office, is open daily. Exhibits, provide worthwhile orientation for all visitors. The glass - enclosed lobby affords an excellent view of the Towers of the Virgin and Zion Canyon Peaks. Fishing is permitted, but frequent flooding and heavy debris discourage game fish. A state license is required.

Admission to the park which is a US fee area, is 50 cents per person or $1 per vehicle each day.

Just beyond the south entrance begins the world - famed Zion Canyon. This gorge, about a half mile deep and a half mile wide, is approximately 8 miles long to the Temple of Sinawava. This is the only portion of the canyon that may be reached by car.

Bridge Mountain, so named because of the natural bridge high up on its face, is on the east. Just within the face of this mountain, on the Pine Creek side, is the famous Zion Tunnel.

Beyond Bridge Mountain rises massive East Temple, rich in color, followed in succession by Twin Brothers and Mountain-of-the-Sun. On the opposite side of the canyon are the Altar of Sacrifice, the Beehives and the Sentinel. Further up is the Court of the Patriarchs and rising above that are the Three Patriarchs. On the same side of the Canyon Lady Mountain, Castle Dome, the Spearhead and Mount Majestic are also visible.

Great White Throne stands beyond Angels Landing against the east wall. Seen through a saddle in the low red rock wall lying in front of it, this towering dome appears to be white above and red below. In reality it is gray or white in color, with a faint pink washing down its sides. Directly opposite this huge formation is a somewhat lesser mountain, Angels Landing.

Temple of Sinawava is a huge natural amphitheatre. In the centre of the circle are the two large stone pillars known as the altar and the pulpit.

Many worthwhile points of interest may be reached by 20 miles of improved roadways. One road leads from the south entrance to the Temple of Sinawava, about 8 miles. To really see Zion Canyon, this road should be driven. Also within the park is a stretch of the Zion - Mount Carmel Highway. This road forms a connecting link between US 89 and 91. It's total length, from park headquarters to Mount Carmel is 24 miles. This highway is considered a remarkable engineering feat because of difficulties encountered in construction. Beginning on the valley floor, the road zigzags up the talus slope in Pine Creek Canyon by a series of six switchbacks. At the end of this section the road enters Zion Tunnel, 5,- 077 feet long, where it continues to ascend on a five percent grade. At three points in the tunnel, windows cut through the rock wall provide the motorist with a glimpse of the colorful canyon below.

Overnight accommodations and a trailer park are available all year in nearby Springdale on State Route 15.

Makarios And Greeks In Accord

ATHENS (Reuters) — President Makarios of Cyprus has obtained the Greek government's support for plans to find a peaceful solution of the Cyprus problem, through negotiations with the Turkish Cypriot community on the Mediterranean island.

The Cypriot president concluded talks Jan. 19 with Greek Premier George Papadopoulos aimed at smoothing differences between the two countries and shaping future policy on the Cyprus issue.

A joint communique issued here admitted that some difficulties had arisen in intercommunal talks between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

But it added that despite these difficulties, efforts for a successful outcome of the talks should continue.

Although Greece and Cyprus do not see eye to eye on the handling of these negotiations, they agree on one issue—that peace and order should prevail on the island to enable the Greek and Turkish communities there to settle their differences peacefully.

In 1964, the United Nations sent a peacekeeping force to intervene in a bloody struggle between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots. The present UN force includes 276 Canadians, members of the 2nd Battalion of the Royal Highland Regiment (Black Watch).

Informed sources in Athens said Greece is unwilling to risk another confrontation with Turkey over Cyprus like the one in November, 1967, which brought the two countries to the brink of war.

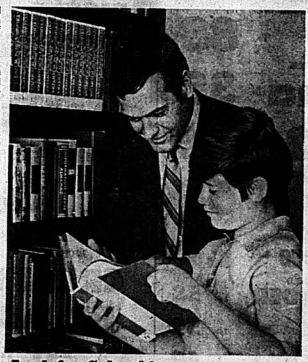
proudly presents... Columbia: The Gem of Encyclopedias



The Set of a Lifetime.

The Illustrated

COLUMBIA ENCYCLOPEDIA

The set of a lifetime...the only encyclopedia your child will ever need ...the one you'll read to him until he can read it himself... by which time he'll have acquired the winning habit of a lifetime...the habit of looking it up.

- 22 volumes
  Surely you've seen or—heard of—the wonderful 1-volume Columbia Encyclopedia. LIFE calls it the best 1-volume encyclopedia. Schools and libraries consider it a must. Well, now a team of visual designers have made a good thing even better. 22 times better, to be exact.
- Extravagantly illustrated
  You'll find the Columbia exciting to use. The entire 22-volume set is sprinkled with significant illustrations that add a whole dimension to the text. Approximately 7000 of them, about 1000 in full color.
- Information-packed
  Pick a topic! You're bound to find it in the Columbia. People. Places. Philosophies. Yesterday's history. Tomorrow's science. All authentic; all expressed in a streamlined, no-nonsense manner. Absorbing reading in every volume for both you and your children.
- Created right on a college campus
  The entire text of the Columbia Encyclopedia was created right on a college campus. And what better credentials could a reference work have? Your information will be respected in any discussion; your children will go to school well-prepared and well-informed.
- Unbelievably low-priced
  This is the kind of reference work you would expect to find prohibitively expensive. And ordinarily you would. But because of special arrangements with the publisher, you're in luck.

The total price of the set is a tiny fraction of what you expect to pay and the purchase plan makes it even more spectacular.

Look for Columbia, the Gem of Encyclopedias.

Many people pass up big savings by passing up our 'house brands'. 'House brands' are those products that we put our own labels on. And that's where the fable arises—because of their very low prices some people have the mistaken impression that somehow 'house brands' are second-class merchandise. Simply not so. Dominion 'house brands' are manufactured to the same stringent standards as nationally advertised brands. Dominion wouldn't have it any other way.

House brand prices are appreciably lower because of Dominion's tremendous volume purchasing power and fastest, most modern distribution facilities. And because our products

Policemen Acquitted

Charged with Sinning, They Are Sinned Against

BRANTFORD (CP) — Two city police officers, charged with breaking the Ontario Police Act by communicating with the press without permission, were acquitted Tuesday.

Judge R. H. Fair of Kitchener told a Brantford police commission hearing a letter written by the Brantford Police Association prevented Constables Ronald Stockdale, 36, and Lester Lolli, 30, from obtaining a fair trial.

The two officers were dismissed from the city's 100-man force last September after writing to The Expositor, criticizing the commission and demanding a report by the Ontario Police Commission on alleged corruption within the city police department be made public.

The Brantford Police Association later wrote a letter, published in The Expositor, which said the association did not agree with the constables' statements.

Judge Fair ruled the association's letter dealt with matters still before the courts and the city commission's decision to grant permission to the association to publish it amounted to contempt of court.

Police Chief George Kerr said the two police officers will return to duty Friday and that the suspensions against them have been lifted. They have been receiving full pay since they were suspended.

During the hearing, prosecutor John Hart denied the association's letter prejudiced the trial of the two constables. Judge Fair agreed but said the letter was improper and was not in line with natural justice.

Lime No Pollution Cure

TORONTO (CP) — Commissioner Ross Clark of the Metropolitan Toronto works department said Tuesday he doubts that lime treatment will be of much use in efforts to rid Ontario waters of polluting phosphates.

White's--built in 1841

Modern Social Change Closes Historic Quinte Area Church

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

BAYSIDE — One of the Quinte area's oldest churches has become a victim of country society.

White's United Church at Bayside has been sold by the congregation and is now being demolished.

The white frame structure was erected on lot 12 of Sidney township's first concession — better known as the Broken Front Concession — in 1841.

Its era of service concluded with a special closing ceremony the last Sunday in June, 1969 — 127 years after its doors were first opened to township residents.

Sidney's oldest centre of worship was one of seven such amalgamated to form a central church, Westminster United Church on Wallbridge Road replaces White's, Scott's, Alton's, Wesley, Centenary, Stone and Wallbridge churches.

Reverend John F. Bunner, who served at White's Church from January 1968 until its closing, is the minister of Westminster Church, which first opened its doors last December.

"The new central church came into being for real desire of the people to be together and to unite to share in the ministry of the church," Reverend Bunner said.

White's Church had been suggested as structurally unsafe and a dwindling congregation, numbering about 70 families at the end, was unable to carry the expenses, Rev. Bunner said.

"We were hoping to replace White's Church with a new building but that didn't materialize because support wasn't forthcoming from the area," Rev. Bunner explained.

He noted that many CFB Trenton service personnel residing in the area had affiliation with base chapels. This reduced the number of people to whom the church could depend for support.

"I think there should be a church at Bayside and there will be one someday," he added. "The constituency of people is as large with the population concentration about the Bay of Quinte at the front of Sidney Township.

"I believe that if a real interest was demonstrated by the people of the area the United Church would be willing to do something. Possibly an ecumenical kind of church with affiliations to any denomination might work well," Rev. Bunner suggested.

That was the way it was in the beginning. White's Church was more of a community place of worship. Although it was a Methodist Church, it was loosely structured with regard to membership. It served Lutherans, Baptists and Anglicans.

Sidney Township was once incorporated by the Methodist Church which tended to establish congregations near population concentrations.

By 1841 Bayside was a thriving community with a settlement once known as Rhinebeck Village. A tavern, a blacksmith shop, a large store and a group of houses were all located on this tract of land alone.

A centennial souvenir issue of the history of White's Church and surrounding area (written by United Church Minister W. E. Mercer in 1941 and published that year) tells an interesting story.

The Broken Front Concession's first settler was Capt. John Meyers who chose an eight - hundred - acre tract of land where the Canadian Forces base is situated today.

Sent here from New York by United States military authorities to make treaties with the Indians, Capt. Meyers erected a grist mill upon a small stream and remained here when the American Revolution broke out.

Capt. Meyers left his homestead to his eldest son George because he found that the dam was not powerful enough for his mill.

He travelled eastward and erected a dam and mill on what now is the Moira River. This was the beginning of the city of Belleville.

White's Church derived its name from Reuben White who on Feb. 8, 1841, sold "a conveyance of land for the site of a church, meeting house or chapel or a burying ground."

The trustees for the new owners, the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada, were Phillip Carman, John Gilbert, John Kelley, Cabel Gilbert, John Bradshaw, Henry Goldsmith and James Chishom.

Price of the land was "two hundred pounds in lawful currency of this province". (Upper Canada). It was a hefty sum. At the time, a horse was valued at nearly five dollars.

Listed as one of the founders, Reuben White was also a millowner who saved the lumber for the church that came from one of the oldest American families and was a follower of William Lyon Mackenzie during the Rebellion of 1837.

A rebel, he was captured and condemned to be shot, but later pardoned. He then served for 14 years as a member from Frontenac County in the parliament of Upper and Lower Canada.

The other founders named as trustees were "yeomen, humble honest farmers, with the exception of Phillip Carmen, who was a prosperous merchant. These men occupied the pulpit in the absence of a minister."

At a general conference in 1883, the Methodist Church of Canada, the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Primitive Methodist Church and the Bible Christian Church united into the Methodist Church.

Prior to this union, White's Church, Centenary, Johnstown and Grace of Trenton formed a charge of the Methodist Episcopal Church with parsonage near White's.

Following the general conference of 1883, Bayside Pastoral Charge or Circuit, organized, consisting of White's, Wesley, and Centenary, under the Methodist Church, Bay of Quinte Conference. However, the Record of Case Church is dated 1898.

On June 10, 1925, after 23 years of negotiation, the entire Methodist Church, about to unite with the Presbyterian Church, and nearly all of the congregational churches formed the United Church of Canada.

The history of White's Church reflects social evolution.

In the horse and buggy days it was considered a hardship for a portion of a township.

But in those days of the automobile Westminster United Church — which consolidates the United Church in Sidney — seems to be composed mainly larger in line with the dynamic difference between both modes of travel.

Disappearance of Familiar Landmark Is Underway

Church Structure Endured 130 Years

BAYSIDE — White's Church was built in 1841, 15 years before the Grand Trunk Railway reached the Quinte District and 28 years before Confederation.

Nevertheless, the structure remained relatively unchanged through the years. Although some worn portions were replaced, it was never entirely reconstructed or added to in any significant way.

The most basic change was removal of a 150 foot steeple and spire, constructed by the original architect, a Frenchman whose name is unknown.

A much shorter square tower replaced the once-commanding 150-foot structure.

Yet Alphonse Gingras, who is currently demolishing the 40-by-60-foot white frame structure, says: "It's in remarkably good condition; the majority of the timbers and wood are still solid."

"Only pieces of the roof and ceiling and some portions of the building near the ground were suffering from rot," he said.

Basis for this soundness is the church's pine construction — and timbers, 10 inches square and up to 40 feet long.

Mr. Gingras, who bought the one - acre property on which the church is situated for future development, said he would use the hand-hewn timbers for a dock, and salvage as much as possible of the remaining pine lumber.

He noted that the floor of the balcony, which extended across the back of the church and along both sides, was made of hand - planed tongue-and-groove pine boards. The tongue-and-groove boards on the main floor were milled, but this is believed to be the second floor laid in the church's 128 year history.

An unusual aspect of the church's construction was the use of hand - made wooden pins to nail roof sheeting to the rafters. Although wooden pins were used at that time to join beams, iron nails were available and commonly used for roof sheeting.

Historical value of portions of the old building has not been lost. Church officials set aside some pews and lumber to repair the 178-year-old Hay-Bay Church, first Methodist Church in Upper Canada.

Souvenirs always come to light during the razing of an old building, and White's Church was no exception.

An imitation sepia of the church dated 1895, and strawberry social tickets dated 1927 were found. Price of admission to the 1927 event was 35 cents.

Going Over Reports

G. R. Cameron, outgoing president of Belleville Canadian Red Cross Society, talks over 1969 report with W. B. Weaver, representative of the Red Cross outpost hospital network, who spoke at last night's annual meeting.

Income Major 1970 Worry Of Red Cross Organization

By BARRY GRILLS
(Staff Reporter)

Members of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society learned last night at their annual meeting in St. Thomas' Parish Hall that expenses in 1969 had increased by approximately 15 per cent.

Outgoing president G. R. Cameron, stated that the problem could further be compounded by a revision of agreements between the United Community Services and its agencies one of which is the Red Cross.

"Expenses in 1969 increased by about 15 per cent over those of the previous year, but we hope that expenses for 1970 will run about the same level," Mr. Cameron said.

"As noted before, the problem of income is a major and continuing worry. Approximately 90 per cent of the Red Cross branches in the province are financed by United Community Campaigns. It would be unfortunate if our branch, and the other agencies in Belleville had to revert to separate appeals."

Mr. Cameron outlined the many changes and occurrences of the past decade with the Red Cross and its Belleville branch.

"We are entering the seventies, a decade which will be a period of change," he said.

"The past 10 years have seen changes in our programs, the financing of portions of our programs by the government, the phasing of other programs and we must be prepared to adapt our activities to those areas in which a demand exists for the services we can supply either individually or in conjunction with other agencies."

In a financial statement offered by Newton Thompson, treasurer of the Belleville branch, members learned that cash on hand after 1969 earnings and expenditures amounted to $2,176.

Total receipts for the year amounted to $44,172 whereas expenditures amounted to $42,332.

Five long - service blood donor awards were presented to persons who had given blood more than 25 times.

Receiving the awards were Lorne G. Hagerman, George Cooper, Harry Ocomore, George Parker and John R. Sproule.

Officers were also elected for 1970 with Mrs. J. E. Marsh replacing G. R. Cameron as president. Newton Thompson was re-elected to the position of treasurer. Mrs. M. L. Egger will serve as secretary for another year.

DDT Plan Issued Soon

D. A. Raddon, Ontario health department pesticides control officer for Belleville and surrounding area, announced today that adequate instruction for disposal of pesticides containing DDT, aldrin, dieldrin and heptachlor will be issued possibly by the end of January.

If present plans materialize, a series of pick - up points — some for domestic and some for commercial surpluses — will be set up to which people may bring such pesticides for disposal. These stocks, when collected, will be delivered to registered sites where they will be buried.

The program is a joint effort by the department's Pesticide Control Service in co - operation with local health units.

A Starting Smile

John Meyers has broad smile as he marks opening of another campaign in Belleville yesterday. He is national campaign director of March of Dimes, now called Ability Fund.

Outpost Hospitals' Design Is to Go Out of Business

Red Cross Outpost Hospital policy is designed to put itself out of business rather than expand, W. E. Weaver, representative of the hospitals, told the Belleville Red Cross last night.

He outlined the many changes in Ontario outpost hospitals in the years since creation of the first establishment in 1922 at Wilburforce, 30 miles west of Bancroft.

"In 1946 we were operating our maximum number of hospitals and nursing centres — a total of 30. For the last 24 years we are now down to the smallest number of hospitals — down to 12."

Mr. Weaver said policy "is to turn over hospitals to the communities debt - free if and when a community is willing and capable, of operating them.

He said that during 48 years the organization had operated in 72 different Ontario communities.

Mr. Weaver said some of the hospitals had been closed down because of changing economic conditions in their respective areas.

Improved roads have made other areas with bigger hospitals much nearer in time.

Mr. Weaver discussed the effects of inflation upon the building of such outpost hospitals.

"A few days ago, an architect from the Ontario Hospital Services Commission told me an astounding fact. He said that the cost of hospital construction is rising at an annual compounded rate of 10 per cent per year."

"The real significance of this fact is the cost of a hospital will double in only seven years."

"It is only fair to mention," he added, "that this cost increase has two factors affecting it — both the increase in the cost of construction and the increase in the hospital standards now required."

"In the last year we have spent $1,000,000 on two new hospitals having a total bed capacity of 46. In the year 1949 we built five hospitals at a cost of $1,100,000 and they had a bed capacity of 103."

Get People to Help Self, Fund Goal

"We're trying to bring out the ability in people," explained John Meyers, national campaign director of the March of Dimes' Ability Fund.

Mr. Meyers was speaking to nursing students of the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing at education hall yesterday.

"We do live in a competitive society. People can do better than they think they can."

Mr. Meyers, himself once a Belleviian, was crippled in a car accident some years ago. Since that time, he has rehabilitated himself and led in the rehabilitation of many others.

He outlined some of the past, present and future facts of rehabilitation and research into the cases of paraplegics and of the upcoming blitz for funds in the Belleville area Monday.

He explained that the March of Dimes was working towards obtaining a new name for its fund and its work — the Ability Fund.

Mr. Meyers rehashed the history of the March of Dimes since its creation in the 1920s by entertainer, Eddie Cantor, under the byword, "brother, can you spare a dime?"

And now, he said, the fund has expanded to take care of the physically - disabled over 19 years of age.

Four years ago the provincial government took over operation of rehabilitation centres. To the joy of fund representatives they learned that "for the first time they would be able to finish the job" of rehabilitation.

Mr. Meyers said that just recently the number of earnings by rehabilitated persons in competitive business amounted to a total of $3,000,000.

"We gave them a second start," he said, of persons thus rehabilitated.

"Sometimes we do nothing more than bring people together at first and after that you'd better believe life is beautiful."

He explained that the fund operates 12 retraining centres and that "we train them according to their talents."

"We get them back to where they can help themselves," he said.

Next Monday, Feb. 1, there will be a one - hour blitz for funds in the Belleville area for the March of Dimes.

As last year, some of the student nurses of the Edith Cavell school will possibly help with the canvass.

Adkins, Washington Picked

First Canadian Drafted

NEW YORK (CP-AP) — A Barrie, Ont. native and four Canadian Football League stars were among 182 players selected Tuesday in the first seven rounds of the annual National League draft of U.S. college graduates.

Jim Corrigall, 22, of Barrie, earned the distinction of the first Canadian ever picked in the U.S. college draft. The six-foot, three-inch, 244-pound linebacker, who is a senior at Ohio's Kent State University, was picked in the second round by St. Louis Cardinals.

The four 1969 CFL players drafted included two from British Columbia Lions and two from Ottawa Rough Riders, the Grey Cup champions.

Offensive end Margene Adkins, who played on his option with the Eastern Football Conference Rough Riders in 1969, was a second-round choice of Dallas Cowboys.

Ottawa running back Vic Washington was a fourth round choice of San Francisco 'Gers. In the same round Pittsburgh Steelers, using a choice obtained from New York Giants, drafted B.C. Lions fullback Jim Evenson.

Washington and Evenson are both still under contract to their CFL clubs along with B.C. flanker and defensive back Jake Scott, a seventh round selection of Miami Dolphins.

Despite the high selection, head coach Leo Cahill is still interested in Corrigall for Toronto Argonauts, who held his CFL rights.

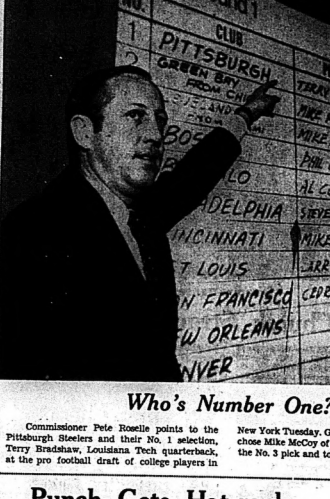
"Sure we're hopeful of signing him," Cahill said Tuesday.

"We got the second choice of the New York Giants last year and there's no reason why we shouldn't get the second choice of St. Louis this year—especially when he's a Canadian." Argos last year landed defensive end Vernon Vanoy, the Giants' second choice.

Cahill said Corrigall "gave some indications that he wanted to play in Canada".

"I think it's a tremendous thing for a Canadian kid to be picked 33rd out of some 700 to 1,000 players in the U.S.," Cahill said.

The player's mother, Mrs. Pat Corrigall, contacted in Barrie Tuesday, wanted to know "Where's St. Louis?" and "What is the name of the club there?"



She said Minnesota Vikings had been in steady contact with her son during the weekend.

Adkins came to Ottawa as a college drop-out from Wichita State. He was ineligible for the U.S. college draft until his class graduated.

Before Tuesday's draft, an American coach described Adkins as "a lot better than Bob Hayes" and said "I wouldn't trade him for five Homer Joneses". Adkins becomes a team-mate of Hayes at Dallas.

Tuesday's first choice, by Pittsburgh, was Terry Bradshaw, a quarterback that caught the interest of several professional teams, including B.C. Lions.

Running back Steve Owens of Oklahoma, the 1969 Heisman Trophy winner, was passed over until the 19th selection of the first round by Detroit Lions.

Who's Number One?

Commissioner Pete Rozelle points to the Pittsburgh Steelers and their No. 1 selection, Terry Bradshaw, Louisiana Tech quarterback, at the pro football draft of college players in New York Tuesday. Green Bay, in No. 2 position, chose Mike McCoy of Notre Dame. Cleveland got the No. 3 pick and took Mike Phipps of Purdue. (AP Wirephoto)

Punch Gets Hat-rack, Needs Hockey Players

By The Canadian Press

The City of Buffalo guaranteed Punch Imlach a place to hang his many hats Tuesday, now all he needs is hockey players.

The city's common council approved terms of a 20-year lease for Memorial Auditorium, giving the new National Hockey League entry a place to play.

That leaves Imlach, the new manager-coach, two immediate problems—players and a name for the club. A public contest now is being held to determine the latter and the ex-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs has promised to tackle the former.

Buffalo council Tuesday also approved hiring an architect to prepare plans, take bids and supervise construction of about 6,000 additional seats to bring Memorial Auditorium above the NHL's 15,000-seat minimum standards.

But Imlach does not have to worry about his problems until next season. Ten NHL teams, meanwhile, have more immediate problems tonight.

Montreal Canadiens have a chance to move up two points on Boston Bruins when they play Minnesota North Stars in the Forum. Montreal and Boston both have 58 points, four behind first-place New York Rangers, but the Bruins are idle tonight.

In other games, Toronto Maple Leafs continue their road trip, visiting the Penguins in Pittsburgh, the Rangers are on the coast against Los Angeles Kings, Philadelphia Flyers meet the Black Hawks in Chicago and St. Louis Blues are in Oakland against the Seals.

The Maple Leafs, fighting to escape the Eastern Division basement, have two wins in three road games, but still need six points to catch fifth-place Chicago and eight to draw even with Detroit Red Wings.

And one of their big guns—centre Norm Ullman—is not happy with his play.

The 34-year-old Provost, Alta., native has not scored in eight games and his production is well behind last season's pace. Ullman has a career record of 372 goals and 311 assists and will be looking for the range tonight in Pittsburgh.

Oaks Toppled Again by A's

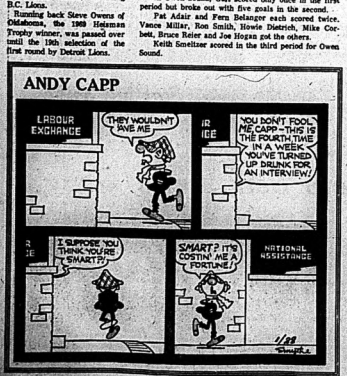
By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For Woodstock A's, the only bright spot in a dismal hockey season has been Oakville Oaks.

The A's have picked up only four wins in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series, but three of them have been against Oakville.

The latest came Tuesday night the hard way — 3-2 in sudden-death overtime.

In the only other game Tuesday, Galt Hornets dumped Owen Sound Crescents 10-1.



At Woodstock, Wayne Goetz got the overtime goal for the A's. Mac Westgate and Bob Ruthig got the other Woodstock goals.

Otis O'Brien and Ron Robinson replied for the Oaks.

In Owen Sound, Galt scored only once in the first period but broke out with five goals in the second.

Pat Adair and Fern Belanger each scored twice. Vance Millar, Ron Smith, Howie Dietrich, Mike Corbett, Bruce Reier and Joe Hogan got the others.

Keith Smeltzer scored in the third period for Owen Sound.

Hull Beats Howe in Award Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Hull, Chicago Black Hawks record-shattering goal scorer, today was named hockey's Player-of-the-Decade by an Associated Press Poll of sports writers and broadcasters.

Hull, who revived Chicago's National Hockey League fortunes in the 1960's by reaching the 50-goal mark four times, outdistanced Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings in a two-man race for the award.

The balding Golden Jet, at 31 a 12-year NHL veteran, received 69½ votes, to 14½ for the 41-year-old Howe, a superstar for more than two decades.

Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins' brilliant young defenceman, finished a distant third with 10 votes. Centre Stan Mikita, Hull's Chicago teammate since 1958, was fourth with seven votes.

Goalie Jacques Plante, a 13-year standout with Montreal Canadiens, New York Rangers and St. Louis Blues, centres Jean Beliveau of Montreal and Phil Esposito of Boston each received two votes.

Goalie Lorne (Gump) Worsley and right winger Bernie Geoffrion, both of Montreal and New York, earned one vote each.

Hull, who grew up in the hamlet of Point Anne, Ont. near Belleville, and still makes his home nearby on a 500-acre cattle ranch, joined the Black Hawks in 1957 without prior professional exposure.

He scored 13 goals in his first NHL season and 18 in his second. In 10 campaigns since then, he has averaged 44 goals with a high of 58, for an all-time record, last year.

His coach, Billy Reay, calls Hull "the greatest player I've ever seen. In my time, I played against Maurice Richard and Gordie Howe, and I say Hull is better than either of them. He can skate faster and better than either one and he shoots harder.

"He's got everything strength, speed, color and stamina. He can outskate four guys."

"His shot is like a piece of lead," testifies Plante, a seven-time winner of the Vezina Trophy as the leading goaltender. "You have to see it coming toward you to believe it. He has the hardest shot I ever saw."

Bunny No Dutch Treat in Holland

By GEORGE H. CARVER

J. F. "Bunny" Ahearne, the controversial continental czar-up, won't find any Dutch treats awaiting him should he visit Holland.

Hockeywise, the smallish bundle from Belden is as popular in the land of dikes and cheese as a fur salesman at a model colony.

Authority for that statement are Bobby Boyle and Grant Hagerman, graduates cum laude of this city's minor and junior "B" hockey squads.

Both Bobby and Grant are top stars in the Den Bosch, Holland hockey town and have helped their squad to a top - spot in the Holland Competition (Dutch National League) and a second - place tie in an International League composed of squads from Holland, Germany, France and Italy.

Writes Bobby: "The people here are very disgusted with the International Ice Hockey Federation's decision over Canada's stand and are 100 per cent behind the Canadian decision to withdraw."

Bobby has been playing in Holland for the past four seasons. Grant has been there three years.

Both are extremely popular with the hockey guys and dolls in the land of Hansel and Gretel. Their ability to coach minor hockey in their adopted city has also provided them plenty of adult adulation.

In fact Bobby has had offers to be set up in business in the Dutch city by elderly admirers when the playing days are over.

Canadians were extremely popular in Holland during the dark days of World War Two and their popularity has not decreased with the passing years.

Bumping Canadians and bouncing Czechs figure largely in the personnel of the Dutch and International league squads, writes Robert.

"The Dutch people have taken all of us to their hearts and do not regard us as "foreigners" — more so as sons of their own.

"Canadians and Czechs are the backbones of the teams bolstered by Dutch players who learn very quickly and should be among the tops in Europe in a few years. Skating is natural to the minors and they learn the tricks of hockey very quickly," says Boyle.

Boyle and Hagerman with three Montreal players and three Czechs form the framework of the Den Bosch club along with eight Dutch lads.

Tilting, Holland has six Canadians, two Canadians; Den Hagg, six Canadians; Grenoble, France, five Canadians; Geleen, Holland, six Canadians; Chamoix, three Canadians. Then there are the Canadian Air Force teams from Baden-Baden, Germany and Lahr, Germany.

Aside from the substantial financial return, the boys are getting an educational bonus via the travel routes. They have visited practically all the countries in continental Europe on their hockey junkets.

Boyle writes the younger fry of Holland are taking to hockey like a duckling to water both from playing and spectator viewpoints.

"Soccer is the national game here," he says, "but the good old Canadian sports is making big inroads in its popularity."

"The Dutch boys are quick to learn and at the present rate of progress it would not surprise me to see them a world threat in ten years or so."

The season ends for the boys in March and after a brief holiday (after all, Paris in Springtime?) they will return home.

Last year Bobby was delegated and retained as a scout for his league and was responsible for not a few Canadian players making the safari to Holland and Europe.

After all, the pay is good, the people extremely friendly, food is excellent and what price experience and travel.

'Big Five' Of Quinte League On All-Stars

The Big Five of the Quinte Hockey League scoring parade will see action in Thursday night's contest against the Ellis Juniors.

Elmer Cain of Belvedere Hotel currently leads the league scorers with 15 points in 13 games. Stinson players Rick Denard, Bruce Symons and Jim McGuire hold down second, fourth and fifth places. Terry Casselman of Central Taxi is in third.

Cain leads the all-star goal getters with seven for an average of .about one every two games. Juniors' leading scorer, Terry Meagher, is averaging just under one a game but the Eastern Ontario Junior B League is a free-scoring loop. Evidence of this is the Ellis goals against average of 6.04 against 1.46 for Belvedere netminders.

All-star coach Bill Vesterfelt is noncommital about the game's outcome. "We'll hold our own," says Vesterfelt. "They're a young team and they're playing fine hockey right now, but we feel that if we can get the puck out of our end consistently, we stand a good chance of beating them."

Goalies for the Quinte All-stars will be Dave Hicks of Belvedere, Ken Genereaux of Central Taxi and Stinson's John French.

Time of the game is 8.15, at the Belleville Arena.

Belleville's Food City Novices were on target against the Kingston Y team, pouring in 11 goals against a single marker for the opposition.

Randy Hutchinson had three goals to lead the Novice scorers. Bobby Crawford picked up two goals and two assists and Andy Lupenetta, a pair of goals. Singles by Dave Shaw, Peter Hall, Ron Doornbas and Gary Goegan completed the scoring for Belleville.

Steve Arnal scored for Kingston, who drew two penalties against five for the Food City team.

First Skating Title Blends Elation, Disappointment

EDMONTON (CP) — The first final event of the 1970 Canadian figure skating championships was a blend of sweet victory for a Toronto girl Tuesday night and bitter disappointment from a British Columbia youngster who watched the competition from a wheelchair.

Daria Pyschen and Roger Uhrman performed matched technical merit with artistic impression in a graceful display that won them the novice pairs championship with an aggregate of 37.5 points.

For 15-year-old Glen Campbell of Kelowna, B.C., however, the competition ended Tuesday morning when he fell heavily during practice. He was expected to be here Monday today for more x-rays and possible surgery.

"Glen was doing a double-axel lift with his partner over his head," said B.C. team manager Jim Walters of Vancouver. "He felt his leg giving and he put his weight back on the ice and collapsed."

Doctors discovered his knee-cap had slipped out of place when he lifted partner Jacqueline George and that he also suffered a chipped bone beneath the kneecap. They were able to pop the kneecap back into place but Campbell will spend at least another three months in a hip-to-ankle cast.

Heather Smagula and Gerald Smith of Edmonton were also knocked out of competition Tuesday when Miss Smagula dislocated her left knee and aggravated a tendon injury.

Of the seven pairs who skated, five were from Ontario.

Another Ontario couple—the sister-brother team of Nancy and Rick Grubl of Welland—were a close second with 36.7 points.

Western Canada wasn't out of the picture altogether, however. Susie Zotola and Frank Nowell of Calgary were third with 33 points and Leah Currie and Gaylord Harder of Saskatoon fourth with 31.7 points.

Susan Pattinson and Mark Linton of Kitchener, Ont., placed fifth with 30.6, Linday Watts and Donald Fraser of Toronto sixth with 29.7, and Glasie Grisco and John Rail of Toronto seventh with 28.6.

Earlier Tuesday, in school figures, Alberta team took the three top positions in junior competition. Jon Zeman of Calgary was first with 484 points, slightly less than the 490.3 scored by Bill Marchyshyn of Edmonton. Zeman won because he had more first-place rankings in the various figures. Ura Steinbrecher of Edmonton was third with 398.7.

Peter Doherty of Lachine, Que., took the lead in the novice women's event with 195.9 points at the end of compulsory figures. He was good for a five-point edge over Daria Pearson of Edmonton, and for a 8.4 edge over third-place Rae Kralinsky, also of Edmonton.

The championships are to end Sunday.

Dionne's Miss Costs More Than Point Number 101

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Marcel Dionne just missed Tuesday night as he went after his 101st point of the season.

It was a big miss—the difference between losing and tying at St. Catharines Black Hawks had their unbeaten string snapped at 14 games in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The Hawks, gunning for a first-place tie with Peterborough Petes, lost 6-5 to Montreal Junior Canadiens.

It might have been different but Dionne, who had already scored two goals and two assists, just missed the lower right-hand corner on a breakaway with 10 seconds to go.

In other games Tuesday, Toronto Marlboros scored three goals in each period in a 9-3 rout of London Knights and Oshawa Generals dropped Kitchener Rangers 6-4.

In St. Catharines, where 4,500 fans turned out, Gilbert Perreault and Richard Martin each scored twice as the Canadiens moved into a second-place tie with the Black Hawks, two points behind Peterborough.

Normand Gratton and Robert Goindon got the other goals for Montreal, winners over St. Catharines in all four of their games this year.

Al McDonough also had two goals for the Hawks and Pierre Guite one.

In Lindsay, Dale Tallon and Graham Wise each scored three times and Steve Vickers twice for Toronto. John French got the other goal while Gavin Kirk picked up six assists.

Dennis Glanzini got two goals and Pat Boutette one for London. Knights' defenceman Steve Durham picked up 28 minutes in penalties before being ejected.

Sports On All Fronts

HAMILTON, Scotland (AP) — Scotland has taken an almost insurmountable 33-point lead over Canada in the Strathcona Cup curling matches. With only one match left to play Scotland now leads by 532 points to 499 in the year-old tabulation. The final match is Friday. In Hamilton Tuesday Canada fell 35-46. On Monday Scotland won 35-30 in Glasgow and on Jan. 23 the Canadians fell 31-39 in Lochrutton. Dr. Maurice Campbell of Cap-de-la-Madeline, Que., was beaten Tuesday by A. F. Torrance 8-7; Bill Meyer of Oak best T. Dickson 18-6; Frank Hastings of Nipawin, Sask., was beaten 12-9; Bob Arseneau of Saint John, N.B., was beaten 10-4 by T. McGregor.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A knee injury has forced leading woman jockey Barbara Jo Rubin to retire after her first year on the track. The first woman rider to win a race in the United States announced regretfully Tuesday: "I guess I will go back to studying veterinary medicine but what I really want is to ride again." Barbara Jo, who paved the way for other female jockeys, was highly successful during her brief riding career. She rode 89 times, winning 22, with 19 seconds and 10 thirds.

Tennis Backlash

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Australian Lawn Tennis Association President Wayne Reid said today he believes "there is a good chance that South Africa will be excluded" from this year's Davis Cup tennis tournament.

Reid was answering a question of the Davis Cup nations' position on racial discrimination.

by Negro American tennis player Arthur Ashe.

Sports Minister Frank Waring announced the decision after a cabinet meeting.

He referred to Ashe's general antagonism toward South Africa, reflected in statements made by him from time to time.

Waring's statement said Ashe's application for a visa was, in his own words, an attempt "to put a crack in the racist wall down there" and not just for the purpose of playing tennis.

Ashe applied for the visa in December to play in the all-white South African tennis championships during Easter.

U.S. State Secretary William P. Rogers supported the application and the white-only South African Tennis Association accepted his entry in the tournament.

Ashe currently is No. 3 ranked U.S. amateur player behind Stan Smith and Clirt Richey. He was No. 1 last year.

Pilots Could Be Non-profit

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A unique plan for community ownership of Seattle Pilots as a non-profit corporation was presented to American League owners Tuesday by city and Washington state officials, making a last-ditch attempt to keep the baseball club in Seattle.

Under the plan, all profits from the Pilots operations would be distributed to local and state cultural, educational and community service institutions.

After the Seattle presentation, league owners heard from Lamar Hunt and Tommy Mercer, who want to buy the club and move it to Dallas-Fort Worth, and a Milwaukee group headed by Alan Selig.

The Pilots, in their first year of operation in 1969, lost money and the original ownership, headed by Cleveland businessman Walter R. Daley, wanted to sell the franchise.

A transaction that gave the club to a Seattle group, headed by theatre-owner Fred Danz, was approved by the league in October.

However, it was then learned that a $3,500,000 bank loan became due upon sale of the club.

The Danze group could not raise that sum, so the sale was voided.

Department Stores Hold 'Real Power' Over Daily Newspapers

OTTAWA (CP) — Department stores hold real power of life or death over a daily newspaper, the special Senate committee on mass media was told Tuesday.

Without local department-store advertising, a new daily would unlikely be able to carry on for long and an established newspaper would be in trouble, executives of the Vancouver Province said.

The public wants the ads and people are disinclined to buy a newspaper without them. Thus, circulation and revenue both suffer.

Fred Auger, publisher of The Province, said the main reason for failure of the Vancouver Times in 1965 after 13 months of life was because it was unable to get department store advertising regularly.

Senator Douglas Everett (L—Manitoba) suggested that since readers are so insistent, it would pay a newspaper to give away advertising to department stores at a loss.

Mr. Auger said he had heard that suggested, but not in Canada.

Senator Everett asked Mr. Auger if his newspaper had ever sold advertising to department stores at a loss.

That was an unfair question, Mr. Auger said.

Senator Keith Davey, (L—Ontario) committee chairman, asked whether it would kill the daily newspapers if department stores across the country refused their advertising in television from newspapers.

Mr. Auger said newspapers would be forced to make adjustments. He said classified advertising also is important—readers like a good classified section—but department store advertising is first in importance.

He told Senator Everett department store advertising in The Province ranges between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 lines a year.

Senator Everett, a Winnipeg car dealer, asked what rates The Province charges department stores. About the same as the senator pays, Mr. Auger replied.

The senator said he pays 25 cents a line and he thought The Province charged about 21 cents a line for large quantities of advertising. Mr. Auger agreed department stores would be charged about 21 cents.

Asked if the rate would be no lower than 21 cents, Mr. Auger said he did not think so.

He added that the rate charged department stores is a matter for negotiation, based partly on the frequency of advertising.

Mr. Auger told Senator Everett the department-store rate charged by The Province was in the committee's confidential research and "let's keep it that way."

Senator Everett said he was asking the question in a public hearing. The information in the confidential background was not in a form that would answer his question. Mr. Auger agreed to supply the required information confidentially later.

Montreal Star:

Media Teaches Public to Be Critical

OTTAWA (CP) — Public criticism of news presentation has now been with us for so many years that the public to be critical, the special Senate committee on mass media was told.

"Out of our efforts and achievements, we have created our most trenchant critics," the Montreal Star said in a prepared submission to the committee.

The Star said it is ironic that there is more criticism of the news than in the past because the news has never been presented better or more fairly.

"We have a much better educated and informed public than ever before, for which the media can be thankful."

However, The Star said, there is "a depressing proportion of error" in news operations and correction will demand high moral and unrelenting effort.

Even if anyone were sure what the truth was, it would be hard to tell it and it would become more difficult as society becomes even more complicated.

"The results are never likely to be satisfactory, either to those who produce them or to those who receive them. . . .

"Journalism is a profession which needs challenge, which needs a whip cracked across its back continually.

"Otherwise, it tends to grow sluggish, not so much out of laziness but out of sheer physical weariness. It needs constant renewal from within and without. . . ."

All journalism—television, radio or print—was ephemeral, incomplete and inaccurate, but it was the best available record. Of the three newspapers have the least number of technical limitations on permanence, completeness and accuracy, The Star said.

In the face of an explosion of knowledge, there was an increasing need to explain the complexities and confusions of society, educating the journalists required to explain so they can educate the public.

Thus, there is a shift in emphasis from so-called hard news to news qualified by interpretation, The Star said.

The newspaper warned the committee against any precocupation with the technology of communication, when the important issue is not how but what information is communicated.

Wilson First Foreigner Admitted to U.S. Security Council

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson today was expected to become the first foreigner to attend a meeting of the National Security Council.

The British leader, who Tuesday began two days of talks with President Nixon and administration officials, received an invitation to attend the top U.S. government conclave on foreign policy and security affairs from Nixon, informed sources said. Wilson also is scheduled to meet privately with Nixon today.

The Council members include the president, the vice-president, the secretaries of state and defense, and the director of the office of emergency preparedness.

Nixon heaped praise on Britain and Wilson at a White House dinner Tuesday night at which both leaders emphasized close and friendly relations between their two countries.

Nixon said Wilson represented a nation "to which we owe so much and with whom we are proud to work together" for common principles that transcend any differences that might arise.

Wilson, expressing satisfaction with his talks in Washington, said relations between the U.S. and Britain have never been closer.

Nixon told the dinner that British principles and British institutions which have taken root around the world "are a heritage far more important than the military might or economic might that might exist in those parts of the world."

Noting this was Wilson's 21st visit to the U.S., Nixon said "he is always welcome and particularly tonight because of our personal friendship as well as our political responsibilities."

He said he was delighted there were no significant monetary problems for them to discuss this time.

Nixon added amid laughter: "Incidentally, if you've found the solution to yours (your monetary problems), tell us how to solve ours."

In a personal tribute to Wilson, the president recalled watching him skillfully handle question time in the House of Commons last year.

Nixon also attended a British cabinet session in 1969.

U.S. Is Sharing Fewer Secrets with Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States is sharing fewer defence secrets with Canada than a few years ago, one of Canada's top defence scientists said Tuesday.

Dr. G. R. Lindsey, head of the defence research board's analysis establishment, said he could not provide proof of the decline.

It is "more of a feeling" on his part, than a proven point, he told the maritime forces subcommittee of the Commons defence committee.

The Americans had not said that Canada would get less information this year than last because it had decided to scrap the carrier Bonaventure. The phenomenon was more subtle than this.

"But I'm afraid the cumulative effect is rather serious."

Dr. Lindsey cited the example of new military equipment and the testing of experimental vehicles. Ten years ago, the Americans would have thought there was a "real chance" of Canadian participation in developments that figured to help them as well as Canada.

Now they do not think the probability of such Canadian participation is so high, he said.

So they are not as keen to share their findings with Canada.

The change in attitude is likely to have an adverse effect on Canadian commercial and industrial development, Dr. Lindsey held, since civilian technology "follows in the footsteps" of military research.

In an interview following the subcommittee meeting, Dr. Lindsey said the flow of information from U.S. laboratories to Canada has in some cases fallen to one-quarter of previous levels.

It is notable in relation to nuclear weapons, radar and sonar detection devices, Dr. Lindsey said.

He was seriously concerned about the situation.

Public Service Alliance Squabbling Over Its Constitution

TORONTO (CP) — In-fighting among delegates at the national convention of the Public Service Alliance of Canada becomes public today as they attempt to settle differences on the organization's constitutional structure.

The PSAC, with 124,000 members, is among the largest unions in Canada and its internal struggles bear a marked resemblance to the turmoils of federalism in the country itself.

Placed before the 220 voting delegates today will be resolution which would greatly strengthen the union's central executive at the expense of the 14 component organizations.

Strong opposition, led by the Union of National Defence Employees, is expected to meet proposals to centralize information and research translation facilities and to increase central disciplinary power over the components.

"That's where the crunch is going to be," a spokesman for one of the member organizations said Tuesday. "If those resolutions pass, people like me will be out of a job."

He added that he felt the bid for central authority would be turned back by a majority of delegates. Most of them are officers of the member organizations.

The internal dispute could affect the bargaining stance taken by the union towards the government. While the central executive has indicated it is prepared to bankroll strike action by various bargaining groups within the union, it remains somewhat less militant in its pronouncements than certain component groups.

The rule of the strike weapon in dealings with the government has been another main issue at the convention which ends Friday.

Most federal public servants have opted for a process of voluntary arbitration. Increasingly, however, concern has been directed at limited bargaining rights granted through legislation to employees who have chosen arbitration.

The government has retained control over pensions and reclassification of employees. PSAC president Claude Edwards has already served warning that public servants may have to exercise the strike option permitted by legislation.

'Poison Fruit' Doctrine Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee, writing a report on wiretapping, Tuesday rejected the so-called "poisoned fruit" doctrine.

The committee agreed in an open session Tuesday that a wiretap transcript illegally obtained by police should be inadmissible as evidence.

However, it also agreed that a murder weapon, for instance, found as a result of the overheard conversation, should be admitted.

In the United States, under the "poisoned fruit" rule, the murder weapon would be regarded as tainted evidence and would be inadmissible.

The committee decided in closed sessions last week that the police should have to go to a Superior Court judge for a warrant to permit them to do wiretapping or electronic eavesdropping.

Waste Disposal Rules Tightened

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario government announced new proposals Tuesday to place tighter controls on disposal of industrial waste, including fines for firms depositing wastes on other than government - approved sites.

Wesley Williamson, senior engineer with the waste management branch of the department of energy and resources management, told a conference of industry representatives that disposal sites and disposal operations will be licensed.

Proposed legislation, he said, "aims at providing sufficient direction and control for disposal sites and eventually of complete management systems to ensure that they are designed, located and operated in such a way that the risk of resulting pollution or health hazards is reduced to a minimum."

The new program will be implemented soon by regional waste management engineers and local health officers, said Mr. Williams, one of several government speakers.

Discussion centred on wastes which cannot be discharged without treatment into municipal or industrial sewers or natural water courses.

Man Reported in Custody

Pistol Found in Yablonski Death Probe

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sources close to the Yablonski family slaying investigation said today three hired gunmen killed the United Mine Workers official and his wife and daughter, and that a fourth man who backed out of the assignment is in custody.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, in a copyright story in today's editions, says the killers were promised $1,000 apiece. The story says that the triple slaying resulted from "a personal beef" not connected with union matters.

Other developments reported by The Plain Dealer and other sources:

—U.S. Navy deep-sea divers found a .38-calibre pistol Tuesday in the Monongahela River about five miles from the Clarksville, Pa., home where Josiah Yablonski, 59, his wife, Margaret, 57, and daughter, Charlotte Joanne, 25, were slain.

—FBI agents extended their investigation into the Kentucky and Tennessee coal mine fields where Yablonski, a rebel leader in the UMW was a household name among miners.

—In Cleveland, U.S. Attorney Robert Krupansky said a grand jury investigation into the slayings, which opened Tuesday, probably would be extended through next week.

—The Plain Dealer reports that "all the information gathered led authorities to conclude the deaths were 'a hit' or hired killing."

Three men have been charged with murder in the slayings. They are Paul Gilly, 36, Claude Yeakey, 28, and Aubran Martin, 21, all of the Cleveland area.

Reporting that its information had been pieced together from various sources, The Plain Dealer gives this account:

Yablonski's home had been visited several times before the killings. On one trip the slayers entered the house when the family was home, posed friends with the family dog, and on another occasion two of the men confronted Yablonski at the door, intending to kill him then, but changed their minds. The Yablonskis were slain in their bedrooms Dec. 31. The bodies were not found until Jan.

The night of the slaying, the men entered the Yablonski home, one with a .38-calibre pistol assigned to the daughter's bedroom and another with a .30-calibre M-1 carbine to fire from the hallway into the parents' bedroom.

A shot which killed the daughter awakened the parents. They too were shot dead and the three men then cut telephone wires and slashed the tires on the family car before leaving.

A few miles from the house they threw the carbine and pistol into the Monongahela River.

Professor Warns Against Energy Treaties with U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — A University of Toronto economics professor warned Tuesday that Canada is in no position to negotiate a comprehensive energy-export agreement with the United States.

"We would be taken to the cleaners," Prof. A. E. Safarian told the Commons external affairs committee.

"We don't know our own needs for many of these resources," he said in reply to questions by Keith Penner (L—Thunder Bay).

No complete survey of Canada's future requirements in the energy field has ever been made, Prof. Safarian said.

Canada wants improved access to the American market for oil and natural gas, he went on.

"But I would resist tying that up with deals on water, for instance, where we are in a less certain position."

Prof. Safarian, a member of the government-appointed committee which a few years ago studied the effect of foreign investment in Canada, said such investment has had "some political cost that I think we can contain."

Canada had tended to use it as a substitute for generating its own development capital. "That's more of a criticism of ourselves than of foreign ownership."

Quebec Driver Looks For Winter Rally Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal's Marcel Rainville flew into Toronto for a couple of hours the other day just to make sure his entry would be in the barrel for the starting position draw for the Canadian Winter Rally.

The rally, an endurance and navigation tests for cars and drivers, starts from Scarborough Centennial College Friday, Feb. 6, and runs through the weekend. Driver-navigator teams must follow a prescribed route—much of it over snow back roads—and hit check points at specified times.

The 33-year-old Rainville, Quebec champion and a runner-up in the national rally championship, is out to win the Canadian winter event for the first time. He will co-drive a Simca entered by Chrysler Canada with navigator Robin Edwardes, also of Montreal.

Rainville has been rallying since 1963, when he and his brothers and I used to go out, after work and drive for miles on back roads."

"We practised and practised, although we didn't really know what we were rallying, and we learned how to keep our car on the icy roads."

It wasn't until 1968 that he made a breakthrough into the exclusive ranks of international drivers. At the finishing point of the 4,300-mile cross-Canada rally in Halifax, he met Scott Harvey of Rochester, Mich., captain of the Chrysler rally team.

Harvey promised to telephone if a sponsored car became available for Rainville. The call came, and Rainville had a week to get prepared for his first rally in a team car.

Although he had been Quebec champion three times and second in the national championship in the same year, Rainville's ambition in the big race has kept him trying to improve his rally techniques.

There is a strong rivalry between Harvey and Rainville. The American driver won the 1969 Canadian Winter Rally and was Sports Car Club of America Rally champion in 1963-64.

Last year Rainville won the premier Quebec event, the Rallye des Neiges, and "I'm going to win the Winter this time," he says.

A supervisor for Bell Canada, working in the marketing research branch in Montreal, he finds rallying an ideal way to relax from his daily work.

"I am completely unwound after a Sunday rally. I'm ready to go back to work."

"I feel more rested after a weekend of rallying than I did from any of the other sports I tried—skiing, golf and hockey. I like to rallies because I do well at them. Everybody likes to compete in a sport where they can get good results."

Rainville is noted for his careful treatment of his rally cars. "Some drivers just race and bash up a car if it doesn't belong to them, but I like to take as much care of the Simca as if it were my own. I had one all last year for rallies and I learned it pays to even better condition than when I received it."

He has always made sure that he drives into the finish with a spotless car; no matter that the rigors of the rally have been.

After the Winter rally, Canada's only international event, Rainville has his sights set on Europe. "It is my overwhelming ambition to drive in a European rally such as the Monte Carlo or the Alpine. If I could just get a sponsor interested in that."

Clippers Tied For Second In AHL's Western Division

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Baltimore Clippers came to life in the final 40 minutes Tuesday to outscore Cleveland Barons 8-7 and overhaul the idle Hershey Bears for second place in the American Hockey League's Western Division.

In one other game, Quebec Aces bounced Springfield Kings 8-2 to break a tie for third place in the Eastern Division with Providence Reds.

The Clippers, outscored 5-3 by the Barons in the opening period, barged to their 12th win of the year by scoring three of four second-period goals and two of three last-period goals.

Willie Marshall paced the winners with two goals. Ron Snell, George Swarbrick, Bob Rivard, Rod Zaine, Jim Bartlett and Rick Kessell scored once before 3,813 fans.

Defenceman Hap Myers led the Cleveland rally in the first minutes with three goals, two of them 22 seconds apart. Wayne Schultz, Norm Beaudin, Paul Popiel and Ray Cameron added single goals for the Barons, who lost their sixth game in a row. The Barons occupy the basement of the Western Division, six points behind fifth-place Rochester Americans.

At Quebec City, the Aces climbed t seven points behind the second-place Kings as Guy Dufour scored twice. Claude Laforge, Paul Cates, Mike Byers, Andre Gaudette, Jim Mair and Bob Currier also struck for the winners. Noel Price and Bill Inglis replied for Springfield.

Westerners Out to Top Eastern Figure Skaters

EDMONTON (CP) — "You wouldn't believe how much we want to beat those easterners."

Lynda Catrano, Alberta's main hope for the junior figure-skating championship of Canada, was expressing the feeling of Western Canada skaters toward those from Eastern Canada.

While it's everyone for himself in the Canadian figure-skating championships to be held here starting Jan. 27, there's a definite West-over-East element involved.

For the brief period of self-satisfaction and glory involved in winning a figure-skating title, the dedication and sacrifice are incredible.

By the time the championships roll around, Miss Catrano will have spent 18 hours a day for almost three weeks on the ice.

In order to practise she's been out of school and has done nothing but skate, eat and sleep.

"I skated just about every day last year, except Christmas Day when we had company," said the four-foot-10 high-school girl. "I have no social life.

"Oh, I know a lot of kids at school, but usually all I do is skate, sleep and go to school."

Miss Catrano won the Alberta championship held in Edmonton.

In the national contest, Steinbrecker and Marchyshyn — who will go after both junior and senior titles — will be a tough competition will likely come from David McGillivray and Toller Cranston, both of Toronto. And here again, that West-versus-East feeling arises.

Steinbrecker said:

"The easterners are, and especially those from Toronto, have dominated figure-skating. They're probably the only ones who have had coaches all their lives and in the national championship in the same year. Raine's ambition in the big race has kept him trying to improve his rally techniques.

There is a strong rivalry between Harvey and Rainville. The American driver won the 1969 Canadian Winter Rally and was Sports Car Club of America Rally champion in 1963-64.

Last year Rainville won the premier Quebec event, the Rallye des Neiges, and "I'm going to win the Winter this time," he says.

A supervisor for Bell Canada, working in the marketing research branch in Montreal, he finds rallying an ideal way to relax from his daily work.

"I am completely unwound after a Sunday rally. I'm ready to go back to work."

"I feel more rested after a

"Anyone who wins a provincial championship could get a job with the Ice Capades—it would be a snap," said Urs Steinbrecker, 18, who will compete for the Canadian senior men's title.

"I like to skate. I tried to lay off for a while, but I couldn't. I just had to come back. Skating is an art to me. It's something I can express myself in. I just like to perform."

Steinbrecker finished second in the Alberta championship behind Bill Marchyshyn, his club-mate from Royal Glenora of Edmonton.

"The easterners are, and especially those from Toronto, have dominated figure-skating. They're probably the only ones who have had coaches all their lives and in the national championship in the same year. Raine's ambition in the big race has kept him trying to improve his rally techniques.

Possible Expansion Of Football League

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Rugby Football Union has had inquiries from six centres, including four in Michigan, about prospect of joining the circuit for the 1970 season.

William Thurgarland, league president, said Tuesday the new entries will be discussed at a meeting of the circuit Saturday in Dearborn, Mich.

He said no decision about accepting new entries will be made at the annual meeting and he had no assurances that the new centres will be represented.

"We hope they come and we hope we'll be able to accept them," he said.

Six teams competed in the league last year, London Lords, Michigan Indians, Kitchener-Waterloo-Guelph Oaks, St. Catharines Rams, Bramalea Satellites and Sarnia Imperials.

Sarnia dropped out mid-way in the schedule because of a rash of injuries but Thurgarland hopes the team will be back in action this season.

Bata in Second

Bata Braves are back in second place as a result of their 9-4 win over Newcastle last night, which moves them two points ahead of Sunderland in the Eastern Ontario Intermediate C league.

Bata led 2-1 at the end of the first period on two goals by Dan Brown and one by Roger Smith. They added two more in the second frame and four in the third.

Back - up goalie Tim Howard saw action for the first time last night and did a fine job in the Bata nets. Howard is the brother Junior B goalie from Trenton.

Don Dixon paced the Bata attack with four goals, giving him a total of 34 in 19 games played. Roger Smith counted once in each period for a hat trick performance and record addition Andy Faulkner had two goals to complete the Braves scoring. Don Frossy scored twice for Newcastle with the others going to Rogerson and Witteridge.

Newcastle drew nine of the 14 penalties. The two clubs meet again Thursday at Bata's home rink.

Tweed

Mrs. W. E. Bateman of R.R. 2, Tweed, has recently returned to her home after having spent a week with relatives in Mississauga.

The Women's Institute members of Denbigh, held their recent meeting in mid-January at the home of Mrs. Hilda Malcolm.

The Free Methodist Church Women's Missionary Society met recently for their January meeting at the home of Mrs. Elmo Lount with a good attendance.

Mr. William Wilbur of Arden is at present a patient in the Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. William Erwin of Actinolite, visited their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbern Tobe at Desert Lake recently.

$2,500.00 DOWN

Live better for less money in this well kept four bedroom home with separate garage, walk-out basement, sitting-out verandah and fireplace. Central east, handy to all schools and downtown.

HAPPY IS THE HOME

Where there is plenty of "family space". This 4-bedroom traditional is the answer to a growing family. Well located in pocketbook. Large kitchen, separate dining room and 1½ baths makes for easy living, well located in the triangle of all schools. $16,000, down will take over 8¼% mortgage.

WOODED LOT

Gently sloping residential lot on Wallbridge Road. Convenient to 401 and Loyalist College. Beat the crowd by phoning today, rather than waiting for spring.

TRENTON

Charming and different, this two bedroom bungalow boasts a dining room, fireplace, spacious dining room, patio doors, attached garage and efficient hot water heating. Priced at $17,500, and $2,500, down would handle.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best"
Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—USE ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the item for sale or the service you offer. Don't say "For Sale" or "Wanted" or "For Rent" in the first line. Don't say "For Sale" or "Wanted" or "For Rent" in the first line. Don't say "For Sale" or "Wanted" or "For Rent" in the first line.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond given complete details. Include price, condition or delivery terms. Don't be vague.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader to reach you. Give only a phone number? Your name and address? Or will you call in person? Tell it all. If you do not have regular hours, give a time when you can be reached at home.

4—USE GENEROUS HEADING AS-sistance. Use the largest type you can afford. Use a bold face type. Your ad may cost you a little more, but it will be read by many more people. Use it for the days it is profitable.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position. Ask yourself what you would look for if you were reading your ads. Then write it that way.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying. Help them to buy from you. Tell them why your merchandise is the best to buy. Don't attempt to tell them every advantage, but tell them enough to help them buy.

7—WANT ADS THAT PAY, to bring you business, must be brought to the attention of readers. Be sure your ad is placed in the right classification. Don't run it in a classification where it will be overlooked.

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Never Spank Child For Wetting Bed

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Jimmy is nearly 11 years old. He is a neighbor. His mother asks me to speak to him about her. She spanks him for it. So does his father. They ridicule him in front of other children.

It is pitiful. Besides, he's getting very fat. I'm convinced that the child needs medical treatment, but his mother pooh-poohs the idea. "He's just being mean. He wets his bed because he wants to get back at us."

He loves football. At 8 he played it well with one of the Little Football league teams. The following year he was turned down because he was overweight. His coach was disappointed because he planned to build the team around him. Last year he had him on a diet and on steam baths. He didn't make it. And he's been getting fatter by the day.

A few days ago Jimmy ran away from home. He left early in the morning and they found him 10 hours later. All he said was, "Everybody's picking on me." He probably got a good spanking for scaring the family. I hope. Dr. Steincrohn, you can give these people some good advice. I hope Jimmy's parents read it. Mrs. B.

Comment: Jimmy's sick — emotionally, at least. His increase in weight attests to that. All I can do is ask his parents to take him to the family doctor for help. Meanwhile, I make these points: 1. Children who wet the bed "are not trying to get back at their parents." It's an awfully high price to pay, waking up in wet smelly bed-sheets every night, all morning. 2. Never spank a child for bedwetting. 3. Never berate him or shame him in front of strangers — or before other members of the family. 4. First, have him examined to make sure there is no organic reason why he can't hold his urine. 5. If there's no physical reason except that he has a small bladder capacity, then your doctor will explain how he can increase it by teaching Jimmy how to hold his urine longer than usual. After a few months of these exercises he's bed-wetting no stop. 6. In some cases, use of electrical "wake - up" machines have helped. 7. Last, but not less important, parents should be sympathetic and helpful to the unhappy child. I know of no other childhood ailment in which youngsters suffer so much emotional torment and grief. 8. Once and for all, let's remember that bedwetting is a complex problem which needs the help of a doctor and "no operation of parents. When Jimmy becomes aware of this turnabout in his parents' understanding, he will not be running away from home —

River Valley

RIVER VALLEY — On Friday evening Jan. 24 the members of River Valley W. I. catered for a banquet at the lower Trout Valley Fish and Game Club where the annual dinner and dance was held.

What it does, and what every state should do, as this column has been recommending for several decades, is to dissolve a marriage that is no longer workable, without the pious fraud of labeling one of the marriage parties "guilty" and the other "innocent."

For we know that, except in gross cases of bestiality, or wantonness, the responsibility for a marital break-up is not only on one side or the other. Both sides are responsible, sometimes in unequal measure, but neither should be treated like a criminal and "punished" for the failure of the contract.

In the present adversary system in most states, perjury, recrimination, bitterness and alienation of the children are the only fruits.

Moreover, so long as the concept of "guilt" remains the criterion not only for awarding the decree, but also for determining the financial arrangement, divorce lawyers have a stake in stirring up as much acrimony, in threatening as much dirty disclosure as they can, or failing, as they think necessary to obtain a substantial settlement.

The new ground of "irreconcilable differences" — which, however, is not automatic, and has to be proved to the satisfaction of the judge — will undercut the whole present system of bitter testimony, in which both the parties are encouraged by the law to act far more as foes of each other in court than they ever have in the marriage.

To the argument that it now becomes easier to obtain a divorce in California, one can only say that marriage have never been "saved," only subjected to harsh divorce laws. Italy is now in the process of formulating a divorce law, which it had never had, precisely because experience has shown that a marriage compulsorily held together breeds more divisiveness and duplicity than when a clean and legal break is made.

We need a program of "preventive marriage," just as we need expanded programs of preventive medicine and dentistry, so that young people will be emotionally and morally healthier to embark upon matrimony; but when the tooth is rotten and must be pulled, a mild divorce law is merely the novocaine that permits the extraction with less pain.

Strictly Personal

No Blame in Divorce

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Beginning this month, California becomes one of the first states in the U.S. to shift the base of the divorce law where it belongs — away from the legal idea of "blame," and onto the psychological ground of "irreconcilable differences."

This major reform — revising a divorce law that was drafted nearly a century ago, in 1872 — is not just a way of making it "easier" to obtain a divorce in California; it has always been a sad fact of life that people who possessed the means and didn't mind the dirty linen being aired.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 29

Your birthday today: Your year ahead continues complex and exciting until it settles to a more comfortable pattern of picking up the pieces sometime in the fall. Romantic interests suffer somewhat similar unusual experiences but, in the main, will survive.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Sell or give away surplus or unused possessions; don't choose replacements until you are used to the empty spaces.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Review the general reform in this year's monetary attitudes, and decide how you can earn your share. Think what the world might be like if you had your way about it.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Seek new guidance in all matters relating to health and its maintenance. You have probably slipped into quite a range of habits which are doing you very little good. The evening is bright for parties.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Get your work done well despite temptations to dawdle or pursue distracting fun. Family and home life go well this evening according to what you've given of yourself.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Fast talk abounds, but includes some rather feasible new proposals which need only clearer details. Use your diplomatic skills to guide the discussions to simple agreements.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Many of the routines of your personal life change today with out prior intent or plans. Go along with whatever your intuition dictates for best results. Some habits drop away as though they never existed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Showmanship, good manners, tact go hand in hand with what you have to do today to get what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Many people and activities clamor for your time. Set and stick to your own priorities, first things first.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Get busy early in a truly constructive mood. Skip lunch if you can make a deal instead. Plan something unusual and funny to amuse your loved ones this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Survey your belongings to find items which no longer suit your needs. Get rid of them — to your favorite charity if they are not readily salable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Nothing quite stays put today but be assured that nothing moves very far either. Do the best you can, quite impersonally, till all the surface normal moment for a change of scene and pace.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Business actions tend to short-range successes. Let each transaction rest on its own merits, test every new proposal as you go. Social discussions ramble a bit but uncover much interesting essential knowledge for you.

THE TOSCANINI MUSICIANS ENJOY by H. H. Hagen

Most previous books about the great conductor have been written by someone within it. Mr. Haggin gives here interviews with players, singers and composers who have worked with the Maestro. They reveal his incomparable achievements, his power to get the musicians to realize the best in themselves and by the music.

STAR by Victor Ullman

LOOK TO THE NORTH

More than a century ago a Scottish Presbyterian minister, William King, came to Canada and founded the community of Buxton in Western Ontario to serve as a haven for black refugees from the harsh years before the Civil War. The early days were not easy but King and his supporters persevered and many of the educated Negroes returned to the South after the Civil War to help that ravaged country. Buxton is now a historical Shrine. Mr. Ullman has done a great deal of research in recording this unusual Canadian story.

LENA by Lena Horne and Richard Schickel

In this autobiography, Lena Horne tells the story of a remarkable woman. It includes a discussion of her feelings about the civil rights issues, her childhood in the South, rise to fame and anecdotes of many celebrities she has worked with.

THE YUKON AND NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES by Edward McCourt

The Canadian North is rich in history and legend and now that the settled areas are accessible by car over the Alaska and Mackenzie highways an increasing number of Canadians will become familiar with them. Edward McCourt spent a summer travelling over these highways and has woven descriptions of the country today with tales of explorers, fur traders and the famous gold rush.

JOURNEY TO POWER by Donald Peacock

Mr. Peacock is well qualified to act as an interpreter of the Canadian scene, having been a journalist on Parliament Hill for a number of years. In Journey to Power, he traces events from Dalton Camp's challenge to Mr. Diefenbaker in November 1965, to the election of June 1968 when the Liberals under Pierre Elliott Trudeau finally gained a working majority in the House of Commons.

MARSHALL ZHUKOV'S GREATEST BATTLES by Georgi. K. Zhukov

Marshall Zhukov was Russia's greatest World War II military figure and his is his own account of four great battles between the Russian and German armies — the battle of Moscow, the Battle of Stalingrad, the Battle of Kursk-Orel and the climactic battle of Berlin. Besides the military history, the book throws light on his conflict with Stalin and other quarrels which raged within the Kremlin.

STREETS OF ASIA by James Bishop

James Bishop, who has travelled widely in Asia, believes that only by walking the streets of a city or a country can he appreciate the variety of life of its inhabitants. He believes that all of Asia has reached a boiling point and that there will be no peace until Asians are allowed to control their own culture and political life. Apart from politics, the book contains descriptions of the art, customs, etc., of the cities visited.

Wheat Price-cutting Opposed By Agriculture Federation

WINNIPEG (CP) — Wheat, the prairie glamor crop caught up in a world surplus, was in the forefront as usual Tuesday when the Canadian Federation of Agriculture began hearing resolutions at its annual meeting.

The preamble of an expansion-of-trade resolution urged that the federal government pursue its export objective of 1,200,000,000 bushels over a three-year period.

A marketing resolution which followed — while recognizing the realities of the international situation" — expressed hope that price-cutting disregard of terms of the International Grains Arrangement will be brought to an end.

There were calls for every effort to increase wheat exports, whether by commercial sale or gift; for a more-aggressive sales program even if it involves the Canadian wheat board's selling offices in private trading countries and for the full guaranteed prairie levels to countries that demand them.

But a "position report" distributed at the meeting by United Grain Growers said that with the present burdensome wheat supplies everywhere in the wheat-growing world, "it is no easy way to increase sales vastly regardless of the system of selling."

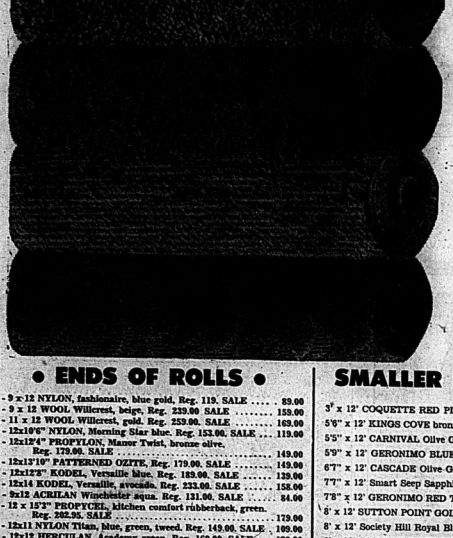
The elevator company's statement added: "We can see little prospect of sales averaging much above the 300,000,000-bushel range over the next five years." (In the years 1963-67 exports ran around 360,000,000 bushels.)

And CFA president Charles Munro of Embro, Ont., had this caution in his president's address Tuesday:

"We have on hand enough wheat in Western Canada to fill about three years' average markets.

"Feed grains, not wheat, were the fuel for the fire Tuesday in debate. The convention began Tuesday night and ends Thursday.

A Quebec Western Canada flare-up followed passage of a resolution that an urgent appeal be made to the federal government for a minimum price on feed grains in a formula that would work out to 72 cents a bushel.



Quebec delegates protested that they are forced to pay wheat board prices for western feed grain while western Canada producers, purchasing with in their own provinces, are not. Westerners countered that easterners are the beneficiaries of a $30,000,000 freight subsidy on feed grain, to the detriment of western producers.

In the end, after an hour of acrimonious debate in both official languages, delegates voted to table this contentious section of the resolution. But the subject may come up again in resolutions still to be heard.

Today, as well as discussion on resolutions, the CFA will hold its first election of officers in which the president and vice-presidents are elected from the floor instead of by the board of directors.

Names placed in nomination are: Mr. Munro, of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture; Paul Babey, Alberta Federation of Agriculture; E. A. Bedford, Saskatchewan Federation of Agriculture; W. H. Buntsch, British Columbia Federation of Agriculture; Glen Cole, Dairy Farmers of Canada; Roland Pigeon and Lionel Sevil, both of L'Union Catholique des Cultivateurs in Quebec.

Far North To Control Use of DDT

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Northwest Territories government will begin drafting legislation to control the use of DDT.

The legislation will be presented to the next session of the Legislative Council—probably in June.

Council was told Tuesday by J. A. Keith of Canadian Wildlife Service in Ottawa that not another pound of the pesticide should be used in the N.W.T.

Mr. Keith said that Peregrine falcons in the Arctic are laying eggs that do not hatch, principally because of DDT contamination.

The federal government, he said, has banned the sale of DDT but he recommended the territories take action to control large amounts of the chemical now stockpiled.

Mr. Keith said perhaps biting insects in the summer will have to be accepted as a fact of life—a sacrifice for living in a country not polluted by pesticides.

The prospect of eliminating insect populations through the vast North is not in sight, he said—may never be, he said.

Already there is too much DDT on the arctic tundra, he said it will remain for a long time because chemical breakdown is slower in the North than in the south.

Duncan Pryde, elected councillor for the western arctic, said halting DDT spraying would cause residents personal discomfort but it would be worth the sacrifice to save the birds and rodents that are being contaminated.

Quebec, Ottawa Face New Test

QUEBEC (CP) — Ottawa and Quebec are at odds again on constitutional rights involving the province's participation in an international conference.

And they just finished, with a minimum of fuss, getting ready for another international meeting.

A top-level source in Quebec said Wednesday both governments are agreed on protocol involving the February meeting of French-speaking education-ists in the West African nation of Mauritania.

But it was strictly egg-walking over Quebec's role at a March conference in Niamey, Niger, of a French-language agency for cultural and technical co-operation.

The source said some persons had rejuvenated working documents given Jean-Marie Morin, Quebec minister without portfolio, in his capacity as chairman of a previous Canadian delegation.

The documents were thought to be an exclusive invitation from Mauritania, bypassing Ottawa, but this was not the case.

Such an invitation would have had the effect of snubbing Ottawa, possibly sparking another row over Quebec's participation at international conferences.

The source said no Ottawa-Quebec problems are foreseen, and it is probable Mr. Morin will act as chairman again of the Canadian delegation.

The problem is with the Niamey meeting of the Agence Francophone de Cooperation, which the source said involves matters that surpass protocol.

Claude Morin, Quebec's deputy minister of intergovernmental affairs, was in Ottawa Wednesday discussing proposals for Ottawa-Quebec representation in Niamey.

The source said one major difference involves voting. Prime Minister Trudeau's thesis has always been one country, one voice.

The source said Ottawa proposed that the Canadian delegation could withdraw its vote if Quebec, for example, disagreed on a subject at voting time.

The proposal would mean no vote from Canada — any component of the Canadian delegation if Ottawa so decided.

But Quebec rejected this on the constitutional basis that in matters of education, Ottawa could conclude an exclusively provincial jurisdiction.

The source said that in the eyes of French-speaking African nations, pressure from presumptuously-French Quebec has been most directly responsible for Canadian aid.

Claude Morin, meanwhile, was in Ottawa, a report to Marcel Masse, minister of intergovernmental affairs who is an Outaouais Nationalist.

Newspaper reports, not denied, quoted Mr. Masse Wednesday as saying that Ottawa's proposals for Niamey were unacceptable.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told reporters he hopes for a mutually acceptable solution that will be worked out "on Canadian soil."

Ready to Build Sewers, Mains

By Roy Peacock
Staff Reporter

The Ontario Water Resources Commission is prepared to give both planning and financial assistance for the extension of sewer and water services to Quinte district rural areas.

At a special meeting yesterday in Belleville city hall, D. J. Collins, chairman of the OWRC, said that if it would be a reasonable solution to water and sewer problems, his commission would be prepared to set up locally controlled area boards for the extension of services to the townships.

Attending the meeting were council representatives from Belleville, Trenton, Sidney and Thurlow townships. These representatives expressed approval of the proposals.

Yesterday's meeting was specifically called to consider the extension of sewer services from Belleville into Thurlow township, but provision of water and sewer service in Sidney township was also discussed.

Mr. Collins said his commission was prepared to finance the service extension required, do the construction, and then charge back capital costs on a use basis to the municipalities.

To make the proposal additionally attractive the OWRC chairman said capital costs of the oversized services would be subsidized to the extent of 15 per cent.

"Fifteen per cent subsidy may not sound like much but in many instances it can provide double capacity," Mr. Collins said.

Oversizing of sewers to provide service in rural areas normally costs from 11 to 14 per cent, he said.

The immediate problem in Belleville is the construction of a trunk sewer up the Moira River to College Street with an extension along Canniffon Road and Adam Street to service the city's northeast industrial area. The city has committed itself to the provision of his service by the end of 1970.

The OWRC wants the main trunk river sewer oversized and extended to Highway 401 to provide service in Canniffon and Thurlow township.

The northeast sewer extension through Hillcrest to serve the city's northeast industrial area would also be expected to service 1200 acres in Thurlow township south of Highway 401 and east of the city's limits.

Gaglardi's Jealous

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau escorted Broadway star Barbra Streisand to Manitoba Night at the National Arts Centre here last night.

Meanwhile, in Victoria, B.C., Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi was saying he is worried about the federal white paper on taxation, but not about Trudeau "rushing around the country in a jet plane," while as for the prime minister's women companions, he is "only jealous."

Mr. Gaglardi resigned as B.C. highways minister in 1968 after charges he had allowed members of his family to use a government jet aircraft.

"I'm not worried about Prime Minister Trudeau rattling around the country in a jet plane," he said. "If he gets to go out with Brigitte Bardot, then I'm only jealous. If he goes out with Barbra Streisand, then more power to him."

Wilson Is Hurt In Fall

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson was injured and badly shaken by a fall at the British embassy in Washington Wednesday night, 10 Downing Street said today.

His ribs were badly bruised, his lip cut and his left wrist injured five minutes before giving his Washington news conference following discussions with President Nixon.

An aide said the bleeding from his lip was stopped by a styptic pencil just as the prime minister entered the building to meet the press.

Wilson returned home today after a five-day trip to Canada and the United States.

After the Washington talks, Wilson believes that President Nixon's tight monetary policies are unlikely to cause a recession in the United States or to hurt the British economy.

Wilson's cautious optimism in the president's ability to deflate the overheated U.S. economy without a slump which could spread across the Atlantic was one of the main points to emerge from his Washington trip.

Over 400 Missing In Iran

TEHRAN (AP) — At least 35 persons were reported frozen to death and more than 400 are missing on the Amol highway when eight buses and eight cars crashed into a deep ravine burying them in avalanches, Iranian highway police said today.

Official reports said the avalanche, which hit the area early Wednesday morning, blocked the highway connecting Tehran to the eastern corner of the Caspian Sea and filled a deep ravine with a "mountain of snow" burying an unknown number of cars.

Scene of the tragedy, 25 miles northeast of Tehran, now is almost totally cut off due to a heavy blanket of snow.

Nixon's Veto Gets Support

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The House of Representatives appropriations committee is expected to resubmit the vetoed $19,700,000,000 money bill for the departments of labor and health, education and welfare, but with a clause granting President Nixon discretionary powers over spending. Informed sources said today.

However, the committee probably will stick by the same basic bill when it meets either today or Friday to decide its course of action, the sources said.

The committee meeting follows an unsuccessful House attempt Wednesday to override a presidential veto of the bill.

Last Trace of Dubcek Era Erased

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Lubomir Strougal, a conservative former interior minister, today headed Czechoslovakia's new federal government as premier after an extensive Communist party shakeup swept away the last remnants of the Dubcek era of reform.

Strougal, 45, replaced Oldrich Cernik, a middle-of-the road politician who remained following the removal five months ago of reformers who backed former party first secretary Alexander Dubcek's dream of "communism with a human face."

The party shuffle also involved three new appointments to the 11-man ruling presidium of the party and the naming of a new federal cabinet.

Cernik, 49, was appointed premier at the height of the Dubcek reform campaign in April 1968. He kept his post after the Soviet-led Warsaw pact invasion of August, 1968, but switched allegiance to Dubcek's conservative successor, Gustav Husak. He remains in the cabinet as minister's chairman of the committee for technical and investment development.

Regimentation Returns

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia is returning to stringent economic regimentation now that Leonmir Strougal has replaced Oldrich Cernik as federal premier, planning chief Vaclav Hula made plain to the Communist party central committee in Prague Wednesday.

Hula in a speech made clear that revitalizing the badly lagging economy is one of the chief goals of the Communist regime and that the party is committed to exacting economic targets and expects them to be fulfilled.

Strougal has been a staunch backer of the Soviet Union since the invasion and, as head of the party's Czech bureau, he carried out a swift purge of the liberal press and reformist elements in the party apparatus shortly after the downfall of Dubcek in April, 1969.

Observers said the appointment of Strougal and the election of the three new party presidium members has weakened Husak's position, but the 57-year-old former first secretary of the Slovak Communist party has not lost his struggle to prevent the current purge turning into revenge-seeking.

The new men in the presidium — Prague party secretary Antonin Kapek, new Czech Premier Josef Korcak and Josef Lenart, a premier during the hard-line Novotny era — now present Husak with less certain backing inside the 11-man presidium.

The resignations of Cernik, Slovak party leader Stefan Sadovsky, and Labor Union boss Karel Polacek eliminated three who all held office during the Dubcek liberalization period.

Nigeria Jails Missionaries

LAGOS (Reuters) — A Nigerian court has sentenced 39 Roman Catholic missionaries — 17 Irish and three British — to six months' imprisonment for illegally entering Nigeria, reliable sources said today.

The 20 are among 32 missionaries, being held in the eastern Nigerian city of Port Harcourt, who worked in the former secessionist region during the 30-month civil war.

The sources said that because the 20 had been sentenced on a technical rather than a criminal charge it is expected they will be released within a week.

Itinerary Is Announced For Vice Regal Visit Here

Governor - General Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener will spend at least part of three days in Belleville when they visit the city in March.

They will arrive in the city by private railway car at 10 a.m. Friday, March 13 and will stay until Saturday night.

In a letter received yesterday by Mayor Russell Scott, The Governor-General has agreed to the following itinerary:

Mayor and Mrs. Scott will meet Governor-General Michener and Mrs. Michener at their private railway car at 10 a.m. Following this they will proceed to city hall to meet members of city council.

Before returning to their railway cars at noon the Governor-General and Mrs. Michener will meet with school children. They will proceed to the Quinte Arena at 1 p.m. where they will be met by Board Chairman Frank Raise and the principal, J. E. Bradford.

It is expected the Governor-General will deliver a brief address before the laying of the corner stone to Loyalist's first permanent building. The corner stone will contain items of historic interest together with newspapers of the day and a history of the college.

Guests of the college from the four county Loyalist area will be invited in the event along with members of the student body and college staff.

Friday evening the vice-regal couple will attend a Rotary Club dinner and on Saturday morning will tour the city and possibly visit the hospital.

Saturday noon the vice-regal couple are expected to attend a luncheon at the Ontario School for the Deaf.

The final official event during the Belleville visit will be the presentation of colors to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and kilted dance at a reception to follow.

Master Warrant Officer Henk Van De Merwe shared some of his lifetime of experience on the French horn this morning with Carol Thicke, Moira Secondary School. The student has been playing the instrument for a year. Musician is a member of the Canadian Forces Vimy Band, now touring Ontario schools to bring top-flight symphonic band music to young people.

Army Band in Schools

Making a joyful noise across the length and breadth of Canada is not usual for a military band.

But tours made by the Canadian Forces Vimy Band to high schools and colleges have an added purpose — to stimulate keener musical interest in Canadians of all ages.

That the big symphonic band is succeeding in its aim in Belleville at least, is proved by the attentive and appreciative audiences greeting the performances in secondary schools.

The 75-piece band is composed of professional musicians, drawn from several former army bands to form the unit now stationed at Vimy Barracks in Kingston.

It serves many functions — playing for military ceremonials, to greet visiting royalty and foreign dignitaries and to embellish state occasions.

But to foster interest in music, it spends the months of January and February playing for young people in the schools at one hour concerts of varied classical, contemporary, jazz and martial selections.

For its Belleville appearances in all secondary schools, the band is playing at less than full strength due to the onslaught of the flu virus.

When time permits, the the bandsmen, under the direction of Captain Kenneth R. Moore, director of music, share their talents with music students in the schools they visit by sitting in on a practice and giving a few pointers.

For associate director Captain Harvey C. Eagles, the school visits are an opportunity to get across one of his pet convictions — the importance of instrumental music instruction in elementary and secondary schools.

The attentive audiences of young people that have greeted the band at Moira and Centennial schools in Belleville, Capt. Eagles credits to the influence of the music teachers.

"In schools where no music is taught, the students are restless and talk throughout the performance," he said. "But where they are exposed to music in class we find receptive and intelligent audiences."

"Music is no fad," he asserts. "A knowledge of music gives the student an awareness and sensitivity he can apply to all subject disciplines."

That's what the band's spokesmen mean when they give one of its prime functions as "playing a part in the development of Canadian culture".

OWRC Prepared To Build Sewers

The proposal offered yesterday by Mr. Collins, has been previously extended to Belleville and Thurlow and although approved by the township, it requires more clarification on what subsidy payments could be expected.

Specifically the city wanted to know if the 15 per cent subsidy would be on the ward construction of the projected trunk pollution control plant addition; whether the same contribution could be expected from the northeast sewer extension and whether the river trunk sewer from Adam Street to Murray Rd. (costing an estimated $100,000) would be a charge against the city.

Yesterday Mr. Collins gave assurance the 15 per cent subsidy would apply to the water pollution plant addition and to the trunk sewer up the Moira to Highway 401.

Also, he said, if assurance was given by Thurlow that it would eventually connect into the northeast sewer extension, the 15 per cent overall subsidy would likewise be given on this sewer.

However, the city will not be relieved of costs for the trunk sewer up the river between Adam Street and Highway 401.

"If you start nit-picking about this section of the sewer, then you will start nit-picking in connection with the sewage treatment plant," he told city council.

Mayor J. Russell Scott agreed with OWRC thinking, stating that the 1,000 odd costs of the northern section of the city would be more than covered by subsidy payments on the sewage plant extension.

Mr. Collins said the OWRC would be agreeable for the city to go ahead with construction of the river trunk sewer, with the municipality acting as the OWRC agents.

He said a preliminary agreement between Rawdon and Thurlow and OWRC could be entered into covering the river sewer, followed by an agreement for a new service signed by the city, Thurlow and Sidney.

The meeting agreed to a resolution calling for favorable consideration of the two above questions at the next council meeting of the three municipalities.

Also to be considered is a proposal for area planning.

Attending yesterday's meeting in addition to the councils of Belleville, Thurlow and Sidney were Murray Wilson OWRC engineer, and E. A. Gomme, planning administrator for the Department of Municipal Affairs. Councillor Paul Tripp represented Trenton.

Also in attendance was Dr. Richard T. Potter, MLA for Quinte riding.

Mayor Scott emphasized the need for a planning area for the Belleville - Trenton area, noting that it was in this section that there was an urban problem for sewer, water and electrical services.

He said Belleville and Trenton had little in common with, say, Madoc or Millbridge.

Mr. Gomme said Mayor Scott had made the plea for area planning for him and had done it "better than I could."

"We live here", returned the mayor.

Referring to the need of proper area planning, Mr. Gomme said Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough has asked for an early decision from Quinte area municipalities which of three (planning) options proposed by the minister were favored.

Weather No Blessing To Picton Snow Race

PICTON (Staff) — June in January could spell the end for Prince Edward's county's first snowmobile race now scheduled for next Sunday unless the mercury plunges.

Today's temperature — a mild 37 degrees — is steadily melting the snow carefully banked around the fairgrounds track.

Track committee chairman Vincent Gentile said today that continuous springlike temperatures could end plans for the weekend races. He felt, however, that there was still plenty of room for optimism in view of current weather forecasts predicting a crisp cold weekend.

"We have plowed and smoothed the track" he noted

"and if necessary we can spread it with some of the snow used earlier to bank it."

Mr. Gentile noted enthusiasm generated locally by the race meet and predicted a successful weekend with just a little co-operation from the weather.

Applicants Seek Police Job

PICTON (Staff) — Chairman of the Picton Police Commission, Jesse Mason today reported good response from "some very capable applicants" in answer to a recent advertisement for an additional town police constable.

At last count 17 applications had been received. Tomorrow is the closing date for applications.

Decision to hire another constable was made at the inaugural meeting of the Picton police commission. The step followed a recommendation contained in last fall's survey of the Picton police department conducted by the Ontario Police Commission.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In loving memory of Ivy, who passed away January 29th, 1969.
Two years have flown, and time does not heal
The pain of your loss, dear mother and wife.
Sadly missed by husband, Jack, granddaughter, Jacqueline.

MISKOW — In loving memory of our dear father, Peter Miskow, who passed away Jan. 29th, 1962.
Many years have gone and passed
Since you left us for your rest
And we miss you more and more
As the years go by.
A link in the family chain is lost,
One less kind face from our home has crossed
And from our hearts
Sadly missed by daughter-in-law and son, Peter.

SMITH — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Alan Ivy Smith, who passed away January 29th, 1968.
Dad, you left us very suddenly,
Your loving face we cannot see,
But He closed your hands and said,
"Rest, dear one, rest."
Sadly missed by wife and son.

Away in the eternal hills of God,
Where the saints of God abide,
Home there, some day, we know not
Sadly missed by wife and son, Alan, Jr.

SMITH — In loving memory of our dear father, Alan Ivy Smith, who passed away January 29th, 1968.
Sadly missed by son and daughter-in-law, Ronald and Jean Smith.

OSIER — In loving memory of a dear father, who passed away January 30th, 1967.
Sadly missed by daughter, Jayne, Nancy and Bob.

OSIER — In loving memory of a dear husband, Gordon Osier, who passed away January 30th, 1967.
Where could we give it we could find
Some place
To bear your voice, and see you
To sit with you and chat awhile,
To give you half a smile,
Cherish him with care,
And keep him under the heartstone
Till you see his sweet shaft,
Sadly missed by daughter and son-in-law.

BLAKELY — In loving memory of our dear father, Thomas Blakely, who passed away Jan. 30, 1959.
A million times we've cried,
A million times we've tried,
To bring you back to us dear dad,
Two never would have died,
But God in His wisdom knew
What was best for you to say.
Dear dad we love you,
We miss you every day.
If we could have one lifetime with,
Dear dad, we would ask no more,
We'd pray to God with all our hearts
To keep you.
Sadly missed by daughter Muriel, son-in-law Woodall and family.

HOLLAND — In loving memory of A. Ethel Holland, who passed away January 30th, 1969.
Ethel, dear sister, you left us so suddenly,
And as dawn another year,
Your memory is ever thinking.
Thoughts of him are always near,
Sadly missed by brother, Alfred.

Woolliams Tells Chamber of Commerce

Tax Proposals Could Be 'Devastating'

By TED FORDER
Staff Reporter

The real revolutionary change that is taking place in Canada is that "it is no longer unknown resources that limit decisions. It is decision that is limiting our known resources."

This was the claim made by member of parliament Eldon M. Woolliams (PC — Calgary North), guest speaker at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce annual dinner meeting held last night in the Quinte hotel.

Referred to as "the man who gets things done," by Lee Grills MP during his introduction Mr. Woolliams was outspoken in his attack of Finance Minister Edgar Benson's white paper on taxation.

"I have studied the white paper . . . and as a result I have formed some opinions of my own that even some of my own party members do not agree with," he said. "The devasting economic effect of this red-covered white paper on Canada's economic growth and well being can be simply stated . . . In my opinion it will fence in the underprivileged so that neither they or their children or their grandchildren can climb out of economic despondency without great effort."

Mr. Woolliams claimed the white paper is not a tax reform at all. "It is a sweeping social changes for our nation, bringing about an effective socialistic revolution — by subtle legislation, rather than by revolution — as has been the case in many socialistic nations existing today. It is therefore a Red Manifesto," he said.

He said if the tax recommendations are implemented in Canada the state "will take over the properties of our people within 30 years or less."

"In addition," he said, "the Canadian people will be reduced to a nation of bookkeepers and accountants. What mankind in this nation and others have achieved to obtain leisure for themselves and their heirs, the government will destroy by making them all hard-working bookkeepers."

"It is not the millionaire or the large income earner who will pay the most taxes in Canada. It is the silent, ambitious middle - income group who will pay the shot," the speaker said.

Mr. Woolliams outlined what will be the effect on Canada if the white paper is implemented:

- "There will be a slow but sure decline in the number of small businesses.
- There will be a sharp decline in risk-taking by Canadians.
- Interest rates will not fall, but will likely continue to rise to levels much higher than they would otherwise be.
- Failure to increase production and exports over a period of time would lead to further devaluation of the Canadian dollar.
- There will be a brain drain from Canada.
- There will be a withdrawal of capital from Canada.
- The cost of money will rise as capital is removed.
- The new tax structure will prevent the buildup of private capital in the hands of individuals. Ultimately, all economic power and capital will be transferred to an all-powerful government and state."

Trenton Planning Board Opts for Three Groups

TRENTON (Staff) — This town's planning board has approved on of three options proposed by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough for Hastings County planning areas.

Choice of the planning board was the replacement of the existing planning boards with three new boards — one for Belleville, one for Trenton and one for Hastings County — together with joint planning committees to effect the necessary co-operation between neighboring municipalities.

Ratification of the planning board's choice by town council is required before the minister is notified of Trenton's option.

It was the board's contention that Trenton's growth lies to the north and west, in view of the fact that the Bay of Quinte prevents growth to the south and the Canadian Forces Base cuts off eastern expansion.

The planning board strongly recommended inclusion of Trenton's neighboring municipalities in Northumberland County (Murray Township, Brighton Village and possibly Brighton Township to the east and the west end of Sidney Township, the Village of Frankford and possibly the Village of Stirling, in any proposed planning area.

Planning board members concurred with the minister that the first option was impractical. This proposed a continuation of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board and revival of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board as well as establishment of a new joint planning area to embrace Trenton, Belleville and all of Hastings County.

Option two — establishment of a joint planning area to embrace Belleville, Trenton and all of Hastings County — was refused because it was thought to be too unwieldy.

Bus, Car In Mishap Near Madoc

MADOC — A bus loaded with passengers ended in the ditch and a car driven by George Quinn, 23 of Ottawa, was demolished near here last night, but there were no injuries.

The accident occurred on Highway 7, two miles west of Madoc about 9 p.m. on a stretch of the highway undergoing construction.

Police said the eastbound bus swerved to avoid a collision and slid off the icy road into the ditch. The bus was driven by Clayton Newell, 29, of Ottawa.

Damage to the bus was estimated at $1,000.

Mayor Inducts Officers

Induction of the 1970 officers and directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce was performed by Mayor Russell Scott last night.

New officers inducted at the annual meeting in the Hotel Quinte for the year are: President, H. J. Fast; treasurer, F. E. Heisz; first vice - president, Frank Murray; second vice - president, J. K. Bradford and directors E. G. Colebourne, J. B. Carroll, R. M. Haggarty, H. W. Hanton, J. J. Trafford and H. T. Turley.

Mayor Scott said the chamber had performed a "good, active and excellent job" during the past year. Such an organization was "most important to the community the size of Belleville."

Retiring President J. A. Ireland said in his report that the past year had been a challenging one. "One of the first things I had to face was a reassessment of the objectives. Some were good and others had to be changed."

Mr. Ireland said his greatest disappointment was the reduced tourist program due to lack of funds but a most active program for 1970 had been prepared for presentation to city council. He hoped that funds would be forthcoming to implement the program.

His greatest satisfaction came from the tenacity of the industrial section in the face of great adversity.

"I feel confident that the Belleville Chamber of Commerce will continue to prosper in the capable hands of Harry Fast the new president," Mr. Ireland said.

Committee chairmen were introduced by the new president.

Mr. Fast remarked that "no organization is strong without committee chairmen and the members of their committees."

Northern Electric President Here

Vernon O. Marquez, president of Northern Electric Company Ltd. will be guest speaker at a Quinte District Chapter of the Canadian Industrial Management Association meeting tonight at Club Quinte.

His address will outline some of the more significant environmental changes which managers will have to face in the immediate future and the personal choices open as to how they might be met.

Mr. Marquez was born in Trenton and educated there at St. Mary's College.

He began work for Northern Electric in 1939 as a switchboard wiring operator. In 1947 he became production manager of the sales division. In 1960 he was appointed to the position of vice-president.

Three years later he became a director and executive vice - president, then president in 1967.

Wellington Couple Held at Gunpoint

PICTON — Two men have been charged with assault last night on a Wellington couple, Mr. and Mrs. James Post.

Charged are Donald Vesterfelt, 21 of Ajax, and Thomas McMullen, 22, of Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Post were forced at gunpoint into a car from their Picton apartment, say police.

Mr. and Mrs. Post were forced to remain in the car while the two men drove through the county, said a provincial police spokesman.

At one point they escaped briefly, and started to walk on the road, but were forced back by the car. They pumped after Mr. Post had been clubbed and knocked into the ditch.

Eventually Mr. and Mrs. Post were driven to the Salmon Point area, where the couple escaped. Mr. Post was permitted to leave the vehicle on the protest that he was going to call a tow truck.

He reached the home of Salmon Point fisherman, Wilbert Nicholson, who notified the Picton OPP.

Mr. McMullen has also been charged with pointing a firearm.

Budget Spectre

In a speech in Belleville last December Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees noted that inflation in Canada is increasing to the tune of four to five per cent and warned if it continued at this rate there would be an aggregate inflationary increase over the next five years of 20 to 25 per cent.

Of course we see it happening almost daily, virtually before our very eyes, as consumer costs move insidiously upward.

We also see it on the educational scene, precisely as Mr. Hees predicted — in Hastings County education director Eric Runacres' statement that the board's purchasing power is five per cent less this year than in 1969.

As the board contemplates the problem of keeping costs at an acceptable level in 1970 it does so in the knowledge that the cost of equipment and supplies has risen by the same amount, that teacher salary negotiations are in the offing and that the city is also faced with new salary schedules for firemen and civic employees.

School trustees expect as a result to be in almost continuous session during the latter part of February.

Meanwhile priorities have been set by the director of education. Briefly, they embrace a program to upgrade teaching staff, maintenance of the pupil-teacher ratio at the present level (to bring it to the idea level in both elementary and secondary schools, according to Mr. Runacres, would cost $215,000 at present salary levels) and — in the jargon of the day — "resource centres." That is, he recommends increasing not only the supply of learning materials but improving libraries and audio-visual facilities as well.

Last in the list of priorities is the first phase of an outdoor education program. As the title suggests, this involves increasing young people's awareness of the outdoor environment. This is an excellent development and the only pity is that it is being relegated to a rather minor position in the board's scale of priorities.

Field studies and conservation principles are among the elements of such a program. Caught up in adult life with so much that tends to blot out our great outdoors, the more such study can be encouraged while young the greater the enrichment of life generally.

Combined with sport — here too there is a need for greater involvement of the student population — we have a necessary element which gives balance to education. At present there is perhaps an over-emphasis of the academic side, and too little on simple fresh air and exercise.

These then are some of the matters with which the board must concern itself — and when it comes to parting costs members might consider President Nixon's example in sending back to Congress a $20 billion appropriation for health, education and welfare because he considered it about a billion too much.

In such relatively modest outlay in Hastings, there should also be room for necessary economies.

Hospital Visiting

Visiting hours in hospitals can be a trial for the patient. The public, bless its thoughtless collective heart, seems to forget that the patient is there to get well if at all possible and hordes of friends and relatives in the room can hinder their progress.

In Brockville the General Hospital and the St. Vincent de Paul both are curtailing visiting to two people at one time. The last straw at St. Vincent de Paul was the day when one patient had 51 visitors in one day. Incidentally, they were counted by the person in the other bed, often the odd man out and the most exasperated in the circumstances.

The General was not far behind, with one patient receiving 42 patients in a day. In Brockville, visiting hours are 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. except for maternity, and it goes without saying, visitors sometimes must be requested to leave when the patient requires routine medical attention. Yet, believe it or not, some visitors are upset by this.

Yes, people are funny. Remember then, when the patient you are visiting has had enough, or you are asked to leave by the medical staff . . . get lost!

Veteran Commons Member

Robert Coates Has A Nose for Government Extravagance

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Hastings MP Robert Carman Coates has the longest nose in Parliament.

Veteran of six successive Parliaments and 25 years in the Commons, Coates sticks that long nose of his into many dark corners where the government — like any other administration — hopes to hide its often guilty and usually embarrassing secrets.

And this causes all sorts of trouble.

And while this is a joy to other tax-minute eggs in the hard - boiled section of the Opposition, it's a pain to the Government.

Coates has been sticking his nose into — among a great many other things — the government's many agencies, multiplying programs and rising costs for bilingualism.

And with it, he has sniffed out — it's not one of an inventor of interesting discoveries the fact that the Post Office, whenever it can, or finds it exceeds a minority 10 percent, is being wired for bilingual phones.

This way you will be able to talk to your friendly Postmaster in the language of your choice, at a starting cost of some $7,000 for the initial jibs plus $1,000 a year to the National Capital Region.

But Coates is a great deal more than just curious, and of far more value to Parliament than as merely a busybody.

He has caught the interested eye of the Financial Post of Toronto, the house organ of the national business community and industrial and financial establishment.

And this is the Post's assessment of Mr. Nosey:

"Coates is an industrious MP for the welfare of his riding, of Nova Scotia and of the Atlantic Provinces.

"He asks some sharp questions in the Commons and puts down some searching ones on the House Order Paper as important function of any opposition MP.

"In short, he is an experienced political trooper and not one of the Conservative intellectuals."

That last observation could be taken as a swipe by the Post at the Nice Nellies of the Opposition who sit around in their political dream - world, content to wait for the Government to "fall over and play dead."

And that it isn't going to do — not with Two-Fisted Trudy keeping government store.

But Coates is in there daily trying — and more often than not succeeding — in giving Liberal Spokesperson Trudeau the reputation of being, on occasion, wasteful and extravagant, political ammunition.

Here's how — with these questions on the Commons Order Paper:

"How many members of the cabinet, and who are they, have special facilities such as kitchenettes, bathrooms, showers, driers, bars, sleeping quarters attached to their offices — and what is the cost of installing, boarding and commission chairmen can match them in such comforts and conveniences?"

"How many civil servants have been demoted or dismissed because they weren't bilingual, and what was the language of the individual in each case?"

"How many cabinet ministers have offices in their constituencies maintained at government expense and is each one in the office in a federal building and if not what is the rent?"

"How many of the prime minister's assistants have assistants of their own and what are their names, positions and salaries?"

"How many written communications have been sent from each of the provinces about the quality of the postal service since this government and the new communications minister took over?"

"How many executive and special assistants to cabinet ministers are there and what are the names, positions and salaries of all those paid more than $18,000?"

Cabinet ministers hate having to answer questions like those — and answer they must — and hate Coates for asking them.

Feeding the Birds

Ottawa Journal

A concerned caller reminds us that bird temperatures are another reminder that we must not fail in our winter duty of feeding birds. But thinking of feeding birds in terms of a "duty" is too sober and misses the point. Feeding birds is fun, for it brings life and song and action to the dreary reaches of a yard sleeping under soft mounds of snow. It encourages children (and adults) to become curious about what's a chickadee and what's a nuthatch. It is challenging to try, year after year without success, to "tame" just one of that independent flock. On the practical side, it can warm even a sour Scotsman's heart to know that not a single crumb is being wasted. It is, most of all, the beginning of a quiet and interesting by in life that can be rewarding all year round, in town and country — and it's a small happiness available to all.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 29, 1970 . . .

John Palliser was born 183 years ago today—in 1807 —on his father's estate in Ireland. He came to Canada for the first time at the age of 46 for a hunting trip and received governmental recognition for a little book of reminiscences. Between 1857 and 1861 he commanded an official exploration party mapping southern Alberta and is commemorated by the Palliser Range of mountains and the Palliser Triangle of cattle range grassland.

1856—The Victoria Cross was established by royal warrant.

1859—More than 1,500 persons were killed in 20 villages destroyed by a series of earthquakes in the Bushire area of Iran.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—the United States 3rd Army smashed back into Germany crossing the Our River frontier from Belgium; Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army crossed the German frontier west and northwest of Poznan, 93 miles from Berlin; the Americans took San Fernando, 34 miles from Manila.

Fruits of Permissiveness

Orillia Packet and Times

The horrible and horrifying acts of brutal murder and sadism unfolded like some ghastly nightmare, in police indictments of a group of hippies charged following a series of revolting murders in California's lush suburbia, must surely give America pause. Like the notorious Moors Murder case which shook Britain recently, the perverted savagery of these latest killings is merely the ultimate and inevitable product of a philosophy which holds that self is sovereign and gratification is all, which exalts the socially irresponsible and derides the concept of an accepted morality. It is also yet another indictment of the concept of "mass man," and his dreary urban existence, from which even the shared squalor of hippie life represents an escape.

In the hippie movement, and its accompanying aura of protest, our society is reaping the reaction to its emphasis on the material aspects of life, and the resultant corruption of its standards. The security - conscious adult begets the bored, sheltered child. But in our self-indulgent tolerance of what we know to be wrong for society, we are sowing a wild wind, and must reap a whirlwind of violence, murder and moral nihilism.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

January 29, 1950.

Members of the local Knights of Columbus, Order of the Alhambra Caravan 71, got together at the Golden Horse Inn where a delicious dinner was enjoyed. Frank Domenico was chairman of the evening and introduced the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Killeen, of the Toronto Alhambra Caravan. After the dinner the members adjourned to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Domenico, Dundas St., where the balance of the evening was spent, terminating with delicious refreshments. Prize winners of the games were Mrs. George Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allore and Ed. Lee.

Don Clarke, son of Vernon Clarke, of Hamilton, who is attending Queen's University, spent the weekend with his grandparents, Alderman and Mrs. Clarke, Foster Ave.

30 YEARS AGO

January 28, 1940.

Outlining the past year's activities, the 47th annual report of the Belleville YMCA directors was given in the Association building at which time the various departments reported through General Secretary J. E. Shortt, who referred to the extensive service and programs as fostered by the "Y" during the past year. "Our YMCA served as a real community home for many organizations of the city and district. In all 306 different groups and organizations used the building for a total of 306 meetings during 1939. Free beds were provided to the needy and homeless, and meals for those without funds," related Secretary Shortt in review. Operating Disbursements $10,165.13; Operating Receipts $7,289.85; Deficit on Operation $2,376.28. This deficit was taken care of by transfer of funds from public subscription account.

40 YEARS AGO

January 29, 1930.

Mrs. Leslie Ashley of Madoc is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Faulkner in this city.

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Reeve of Sidney township, was elected Warden of the County of Hastings for this year.

Mrs. C. H. Glow, Patterson St. is visiting her parents in Brockville.

Mrs. Eugene Brennan of Rochester is visiting her mother, Mrs. P. J. Lee, Queen St.

Mr. A. T. Embury of Bancroft, MP for Hastings-Peterborough, was a visitor in town today.

50 YEARS AGO

January 29, 1920.

The residents of Frankford desire to be incorporated as a village; the population is now close to 900. The matter was presented before the County Council by Dr. J. N. Simmons and was referred to the proper committee for consideration.

Miss C. H. Green, superintendent of the Belleville General Hospital, has returned to the city after spending several days in Toronto.

What's A Billion?

Nixon Believes It's A Lot in War Against Inflation

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon's decision to commandeer prime television time to publicly veto Congress' health, education and welfare appropriation bill demonstrates his willingness to make an emotional election-year issue out of government spending.

He thus sent back to Congress Tuesday the bill granting the department $19,700,000,000 — something more than $1,000,000,000 more than Nixon asked.

In going directly to the people with his plea that to let the bill go through would be surrender in the battle against inflation, Nixon dramatized again the importance he places on a balanced budget, and possibly even a small surplus.

He put up a good argument.

But so do opponents, mostly Democrats, who tend to say in effect: "What's a billion?"

Indeed, in a budget of close to $200,000,000,000 it is difficult to see that $1,000,000,000 could make an appreciable difference. Equally unclear is why Nixon would choose to make war between the White House and Capitol Hill on this issue unless he is certain of winning.

Both sides express varying degrees of confidence they will win, but the Democratic majorities in both Houses would need Republican help to pull it off.

On the surface, it would seem easier to argue the proposition that health and education spending is vital and that the amount in question isn't going to fine inflation all that much.

But Nixon has done a pretty convincing job of persuading many Americans that inflation can be fatal and that a balanced budget is the first step toward a cure.

Also, his arguments that former presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson also opposed some of the spending he is opposing and that much of it is wasteful or goes into middle-class institutions rather than the ghettos, carry a lot of weight.

As an example, he said it provides $6,000,000 for 500,000 persons "who live in the richest county in America" Montgomery County, Md., a Washington suburb — "and only $3,000,000 for the 3,000,000 people who live in the 100 poorest counties."

It is in this context that politics rears it head. Some $600,000,000 of the money goes into the "impacted aid" scheme, whereby the federal government gives money to aid schools in areas where large numbers of federal government workers strain local facilities.

These schools are not always among the richest, but nothing has been done because it benefits 375 of the 435 congressional districts.

All 435 seats—along with one-third of the 100 Senate seats—go on the line in November elections.

But in reply to charges it is playing politics, congress can quite rightly demonstrate its concern over inflation by pointing to the $5,000,000,000 it has already cut from fiscal 1970 appropriations bills—including more than $3,000,000,000 from the defence department.

Hastings County Has 132 Blind

There are 132 blind persons in Hastings County reported the field secretary, Roy Desmond, to the Hastings County Advisory Board of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, when the Board met recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holden, 562 Foster Avenue, Belleville. Of these, 58 reside in the Belleville area, 31 in Trenton and 40 in other communities throughout the county.

The use of the talking-book machine is popular among the blind of this district and during his recent visitation to the blind in the area, Mr. Lesperance received a request for one from a newly registered blind person.

During the discussion of Christmas visitations by Board members, Mrs. G. Hughes of Tweed reported distributing the CNIB's gift of $3.00 to each of the 11 blind persons in the Tweed district.

At the same time, she presented each of them with a box of chocolates, a gift from the Tweed Kinettes. F. Fairman informed the Board that he had received several letters of thanks from the local blind persons to whom he had given the CNIB's money-gift during a personal visit at Christmas.

Quinte St. Lawrence Hall, Kingston, the residence built in 1956 for the blind of this area, has only one vacancy at present according to the field secretary, Gordon Shepherd, who also attended this Board meeting. It now costs $178 a month to live in residence there, or 80 per cent of the boarder's income if the former amount is beyond his means.

According to the campaign chairman, T. Cunningham, $6,597. has been collected to date from the canvass in the county. This amount is approximately $1,000 less than last year's total.

In her report on the Wists Cane Club, Mrs. H. Robles informed the board that the club would hold its 39 birthday party on March 21 or April 4, 1970.

The Chairman, H. Clark, told the board that he had received a request from the Belleville Theatre Guild for several hundred Eye Bank brochures for distribution at the Guild's current production "Wait Until Dark", a play about the blind wife of a New York photographer. Mr. Lesperance provided the brochures, as the C.N.I.B. considered this an excellent way for more people to become aware of "the gift of sight by proxy".

Before the meeting adjourned, Mr. Clark announced that the board's next meeting would be held on March 31, 1970 and that February 1-7 would be "Talk Club Week". A social hour followed, hosted by Mrs. Holden.

Suddenly, Canadian Trade Gets New, Appealing Look

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

A three month tour across Canada is dispelling from any point of view.

Particularly if you visit every major city to tour the industrial and manufacturing plants.

And you must always be eyeballing, asking questions and adding to the open reference file already established in the back of your mind.

That's how it is for the nine assistant trade commissioners in Belleville yesterday on a current tour of Ontario.

And, for the first time, two of the officers are women.

The job these young people have set out to undertake is not only complex, but vital to the Canadian economy.

Each of them will play an important role in selling Canadian products wherever they are posted overseas, while at the same time maintaining connecting links between companies in Canada.

For Lucille Lee and Patricia Marsden, this is the kind of career that offers a unique challenge ready for the taking.

Both girls are university graduates, and have a special interest in business, particularly marketing.

Positions as trade commissioners were open to women since 1955 and Lucille and Patricia will be the first two women officers ever employed by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

When asked why they chose this type of career, both girls agreed that to them it not only sounded intriguing but matched their own interests in business and marketing.

They could be posted anywhere in the world — from Paris to Washington, D.C.

And that fact doesn't worry them a bit.

In fact, they are looking forward to it.

"Most of the trade commissioner posts are established, and are usually a part of the Canadian Embassy," explained Miss Marsden.

"The bulk of our work will be concerned with answering many of the inquiries that pour into trade commission offices every day. We will be analysing the market in the particular country we are going ahead with a program of work planned back at the department in Ottawa," added Miss Lee.

But challenge seems to be the key.

"I look upon this job as an adventure, as I do anything that is new. Naturally, anything that is new will have a certain degree of excitement, too," Lucille pointed out.

The four-week eastern tour the assistant trade commissioners are on now is not the end. There will be three weeks but Wakt, and three weeks in the Maritimes.

The tour is designed to provide the young officers with a broad knowledge of the Canadian economy, and to enable them to gain first-hand information on Canadian export trade.

Interspersed with the on-training tour, each of the assistant trade commissioners must be proficient in speaking and writing both English and French.

If they are not, the officers are put through a nine-week crash language course aimed at making them bilingual.

Main requirements for the position of a trade commissioner are that he have a university degree, and be under 30 years of age.

At the present time, there are 250 trade commissioners in the Department. About 190 of these are working abroad, in 74 posts in 53 countries.

Before arriving in Belleville the group toured industrial and manufacturing sites in Toronto, Windsor, Hamilton and Kingston.

Lessons Demand Serious Concentration

Winter Means Courses for Teachers

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

No one, the education critics charge, is studying the Hall - Dennis report on education, subtitled Living and Learning.

Perhaps the reason is that educators are busy putting it into action.

A case in point is the in - service training and winter courses for teachers now being conducted in Belleville by both the separate and public school boards.

Two winter courses, one in language arts another in science, have been underway in the county since October.

Workshops for teachers have become common practice, like the session now being held for kindergarten and primary teachers in Hastings school area 4 — the south east portion of the county.

Consultants from the department of education's Kingston office are conducting one-day session for kindergarten and primary grade teachers on the theme: "Young children living and learning in a responsive environment."

Purpose is to acquaint teachers with new learning aids and how to use them. Theory behind the living - and-learning concept of teaching young children, is that youngsters believe only what they see, hear and touch. Basic to abstract learning is familiarity with objects in the everyday environment. By manipulating blocks and modelling clay, sand, water and even dice, youngsters unconsciously teach themselves many of the basic skills necessary for the development of language and mathematical skills.

Eighty teachers are involved in the in-service training program — slated to end Feb. 11. Sessions have been held at Queen Elizabeth School, and the teachers themselves are instructed by the - and - learning method. Before they are allowed to take the methods of instruction back to their classrooms they must spend at least a half day up to their elbows in concoction like modelling clay, puzzles and even mud-pie making.

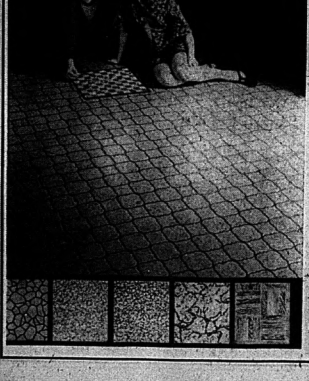
Vast Mine In Yukon



FARO, Y.T. (CP) — The Yukon of poet Robert Service held of riches leaping to mature . . . as I pour the tide of my riches into the eager lap of the world."

One of the riches is a 61,000,000-ton body of lead-zinc-silver ore being worked by Anvil Mining Corp. Ltd. The company formally dedicated Wednesday its $64,000,000 mine near here.

Faro leaped to stature as an instant town of 3,000 because of the mine. A forest fire last June caused heavy damage in the bidding townsite but the town was completed last month.

Mothers on the Move

Looking over Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled material are Mrs. Dorothy Locke, Mrs. Helen Wilbur, Mrs. Sheila Alexander. They will be helping campaign for funds in Belleville and district on Feb. 2.

City Marching Mothers Prepare For 'Ability Fund' Campaign

"Helping one's neighbor who is not as well of as one-self" is the principle behind the work of the Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled. On Monday, Feb. 2 this organization will be campaigning under the banner of the "Ability Fund," formerly "March of Dimes".

This week a large number of marchling mothers are preparing for the all-out campaign. General chairman is Mrs. R. S. Morphy and the chief marching mother this year will be Mrs. Newt Wilbur. Since her daughter developed polio in the early '50s Mrs. Wilbur has been active in the organization. She and the others involved hope to collect $7,000 from the citizens of Belleville and district. Last year $6,520 was raised. Over 600 people will be marching for the cause.

The Rehabilitation Foundation is a non-profit organization working throughout Ontario to rehabilitate the disabled by means of employment in industry and offices and in sheltered workshops or at home.

It was founded in Ontario in 1951 as the Ontario Chapter of the Canadian Foundation for Poliomyelitis but its present name was accepted in 1961 to show its concern for those disabled from any cause. It provides professional consultation and rehabilitation services to any volunteer agency which is interested in assisting the disabled.

There is continual co-operation between the foundation and the government including a referral program. The Foundation provides mechanical aids such as wheelchairs for those who must stay at home. It also sets up assessment shops where those wishing to be helped are interviewed and tested to determine their potential.

Those who cannot go out of the home to work do it at home and with the Marina Creations project volunteer women teach disabled persons how to make luxury gifts.

Swimming programs are also provided as a further aid. The organization hopes to provide more workshops in the year to come and with the aid of local citizens towards this worthwhile cause its dream may come true.

Burns' Supper Held At St. Andrew's Church

CAMPBELLFORD — A large crowd turned out on Friday night to attend a Burn's Supper at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Campbellford. The usual pattern of the event was followed which included the address to the Haggis by Thomas Moir after the Haggis had been formally presented in true Scottish tradition by Hector MacMillan and Murray Locke.

The toast to the immortal bard was proposed by Francis De Carroll, who read some of the well known Burns' poems and Scottish songs were sang.

The entertainer of the evening was Mr. Andrew Murdison, who was born in Scotland, and after many years in the entertainment world, is in Canada and in his native Scotland, now resides in Campbellford. His rendition of songs and stories received enthusiastic response from the audience. Present as his special guests were Mr. Murdison's two daughters, Mrs. Humphries and Mrs. Noble both of Toguin.

Mrs. Humphries can be heard on CHO in a Consumer's Relations program.

Mr. Murdison reminded the audience that the 213th birthday of Robert Burns was also the 100th birthday of the late Harry Lauder.

Rev. W. McBride was chairman for the evening and introduced Mr. Murdison and thanks was expressed by Mrs. Don Walters.

Parliamentary Procedure Topic At Quinte Secretaries 'Meeting'

The Bay of Quinte Chapter of the National Secretaries Association held their January meeting at the Quinte Hotel, on January 22.

Ron Hayes presided assisted by Gerry Dudley who introduced by Mrs. Phyllis Hayes.

Mr. Hayes introduced the guest to the proper method of conducting a business meeting the principles of parliamentary procedure. With the assistance of a panel of Jaycee members of Belleville, Bev McCleod, Fred Mickelson, Bill Lougheed and Tom Ross, Mr. Hayes showed by example proving time drags on people do not ask for shield on the subject at hand, disorder reigns and in the end no one is really sure what was actually decided. Following, a meeting was conducted using Parliamentary procedures and Mr. Ron Hayes pointed out that the purpose of every meeting is to accomplish the objects of a group as a group upon some matter.

The Jaycee members were thanked for a most beneficial discussion by Miss Linda Hayes.

President, Helen Worrell chaired the business session.

The members' knowledge of shorthand used in Radio and T.V. was tested by Mary Grace with Mrs. Hayes as guest. Assisted tokens were distributed by Mrs. Joan Scott. Secretaries of week, Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Mary Klebsattel reported on the success of the "Book of Year" award. President, Mrs. Helen Worrell reported she will be speaking to Campbellford High School classes on "Office Etiquette".

Mrs. Kirby Ellis reported to and at Librarian Jaycee on up-to-date book of Jaycee activities for members to peruse.

Mrs. Hayes presented each evening "participated in an election sale of donations from Chapter members.

Information Centre Offers Program Material

By DORIS CLARK

Information about current affairs and social issues is often hard to find, and why not give the phone a whirl? The Centre is a whole series of them you need all the help you can get.

There's a place to go for it. The Social Research Information Centre is a co-operative effort by Ottawa's federal civil servants, the Canadian Association for Adult Education and the Canadian Welfare Council. At this Centre, guides are prepared by Canadians, listing facts and figures with social cultural issues and events.

Drop a note to Social Research, Information Centre, 112 Kent Street, Ottawa 4, Ontario, Department of Secretary of State, Ottawa, Canada. Say just what you want, and when you want it for, and give them time to do a job for you.

Dear Doris: My husband has won an all expense paid seven-day trip for two to a northern resort. He is thrilled but I am rather apprehensive. We are from a small town and I am not sure of the proper way to do things.

I do not drink or smoke and have no desire to start, yet when drinks are offered, I don't want to embarrass my hostess or put her to extra work of getting something special for me. How do I refuse politely?

Tipping people is also something we seldom do here, so would appreciate some information on who and how much to tip. — Needing Do's and Don'ts.

Dear Needing: For one thing, today's considerate hostess offers an alternative to the alcoholic beverages (ginger ale perhaps, or coffee) and never a comment made. If you see none, simply say, "No, thank you." No need to feel guilty about it.

I'll send you my booklet "For the Woman Who's Going Places" (supplied by Air Canada), and a short about tipping. Happy landings.

* * *

Dear Doris: I wonder if your readers could help me find a very valuable poem I quite by accident lost some time ago.

It was about a mother, her children married or soon wishing she had the time then when they were small that she has now. There were no regrets; only if there had been more time when they were small.

It was so true to life, and I would give anything to have it again, and to pass it on to my children. — Avid Reader.

Dear Avid: Sounds intriguing. Maybe a reader can come up with it for us. If you does, where do we send it? Send it to me, name and address.

(There are Canadian resources to help solve your problem. Write to Doris for direction, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Ann Landers

'Ice Cube' Letters Irritate Reader

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: All those "Ice Cube" letters were my watch for me. If some old virgin as a service, why don't you? Well, I'm not a virgin, but I still reflect a strong preference for intact brides, very old wives and very married women. I'm not a prude, I'm square. I'm square enough that a great many high-minded fellows who worship at the shrine of chastity will be obliged to settle for someone else. — KNOW-ITALL

Now who try every trick in the book to break down it's resistance, then call her names when she won't play? Sick. One of my closest friends nearly jumped off the Golden Gate Bridge because she had given herself to a man who spoke highly of marriage. After he got what he had his way, he wrote her a letter saying, "I could never marry you now. I am completely disillusioned with you."

It is a moral outrage you said, "No man has the right to demand a pristine bride unless he can bring to the marriage bed the same quality of purity." Please say it again. — KNOW-ITALL

* * *

DEAR KNOB: You said it again and I thank you. And it might surprise you to know, my desk, that many males wrote in express the same point of view. A gander that comes through like that can't be all bad.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last winter my carpeting was ruined by delivery men who tracked through the house with boxes, packages and such. We recarpeted in May and I made up my mind to stop at nothing to keep our new carpets looking nice.

This morning a delivery man started to clomp through the house in his muddy shoes! I caught him just in time and politely if he would please remove his shoes. (Wiping on a mat does no good. It still leaves tracks.) The man looked at me as if I had lost my mind. Then I repeated my request in my politest, "You're nuts, Lady!" He dumped the crate and stalked out.

I was so upset I called his place of employment to make a protest. The boss was very helpful. I assume we discussed this incident and my husband hiked with the delivery man. Our two sons-agers agreed with him. My mother sided with me. I feel very strongly about this and I'm not going to let him get away with it. What is your opinion? — YONKERS.

DEAR YONK: Sorry, the vote is four to two. I'm with the opposition. Since spotless carpets are so important in your life, I suggest that you put down newspapers or old rugs or a plastic sheet. Delivery men should not be asked to take off their shoes.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I divorced my husband fifteen years ago. Our son was then eight. I settled for a modest sum of money because he didn't have much. He agreed to support the boy until he was 21 and put him through college. He kept his word.

Two months ago a relative informed me that my ex-husband is making money hand over fist and lives like a king. (He has remarried and has a young family.) If he should die and not mention my son in his will, can we sue his estate and collect?

— SLIGHTLY REGRETFUL IN ILLINOIS.

DEAR SLIGHTLY: In Illinois a parent need not include a child in his will if he chooses not to. If a parent dies without a will, however, the child is entitled to something, as a natural heir.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is no big deal, but I'd like your opinion. When my cousin visited me recently, she brought along a record album which belonged to one of her friends. She said her friend didn't know she had "borrowed" the album so we had to be extra careful with it. When my cousin left, she forgot to take the album.

A few weeks later I was taking the record to my cousin and it got a little warped from being accidentally left on the car seat while my cousin was in the store.

Now my cousin says I owe her $5.00. I say she is responsible for the record. What do you say? — JUDY AND LISA.

DEAR J. AND L.: You both sound like a couple of dollies to me. Split the cost of the record and forget it.

U.C.W. Meeting

COLLEGE HILL UCW

The 1969 officers of College Hill United Church Women were installed by Rev. Roy Veasey during church service on Sunday morning, Jan. 26. Following is the slate of officers for the coming year: past president Mrs. A. Dickens, president Mrs. A. McIntosh; vice - president Mrs. A. Ingram; secretary Mrs. R. McDonald; treasurer Mrs. J. Emerson; corresponding secretary Mrs. E. Phillips; press secretary Mrs. J. McLaren; social convener Mrs. R. Neal and assistant social convener Mrs. A. Dickens. Various committee chairmen were also elected. They are finance Mrs. B. Moorcroft; flower Mrs. F. Maybaum; assistant Mrs. M. Gooderham; supply and welfare Mrs. G. M. Bailey; Christian education Mrs. M. Moorcroft; card convener Mrs. E. Rogers; Christian Centre of stewards Mrs. Bernice Moore.

On the previous Wednesday evening this UCW held their first meeting of the year in the church parlors. There was a attendance enjoyed hearing as guest speaker Miss Doreen Reynolds, England to visit prior to her duties at the OSD, full of her experiences during the past two summers as a volunteer worker at the Grenfell Mission in Newfoundland. We find Grenfell which is a medical, missionary among the deep sea fishermen and personality England to visit this mission as a relief to the great needs of the people there.

In 1892 his great work was begun and at St. Anthony's a hospital was established which was the basis of the Grenfell mission.

Miss Reynolds spent time with the young children in church schools staying in the homes of the natives, and she also lived for a time in a former children's orphanage. Later, she worked in the hospital there and at Harrington Harbour across the Strait on the Quebec shores. Her talk gave her audience an insight into the social and spiritual life of these people and informed them of the great need in another part of our own country. Much is being done to help the people of Newfoundland, but much more can be done if volunteers are available.

A display of handicrafts which she brought home included ivory and talc carvings, duffel baby seals, jacket and bag and a wood carving.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Verna Phillips and thanked by Mrs. Susan Mathews, both of whom were program conveners.

Many items of business were dealt with. A small membership fee is requested from members. The annual turkey supper was discussed and the date set for Wed. Feb. 26. It was decided that the "lunch committee for the month will also be responsible for one woman in the nursery on Sundays.

The devotion period was conducted by Mrs. Kay Dowling and Mrs. Pat King.

The lunch conveners served refreshments afterwards.

Quinte Gem, Mineral Club Enjoys Film

The January meeting of the club was very interesting and was enjoyed by everyone in attendance. Despite the severe cold weather, fifty - six members were on hand to see and view the film shown at this past meeting by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Andrews.

After the business portion of the meeting was turned over by Mr. Andrews with the assistance of Mrs. Fennell, as projectionist.

The journey was headed northward, initially to collect mineral and fossil specimens and, to pan for gold, and his wife, Mabel, being an artist, took full advantage of the beautiful scenery to sketch pictures which she weren't helping her husband to search for one of the specimens or specimens they acquired.

The trek was a long one, covering more than eleven thousand miles, starting from Belleville to Alaska, including a side trip from Haines, Alaska to Prince Rupert, British Columbia. From the Skeleton-town River west, an abundance of mineral and fossils were found, such as petrified wood from the Saskatchewan River, and specimens from Edmonton, Alberta, also Jasper and Chest in the Alfred Lake district of British Columbia. Near Hope, British Columbia, they found some of her sketching, while they absorbed the beauty which surrounded them.

The highlight of the trip was, of course, panning for "Gold", in the Fraser River creeks and river beds of the gold rush era. The slides showed both of them panning for just a little bit of "yellow".

They visited many of the coastal towns of Alaska and British Columbia, including the remains of the town recently destroyed by earthquake. Schools of whales were observed playing in the shallow waters along the coast line.

A salmon dinner at a campsite with a friendly couple from Spokane, Washington added pleasure to their trip.

"We were amazed at the once fabulous town of Dawson City, which during its hey day, had a population of seven-day trip for two to a northern resort. He is thrilled but I am rather apprehensive. We are from a small town and I am not sure of the proper way to do things.

A Good Recipe for Borsch Without Using Soup Bone

By MARY MOORE

An animated reader wrote "My family loves borsch, asked me to make some borsch. I went to the meat counter and found a side beef bone turned through in an 8" cardboard box! But it's costs. There was very little meat on it. How can I economize by making soup stock or is it? I have to pay that price for the bone?"

I thought she had a valid complaint so I made borsch for us the first cold night without a beef bone. The consensus of opinions from our tasters was that it was good. Actually it is a thick vegetable soup that is economical and I hope it will please our frustrated reader's husband.

* * *

BORSCH

(a Russian vegetable soup)

1 cup (1 medium) onions, shredded or finely chopped

2 medium carrots shredded

2 cups shredded beets (or one 20-oz. can shoestring beets drained)

1 cup shredded cabbage

6 cups hot water (divided — 4 cups, 2 cups)

2½ tbsps. liquid Bovril

2 tbsps. butter

2 tbsps. vinegar

1 tsp. salt

1 tsp. sugar

¼ tsp. flavor salt

To the prepared vegetables add two cups hot water and simmer covered 20 min. Add remaining ingredients and simmer ½-hr. longer. Serve in large soup bowls with a spoonful of fresh dairy sour cream on top.

VARIATIONS: 1) If you have beef bones in your freezer that you are aching to use up make beef broth by boiling them for three to four hours, chilling, skimming off fat and using it instead of the water and Bovril in above recipe. You may have to add some Bovril to boost the flavor, especially if your soup bones had no meat on them. 2) The color of the beets fades as the soup cooks, but if you want to reduce the amount of beets to one cup, add one cup diced raw potatoes. 3) There are a host of many variations of borsch as there are Russian cooks and some of them add tomatoes.

As I write this it's sere weather so have a go at this economical rib-sticking soup to warm your family.

Points for Parents

Housewives To Pay More For Spices

CALGARY (CP) — Having a little spice in your life is going to cost more in 1970.

Poor weather influences spice crops around the world and poor weather was the rule in spice-growing areas last year, says a recent release from the Canadian Spice Association.

"Too much or too little rain dramatically affects the prices Canadian housewives pay for their favorite spices and herbs" says the release.

As well, spice millers are concerned about the availability of many of the more popular items.

Black pepper has more than doubled in price because of crop failure in Indonesia, the major producer.

Celery seed, popular in pickling, is more than three times the price of last year's crop.

Paprika prices have advanced sharply because of heavy rains at harvest time in Spain.

French-grown herbs—marjoram, savory and thyme—are more costly and difficult to obtain because of a long, dry summer.

A crop failure in Madagascar has sent the price of cloves soaring to more than five times their usual cost.

Ginger from Jamaica and India is at the highest price level since the Second World War.

Canadians Lose Talking Title

MONTREAL (CP)—After 11 years as the world's most talkative telephone users, Canadians have lost their title to the United States. But they went down fighting.

In losing the title, Canadians averaged an impressive 682.9 telephone conversations per person during 1968, a gain of 25.2 conversations per person over 1967.

But it wasn't enough to beat the U.S. increase of 33 conversations per person, which boosted their top-talk place with 701 conversations per person for the year. The U.S. had trailed Canada by only 0.7 conversations per person at the end of 1967.

The statistics are in The World's Telephones, the annual compilation of world-wide telephone statistics. The figures are for 1968 because it takes about a year to compile them.

For the 16th consecutive year, world telephone growth topped six per cent. Nearly 16,000,000 new telephones went into service during 1968 to bring the total to 237,000,000. Canada added 435,294 phones, bringing its total to 8,838,776. By the end of 1969, Canada's total was an estimated 9,300,000.

Of the world's cities, New York leads with 5,723,353 phones. Tokyo has 3,647,000, London 3,190,000 and Paris 2,353,414. Toronto and Montreal lead Canadian cities.

Anglers Clashing With Fishermen

TORONTO (CP) — G. H. U. Bayly, deputy minister of lands and forests, warned Wednesday there is a major conflict developing between commercial fishermen and anglers.

Mr. Bayly told the annual meeting of the Ontario Council of Commercial Fisheries the conflict could increase as sports fishing increases in popularity.

Already it has become difficult at times to defend commercial fishermen against public criticism, he added, citing complaints that some commercial operators set nets illegally, allow fish to waste, deal in contraband rainbow trout and deliberately set nets to interfere with anglers' boats.

But the deputy minister said his department knows some of these claims are exaggerated and "much of the conflict is engineered by the sports fishing group."

He suggested commercial operators could protect themselves by making sure anglers do not have any grounds for criticism.

Otherwise, he warned, it may be desirable for commercial operators to switch to different species if studies show they are competing with anglers.

Later, Norman Baldwin, representing the United States-Canadian Great Lakes Fishery Commission, said a program to control sea lamprey on the upper lakes should be completed this year.

He said the U.S. has put up $200,000 to complete chemical treatment of lamprey spawning streams on Lake Huron, Canada has put up $89,000 and a similar plan on Lake Superior has cut the lamprey population to between 10 and 20 per cent of its spawning level.

Police Plotted To Save Genius

TORONTO (CP) — An inquiry into the conduct of senior police officers was told Wednesday that several of them intervened for a research physician charged with drunk driving.

The physician, who died last year, was mentioned by former constable Peter Last and Constable Ian Samuel as the inquiry moved into its fourth week. Commissioners asked the press not to name him.

Deputy Chief John Murray, named as one of the officers who interfered, told the inquiry hospital colleagues of the doctor were concerned at his drinking because he was capable of brilliant research.

The hospital initiated a plot to arrest the doctor, give him a taste of jail and then withdraw the charges, Deputy Chief Murray said, and a member of the staff would call police the next time the doctor "went on a rampage."

"They said every effort had been made to get him to take psychiatric treatment, that he was a genius who had to be saved. The plan was, after he had suffered by being locked up, he would agree to treatment."

After a call May 24, 1965, the doctor was arrested and charged with impaired driving. He was arrested again June 18 on drunk driving and both charges to be heard Aug. 26.

At that time, Deputy Chief Murray said, the charges were withdrawn at the request of Assistant Crown Attorney James Crossland.

Asked by Judge Charles O. Bick, inquiry chairman, for more information, he said:

"It was in 1967 that I got a call about him again. The man had gone from bad to worse. I was asked to go down to the court at city hall on behalf of the medical profession.

"There he was, with three days beard on his face and a torn, dirty shirt. I discussed this man's case in open court for more than an hour. But he was given 90 days in jail.

"I did what I could for this man. I thought he was worth saving and I tried. I had no regrets then for what I did, and I have none now."

In other testimony Tuesday, a vice-president of Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd. said he did not know why a charge of impaired driving laid against him in October, 1966, was dropped.

Three police officers testifying before the inquiry also said they did not know why the charges against George William Astle was dropped.

Their comments came in response to testimony Friday by Crown Attorney John Kerr and Constable Ian Samuel that Astle went free because Constable Conlin Woodcock did not appear at the trial.

Both Kerr and Samuel said Woodcock later told them he did not appear because Deputy Police Chief John Murray had told him to stay away.

Fewer Farmers Needed, Claim

WINNIPEG (CP) — Less wheat and fewer farmers will mean a healthier farm economy, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture was told Wednesday.

The double message was delivered to the federation's annual meeting, which ends today by the federal ministers closely in touch with farm affairs.

Otto Lang, the minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, said the farmer who already has a stockpile of wheat—"in excess of the maximum sales possibilities"—simply should not plant any more this year.

"A prosperous future for our western grain farmers requires that the current surplus of wheat be substantially reduced and this can only be accomplished by growing less," he said.

Agricultural Minister H. A. Olson, meanwhile, said that even at the present rate of departures from margins which bring "we still still have twice as many farmers as can economically earn a decent living from agriculture at the end of the decade."

He said the government's goal is to devise programs to ease the transition from farm to city, and to assist those who wish to retire to be able to do so with dignity.

Survival Test of Classic

By STONEY J. HARRIS
Thoughts at Large:

The only true test of a classic work of literature is its ability to survive the stupidity of the people who teach it and the indifference of the people who study it.

• • •

We like to be told our bad qualities in private, so that we can more effectively conceal them in public.

• • •

Why should the second-best things in life be so much more expensive than the best things?

• • •

The main reason that all discussions of "freedom" get bogged down and end in the same disagreement they began in, is that the disputants both erroneously assume that "freedom" is a personal attribute when it is nothing but a social attribute.

• • •

What our parents used to call a "dark past" for a woman, we now term an "intriguing background."

• • •

Only the poor can be extravagant; the rich can be merely ostentatious.

• • •

What smug chalumen rarely find it comfortable to contemplate is Robert Frost's piercing observation that "You can be a rank leader as well as a rank outsider."

• • •

Few books on any subjects are so badly written as most books by professors of linguistics, who seem to know everything about language except how to use it.

• • •

(This seems to be true in other fields as well: Terence Reese, one of the world's most foremost bridge players, has remarked that nobody plays bridge worse than a professor of mathematics—except possibly a professor of psychology.)

• • •

Now that New Year's Day is but a faint memory, we are in a better position to appreciate the keenness of Proust's remark: "It is always during a passing state of mind that we make lasting resolutions."

• • •

Has anyone ever been indicted for "low" treason?

• • •

A "benefit" function is one at which the gross antics of the people who want to be seen generate the net proceeds that go to the people they would never want to be seen with.

• • •

Chronology is not the same as history; the 20th Century did not begin in January of 1901, but in August of 1914, and likewise the 21st Century began with the moon-landing this summer, not 30 years hence.

• • •

I must make a belated apology to readers in my Canadian papers for crediting the U.S. as the only country to celebrate Thanksgiving; the reference I consulted in my "Columbia Encyclopedia" neglected to mention the Canadian observance, and I failed to double-check it.

Photographs Identify Computer Centre Mob

MONTREAL (CP) — Fifteen photographs of persons smiling or waving clenched fists from windows of Sir George Williams University's computer centre last Feb. 11 were presented Wednesday at the trial of 11 Negro students charged with conspiring to wreck the multi-million-dollar centre.

A student employee of the computer centre testified she took the photographs "and none of the persons in the photos were employees in the centre."

Graham Fowler, 22, said he took the pictures the day a peaceful sit-in, which began Jan. 29, 1969, erupted into a $20,000,000 computer-smashing demonstration.

Up to CFL Teams to Outbid U.S. Offers for Draft Picks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Toronto Skates playing rights of three Canadians were taken in the two days of annual National Football League drafting of U.S. college graduates which wound up Wednesday along with the rights of four Canadian Football League imports.

All seven players could wind up playing in Canada next season, however, depending on the ability of Canadian clubs to outbid the U.S. team that 'drafted' them.

The Canadians selected, Jim Corrigal of Barrie, Ont., Zenon Andruszysky of Oakville, Ont., and Terry Moro of Ottawa, all graduate from U.S. colleges this spring.

Seven Canadian playing rights are owned by Toronto Argonauts.

Two of the U.S. players selected in the draft performed last season with Ottawa Rough Riders and the other two played with British Columbia Lions.

Offensive end Margene Adkins, who played out his option with the Rough Riders last season, was a second-round choice of Dallas Cowboys, who also took Andruszysky in the ninth round.

Ottawa running back Vic Washington was a fourth-round choice of San Francisco 49ers. In the same round, Pittsburgh Steelers drafted B.C. fullback Jim Evenson and B.C. flanker and defensive back Jake Scott went to Miami Dolphins in the seventh round.

Washington, Evenson and Scott also have a year remaining in their contract with the Canadian clubs, whose respective coaches felt they would honor the commitments.

Corrigal was fourth round choice by St. Louis Cardinals, had been the first Canadian named to an All-American team in his final season at Ohio State University.

Moro was a 14th round pick by Washington Redskins.

There was little reaction in the selections by the three Canadian teams who could suffer from the draft.

Carlos Costly 'Drawing Card'

NEW YORK (AP) — Sprinter John Carlos, the world's fastest human, will seek a whopping four-year professional football contract totalling between $600,000 and $1,000,000 although he has never played organized football, his adviser says.

"He's going to be some drawing card; his drawing power is fabulous," Robert (Pappy) Gault said Wednesday night after the 24-year-old Carlos became a 15th-round draft pick of Philadelphia Eagles, who will try him as a wide receiver.

"His reaction to being drafted was that it's the greatest thing in the world," Gault said. "He wanted to play on the East Coast. And we're going for $600,000 to $1,000,000."

Carlos was one of two track stars chosen Wednesday as the 20 professional football teams selected 200 more players.

In Vancouver, coach Jackie Parker said he would have been very surprised if Scott and Evenson had not been drafted.

"I feel both players will play out their options with us," Parker said. "But I know Scott has always been interested in playing in the U.S. and as a wide receiver he has an opportunity to make the Dolphins."

Parker said he felt Evenson as a running back would find it more difficult.

In Ottawa coach Jake Gotta was resigned to losing Adkins and Washington.

"I'm sorry to see Adkins go but, for Margene's sake, I'm pleased," Gotta said. "Dallas is close to home for him and he should be able to command a healthy contract there."

Washington said he felt he would "have been chosen higher had it not been for my option and my knee."

Washington underwent surgery on his right knee after a late-season injury in 1969.

Toronto coach Leo Cahill said he was interested in all three college stars, but he would have to discover whether they were interested in playing in Canada before he made any one of them an offer.

In the U.S., Gil Brandt, director of personnel for Dallas Cowboys, was particularly pleased with his club's acquisition of Adkins.

"He has the potential to be a super star," Brandt said.

"Football fans in the U.S. never heard of him, but if he had done the things here he did in Canada, his name would be a household word."

Evenson, Scott, Adkins and Washington did not complete their college educations in the U.S. Under NFL draft rules, they became eligible to be drafted in the year they would have graduated.

Not Goalies' Night

Irate Giacomin Chases Referee

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two National Hockey League goaltenders looked back in anger at the result of Wednesday night games, but not before one of them had chased a referee across the ice.

Ed Giacomin exhibited the most anger after a disputed goal against New York Rangers gave Los Angeles Kings a 5-4 victory before 7,662 fans, although Rogatien Vachon of Montreal Canadiens was no picture of happiness after allowing two quick goals and being replaced early in the second period.

"I'm mad all right," Vachon said later. "But the guy I'm mad at is me."

The Canadiens fared better than the Rangers, however, and wound up with a 5-4 victory over Minnesota North Stars to move into sole possession of second place in the East Division just two points behind New York.

In the other scheduled games, Toronto Maple Leafs played to a 4-4 tie with the Penguins at Pittsburgh, St. Louis Blues defeated the Seals 6-1 at Oakland and Philadelphia Flyers beat the Black Hawks 2-2 at Chicago.

Jim Peters led the Kings with two goals, while Bill Flett, Ross Lonsberry added the others. Lonsberry scored the winner from a scramble just as the buzzer sounded to end the game in Los Angeles.

A 15-minute argument resulted among referee Bob Sloan, linesmen Bill Morris and members of both clubs.

It was during this period that Giacomin was restrained by team-mates as he brushed the referee and chased him across the ice.

Vic Hadfield, Rod Gilbert, Walt Tkaczuk and Bob Nevin scored against Los Angeles goaltender Wayne Rutledge.

The 18,461 fans at Montreal saw the Canadiens win with a deadly power-play that accounted for three of the five goals.

Bobby Rousseau scored twice for Montreal, while John Ferguson got the winner after goals by Serge Savard and Ralph Backstrom. The Canadiens bombarded Minnesota goaltender Cesare Maniago with 45 shots.

Danny Grant, Bill Goldsworthy, Ray Cullen and Bob Barlow scored for the North Stars.

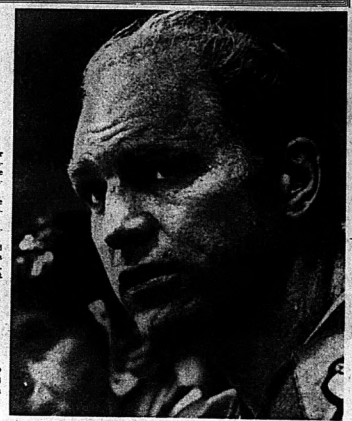
Vachon, who said he "wasn't ready" for the two goals that were scored in the first 56 seconds of the second period, was replaced by rookie Phil Myre, who allowed only one goal in the final 38 minutes and 29 seconds.

A small crowd of 4,290 at Pittsburgh saw a pair of teams score two goals 64 seconds apart late in the final period to gain the tie with the Leafs.

Keith McCreary scored twice for the Penguins, while Glen Sather and Dean Prentice also beat goaltender Bruce Gamble. Mike Walton, Paul Henderson, Murray Oliver and Jim McKenny beat Pittsburgh netminder Joe Daley.

Gary Dornhoefer's goal with his team short at 6:16 of the third period gave Philadelphia the tie before 16,666 fans at Chicago. Andre Lacroix scored the other Philadelphia goal, while Cliff Koroll and Chico Maki replied for Chicago.

Doug Favell for Philadelphia and Tony Esposito for Chicago handled the goaltending duties.



The tie moved the Black Hawks to within a single point of the fourth-place Detroit Red Wings, who hold down the last playoff in the East.

Wayne Maki scored two goals for St. Louis against goaltender Gary Smith, while Red Berenson, Jim Roberts, Phil Goyette and Andre Boudrias got the others.

Carol Vadnais scored the lone Oakland goal before a hometown crowd of 6,120.

Glenn Hall handled the goaltending duties for the Blues.

Three games are scheduled for tonight, with the North Stars at Boston against the Bruins, Philadelphia visiting Detroit and St. Louis at Los Angeles.

Another Accolade

Chicago Black Hawks' Bobby Hull, whose sizzling slap shot sets goalies trembling, has been named hockey's player of the decade by the Associated Press. Rangers Advance In Scoring Derby

Jean Ratelle and Walt Tkaczuk of New York Rangers both advanced in the National Hockey League individual scoring race Tuesday, although their team fell 5-4 to Los Angeles Kings.

Tkaczuk scored once, his 22rd goal of the season, and shifted into a share of second place with Boston Bruins' Phil Esposito at 37 points.

Ratelle's two assists moved him from a seventh place up to sixth, two points behind teammate Dave Balon, who has 49 points.

Bob Rousseau collected two goals in Montreal Canadiens 5-4 win over Minnesota North Stars and remained in 10th place.

Inside Job

Cup Relic Hoisted from Hall

TORONTO (CP) — A three-tiered silver collar, part of the base of the original Stanley Cup is resting from its Hockey Hall of Fame.

Curator Lefty Reid said Wednesday night that the collar was a museum piece engraved with the names of Stanley Cup champion team members between the 1923-24 and 1926-27 National Hockey League seasons.

He said he did not know exactly when the collar disappeared but that the theft occurred within the last week.

The collar was in a glass case about 15 inches square and 18 inches high and Reid said the entire piece was taken.

He said the value of the silver in the collar would probably amount to about $50, but "really, it is of no value to anyone but us."

"We hope that whoever took it will discard it and that publicity will acquaint the public with just what it is in case they find it."

It was the second theft at the Hall in the last nine months.

The Conn Smythe Trophy, Calder Trophy and Hart Trophy were stolen, April 9, 1969, and recovered by police five days later.

"That theft was the result of a break-in and police had finger prints to work on," Reid said.

"This is a different issue. The collar was obviously taken out of the hall during visiting hours and there is nothing to work on."

ANDY CAPP

Will Real Orr Please Stand Up?

TORONTO (CP) — Dick Beddoes, sports columnist with The Globe and Mail, said Wednesday he writes the syndicated Bobby Orr newspaper column on a free-lance basis for Bobby Orr Enterprises.

The column, syndicate across Canada by The Star, was discussed Tuesday at the special Senate committee on mass media meeting in Ottawa.

Senator Keith Davey, committee chairman, suggested the column was written by someone other than Orr, all-star defenceman with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League. Senator Davey said the public had a right to know whether Orr really wrote the column.

Beddoes said he confers constantly with Orr and lawyer Allan Eagleson, who handles Orr Enterprises, about the column, and both men approve it before it is syndicated.

Beddoes said the question of who writes the column "is a very trifling issue to come up at what should be a serious look at Canada's press."

"However, I now demand equal time with the senator to discuss this issue before his committee."

At the committee meeting Frank Swanson, member of the Calgary Herald, said he takes it in good faith from The Star syndicate that Orr writes the column himself.

In reply, Beddoes said:

"Mr. Swanson is very naive or more than coy when he suggests he doesn't know how syndicated columns of this kind are handled. In respect to the Orr column, it is his words set to my kind of music. Mr. Swanson should know that is the case with most ghost written."

South Africans Could Face Boycott by World of Sport

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — South Africa today faces rapidly growing threat of complete isolation in world sport following the government decision not to grant a visa to American Negro tennis star Arthur Ashe.

Already, the plans of South Africa's official policy of an sport-across-the-color-line, a minority of South African sportsmen were dismayed when Sports Minister Frank Waring Wednesday announced decision not of Ashe's application for a visit.

White tennis star Cliff Drysdale, who had supported Ashe's entry for the South African national championships in March, said: "We are going to be kicked out of the Davis Cup. This will only be the immediate consequence."

Waring said in his statement that Ashe would only be allowed in to the country as a member of the U.S. Davis Cup squad.

But the likelihood of South Africa's entering the U.S. in the Davis Cup in the near future is remote. The soonest they could clash would be if South Africa won the cup this year and if the U.S. reached the challenge round in 1980.

In London, the Davis Cup Nations Committee is holding a special meeting March 22, to consider "the exclusion of any country whose presence is likely to endanger the competition."

Observers in London believe the Ashe visa decision almost certainly will lead to new concerted moves to bar both South Africa and Rhodesia.

But while South African tennis players look to a gloomy future, athletes in other spheres also are pessimistic about the repercussions the government move could have on South African athletics in general.

All South Africa's major sports have been adversely affected by government policy in one way or another, and no one can see the situation improving.

Dave Marais, opposition United party legislator, and the party's spokesman on sport, said:

"There is little doubt that this petty racialistic action will be the last straw, and that we are moving fast now towards total isolation in world sport competitions."

Bearing the brunt of the government's decision is the South African Lawn Tennis Union.

Alf Chalmers, the union president, said he was deeply shocked by the news. "We still have faith in Ashe," he said in stating that he did not think the Negro star had intended to stir up any trouble if allowed to visit South Africa.

Ashe filed his application in New York last month to compete in the championships.

The anti-government newspaper, the Rand Daily Mail, said in an editorial that the racialistic government had reacted in a predictably obtuse way" over the Ashe affair.

"By refusing the Negro tennis player right of entry to South Africa it has delivered a grave blow to sport and served notice on the country that the fight on the fer right is on," it said.

"The world is unlikely to share the delusion that this is a 'policy' which can be 'lost one. The remark will be seen as naked racialism. A remarkable compound of opportunism and prejudice.

It said in another article that South Africa's exclusion from the Davis Cup is a foregone conclusion.

College Meet Off

WINNIPEG (CP) — Plans for a university hockey tournament in Winnipeg to fill the blank left by the cancellation of the 1979 world hockey tournament, have been called off.

Dave Anderson, athletic director at the University of Winnipeg, said Wednesday he had been attempting to line up such a tournament with the backing of some $25,000 from an anonymous sponsor.

But the idea was ditched when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association sanctioned a junior tournament for the week ending March 27 to April 2.

Windsor Minors Eliminated

PORT HURON, Mich. (CP) — Windsor's two entries in the eighth annual Silver Stick hockey North American championships for bantams and peewees were eliminated in their opening games Wednesday night.

Windsor lost 4-3 to St. Clair Shores in the first overtime period of a bantam AA contest and in peewee AAA play St. Clair Shores Roadrunners defeated Windsor 3-1. Roadrunners now meet Sarnia Rotary today.

The Sarnia team Wednesday night defeated Detroit 7-0.

In two peewee A games, Fraser, Mich., defeated Ann Arbor, Mich., 2-0 and St. Clair Oilers blanked Dearborn Sunnyside 5-0.

In a bantam A game, Dearborn scored a goal with second period of overtime to defeat Fraser 7-6.

Newly-formed Montreal Rink Clicks

MONTREAL (CP) — Lee Tobin's Montreal Caledonia rink, which has been together for only 15 games, will represent Quebec at the Canadian women's curling championship in Calgary Feb. 23-27.

The Caledonia foursome earned the Quebec provincial title Wednesday by beating Shirley Bradford's suburban Pointe Claire rink 7-5 in a playoff that went right down to the last rock.

Senior Phillips Paces Curling Seniors

TORONTO (CP) —Alfie Phillips Sr. of Toronto scored in an extra end Wednesday to defeat Bill Astle of Woodstock 7-6 in the fifth round of the Ontario senior curling championships.

Phillips, defending Canadian and Ontario champion, now is tied with Carl Asmussen of Kitchener with a 4-1 won-lost record. Asmussen, 1968 Ontario champion, defeated Mike Mernek of Ottawa 10-5 in the fifth round. Mernek is 3-2 while Astle is 1-4.

In other fifth-round play, Jack Wattie of Dundas defeated Lyall Carr of Trenton 10-5 and Lou Ross of Toronto downed Boyd Merkley of Orillia 10-6.

Wattie and Merkley are 3-2 while Ross is 2-3. Carr has lost all five games.

The round-robin competition ends today.

Hosts Win Two

Edmonton Skaters Have Home Fans Wild

EDMONTON (CP) — Western Canadians took three titles Wednesday night at the 1979 Canadian figure-skating championships and hometown fans went wild—two were won by Edmonton skaters.

Rea Krasosky of Edmonton won the novice women's free-skating title over 16 other competitors, Shauna McCann and Robert Weiss, also of Edmonton, outskated three other pairs in novice dance, and Vancouver's Marion Murray and Glenn Moore won the junior pairs title over four other couples.

Miss Krasosky, 12, waited for the official announcement after she'd been told unofficially she was a winner. She sat around for more than an hour, nibbling on her fingernails.

If Rea had listened to her mother and her professional teacher last fall, she wouldn't have been here Wednesday night. Last August, it was discovered she had a golf-ball-sized cyst in one of her knees and an operation was necessary. She was told it would be about six months before she could consider skating competitively again.

"But I was on the ice in late November," she said, hardly able to contain her glee.

"I felt very good. I had a double flip—I like doing it—early in the program and it went well. The most difficult is the double lutz about the middle and that felt pretty good too. I knew I had done well."

She had a total of 434.7 points on four firsts and a fifth. Patricia Modde of Chatham, Ont. was second with 419 points and Debbie Barter of Vancouver third with 398.5.

The relatively small field of contestants ir the novice dance competition made things a bit difficult for Miss McCann and Weiss.

"It was a fight tonight," Miss McCann said later. "When there's only four couples, the judges will remember—good or bad."

They scored 163.7 points, 2.7 ahead of second-finishers Debbie and Randy Burket, a sister-brother combination from Chilliwack, B.C., Glenis Grieco and John Rait of Toronto were third with 127.5 while Cheryl John and Robert Fisher, also of Toronto, were last with 121.3.

A three-point edge over their nearest challengers gave Miss Murray and Moore their much-deserved title in junior pairs.

The young B.C. couple displayed a technical strength that prompted five firsts, a third and a fourth from the judges in recognition of several impressive overhead lifts, synchronized jumps and intricate footwork.

Youth No Barrier

EDMONTON (CP) — Kathy Ostapchuk of Brantford, was told by the Western Ontario sectional committee of the figure skating association that she was too young to compete in the Canadian championships.

But the 11-year-old, thanks to some sizzling pulling, received an invitation to this week's championships from the Canadian Figure Skating Association—and has shown that ability, not age, is the deciding factor in tough competition.

She finished fifth over-all.

In freeskating Wednesday night, one of five judges placed her 13th out of 17, another 11th, two had her in second place, and another in fifth.

After compulsory figures in the novice women's event, the Grade 6 girl from Grand Woodland school was in fourth place in the 17-girl field.

Kathy, 4-foot-2, 61 pounder, scored 182.7 points compared with the leader's 195.5. She had a higher marking than the second and third-place girls, but because they received more first-place votes she was fourth, 7.4 points ahead of the fifth-place girl.

Jo Ostapchuk, Kathy's mother, said in an interview Wednesday her daughter finished second in the western Ontario regional championships at the junior level.

Under figure skating rules she qualified for the Canadian novice championships. However, the sectional committee said Kathy was too young and instead entered Janis Peters of Chatham.

Miss Peters finished 13th in compulsory figures with 156.3 points in Tuesday's skating.

Mrs. Ostapchuk said the president of the Brantford Skating Club wrote to the president of the CFSA, and as a result Kathy received an invitation to the championships.

Being the youngest skater at the championships doesn't bother her either.

Quebec Tourney

Entries Include Overseas Peewees

QUEBEC (CP) — A pair of entries from Europe are listed among the 102 teams scheduled to participate in the 11th annual International peewee hockey tournament here Friday through Feb. 11.

The nine-day competition, involving players nine to 12 years of age, and held each year in conjunction with the Quebec Winter Carnival began Wednesday and ends Feb. 18.

Teams from Chevrolet — le-Pont, France, and the Canadian Forces Base at Baden-Soellingen, West Germany, will mark the first European invasion of the tournament.

Teams from the United States have been entered in past years, and this year entries from Boston and Melrose, Mass., Watertown, N.Y., and Hershey, Pa., will participate.

The Canadian contingent is made up of 57 teams from Quebec, 31 from Ontario, three each from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and one each from Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

Each team competes in one of four divisions, determined by the population of their home towns. Section AA is for teams from cities with populations of more than 100,000; section A of 25,000 to 100,000; section B of 10,000 to 25,000; and section C of 10,000 or less.

The over-all champion is decided by a knockout competition among th four divisional leaders, with the two finalists meeting for the championship Saturday, Feb. 3.

Last year's finalists were Toronto Young Nationals and Princeville, Que. The Princeville peewees won, the first time a team from the host province had won the title.

The tournament is guaranteed to attract a flock of spectators.

Last year total attendance was 163,000 and organizers of this year's event are expecting another spectator upswing.

"This competition, which has drawn 1,261,022 spectators since 1960, is going to experience another great success," says Gerard Bolduc, founder and president of the tournament.

Quinte Juniors Outclass Chargers

Quinte Juniors proved to be the class of the Bay of Quinte high school basketball league's first division by handing Centennial's Junior Chargers a convincing 44-32 setback Wednesday. The win moved Quinte into a first place tie with Centennial, while the Chargers, two games in hand.

In hectic and snafoo fashion over the Chargers strengthened their hold on first place in each division with wins over their Quinte counterparts.

Centennial seniors overcame an early lead by Quinte and went on to dominate the game, winning 61-31. Fine ballcaps showing, particularly by Dennis Neron, enabled the winners to break the Quinte zone defence, as they held a 10-3 second - quarter edge in scoring that put the game out of reach. The Saints proved to be anything but anxiety scoring several hits that had nothing to do with basketball in the final quarter.

Neron led the Charger scorers with 21 points. Al Ireston and Glen Mallory each had eight points to round out the top scorers. Tom Churchill (12), Steve Ostkin (7) and Leo Baker (6) were high men for Quinte.

The unbeaten junior Saints used a ball - hawking zone defence and a fast - break offence to good advantage in their victory. Quinte dominated the early part of the game, holding Centennial to three points in the first quarter.

Glen Brooks played an excellent defensive game and led the Quinte scorers with 12 points. Darwin Keeton (11), Steve Nash (10) and Barry Calkin (6) were close behind. Henderson had 12 points for Centennial, who played a strong fourth quarter, but were out of the contest by that time. Mike Thompson bagged eight points for the Chargers and Randy Derry and Mike Semark had four apiece.

The Centennial Bantams rolled up their seventh win against only two losses with a 53-41 win. Morpley (15), McIntyre (14) and Richardson (10) were high men for the winners. For Quinte, Ackerman and Collins each scored 12 points.

Fish and Game Keep Tom at 'Helm'

Belleville Fish and Game Club directors unanimously elected President Tom Helm to a second term at a special meeting Wednesday night.

President Helm's nomination was the only one presented to the board.

Director George Hammett was elected first vice-president. There were no other nominees.

The office of second vice was eliminated from the slate.

Fred Clarke, veteran treasurer, was also re - elected as was recording secretary Ken Yorke.

Gary Anderson was again named the corresponding secretary with the bulletin chairmanship office left open.

Jack Layton was re - elected Indoor Program chairman with George H. Carver named public relations officer.

Five directors, Harry Ridley, George Hammett, Vern Stoughton, Gord Cooper and Ivan Pucanski were named to the Outdoor Committee, they will appoint a chairman.

Directors completed plans for the Fish Derby slated for Saturday, Feb. 7th in conjunction with the Quinte Winter Carnival.

Director Harry Ridley is in charge of the Derby and will be aided by several directors.

It was announced that O'Keefe prizes will be awarded for the largest and second-largest pike and pickerel caught; also to the biggest weight of perch.

The directors announced that special cash prizes will go to children anglers 12 and under entered by a parent or parents.

Bait (minnows) will be supplied free of charge by the Bob Bisaid Sports Shop. All weight registrations will be made there.

There is no entry fee.

The club will donate $10 in cash prizes and 10 junior memberships.

President Helm announced a change of venue for the next general club meeting.

It will be held Feb. 18 at the Royal Canadian Legion clubrooms.

All-Star Game Tonight

Belleville Ellis Juniors, coming off a four game undefeated streak, would like to keep that record intact when they meet the Quinte League All-Stars tonight.

The Printers have been averaging four and a half goals per game for their regular season and hope to sharpen their shooting eyes for Saturday's contest with the Oshawa Crushmen. The All-Stars who boast fine goaltending and defensive play should be a stiff test for the junior's marksmen.

Right winger Terry Meagher has reached the 20 goal mark already and added 25 assists to place well up in the Eastern Ontario Junior B league scoring. Centre John McConnell is the other Ellis forward in the top ten scorers with 15 goals and 25 assists.

The juniors will be rotating goalies Ron Jury and Paul Hopkins in tonight's contest. Jury has been outstanding in the Ellis goal and his five play has prevented Hopkins from getting much ice time. The Ellis back - up could see plenty of action tonight from the likes of Larry Stewart, Court Bradley and Ron Post.

The game will get under way at 8.15 p.m. and admission will be 25 cents. Plenty of door prizes will be provided.

Independence Cherished

Move for Strong Central Union of Civil Servants Defeated

TORONTO (CP) — Advocates of a strong, central union for federal government employees were turned down Wednesday at the national convension of the 134,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada.

After a day of bickering, convention delegates refused to give the necessary two-thirds majority to constitutional amendments that would have clipped power from the alliance's 16 component unions.

Rejected were proposals to hand over to the alliance's central executive sole responsibility for research, translation and information functions and for discipline of members groups.

Even a plea by the alliance's president, Claude Edwards, that the legal position of the PSAC has been open to question failed to overcome restiveness of the "rinky-dink" components.

Protracted opposition came from the largest component in the alliance, the 32,000-member Union of National Defence Employees.

Many resolutions which would have changed the federal balance within the union refgerred to a committee report by Vice-president Trevor Gough.

Estate Tax End Urged If Capital Gains Taxed

BARRIE (CP) — Ontario Mines Minister Allan Lawrence called on the federal government Wednesday to abolish estate taxes and succession duties if it introduces a capital gains tax.

In an attack on tax reforms proposed by federal Finance Minister Edgar Benson, Mr. Lawrence told the Georgian Bay Regional Development Council that "we cannot afford the luxury of an estate tax or succession duty."

"These taxes have helped turn us into a capital-exporting nation at the very time we need all the capital we can get."

Mr. Lawrence also criticized federal proposals to tax the first $35,000 of profits of small businesses — a decline that may forever destroy any hope of economic independence for Canada."

"This province can achieve the second-highest growth rate in the world over the next decade. If we plan well our provincial domestic product can rise from $20,000,000,000 to $30,000,000,000 by 1980."

The federal government's refusal to recognize the need for sharing income tax revenue, he said, will force the provinces to seek other sources of revenue — "most probably sales tax" — which will place additional burdens on low-income groups.

Waterloo Man Freed In Death of His Wife

KITCHENER (CP) — Irving Kumer, 43, a Waterloo businessman, Wednesday was found not guilty on a charge of manslaughter arising from the Sept. 18 death of his wife, Ruth, 36.

"You are free to go," Mr. Justice M. N. Lacourciere of the Ontario Supreme Court told Kumer after the jury returned the verdict after 2½ hours deliberation.

Addressing the jury, Mr. Justice Lacourciere said: "I must say, I do nik disagree with your verdict."

Dr. K. G. Gray, a Toronto psychiatrist, testified earlier Wednesday that the threat of his wife's leaving him had produced a state of automatic reactions in Kumer.

Dr. Gray said he believed Kumer was "no longer in control of his actions" and was "registering very little of what was going on" at the time of his wife's death.

New Way to Rid Water Of Pesticides Devised

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal health department scientists soon will begin tests of a new way to rid drinking water of pesticide pollutants.

If successful, it could mean cheap purification of drinking water without some of the odor and taste problems associated with present methods, which do not deal with pesticide residues.

It also holds promise that some of the equipment may be useful for a new sewage treatment system undergoing study at the Ontario Research Foundation.

The federal project is under direction of Dr. H. R. Eisenhauer, an organic chemist who came to the federal environmental health branch three years ago from the Dupont of Canada research centre at Kingston.

His group already has established in the laboratory that the system can neutralize pesticid, a common industrial pollutant that is toxic, at about one-quarter the cost of the process used in industrial refineries.

Usually the next stage would be to carry tests from the laboratory to full-blown industrial application to see whether the same savings would result.

However, the federal department regards destruction of DDT-type pesticides in drinking water as being higher on its scale of research priorities in the pollution field.

Dr. Eisenhauer, a native of Lethbridge and raised in Regina, said it will be at least a year before a good picture emerges of the applications of the system.

The basic ingredient is ozone, an oxygen-like gas which rapidly links up chemically with anything that is available, producing. it is hoped, non-toxic compounds.

The targets are DDT and similar chlorinated hydrocarbons which are present in sources of drinking water. The ozone is bubbled through the water in quantities and for periods of time sufficient to give the ozone a chance to bind with the pollutants.

The most expensive item is the ozone-producing equipment. It is made by passing air or oxygen through an electrical arc. Dr. Eisenhauer said it has been calculated that this can be done at about seven cents a pound.

The economics haven't been checked further. But it is possible that ozone-producing equipment for water purification also could be used to provide ozone for sewage treatment, a method now under study at the Ontario Research Foundation.

Water purification is only one stage of anti-pollution measures. DDT already has been banned for most of its agricultural uses in Canada. Nevertheless residues of this and related long-lasting chemicals will be around in earth and water for a long time to come.

Firm Plans No Change In Treatment of Waste

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — A spokesman for Inhumin Ltd., blamed for polluting a creek flowing into Stony Lake, said Wednesday the company has no immediate plans to change its system of treating sewage and industrial wastes.

G. H. Taylor, assistant manager, was commenting in an interview on pollution from Peterborough, a citizens' group which has filed a formal complaint with the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Probe, in a complaint submitted Tuesday night to the commission, charged that the company was polluting the lake from its mining site at Nephton, about 20 miles north of here. There are about 20 homes in the company-owned town which has a population of about 90 persons.

"We have planned some changes in the system," Mr. Taylor said. "But we haven't made them because we felt they were not necessary so far."

Mr. Taylor said the effluent from the townsite septic tank enters the creek downstream from the mill tailings, and that both travel through "acres of acres of swamp land on company property before they reach the stream."

He said the company takes water samples every week as a check against pollution.

Romeyn Stevenson, a spokesman for Probe, said water samples taken from the swamp contained total coliform counts approaching 2,000,000 per 100 millimetres of water. Water containing more than 2,400 total coliforms per 100 millimetres is considered unsafe for swimming.

Will Guard Arctic Sea

OTTAWA (CP) — The government gave notice Wednesday it plans to introduce legislation before Easter dealing with the prevention of pollution in the Arctic seas.

The legislation, contained in a long list of planned government measures tabled in the Commons, would be an assertion that Canada has jurisdiction over the northern waters.

Trent Will Offer Pollution Course

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Trent University announced today it will offer an academic course on pollution, beginning next fall.

The credit course, which will be at the third or fourth level of undergraduate studies, will include all aspects of pollution but concentrate mainly on water pollution.

It will be directed by Dr. David B. Carlisle, chairman of Trent's biology department.

The university is also planning a summer seminar on pollution.

PM Escorts Streisand to Manitoba Night at Arts Centre

OTTAWA (CP) — Manitoba held a sparkling Centennial gala in the National Arts Centre Wednesday night centred around the Royal Winnipeg Ballet Company, and Prime Minister Trudeau brought along Barbra Streisand.

The Winnipeg Ballet, known internationally, gave a splendid performance before a sold-out house officially dedicated to Manitobans in the capital but heavily infiltrated by everyone who could manage to get in.

The appearance of Miss Streisand, the American star who Mr. Trudeau dated last fall in New York, was icing on the cake for Premier Edward Schreyer and the rest of the Manitoba delegation.

Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener also attended. After the ballet performance there was food and drink for the guests.

The star of Funny Girl was a stately figure in a tall fur hat, a full-length evening dress trimmed with white fur and a white fur muff, appropriate to the heavy snowfall that slowed Ottawa traffic before the performance.

She and the prime minister were among the long line of dignitaries who went backstage to congratulate company. They appeared arm in arm and slowly made their way along the assembled company. Mr. Trudeau often in animated conversation, but Miss Streisand rarely smiling.

Arnold Spohr, director of the company, reminded her that she had been in Winnipeg early in her career. Miss Streisand did not at first remember it.

"She was there and she was so far out we never thought she'd make it," Mr. Spohr said later.

Officially, there is no program for Miss Streisand today but it was understood she had told one of the welcoming party she was looking forward to some snow mobiling.

Clinton Boy, 15, Arrested In Knifing

CLINTON, Ont. (CP) — A 15-year-old Clinton youth has been charged under the Juvenile Delinquents Act in connection with the knife-slaying of Katherine McGregor, 70, a retired high school teacher found dead in her home Saturday.

The youth was arrested Wednesday. He is to appear Tuesday in Goderich family court for arraignment.

Inspector L. G. Lyle, of the provincial police, Toronto and police chief Lloyd Westlake, of the Clinton police force, made the arrest.

Zoologist Opposes DDT Ban

TORONTO (CP) — A zoology professor said Wednesday pesticides such as DDT are not major causes of pollution and their use should be restricted, not prohibited.

Dr. F. L. McEwen of the University of Guelph told the Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association:

"It is my opinion that the pesticides upon which we have relied so heavily have done an outstanding job and their role as pollutants is not a major one."

He said pesticides should be prohibited only when their use would damage desirable animals or plants.

"Any charge that DDT at the levels likely to be encountered by our public is carcinogenic (cancer causing) is completely unfounded," he said.

Doctors Will Not Raise Fees

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Medical Association agreed Wednesday to hold the line on fees as an anti-inflation measure while simultaneously stressing that doctors' fees and salaries are well within pay scales of other professions.

OMA officials told a news conference after a closed council meeting that the association endorsed the recent statement of the Canadian Medical Association on inflation.

The CMA had asked member doctors to hold the line on fees in compliance with the federal government's request for anti-inflation measures.

When a reporter referred to recent health and welfare department figures showing the average gross income of Canadian doctors reached $38,675 in 1967, OMA officials took pains to point out that this figure did not represent a greater income than is deserved.

Dr. J. H. Walters of London, Ont., OMA president, said recently published comparative costs had shown that a doctor's house call costs $8 in London, while one television company listed house repair costs at $10.95 for the first half hour for color TV and $1.75 for each additional 10 minutes.

Dr. Bettie Stephenson of Willowdale, OMA vice-president, said only about 30 per cent of doctors have a gross income of more than $38,000 and that office expenses absorb 40 per cent of that amount.

TV Coverage Is Suggested

TORONTO (CP) — Donald MacDonald, leader of Ontario's New Democratic Party, Wednesday urged Premier John Roberts to set up an all-party committee to consider installing permanent television facilities in the legislature.

Montreal Editor Tells Hearing

Less 'Crisis' Needed in Quebec Coverage

OTTAWA (CP) — Coverage by Canadian newspapers of events in Quebec is "improving a great deal," editor-in-chief Frank B. Walker of the Montreal Star said Wednesday.

However, he told the special Senate committee on the mass media, there is a lack of understanding of Quebec's problems "in certain areas."

In reply to Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario), committee chairman, who asked him to specify the areas, Mr. Walker said that in the West Star, reported items found "a lack of sympathy towards the province and what it is trying to achieve."

Quebec's "enormous, impressive cultural record" is almost lost sight of west of the Ottawa River, he said.

Mr. Walker told the committee he would like to see "more understanding and less crisis talk" in regard to Quebec. Civil disturbances in Montreal were "pretty minor stuff" compared to what has happened in some other countries.

Derek A. Price, president of the Montreal Star, who appeared with Mr. Walker, said that as Home he has been approved by Toronto newspaper ownership of its Quebec affiliate. The same applied to stations in TV coverage.

Mr. Price conceded there French-language group to the Montreal Star, who also appeared with Mr. Walker, said the Star was criticized for its handling of events in its own community.

Mr. Walker said The Star, an English-language evening daily with the bulk of its circulation on Montreal Island, spends a lot of time trying to explain the English-language group and vice versa.

"In the main we regard ourselves as a Quebec paper and not a 'quiet paper,'" he told committee counsel Yves Fortier.

"We don't consider ourselves a flag-bearer for any group."

Journalists, Not Publishers Could Make Decisions

OTTAWA (CP) — Daily operation of a newspaper could be insulated from the owner's financial interests by leaving decisions to a democracy of the working journalists, the special Senate committee on mass media was told Wednesday night.

Earle J. Beattie, professor of journalism at the University of Western Ontario in London, agreed under questioning that it would be a good idea to keep ownership and operational functions separate and introduce "democratization of newspapers."

In a wide-ranging submission to the committee, Prof. Beattie also advocated a cleaner separation of news and advertising by a revised newspaper format, extended foreign news coverage in a co-operative effort and establishment of press councils to deal with grievances both by and against newspapers.

He catalogued a series of alleged abuses in London, Ont., by the "quasi-monopoly" of The Free Press newspaper and its broadcasting outlets.

In an 81-page prepared presentation and about 90 minutes of testimony, Prof. Beattie also said there is evidence of biased one-sided coverage in the Toronto Telegram and use of advertising features in all Toronto newspapers which a reader might confuse with news articles.

Specifically, Prof. Beattie charged that the London Free Press firm put open-line broadcaster John Dickins off the air last October because he had attacked "some sacred cows of The Free Press."

Then, he said, the various units of the company closed ranks to manipulate their reports and comments on the situation. He presented pages of documentation.

He also accused The Free Press newspaper of "negative bias" in reporting examples of social dissent in London.

The John Dickins case had been aired a week earlier when Walter Blackburn, who has majority control of Free Press newspaper and broadcasting interests, appeared before the committee with company executives.

Newspapers More Important Than TV Says Grosart

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Allister Grosart, a former national director of the Progressive Conservative party, told the Senate committee on mass media Wednesday night that "daily newspapers are still more important than television in influencing political opinion."

He also said that between a television commercial and a good newspaper advertisement "I'll take the newspaper."

Senator Grosart, who organized the successful 1958 campaign of former prime minister John Diefenbaker, said most of a newspaper's impact comes from its news pages, not the editorials. Surveys of editorial readership had indicated it is so few "you can almost say that nobody reads editorials." But if a newspaper "cleverly and deceitfully slants its news . . . it has tremendous impact."

Television doesn't have this impact, he said, because there isn't the credibility."

Senator Grosart, who appeared before the special committee without a brief and without notes said that the great 1960 television debate between presidential candidates John Kennedy and Richard Nixon did not have any impact until the newspapers said Nixon was "losing". It was a two-way broadcast, the real impact of which was the continuous newspaper comment which said Kennedy really won.

Asked if newspapers are leaning more left, Senator Grosart said: "Yes . . . but I don't want to give examples."

But he later said a classic example was Time magazine. Because of its style and format, everyone thought the magazine was very objective "but it was playing the game all along."

He said he didn't think "any of us are free from environmental slanting, and I don't think you can expect a reporter to be — he's a human being."

"I don't think many reporters sit down and say, 'I want to give a balanced picture of what happened today.'" He said a newspaperman's concept of a balanced story is the one that's built around a balanced lead.

"Imagine trying to give a balanced picture of what happens in the Senate," he said, amid laughter.

During the discussion on opinion-writing versus factual-writing, Senator Harry Hayes (L—Alberta) asked Senator Grosart about The Canadian Press.

"I would say Canadian Press is to rather a sentence position," he replied. "They have a built-in stabilizer. The CP reporter knows he is writing for Conservative-, Liberal- and perhaps NDP-inclined papers. He doesn't want his stuff rejected."

He said former CP reporters make the best public relations men. "They make the best PR men because they have been under this discipline."

Senator Grosart said that reporters and members of opposition parties are "both in the same racket—looking for the most exciting things to say about the establishment." There had been little change in this over the years.

But he said the impact of the media may be less than it was when everyone concentrated on the daily newspaper. With the media more diversified, the message is more diffused, he said. It used to be that everyone zeroed in on the same story, while now different branches of the media are looking for different stories.

Senator Grosart, a reporter in the 1930s, said his favorite reporters are the factual ones—"I like to get the facts."

One reason that newspapers had more impact than television was because television annoyed some people with its emphasis on violence, sex and subtle attacks on moral values. "Seldom do you hear people say, 'I know it's true because I saw it on television'."

Senator Hays said he has discovered many people on the subject "and I don't believe I have spoken to a person who believes the newspapers today."

Senator Grosart said a mere comment on credibility doesn't tell the story of the impact people actually get from newspapers.

Other comments from Senator Grosart:

Cartoons by Duncan Macpherson of the Toronto Daily Star did more than any other single thing to defeat Mr. Diefenbaker.

Mr. Diefenbaker had also been the victim of newspapers going to the morgue and getting the least attractive pictures.

A press council would be "a great thing." Like any other aspect of the private enterprise system there is need for continuing social control.

Regarding the growth of newspaper groups, from what he read of committee hearings "the impression I get is that the publishers do a very good money-job or else there isn't much danger" from it."

There is room in Canada for a purely factual newspaper "but without color it's not going to be a success."

"In my day you said: 'If you want to ruin a good reporter make him a columnist'."

NCC School Play Ready

Drama is in the air at Nicholson Catholic College and the result is lively school participation.

The school's drama club will present the three-act broadway comedy, Good Night Mrs. Puffin, this Friday and Saturday at St. Michael's Academy.

The play enjoyed long runs in London and followed through with a long run on Broadway.

Good Night Mrs. Puffin, written by Arthur Lovegrove, is set in London and features music as well as drama.

But the importance of the play is best demonstrated by the fact a large portion of the school gets involved in all its production phases.

Even the Nicholson Catholic College cheerleaders will be participating — ushering at both performances.

Performing in the play are Mary Sherel, Janet Bone, Debbie Schrieder, Tom Black, Debbie Anderson, Denise Rabbidy, Milton McCrystal, Ronald Hall, Peter Cogan and Stanley Muldoon.

Vocal selections will be performed by Michael Reed and James Gilmour, president of the student council at Nicholson, will be master of ceremonies.

It is the spirit of youth that makes drama so entertaining lively and interesting, explains Sister Mary Pierrette, who is in charge of the production.

"Even though they're only amateurs sometimes you'll find that their performances are almost of professional calibre," she said.

Tea for Rehearsal

Members of the cast of Good Night Mrs. Puffin, Nicholson Catholic College's drama production, rehearse a tea-serving sequence at St. Michael's Academy. Taking part are Peter Gray, Debbie Schrieder, Janet Bonn and Tom Black.

Censors Making South Africa A Laughing Stock Says Publisher

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Government censors are making South Africa the laughing stock of the literary world, says publisher Edward Thumbo.

"Don't the people who sit on the Publications Control Board realize that sex does exist?" he asks. "Don't they realize we have moved away from the Victorian era?"

Censors have banned at least 13,000 publications in the last 13 years. The Publications and Entertainments Act was amended recently to encourage the public to join in book-banning. Persons who want to file a complaint against a publication no longer have to make a small deposit to do so.

Several authors and publishers believe censorship became more stringent last year and that elimination of the fee will attract frivolous objections. They say an increase in the number of objections must result in an increase in the number of banned publications.

The act contains 97 definitions of "undesirable." One clause forbids the uttering or publication of anything that might "bring other race groups within the republic into ridicule or contempt."

Books and magazines on sex are banned outright, including those by serious authors. Everything from Communist countries is automatically suppressed. All material critical of apartheid are outlawed.

Such authors as William Faulkner, Aldous Huxley, Theodore Dreiser and John O'Hara have been banned.

Timmins says the censor always refuse to give reasons for their actions.

Newspapers which belong to the Newspaper Press Union do not come under the Publications Control Board, but editor Raymond Louw of Johannesburg's anti-government Rand Daily Mail recently commented on them:

"All the censoring the government requires is done by the newspaper's staff's themselves and their lawyers. It is called 'complying with the law'. . . ."

One law prohibits newspapers from quoting "banned" persons who are in various forms of physical restriction and officially gagged. Nothing they say may be published or broadcast. Pages or paragraphs about them are excised from books on public library shelves.

One newspaper editor says his job is akin to "walking blindfold through a minefield."

TV Special 'Workmanlike'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Danny Thomas CBS special Wednesday Night was a good, workmanlike hour, not inspired but well put together.

The standard ingredients were there: the clutch of guest stars, the dance production number, the song numbers and, of course, the sketches.

And it was the kind of show that one forgets almost as soon as the commercials appear.

This situation, however, is becoming common amid the welter of variety series and variety specials. Often, too, the viewer has a strange feeling he is watching a remake of an old show with new characters and can predict the pay-off lines or sight gags.

Thomas, as host, was busy. He appeared in a short sketch with his former wife and probably future—TV family of Make Room for Daddy. He was the patient in a sketch with guest Bob Hope playing a doctor interrupted in the middle of his golf game. He joined singer Dionne Warwick in a medley of song hits.

In the most amusing sketch, Carol Channing and Tim Conway played a pair of astronauts blasting off on a two-year trip to Jupiter and floating through a weightless wedding in their space ship.

In addition to performances by Hope, Conway, Miss Channing and Juliet Prowse, the show had a sizable bag of stars for cameo appearances. Jack Benny played three chorus of Love in Bloom on his fiddle, Ann-Margret was under wraps in a Laugh-In type blackout. Dean Martin did a quick boxer joke and Buddy Hackett had some gags from the audience.

Segovia Bridges Generation Gap

NEW YORK (AP) — Half a century separates concert guitarist Andres Segovia from the "new generation," but the gap in years is bridged by the language of music.

Segovia, who will celebrate his 77th birthday anniversary next month during his current tour of 34 U.S. and Canadian cities, says at least one-third of his audience is composed of young people.

"I am very proud of this because I steal them youngsters from the Beatles," Segovia says.

Then, with a chuckle, he admits that he might be sharing his youthful admirers with the Beatles and other groups which play electric guitars, musical siblings to the classical instrument Segovia has spent 61 years resurrecting as a serious concert hall fixture.

A study in concentration on his concert stage, where he becomes one with the instrument he calls a "symphony of the forest," Segovia offstage is relaxed, dignified and gracious.

Despite his advancing years, he is alert, his eyes shining behind thick-lensed glasses, his voice lyrical.

At the outset of his career, the guitar was little more than a flamenco instrument in his native Spain and little more than an accompaniment device elsewhere. Today, it is known and respected worldwide, a living monument to his dedication.

His success is demonstrated by sellout audiences and the fact that a number of classical guitarists now are able to make careers in an art field Segovia effectively established.

Marmora Library Holds Meeting

MARMORA — The annual report of Marmora Public Library presented at the January meeting by librarian, Mrs. A. J. Bones, showed an increase in reading in the adult section by 1,708 books. Juvenile circulation was 3,762, which was down from the previous year, and the total books circulated during 1969 were 11,498. New books purchased totalled 300; there were 398 juvenile borrowers, and adults using the library numbered 140. The facilities of Marmora Public Library are free to the residents of the Village and the Board is grateful to the Lake Ontario Regional System at Kingston for the numerous donations of books during the year. Chairman, Howard Bleecker, presided at the meeting.

Recent additions of adult fiction purchased by the Board include: Think of a Number by Anders Bolderson; Dance of the Dwarfs by Geoffrey Household; Shivering Sands by Victoria Holt; Goodbye Columbus by Philip Roth; The King's Pleasure by Norah Lofts; The Sixth Wife by Jean Plaidy; In This House of Brede by Rumer Godden; The Boat That Wouldn't Float by Farley Mowat; An Affair of Honor by Robert Wilder; The French Lieutenant's Lady by John Fowles; Night Falls on the City by Sarah Gainham; Question of Judgment by Phyllis Young; Face Off by George Sullivan; Raven Seek Thy Brother by Gavin Maxwell; The Legend, Evelyn Anthony; The Pinedon Adventure by Paul Gallico; Surgeon's Choice by Frank Slaughter; House on the Strand by Daphne du Maurier; Elephant Grass by Jack Denton Scott; Harpoon in Eden by Van Wyk Mason; The Love Machine by Jacqueline Susan and Sunday the Rabbi Stayed Home by H. Kesselman.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the item you are selling. Have it stand out. Don't bury it in the center or even the end of your ad. Put it right at the beginning.

2—Be CLEAR, BRIEF, but respond more quickly and favorably when you include the PRICE in your ad.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always include your telephone number or address. Don't forget it. If you've just been robbed of your wallet, you'll appreciate how important this content you.

4—A GREATFUL READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay for only the number of days it has run.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know before your effect. The answer should be included in your classified Want Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying. Your most effective approach is to tell them how the items and how it compares in the market to buy. So give them every information you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT PAY, to bring satisfaction do so, best through act both of advertiser, but be sure to follow through with prompt acknowledgements or get prompt action.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market moved into its fifth consecutive downward session Thursday, declining fractionally in light mid-morning trading.

Losses outnumbered gains 159 to 83 with 185 issues unchanged.

Of leaders, Imperial was down .25 to 178.85, western oils .54 to 209.13, base metals .16 to 113.66 and golds .13 to 153.94.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 618,000 shares compared with 968,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Interprovincial Pipe gained ¼ to 21¾. The company increased its quarterly dividend to 20 cents from 18 cents.

Canada and Dominion Sugar picked up ¼ to 34¼ although first-quarter earnings were $1.05 a share compared with $1.10 in the similar period last year.

Crowfoot Trust was unchanged at 55¼. The stock rose 2¼ Wednesday after the company announced plans for a 5-for-1 stock split and a dividend increase.

Falconbridge lost 1¼ to 167¼, McIntyre 1¼ to 162, Home A ¾ to 23, Norsa A ¾ to 12¾, Shell ¼ to 30¾, Noranda ¼ to 35¾ and CPR ¼ to 66¼.

Wednesday the exchange logged after showing strength earlier in the day.

Prices were lower in all major sections except for golds, which rose .30 on index to 156.06. Western oils, which had moved ahead by more than a point early in the day, were down .87 to 209.77. Base metals were slightly lower, down .05 to 113.82 while industrials dropped .70 to 179.19.

There was no specific reason for the lag in prices. Brokers saw it as more of an absence of any incentive to buy, and some predicted prices may continue to lag until some definite moves appear in the market basis in the inflationary spiral—sends buyers into the market again.

A promising breakthrough in western oils which began Tuesday on rumors that Imperial Oil had made a second oil strike in the Mackenzie Delta closed in again as company spokesmen denied the rumor. Some oil issues were up, but Imperial, although the day's heaviest industrial trader for the second day running, closed up only ¼ to 21¾, on trade of 71,000 shares.

Among industrials Alcan rose ¼ to 35¼ and Great-West Coal added 2½ to 10¾. Bell Canada was unchanged at 46¼, but was heavily traded, while Bell rights sank to a low of 13 cents, down five cents from Tuesday.

Consumers' Gas hit a low of 14, down ¼, as the Ontario Energy Board re-opened hearings on Consumers' takeover offer for Union Gas Co. Ltd. of Chatham. Union gained ¼ to 14.

Chrysler Canada was a heavy industrial loser, dropping 1¼ to 41¾ on a low of 41¼. Layoffs in the auto industry give rise to concern about this year's sales.

Steel issues were 5¢ to 7¢ lower in heavy earnings in 1969. Husky added ¾ to 14¾, but other oils were down. Canadian Industrial Gas dropped ¼ to 13¾, Bow Valley 1¼ to 24¾, and Asamera ¾ to 14.

Trading was light, with 2,620,000 shares changing hands, compared with 2,902,000 the day. There were 218 advances and 209 declines, while 267 issues were unchanged.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"
By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Heart May Race Without Damage

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Like a horse's hooves pounding down on a race track stretch, my heart often runs away with itself. It'll be sitting quietly and boom! It's off racing for anywhere from nine to five minutes. It's a horrible, scary feeling. Then it stops (I mean beats more slowly) as if nothing happened. My doctor says it's nothing to worry about. What do you think? — Mrs. N.

Comment: Speaking of race tracks, and assuming that your doctor is a heart specialist who has examined you thoroughly, I'll give you odds that everything will be all right. By that I mean, and I'm going on an assumption, that what you have is scientifically called auricular paroxysmal tachycardia.

For no apparent reason — although often found in anxious nervous persons the heart races like mad. And then suddenly reverts to normal. Some people have attacks daily. Others only every few weeks or months. Some last longer than five minutes.

Pressing on the carotid nerve in the neck will often shorten the attack. So will some medicines. What's important is learning the true diagnosis.

If it is what I have guessed, then you can consider you have an irritable heart, but not a sick one. However, complete examination is imperative. Whenever a heart is "fast" the cause must be found.

Sometimes a fast irregular heart develops when a thyroid gland is overactive. Such auricular fibrillation is also sometimes a complication of a rheumatic heart, arteriosclerotic or hypertensive heart. Coronary heart disease may weaken and the heart muscle and cause it to be irritable.

But the thing to remember is there are all kinds of runaway hearts. Sometimes they are healthy hearts. Cutting out tobacco, caffeine and taking tranquilizers will help. Even when hearts are diseased, we have medications to "rein them in" so they won't beat so fast.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have tennis elbow and never held a racket in my hand in my entire life! I'm a waitress. In my profession I need two good arms. The pain is so severe I can't sleep. Aspirin doesn't help. It's bothered me for weeks, now. — Mrs. C.

Comment: A locker - room joke at many golf clubs goes like this: "I didn't do so well out there today. I've got a tennis elbow that hampers my swing." But it's not funny for those who really have it.

I think it's about time you had medical treatment, don't you, Mrs. C.? If your trouble is really a "tennis elbow," it is probably due to inflammation of a bursa (lubricating pad) in the elbow region; seen frequently in tennis players, — but is anyone whose job is under strain, carrying heavy trays might do it.

It's time you had some sleep. Perhaps a few injections of cortisone (or other treatment) will do the trick for you.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Our 19-year-old daughter, and is apparently good health, recently had an examination. Results of an electroencephalogram were "abnormal brain waves." And after comment was: "Nothing to worry about". However, the terminology "abnormal" bothers us. What do we do now? — Worried Parents.

Comment: Such a report is what I call a "cliff-hanger." It needlessly keeps you in suspense. I think you should contact your doctor and ask: "Exactly what is the diagnosis?" I'm sure they'll be glad to explain more fully.

Citizens Should Sue Polluters

GALT (CP) — Ordinary citizens should have the right to take their battle against pollution to the courts, Justice Minister John Turner told the annual meeting of the Galt Chamber of Commerce Wednesday night.

"Global disaster may result if environmental pollution continues unabated," Mr. Turner warned.

He said water is Canada's greatest natural resource and yet, only 100 yards from the House of Commons, the Ottawa River is dying. The Quebec water board has described this stretch of the river as "nothing but a vast bubbling swamp."

He recommended creating new regulatory institutions with alternative controls—penal, taxing and injunctive. Vested economic and community interests and the pressure they generate must be dealt with. He stressed the need to analyse the right of a person to use his own property as he sees fit without regard to others.

Mr. Turner said the strategy of the war on pollution must be translated into recognition of individual and collective right of ordinary citizens to a clean environment—a right actionable before the courts.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 30

Your birthday today: The spring finds you face to face with the dilemma between following an old line of activity or something new of unknown potentials. Your choice depends on many personal factors, with the odds a little in favor of the new, speculative approach.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your temptation is toward impulsive extravagance, and plenty of people around encourage you to spend. Refrain from misusing your credit. The evening is complex, involving subtle psychological manoeuvring.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Friends and acquaintances try to distract you. Speculators talk fluently of quick and easy money. Let your own better judgment prevail.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Delays are to be expected. Take something to attend to during a stopover or waiting period. Relatives campaign to get your approval for their plans. If possible, plan a journey or vacation to escape their discussions.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Leave business concerns to the working hours. Take everything as it comes, first come, first attended; don't hesitate to pass some of it on to others who are free to handle it sooner.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Nothing comes out quite as expected. Keep matters simple, or cut out frills and details of earlier plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You need no special permission to attend your own affairs. Unsolicited help will not be welcomed today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Self-indulgence is the universal temptation today. Everybody seems to be completely satisfied with himself. Let your intuition lead you to consider entirely new challenges.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Passing conflict between family and business interests has to be resolved. Impulse will not suffice; pause a moment to let insight offer a better solution. The evening is the time to make up for any discrepancy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your fine friends lend to get you involved in matters new to you, with people you cannot take for granted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Cold facts are to be preferred all day — and quite the opposite all evening. Respond to the general atmosphere for a family life that both ask in justice at the moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): An old idea returns and is again very attractive. Your money takes wings at the slightest provocation.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Conventional behavior is the line to success now. Housecleaning is worth getting done thoroughly.

Nowlan Says Bill Would Make CYC Weak Child of Pelletier

OTTAWA (CP) — The Company of Young Canadians will be a faceless, voiceless, powerless child of State Secretary Gerard Pelletier if legislation before the Commons passes unchanged, J. Patrick Nowlan (PC —Annapolis Valley) asserted Wednesday.

However, Mr. Pelletier said the company, which will become a Crown corporation with a cabinet-appointed upper organization, is simply being adjusted and will retain a good deal of autonomy.

Debate on second reading, carried by a vote of 86 to 81, followed a special Commons inquiry last fall ordered when Montreal politicians claimed the CYC was a vehicle for subversive activity.

Opposed to second reading were 12 Conservatives, 18 New Democrats and 11 Creditistes.

Max Mendelsohn, 28, a Montreal lawyer, was appointed comptroller of the CYC in December and since then a number of the more controversial projects have been wound up.

The government bill, meanwhile, will end the free-wheeling independence of the three-year old CYC and put it in th hands of a cabinet-appointed council, council chairman, council vice-chairman and executive director. The council now is dominated by members elected by volunteers.

Mr. Nowlan and Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) said this will be "a grim relic" of what former prime minister Lester Pearson had in mind.

The bill was a "stark case of legislative overkill," Mr. Rose said. Mr. Nowlan said the CYC was being, in effect, scrapped.

The Nova Scotia Conservative said the CYC would be in the hands of Mr. Pelletier, who he said had failed last year of things like "cultural conscription" for youth.

Mr. Pelletier said safeguards must be maintained "within the structures used by youth in order to protect the great bulk of youth from manipulative minorities."

"But these small manipulative minorities who, by their many of the positive projects of youth, cannot be allowed to destroy all the mechanisms designed for the participation of this group."

Wear Rubber Apron to Watch Color TV

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to control the sale and importation of certain radiation - emitting devices should apply to color television sets, Senator J. A. Sullivan (PC — Ontario) told the Senate Wednesday.

The Toronto physician advised senators with color television sets not to sit closer than 10 feet from them and to wear a rubber apron.

He said the bill—later given second reading and sent to the Senate committee on health, welfare and science—is long overdue.

However, two opposition colleagues — Senator Edgar Fournier (PC — New Brunswick) and Senator Allister Grosart (PC — Ontario) — asked just what devices would be controlled by the legislation. Both said the bill would give inspectors great power.

On Tuesday Senator Muriel Fergusson (L — New Brunswick), the bill's sponsor, told the Senate that the bill would provide essential control at the federal level over the design and sale of devices used in medicine, science and industry which could emit harmful radiation.

Ontario Income Tax Unlikely Within Year

Federal Plans Delay Decision

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts said Thursday it is unlikely that Ontario can impose a provincial income tax within the next year, partly because of uncertainty over the federal government's plans for tax reform.

A provincial income tax to be imposed within two years was proposed by Treasurer Charles MacNaughton in his budget speech last year.

Mr. Robarts told a news conference that Ontario's position on the federal white paper on tax reform "is very firm and we intend to make it evident in a variety of forms."

The white paper had been put forward as a proposal for discussion and "I hope and pray it is only that and not a fait accompli."

In a wide-ranging discussion, the premier said the province is ready to review the record of metropolitan government in Toronto, and the review "cannot preclude consideration of changes in its boundaries."

Metropolitan Toronto is "a growing thing, it is never static," and there probably will always have to be changes to match an evolutionary process.

Mr. Robarts said the next session of the legislature, which opens Feb. 24, will last until June with an Easter recess and if business is not completed will resume in the fall with adjournment late in the year.

The legislature will have to decide if there is to be regular television coverage although the premier himself is "not 100 per cent in favor."

Canadians do not have a full appreciation of what use should be made of TV, or what its effects are, Mr. Robarts said he himself will not take part in lengthy taped programs "where snippets are taken out and used later on the whim of someone else."

A provincial-municipal conference, announced by Mr. Robarts late last year, will be held in the latter part of April or early May, he said.

He has warned municipal officials not to expect too much from the first of the conferences, which will deal "with problems that have been "hanging around for 50 or 75 years."

"I doubt if there will be neat, tidy solutions all wrapped up in a bow," he said, "It is unwise to believe a conference is likely to produce instant answers."

Israel Bombs Refinery

From AP-Reuters

Israeli planes clashed with Egyptian oil installations in the Suez canal area Thursday and fought a duel of sonic booms with Syria late into the night.

Egypt said one civilian employee of its oil company was killed and 11 were wounded in the attack on the refinery at the southern end of the canal but did not say how much damage was done to equipment.

Lots of broken windows and frayed nerves resulted from the sonic duel.

Syria began the Battle of the Bangs Thursday afternoon when a lone MiG-21 flew over Israel's chief port, Haifa. The Israeli military command said it did not bomb or strafe, but the sonic boom it created shattered hundreds of windows and caused a flood of phone calls to police stations. The plane escaped back to Syria.

An hour later, an Israeli plane roared over Damascus and took a toll of windows there. Then after midnight Israeli planes flew over Damascus and four other cities in the north, Hamma, Homs, Latakia and Aleppo, Syria's second largest city, the Israelis reported.

A military spokesman in Damascus said the sonic raids in the middle of the night broke many windows but caused no injuries.

Red Cross Denies Thousands Starve

TORONTO (CP) — The national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross said Thursday relief operations in the Biafra region are being hampered by exaggerated reports in the world press of rape, looting and starvation.

Maj.-Gen. Arthur Wrinch, who recently returned from a two-week tour of Nigeria, said in an interview that news reports have been "particularly hard on the Nigerian military and the Nigerian government."

"I found widespread hunger but not starvation," he said. "I don't believe that there are great masses that are immediately facing death. I just don't believe it."

He said there has been looting and rape, "but not in the proportions we've been led to believe."

He warned that criticism by the world's press of Nigeria's relief efforts had "seriously interfered" with relief programs.

He said some of the problems in Nigeria result from a lack of direction and leadership in relief work, grossly inadequate transport, and lack of relief workers.

GE Strike Is Settled

NEW YORK (AP) — The General Electric Co. and two unions leading a 95-day strike have reached tentative agreement on a new contract.

But it will be a week to 10 days before all 132,000 strikers return to work, federal mediator J. Curtis Counts said Thursday night as he announced the settlement.

Negotiators for GE, the fourth largest United States industrial corporation, and the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers and the independent United Electrical Workers declined to discuss terms of the settlement until a memorandum of agreement was signed today. The pact must be ratified by union members.

Nine Trips Made

LONDON (CP) — A Canadian transport plane chartered by Britain to help with the airlift of relief supplies to Nigeria has made nine round trips from Britain and will make at least five or six more, the man in charge of its ground arrangements said Thursday.

John Fair of Vancouver said in an interview that the 22 Canadians involved in operating and servicing the Hercules plane encountered no incidents.

Central American War Flares Again

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Hostilities broke out again between Honduras and El Salvador Thursday, Each claimed the other started the shooting. The two governments suspended peace talks in Costa Rica at which they had been trying to ease the aftermath of their 100-hour war last July.

Honduras said a "considerable number" of dead Salvadoreans were left in Honduran territory. El Salvador's defence minister, Gen. Fidel Torres, said he was waiting for casualty reports from the front.

El Salvador, smallest Spanish-speaking nation in the Western Hemisphere, claimed Honduran planes violated Salvadorean air space and then Honduran troops and armed civilians crossed the poorly-defined border. El Salvador said its troops repulsed the invaders after a three-hour battle.

Honduras said the first attack was made by 100 Salvadorean ground troops, around dawn, and five hours later Salvadorean planes bombed two villages. The Honduran foreign ministry said that after a battle of several hours, the Salvadorean troops "were defeated, leaving behind a considerable number of guardsmen dead in Honduran territory."

Armed conflict along the border has been common since July, but Thursday's appeared to be the most serious since a ceasefire was declared July 18.

Rabbi Buys Jewish Wives From Their Arab Husbands

JERICHO (AP) — Rabbi Hasania Darai is a self-styled savior of Jews who have strayed to the Arab side of Israel's borders. He buys Jewish wives from their Moslem husbands.

Rabbi Darai concentrates on Jews who married Arabs before the 1948 Arab-Israeli war, and then fled with their refugee husbands to the Arab states. Some now find themselves under the rigors of Israeli occupation. They find it hard to convince anyone they are Jewish.

The rabbi hurries among military government, state rabbinate, Arab husband and official records, trying to prove they are Jewish and win them Israeli citizenship.

If he gets approval, he bargains with the husband and usually purchases the woman for about $150. He then escorts them into Israel and fixes them up with housing and income, preferably near relatives who remained in Israel.

So far he has brought 36 Jewish males, women and children out of Arab homes into Israel. In most cases the males are sons of the Jewish women.

"It is God's law that we aid our fellow Jews, wherever they are," says Rabbi Darai.

"But we must avoid stirring up resentment. I would never force a Jewess to return to Israel against her will. And if her Arab husband refuses to give her up, I would not dream of forcing him."

U.S. Rail Strike Looming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not knowing if, when or where the first placard-carrying picket might appear, railways in the United States continued operating today while management and labor prepared for a nation-wide rail shutdown that might not occur.

The first walkout by members of four unions who have worked without a contract for over a year could come "like a shot out of the dark", William W. Winpisinger, chief negotiator for the AFL-CIO shopcraft unions, said Thursday night when contract discussions broke off.

A government spokesman said no further sessions have been scheduled.

Water Main Floods Montreal Streets

MONTREAL (CP) — Thursday's slush became today's ice on some city streets and sidewalks as temperatures dropped below freezing again after a one-day thaw.

Temperatures were expected to reach a high of 25 degrees today after climbing to 37 degrees Thursday to break a record 45-day sub-freezing cold snap.

Most of the downtown financial district had been cleared of slush and water from heavy flooding caused by the sudden thaw and a burst water main.

Early-morning traffic into the city was moving normally.

The deluge began with an overnight rainstorm on top of two inches of new snow. The resulting puddles of slush mulled Thursday.

Water as high as automobile radiators gushed down the steep hills and flooded in the Place Victoria and St. James Street financial area.

Adding to this, a 30-inch water main burst in the area about 8 a.m., trapping parked cars, halting traffic and heavily damaging underground stores in Place Victoria.

In Place Victoria, full liquor bottles bobbed in water high enough to float them off the shelves. Stores in the five underground levels of the building were heavily damaged.

New Plan Announced

Industrial Commission Seeking To Link Local Production

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Industrial Commission is now working on a search — a search for statistical information called surplus production capacity, it was revealed this morning.

Gerald Joyce, chairman of the commission, explained this morning that the gathering of such information, it is hoped, would result in an industrial environment whereby local industries would work at maximum capacity with maximum employment.

In effect, the project would serve in almost correlate industries in the Quinte area to each other, says Mr. Joyce.

After an assessment by the industrial commission, industries would benefit readily-available information as to other industrial products, capacity and potential that are in the area.

This would mean that established Belleville industries and new industries would be able to discover what kind of business they could do with companies already situated in the Belleville area.

The idea for such a clearing house was the result of talks with Wilson's Sporting Goods which is constructing a plant, head office and sales office in Belleville's northwest Industrial Park, says Mr. Joyce.

Wilson's will be manufacturing golf clubs for sale and it was learned by the industrial commission that the company was going to import unfinished wood heads for clubs from a United States firm.

The commission also learned that a Belleville woodworking firm had been making such golf heads in past years.

"We got the manufacturers together," Mr. Joyce said.

Should Wilson's decide to purchase the raw wood heads from the Tweed company then it will save money involved with importing them and the industry will be more centralized in the Quinte area.

"We'd like to do this on a large scale," Mr. Joyce said. "And that's what the search is all about."

He said it would mean more profits for the industries, more jobs and more productivity.

"It's better than 'Buy Canada' or 'Buy Ontario' because it's 'Buy Quinte'", he said.

Assuming that most industries are working at 75 per cent capacity, they would be looking for new business Mr. Joyce explained. An increase to towards 100 per cent efficiency, economists say, would mean a healthier economy and what the consumer would manufacture if a need was available.

The information should be in the hands of management by the end of February, Mr. Joyce said, when the commission can be assessed by spring.

Then the information will also go to other countries and will be made available to anyone looking for products on a possible industrial site.

Once assessment and organization of the data is done there are references to new industries coming into the area and would be part of the plant location package.

Mr. Joyce would then be able to discover if they could do business with companies already established in the Quinte area.

Already a part - time research assistant has been hired by the commission to visit Belleville companies in terms of the information of the required information.

Mayor Scott has made this project of industrial inventory a top priority," Mr. Joyce said. "He has instructed all the Industrial Commission to compile this information at the earliest possible date."

Y Should Be Recognized For Its Work, Says Alderman

Family Y officials, alderman and city officials were told yesterday that the city has a debt of gratitude it should recognize" for the work and dedication of members of the community who worked to build the YMCA building.

Ald. Ben Corke, speaking at a luncheon at the Y, said "the YMCA is an asset to the community . . . and serves as an attraction for industry and newcomers.

"Not all persons use the hospital, the schools and the libraries," he said, but all the community collectively contributes to their support. Ald. Corke said the YMCA fell into the same category.

During the meeting, designed to provide information on YMCA activities, Jack Ireland, executive, in response to his question, "what YMCA's generally are serving more people than ever before but the associations are changing in program and services. There is more co-operation with other community activities and agencies and more work being done with the disadvantaged," said Mr. Ireland, Y executive secretary.

"The Belleville Y board has decided the major emphasis this summer will be in work with youth . . . and has included a drop-in centre and the job placement service for students," said Mr. Messacar.

In a short meeting with party and recreation officials prior to the luncheon, Y officials said they were in favor of the development of adjacent YMCA-owned land for recreational purposes in co-operation with the city or through sponsorship by the city recreation department.

A Little Help from Friends

Four-year-old Daryl requires a little support from his mother (right), Mrs. V. Luca and skating instructor Mrs. Blake Weese. The pre-schoolers and their mothers have the Belleville arena ice to themselves for an hour every Thursday as part of a learn-to-skate program sponsored by the Quinte Figure Skating Club.

Skaters:

Never Too Young to Learn

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Reporter)

Two years old isn't too young to learn how to skate.

In fact, for some tots, it could be the launching of a great career for the future.

But, if not a career, possibly just the best way to learn how to cope with challenge the ice offers — the lack of friction.

Classes for mothers and their pre-school children are currently being offered by the Quinte Figure Skating Club every Thursday at the Belleville Arena.

Response has been good, so far, but skating instructor, Mrs. Blake Weese, is hoping that more mothers and youngsters will come out for an hour's run on the ice.

The youngsters are taught the correct form necessary in skating, with other lessons as the child becomes more proficient.

"The mothers enjoy this opportunity to get some healthful exercise and at the same time watch their children improve their skating. It also gives the mothers pointers on how they can skate better," said Mrs. Weese.

There is a small charge for the hour use of arena ice time, but the Club asks that the mother pay for herself.

"The number of children she brings will not affect what she has to pay," explained Mrs. Weese.

"Everyone enjoys themselves so much, the hour is gone before you know it," she added.

$18,000 Asked For School Athletics

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
(Staff Reporter)

Physical education teachers in Hastings county are calling for a $18,000 shot-in-the-arm for their interschool athletic program.

The future of interschool athletics is in jeopardy unless the board of education gives financial support to school teams that compete with other schools for athletic honors, they say.

Wally Beevor, spokesman of county physical education department heads and secondary schools has presented a brief to the board asking for a basic grant in each of the seven secondary schools for competitive team sports.

The board was concerned in principle. But whether or not the schools get the money depends on the availability of funds in the 1970 project.

Each school on the average, spends about $25,000 to operate its interschool program. The cost results from travel, referees fees, awards, tournament fees and COSSA fees.

In the past, the money was raised from a "head tax," levied by student councils, from fund-raising projects sponsored by the physical education department, and from an annual school board allocation of about $700 to each school.

Because purchase of student council cards is no longer compulsory, council funds available for the athletic program have been depleted.

Department heads and coaches directly involved in the program give 150 to 200 hours a year to each team, and have no time to conduct fund - raising projects, Mr. Beevor said.

Teachers in Hastings county schools give 3,000 to 4,000 hours a year beyond the regular school day for running athletic programs for their students, the brief noted.

"On the average, 400 students in each school participate in the interschool program and all students incur many benefits in terms of school spirit and becoming knowledgeable spectators," the brief said.

In asking the board to foot the complete interschool athletics bill he proposed a basic grant of $2,500 to each of the seven secondary schools in the county. For Centre Hastings school at Madoc, Bancroft school and BCI in Belleville "which have additional expenditures such as travelling, rental of gym facilities and transportation for home games," he proposed an additional $625 for each school. The total annual cost would be $18,375.

"If the board said no to our request, we would probably try to go out and raise the money," Mr. Beevor told the board.

In discussion of the proposal, trustee Mrs. Ann Hutchison of Trenton questioned the value of some high school sponsored sports, football in particular.

She asked about the number of injuries incurred during football competitions and mused: "One wonders at the worth of it (football) . . ."

"Football is the most popular sport in the district and it will not be dropped," replied Mr. Beevor. "More people watched the Super Bowl than meet that."

"A fitting commentary on our society," rejoined Mrs. Hutchison.

Trustee Ralph Weaver of Trenton suggested the board should review the merits of the academic awards it sponsors "and consider them in in comparison with this," as the 1970 budget is set.

Carnival Buttons For Sale

TWEED — Red and white buttons featuring the picture of Tweedy the "Eager Beaver" mascot of the Tweed Winter Carnival are now available.

Bill Summers is chairman of the button sales committee and is looking after the distribution through local places of business.

The members of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce, who sponsor the Winter Carnival, are hoping that local residents will buy and wear a carnival booster button, as well as send additional buttons to their friends in out-of-town communities, to help promote this annual event.

Carnival toques and scarves are also offered for sale in a number of Tweed stores.

Authority Counts Watershed Assets

The Moira River Conservation Authority is fast approaching the category of big business!

According to the auditor's report submitted at yesterday's inaugural Authority meeting at Cannifton, the Authority has capital assets (conservation areas, historical sites, and special schemes) valued at $597,724 with another $110,000 invested in reforestation properties.

Most expensive of the Authority's special schemes is the Deerock Lake dam in Kaladar township constructed last year at a cost of $271,000, including the necessary clear cutting for the dam reservoir.

The Lower Moira control dam is valued at $41,000; the Deloro dam at $51,000; the Lingham Lake dam and reservoir at $31,000 and the Stoco Lake dam $77,000.

The O'Hara Mill Conservation area, including the pioneer sawmill and original family residence is valued at $35,000; the Colonel Vandewater area at $76,000; the Price area at Actinolite $9,000 and the Thurlow wildlife area $6,000.

The Authority now owns approximately 17,000 acres of reforestation and conservation area property and has planted between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 trees.

Due to the rapidly rising cost of marginal land, the Authority has purchased little or no reforestation property in the past two years. Also be ments and tax levies Authority members are considering scattered acreage and consolidating larger tracts.

However, there is a difference of opinion on this proposal. Bill Hiscock of the Tweed Lands and Forests department said yesterday that his department did not care whether reforestation property was in small or large blocks.

City Carnival to Put New Glitter in Winter Scene

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Winter is beginning to look better already.

With plans for Belleville's Winter Carnival gathering a full head of steam, carnival committee members are filled program ahead at keeping down the most hardened winter sports fans for the next days.

Organizers met last night at finalize plans for the carnival, which is scheduled to start Feb. 3.

Carnival committee members have worked during the past few months to get together a program that would catch the enthusiasm and imagination of the community and invite maximum participation. And from what the full program of events seems to indicate they may do just that.

At last night's meeting at the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization headquarters, representatives of participating organizations discussed final details of their parts in the Carnival program.

The Winter Carnival kickoff will be next Thursday night, at 8:30 p.m. at Centennial Secondary School.

At that time judges from the Belleville Kinsmen Club will choose the Belleville Winter Carnival Queen, who will reign over all events in the three-day program.

Past presidents of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, Ken Daley, informed the meeting that Messenger J. P. Sullivan will crown the carnival queen and present her with various gifts donated by the business community.

Entries for the contest are open to all girls in the age of 18, said Mrs. Daley indicated although there are applications coming in, she hopes there will be a good representation from every high school.

O. F. Bradley, secretary of the carnival committee, told the program is going ahead as planned.

"Everything is working out well," said Mr. Bradley.

Calling the carnival a "community effort" he stressed the fact that it is not a money-making project.

"We are operating on a very limited budget and the money we do have has been donated by community-minded organizations in the city," Mr. Bradley pointed out.

Most of the events are free, except where it is necessary to cover operating costs, the secretary explained.

On Friday night, events will get off to a glowing start with a torchlight parade at 7 p.m. sponsored by the Belleville Jaycees.

The parade will begin at the corner of Church and Dundas Streets, go down Front Street culminating at the Belleville Memorial Centre where it will be up for a barrel-rolling contest at 8 p.m.

Snowmobiler figure in a large part of the carnival program, and Friday night, a snowmobile safari, obstacle and snowmobile dance is planned at the Oak Hills Ski Centre.

Other events Friday will be the Junior A Hockey game between Oshawa and Belleville, interspersed with figure skating.

Elementary schools will participate with the snow sculpturing contest open to all Belleville and district schools.

Saturday will be highlighted by a parade, finishing at the Legion Hall on Pinnacle St. Ski skiing events at Oak Hills, snowmobile races and rides at a reasonable rated, obstacle and snowmobile dance is planned at the Oak Hills Ski Centre.

Other events Saturday will be the Royal Canadian Legion curling bonspiel at Belleville Curling Club, interspersed with figure skating.

Sunday's events will include a ski-doo rally at Oak Hills, snowmobile races and rides at a reasonable rated, obstacle and snowmobile dance is planned at the Oak Hills Ski Centre.

Other events Sunday will be the final day of the carnival with all events taking place at Belleville Island and shuffleboard, with the exception of the obstacle, skiing and snowmobile events.

As a final touch, city crews will flood a section of the island for Dick's Island, at 2 p.m.

"Anyone who would like to take part in the carnival or donate their time to assist us can contact any carnival member at the Chamber of Commerce office," said Mr. Bradley.

Obituaries and Funerals

MR. WILLIAM QUINN
Waiuku, New Zealand

The many friends in Tweed and district will be sorry to learn that William (Bill) Quinn, of 12 Town Place, Waiuku, New Zealand (formerly a resident of Tweed) passed away earlier this month at his home in New Zealand. He was forty years of age.

Mr. Quinn was born in Toronto. He is survived by his wife, the former Lee Hobbs, who is also well-known in Tweed, and by his mother, Mrs. Walter Bell, of Tonawanda, New York; his children who also mourn the loss of a father: Ronnie, 16 years, Glenn, 15, Brian, 13 and Lee Ann 8, all at home; and a brother, Jack, who resides in Toronto. His father predeceased him.

The deceased was employed by Bell Wood Masters, in Tweed. While residing here, he was a member of St. John's Church, Tweed, and of the Rhuman Club of Tweed. He later joined the A.F. & A.M. Lodge at Tweed, in Rexdale, Ontario where he was sound production manager. At the time of his death, Mr. Quinn was head production manager of the New Zealand Steel Mill Company.

The funeral was held in Waiuku, New Zealand where interment was also held. The family plan to stay in New Zealand for some time.

Canon R. B. D. Wright conducted the service in the chapel and also said the graveside prayers in Belleville cemetery.

The bearers were Rodney Miller, Blake Welch, John Scullion, Rodney and Harold Turcott and John Bourette.

Ability Increases

Through contributions of Trenton residents such as Mrs. Mary Bizeau (left) and canvasser Mrs. Sam Scaletta, the Ability Fund grows and its ability to rehabilitate the disabled increases. The annual campaign, formerly known as the March of Dimes, is drawing to its conclusion in Trenton. The campaign will be held in Belleville Monday.

Assessment Affects Local Levies

New provincial equalized assessment factors have caused marked changes this year in the local levy assessed against committees in the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The total local levy for the Authority for 1970 has been set at $25,000, the same as last year. But, as result of the new assessment factors, the levies of several townships have been sharply increased while others are lower.

Showing the sharpest percentage increase is Madoc township's levy which jumps from $488 last year to $787 in 1970. Tyendinaga's increases from $261 to $320 and that of Thurlow from $3,426 to $3,774. On the other hand the levies of certain other municipalities are less this year. Belleville's Authority levy for 1970 is $14,164 compared with $14,-945 last year; Tweed's is down to 898 compared with $903.

Local levies against member municipalities are based on the percentage of their areas within the Moira watershed.

Of the 17 member municipalities only six are entirely within the watershed. These are Deloro, Elzevir, Hungerford, Madoc township, Madoc village and Tweed. Belleville is 61 per cent within the watershed.

Total Authority budget for this year is $134,040. This is made up of $25,000 to be levied against member municipalities; $13,393 in provincial grants; $10,000 contribution of cities' benefiting municipalities for certain capital projects, and $85,245 in grants.

New MRCA Head

Mr. W. Graham Bell of Marmora township was re-elected chairman of the Moira River Conservation Authority at its inaugural meeting held at Carrollton Thursday. James Spry of Trenton was returned as vice-president.

Two of last year's advisory board chairmen were also re-elected with three boards getting new chairmen.

New advisory board chairmen are Ernest Kells, conservation areas; John Thompson, forest and wildlife, and Dr. R. S. Morphy, fish and wildlife. Belleville Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffrey was returned as chairman of the information and education board and Guy Hughes as chairman of water control.

The meeting saw the retirement of Earl Sager of Madoc township, member of the Authority for 17 years and former Authority chairman. In recognition of his long service on the Authority, Mr. Sager was presented with a plaque.

Succeeding Mr. Sager on the Authority is Cecil Woods.

Continue Schools In Conservation

The Moira River Conservation Authority plans to continue its school conservation program at Vandervaeter Park this year but will look to the Belleville Rotary Club for help for money to purchase needed materials.

Mrs. Robin Jeffrey, chairman of the Authority information and education committee, yesterday told the Authority's inaugural meeting that about $300 would be needed to purchase information and brochures and maps so that the Authority could go ahead with its program.

For the past several years the Authority has conducted a fall conservation school at the Vandervaeter park for grade six and seven pupils from Belleville and the surrounding area.

However, the Hastings county school board is also considering the possibility of an outdoor education program during the same time. Whether the county program will get underway this year is still to be decided.

The Authority also expects to continue its maple syrup demonstrations at the Collins sugar bush in the Moira area.

The sugar bush project with its syrup demonstrations last year was a big success last year.

But the "big" Authority public relations project for this year was said to have been the official opening of the Old O'Hara homestead as a museum attraction.

Man Hurt In Crash

TRENTON — Peter Gehent, 21, of Trenton was admitted to Trenton Memorial Hospital with possible head injuries and a possible broken nose, following a car accident early today.

He was a passenger in a car driven by Joseph Bolvin of Trenton proceeding west on Dundas Street East, city police. The vehicle left the road, went up a bank and crashed into the side of a car parked on Lange and Fetter Motors' lot.

Damage to the Bolvin vehicle was estimated at $450, and $300 to the parked car.

Not Forced From Apartment

PICTON — A Wellington couple, Mr. and Mrs. James Post, were not forced from their Picton apartment at gunpoint Wednesday night Ontario Provincial Police officers from the Picton detachment said today.

The couple, during the evening, took a car drive through the county with Donald Vesterfelt 21, of Ajax and Thomas McMullen, 23, of Toronto, say police.

The incident resulted in a charge of assault against Vesterfelt and McMullen.

France Woos North Africa with Aircraft Sale

By CY FOX

President Pompidou of France is treading a precarious tightrope as he tries to square the sale of French arms to Libya with the demands of his all-important visit to Washington next month.

Condemnation of French Middle East policy voiced in the United States by influential American Jewry has been given prominent play in French newspapers and apparently have had their effect on sensitive officials in Paris.

Another development unnerving the French is the fact that the most important man Pompidou will meet in the American capital, President Nixon, has lately pledged delivery of arms in his self-defence efforts of what he called "friendly governments, like Israel."

At the same time, discontent with French policy is beginning to undermine the unity of Pompidou's own government team.

The French cabinet, strictly speaking, is a coalition, drawing its members from outside as well as from within the president's Gaullist party.

One of the outsiders, Agriculture Minister Jacques Duhamel, is reported to have threatened resignation over the non-delivery of French fighter planes sold to and paid for by the Israelis.

Worsening the divisive potential of this situation is last week's announcement that 100 Mirage fighter planes are to be sold by France to Libya.

The man who made that announcement, Defence Minister Michel Debre, is considered the chief spokesman in the current cabinet for ex-president de Gaulle.

Earlier, there had been widespread predictions that Debre might end up out of the government before 1970 was over.

But his involvement in the Mirage announcement might indicate that he still maintains a strong position inside the Pompidou team.

In any event, other governments are watching here to see the impact of the latest news on Israeli-Arab leaders.

Despite much reassurance, however, French definitely is trying to strengthen its position in North Africa even if this does not add up to a fully planned move in the immediate area of the Israeli-Arab dispute.

The Quebec 'Right'

The Globe and Mail is all upset over what it calls a political polarization in Quebec.

For some reason the newspaper fears that the rightist orientation of political parties there "spells danger for that province and perhaps for the country."

Why? Well the Rallement Creditistes are entering Quebec provincial politics and in this The Globe sees the spectre of a return of "repressive Duplessisism (possibly under Claude Wagner). The Creditistes' recent rally, it goes on, "cast them clearly enough as spoiling to exploit and whip up a backlash against youth and labor unrest and the continuing uncertainty about Quebec's future."

Does this mean The Globe prefers student and labor unrest? We don't know for sure, but reading between the lines this sentiment fits in nicely with other editorials in the Toronto newspaper that veer to the political left.

Like with reference to Vietnam where The Globe finds little in favor of the American cause there. About as much perhaps as The New York Times, whose commentaries the Globe publishes regularly and which also sound suspiciously pro-communist.

The ruling Union Nationale meanwhile The Globe sees as "quintessentially conservative and indeed reactionary, with a history of siding with the rich and powerful," and Premier Bertrand as a liberal "only in relative UN terms . . ." Even new Liberal leader Robert Bourassa, pragmatist that The Globe feels he is "has, if anything, encouraged his own identification with the industrial and financial establishment."

All this suggests — and indeed the editorial's heading confirms it — that in Quebec there are "too many on the right." The newspaper would like Bourassa "to counter the threat inherent in identification of federalism with the right." How? Only, the editorial, says, "if the liberal party recaptures at least some of the reforming zeal that swept it to power under Jean Lesage in 1960."

It is all very interesting, this apparent stand of Canada's leading newspaper against "the rich and the Establishment," its concern about a backlash against youth and labor unrest, its trembling over Quebec's lopsided rightist tendencies.

Bring on the agitators, the mobs, the dissenters. Montreal and Quebec City haven't seen a good riot in quite a while. And their rallying cry? Why, out with the right — and in with the left, of course.

Nurses' Role

The Canadian Cancer Society's "Miss Hope" contest has a dual purpose. It emphasizes not only cancer research but that it still remains a baffling disease, but also the role of the nursing profession in helping patients fight the malady.

There is no lowering just how vital is the attitude of individual nurses in aiding recovery, or at least easing the pain of those for whom recovery, unhappily, is out of the question.

Suffice it to say that whether the malady is cancer or anything else — whatever the need — the nurse is there to meet it.

That a nurse from our own part of the province won the title is a matter for congratulation. Miss Sharpe, 21, of Picton, was the Society's choice — the new Miss Hope — and she is a student nurse at St. Joseph's in Peterborough.

Spectre of Hunger

When pride blinds a nation to the ordinary everyday needs of its people, when prestige comes before saving a generation that is dying, when sovereignty comes before saving thousands from starvation, then we are faced with the sad fact of man's inhumanity to man.

It is happening in Nigeria. There is no doubt that that country is incapable of averting the terrible shortages facing its population. Yet it persists in rejecting the aid from overseas which could save countless lives.

Now it has even resorted to be deporting a sizeable group of Irish missionaries through whose efforts some food, at least, was funneled to the hungry.

With the end of the war, the spectre of dying humanity has not yet been removed from Nigeria and particularly the eastern region commonly known as Biafra. Yet, whatever the difficulties, Canada should continue to support such international efforts as are made to alleviate the plight of the needy in that stricken land.

"Excuse me, but I'm standing under your foot!"

In Rome: the Wide-length Skirt

Windsor Star

Please, said the ordinarily composed woman executive, help us to avoid this.

And she threw down, on the desk, with a pathetic sigh, a clipping of a picture.

(Believe it or not, gentlemen, it isn't your grandmother, an actress in a late-late movie, or a Hallowe'en costume. It's a wide-length skirt, a creation, as it is described in the lingo of fashion, and it has actually been worn at a dress show in Rome.)

The time has come when someone has to stand up for our rights, said the ordinarily composed woman executive, a strange sob in her voice. I'll be darned if I'm going to wear that.

Right, Madam. We're glad to help. And so is every male of lower instincts. Let's begin by telling the fashion designers that we're sure they're kidding. If that won't work, let's point out the manifest ugliness of spotted silk dresses designed on the generous lines of a circus tent. If that won't work, let's threaten the ultimate weapon of a campaign to have all men wear spats.

To Smoke or Not to Smoke

Winnipeg Free Press

A year or two ago a member of the Winnipeg school board went on record in favor of smoking lounges in city's high schools. But the board was not prepared to accept so radical an innovation and the motion was turned down.

In Calgary, however, the board has sanctioned smoking lounges for students, and their high schools will soon be equipped with them. But the board wants it understood that it does not approve of smoking. At the same meeting at which it decided to introduce smoking lounges it also passed a resolution giving its "whole-hearted support" to a campaign by a local service club to stop smoking. What this all adds up to is rather difficult to determine. Possibly it means that the board approves of smoking lounges provided nobody smokes in them.

Perhaps the Winnipeg decision was the wisest one. It may not have been progressive, but at least there is no ambiguity about it — and it will save a lot of taxpayers money.

The Incredible Shrinking Dollar

Vancouver Sun

Inflation last year stole about $2.9 billion from the personal incomes of Canadians.

Dr. John Young, chairman of the federal prices and incomes commission, has had a desperate task to persuade the public that he is trying to act in its own interest.

Simple arithmetic shows total personal income of Canadians last year at $53.33 billion. Federal and provincial personal income taxes drained off $7.6 billion. Higher prices reduced the real purchasing power of the remaining $55.73 billion by $2.86 billion, or by more than one - third of the income tax levy. Imagine what an outcry would have gone up if the income taxes had been raised by such a figure.

Dr. Young has now invited about 250 spokesmen for business and the professions to a meeting in Ottawa on Feb. 9-10 to try to obtain agreement on a formula by which future increases may be kept below cost increases. If that can be done, the next step would be to try to win the co-operation of organized labor in refraining from making excessive wage demands. "This could not survive as a one-sided arrangement for an extended period," Dr. Young said.

The alternative was well stated in a recent television program for the Xerox Corporation of the United States conducted by ABC economics editor Louis Rukeyser. He said:

"As the public anger hullabaloo's about overpriced knows that a dollar won't do what a dollar used to do. But the full extent of the saga of the incredible shrinking dollar may come as a surprise.

"Let's say you were born 30 years ago today . . . and your father had celebrated the occasion by presenting you with a crisp new dollar bill.

"If you had saved that dollar like a miser, it would now buy no more than 47 cents would have bought the day your daddy gave it to you.

"But let's say you are sentimental, and you hold on to that dollar for 30 more years. By then, if inflation goes on at its present rate, the buying power of that 1980 dollar will be exactly . . . one 1939 dime."

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 20, 1870 . . .

England's first Parliament since 1715 was sworn in today—in 1265—in answer to a summons by Simon de Montfort, brother-in-law of King Henry III and leading reformer of the time. The first Parliament was a council of noblemen before, but de Montfort called two knights from each county and two burgesses from each town, giving respectable townmen their first vote in the government. Henry's son (later Edward I) defeated and killed de Montfort in battle the same year.

1853—The Nova Scotia legislature opened its first session.

1934—The constitution of Newfoundland was suspended and a commission of government took office.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—American forces landed on the west coast of Luzon in the Philippines; Zhukov's White Russian army drove 12 miles into Brandenburg province to about 80 miles from Berlin; the capture of Stolzenberg placed Red Army units 73 miles from Berlin.

The Other Side of the Coin

Benson Proposals Will Spread Tax Bill More Evenly

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I too, am concerned about the White Paper on Taxation.

True, if this paper is allowed to pass it will mean a complete social and economic regrastication of our country. Hooray — it's been long overdue.

I will willingly supply crying towels for all the middle - income citizens who are finally going to have to get off the "gravy-train." Mind you, they won't be monogrammed on the best of terry cloth. Actually, they'll be made from an old torn sheet, but I'll be happy to personalize them by scratching their initials on with a fish pen.

I notice, in every article written against the White Paper a mention of how the small businessman will be affected. With our poor memories, we sometimes forget that it wasn't until the Labor Board brought in the Minimum Wage Law forcing the payment of a half-decent wage to employees, many of these small businesses made large profits through the starvation wages they were paying their employees. An experience which, according to me, leads me to believe these small businesses will continue to prosper.

I understand from the White Paper, that the homeowner who sells his home is allowed one thousand dollars for each year of his residency in this home before he is taxed. It's the people with large real estate holdings and those who are buying real estate today and selling it tomorrow for a large profit who are going to have to pay — and justifiably so!

Whether or not taxes will be reduced for those with one million Canadians, this White Paper appears to be spreading the tax bill a little more evenly.

Naturally, Mr. Balloch had an enormous response to his ad. When the Middle-Incomers start having to pay their fair share, they squeal like stuck pigs. I won't say that most of the people in this bracket have the first dollar they made though. They used that dollar to buy a sock add they've been putting every dollar since, into it.

I'll agree that we are inclined to apathy and lethargy especially the working class. They are too busy trying to earn enough to feed, clothe and educate their families and also it has happened that some in this class have been fired, because they had the ability to stand up for their rights.

My children were fortunate enough to find their way into bottles, which the "small business man" in my area kindly traded for — so I can stamp thus enabling me to mail this epistle, I too, am writing to Mr. Benson. Mine will be a letter of commendation that he has enough courage to try to do something about the inferior tax laws in this country.

I doubt if the tax savings to the working classes will enable them to take an extended tour of Europe or to winter in Barbados, but with a little luck at all, they'll be able to put a bit of gasoline in the old crock and take the kids for a ride to Shannonville some sunny Sunday afternoon. Let's hope the children find them more pop bottles which I'll trade for a six cent stamp to put on my letter to Mr. Benson.

If this letter appears as a slight exaggeration, I'm sorry by following the trend. If the middle-incomers think enough to help their present situation, they should come over and join us. We don't have very much, but at least we're trying to share what we do have.

Nobel Prize Winner Thinks Negroes Genetically Handicapped

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. William Shockley, Nobel Prize-winning physicist, said Thursday night that an accumulation of scientific evidence indicates Negroes possess a genetically lower intelligence potential than Caucasians and Orientals.

Speaking to 500 Carleton University students at a filming of the syndicated television program Under Attack, Dr. Shockley said he fears the Negro's position in American society will deteriorate rather than improve because of "a disproportionately high birth rate among Negroes of lowest potential intelligence."

"I believe the dice are unfairly loaded against all sham babie, but disproportionately more against black children than white," he said.

Dr. Shockley won the Nobel Prize for physics with two others in 1956 for work on transistors.

He said many Negro welfare mothers "have children as pets", and said he believes consideration should be given to sterilization of welfare recipients who produce an excessive by large number of children.

Dr. Shockley stressed, however, he believes such a step should not be taken without a national vote and possibly a constitutional amendment.

He said scientists and the public have tended to shun serious research into the relationship between heredity and intelligence because of what he termed "the apple of God's eye obsession."

"It has always been vital to the self-esteem of man to conceive of himself as the centre of the universe created in the image of God, and many persons simply refuse to accept any evidence which strikes a blow at this self-esteem."

Dr. Shockley said he feels, however, the question is too important a matter to be left to wishful thinking and idealism.

He said a scientific study conducted in London indicated the reality is about three times more important a factor than environmental conditions in determining an individual's intelligence.

He said emotionalism concerning this subject has prevented "a sound diagnosis, something though it may be, which might prevent worse agony in the future."

Behind The Glass

By CDT

The Quinte mixed bonspiel sponsored by Belleville, Trenton and CFB gets underway this evening at four o'clock at the Quinte Curling Club and the Trenton Curling Club. There are 64 rinks entered with rinks from Lindsay, Toronto, Cobourg, Picton, Kingston competing.

There are four trophies up for grabs, the Fox Cartage, The Alexander Vending Company, the Curling Bowl and the Lafferty Smith. The semi-final games will be played at Quinte and Trenton on Sunday afternoon and the finals in all four events will be played at CFB on Sunday evening.

There will be no draws at Quinte Curling Club on Friday and two draws at CFB on Friday. The banquet and dance will be held at the Airmen's mess at CFB on Friday evening and non-participants are welcome and can obtain tickets at the door.

The draws at Quinte Curling Club will start this evening at four o'clock and another draw will be held at six. The same holds good for the Trenton Curling Club.

This is one of the better spiels held in the district and some excellent curling will be witnessed in the several draws.

Fire Sears A Community

Negro Says Students Threatened to Set Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — A Negro maintenance director at Sir George Williams University told a jury trial Thursday that a student had threatened to burn the university's multi-million dollar computer centre because of an alleged incident of racism.

Henry Warrall, 51-year-old director of the university's physical plant, testified that a spokesman for a group of students "threatened to bring the university to its knees by burning the computer centre, if necessary."

Mr. Warrall stirbated the statement to Kennedy J. Frederick of Grenada, for whom a bench warrant was issued last week when he failed to appear for his trial Jan. 19 along with 10 other West Indian students, including two women.

The witness was speaking before an all-white jury at the trial of the first of 87 students facing several charges in connection with the computer-wrecking last Feb. 11.

The students face five charges, including conspiracy to commit arson, conspiracy to damage private property and conspiracy to prevent the legal operation of the computer centre.

Mr. Warrall said the statement was made to him Jan. 29, 1969, just before the ninth-floor computer centre in the 13-storey Hall building was occupied by some 200 students.

The occupation was sparked by allegations of racism on the part of a biology professor.

"I told Mr. Frederick then that the move to occupy the building was unwise . . . but he told me they would bring the university to its knees, if necessary, by burning the computer centre," Mr. Warrall testified.

Earlier in the day, the defence claimed that police arrested persons "indiscriminately" after a fire of unknown origin broke out in the barricaded computer centre following two weeks of peaceful occupation.

The defence maintained that its whole case evolved around the fact that despite a large crowd of reporters and onlookers in the area of the smoke-filled area, "police seemed to have no difficulty making arrests."

Defence lawyer Robert Lemieux, asked a Montreal police constable who made one of the 95 arrests:

"Had I been in the area on some business and exited from the computer centre at the time . . . I would have been arrested, is that not right?"

"That is possible," the constable replied.

Queried by Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay on the pertinence of the question, the young lawyer replied: "I think that perhaps it's the whole case."

The constable said the arrest of a young woman, identified as Ann Cools, was made after occupying students began fleeing the centre when the fire broke out.

The occupation of the centre and subsequent violence were linked to a university committee investigating charges of racism against Perry Anderson, a biology professor.

Prof. Anderson was later exonerated of all charges.

Society Must Develop Norms For Drug Acceptance

HALIFAX (CP) — A Dalhousie University sociologist told the LeDain inquiry into the non-medical use of drugs Thursday that studies show a high percentage of marijuana users were going on to "harder drugs."

But Dr. Paul Whitehead said one drawback was that such studies tend to be focused on those likely to make the move anyway.

He said widespread education was needed and society had to develop "social and cultural norms" for what should be accepted as proper use of drugs.

The inquiry appointed by the federal government and headed by Gerald LeDain, is scheduled to continue hearings today.

Mr. LeDain noted the absence of adults from a hearing Wednesday night and wondered whether any of the youths present could say "why your parents aren't here."

Several adults did join the session as it progressed and offered their opinions on the use of marijuana and other psychedelic drugs.

One man said "possession of marijuana shouldn't be a criminal offence" as it gave youths "a criminal record for the rest of their lives."

That was something that could become "quite harmful" to their futures, he said. But if it were legalized, some form of control was needed.

He told the commissioners "we smoked corn silk when we were young and it was frowned upon" but that was just the same thing the youth of today was doing. "They're just experimenting."

In an earlier submission, Prof. H. D. Beach, a psychologist at Dalhousie, here was an "urgent need for much good research" and little progress could be made in research, education and communication "while these drugs are classified with the hard narcotics."

Ronald K. Siegeal of Dalhousie's psycho-pharmacology laboratory, told the commissioners of his studies of the effects of marijuana and found that "psychedelic experience can be healthy and normal."

He urged development of a safe psychedelic drug and establishment of a board of experts to decide policy of distribution, control, and an educational campaign.

At the night session, one youth told the commission he didn't think criminal elements would move in to market such drugs if they were made legal. There was "very little profit in it."

One man who works with Halifax youth complained about the lack of "up-to-date information" and said when drug information clinics were held in the city, "the kids outnumber the adults by 10-to-one."

Yet, the adults "start screaming" when youth displayed more knowledge of the subject than did their elders.

CBC Workers Charged

OTTAWA (CP) — Firings and court action followed discovery of "irregularities" involving some CBC employees, George Davidson, president of the publicly-owned broadcasting agency, told a Commons committee Thursday.

He named no names and provided no details because some of the cases were still before the courts "in certain parts of the country." But he indicated the irregularities occurred with in the last two years.

His disclosure was made under questioning about $4,436,000 paid by the CBC in commissions in the 1967-68 fiscal year. Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) asked whether the CBC is certain that "there isn't something happening under the table in these payments.

"One can never be certain," Mr. Davidson replied, then added that a number of employees had been fired and some prosecuted since he assumed the top post in 1958.

"You haven't got 9,000 angels in the CBC," he said.

Mr. Davidson and senior CBC officers were questioned for more than three hours as the public accounts committee continued study of the report to Parliament of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson.

The gutsy new Datsun 1600 Pickup is lots more truck for $2205*
We took the best-selling imported truck in North America and gave it a new heart. A gutsy 96 horsepower powerplant. That's 43% more power than it had last year. Now it zooms along even when you load it with a ton of anything. And it just won't quit. Buy it and it pays you back. Quickly. Because you can trust Datsun 1600 to deliver up to 30 miles per gallon, and it's practically maintenance-free. It's built like a truck, with heavy duty suspension and steel girder frame, but that doesn't mean it handles like a truck. It's like a car — easy to handle and a cinch to park. And it has all the good things: instant-acting heater/defroster with blower, all synchro 4-speed stick shift, quad headlights, 3-place bench seat. And the performance is something else — lots of pull. Great acceleration. Easy all-day cruising at 70. Datsun 1600 pickup. When you're careful with a buck, this is your truck. Why spend more than you have to?

A Very Important Message to All Thoughtful

TEENAGERS and PARENTS . . .

TEENAGERS BEWARE

SHOPLIFTING IS STEALING!

DID YOU KNOW

Shoplifting is stealing, and stealing is a criminal act. So called high spirited 'fun' and youthful 'pranks' can cause young people a lifetime of trouble. Too many teenagers today are unaware of the serious harm that a police record, even for what might seem to be a petty violation, can do to their lives and futures.

Even if the punishment does not include a jail sentence, and the conviction is punished only by a fine and/or probation, the police record remains; and it says, "Thief".

Why Do Teenagers Shoplift?

Across the country young people, many from middle and upper income families are pilfering merchandise. Why do teenagers commit a criminal act that will probably jeopardize their futures? The common answers are:

"I DID IT FOR KICKS"
"IT WAS JUST A PRANK"
"IT WAS AN IMPULSE"
"I DID IT ON A DARE"
"IT WAS PART OF AN INITIATION"

In other words they think it's more a sport than a crime . . . But the law makes no provision for a "sport". Shoplifting is stealing and stealing is a criminal act. The shoplifter is a thief not a prankster.

Never break the law on a dare — it takes more courage to turn down a dare than to accept it, and your friends know this. In the long run they will respect you for sticking to your beliefs, don't fall for that 'chicken" routine.

Why Didn't Someone Tell Me?

Many young people when arrested for shoplifting say, "Why didn't someone tell me that shoplifting was a crime". Ignorance of the law is no excuse and no defence against prosecution and conviction.

Shoplifting is stealing and stealing is a criminal act. Stealing a $2. pen is the same as stealing $2. from a cash register or from someone's pocket . . . It's a crime.

"But The Store Won't Miss It"

Some teenagers seem to think that stores make a lot of money and won't miss a book, or a record, or a blouse, or a belt, or even a candy bar.

But the fact is that stores are losing more to shoplifting each year. They are losing merchandise that belongs to the store. It has been bought and paid for by the store and taking it is stealing. If something that belonged to you were stolen ,it would be a great loss . . . so it is with a store.

Stores Getting Tough!

Because of this growing problem stores are getting tough with shoplifters and are taking measures to catch them in the act. Stores are no longer letting teenager shoplifters off with a lecture and a warning. They are turning them over to the authorities. Store managements are becoming convinced that the proper way to deal with young shoplifters and their parents is through the police and the courts.

"But I'm A Juvenile! Nothing Can Happen To Me"

Don't you believe it! True, the identity of a Juvenile who commits a crime is not made public, but an arrest is still an arrest, and a police record is still a police record. One shoplifting conviction can ruin your life.

Furthermore, the Juvenile Courts have the power to transfer Juvenile Offenders to Adult Court, where young people are treated like adult criminals and can be given jail sentences — and often are.

Although youngsters may go "free" after an apprehension, once arrested, the charge will follow them demanding explanation and causing embarrassment whenever it reappears.

COLLEGE ADMISSION REJECTED!

"But It Was Just For Kicks"

Those "kicks" can come back and haunt you forever. A minor record easily becomes a major problem. Most job applications ask "Were you ever arrested?" and most employers don't hire people with arrest or criminal records.

A job that requires bonding, even that of a stock boy, will probably be closed to the youth with a record. He may also be turned down for government jobs at the Federal, Provincial or Municipal level.

With a police record it can be difficult, in some cases impossible, to go into any business or profession where a special licence is required, such as law, real estate, or insurance.

A criminal record can keep you out of the college or professional school of your choice. A stolen carton of candy kept one boy out of college — and a girl was denied entry to law school because of a stolen swimsuit. You can also be denied admission to a foreign country because of a criminal record.

JOB APPLICATION NO!

WHAT CAN THE LAW DO ABOUT IT?

You can be arrested if you steal any property from a store, no matter how little it costs. It is a crime if you steal even a lipstick or a candy bar.

Punishment for a first offence can be as much as two years in jail, or for theft over $50.00, as much as five years — shoplifting is theft and theft is an indictable offence and is punishable as such.

How Do I Hide An Arrest From My Parents?

You cannot — even a guilt plea would not help. Once you are arrested for shoplifting your parents must be notified before you can be dealt with in the courts.

WHAT CAN PARENTS DO ABOUT IT?

— TRAINING STARTS YOUNG —

1. Be aware that shoplifting can be just the beginning of bigger trouble for their children. A veteran police officer described a recent 2-page arrest record which was headed: "SHOPLIFTING (JUVENILE)".
2. Make sure their children understand that shoplifting is stealing and stealing is a criminal act.
3. Be certain that their children know what a police record can do to their chances for jobs, colleges, and professions. . .
4. Know how much money their children have and how they spend it.
5. Know what their son or daughter brings into the house. If it isn't his or hers, check on where it came from. Don't accept a pat answer.
6. Know when, where and why their child is going shopping.
7. Find out what their community is doing about the problem and lend their help.
8. Teach their child that it is more "chicken" to go along with the crowd than to refuse to do so.
9. Be alert to a daughter who repeatedly goes shopping with an extra large handbag or shopping bag. These are common tools of a shoplifter.
10. Supervise any "clothes" swapping.
11. Set the right example.

Juvenile Incidence Increasing

Shoplifting Conviction Haunts Individual for Rest of Life

By TED FORDER !!
Staff Reporter

Police continue to indicate the number of reported cases of shoplifting in Belleville were down in 1969. There were 77 reported, 21 less than in 1968. Those charged were down 12 to 46 — however showed an increase of eight to 35 in 1969.

While these figures seem to indicate that the number of incidents are decreasing in Belleville, quite the contrary appears to be the case, says Chief Douglas Crosbie says:

"The majority of cases are not reported to us."

Belleville merchants generally agree the situation is becoming more of a problem and is not necessarily confined to any special season of the year. Merchants, in the past, have found that shoplifting has been most prevalent during the Christmas season. Yet so far this year, it seems to be increasing.

One downtown merchant claims shoplifting is "very bad" in the city and on the increase daily. He says that between 10 and 15 per cent of his total volume is "lost through this cause. It is so much that some groups of known offenders have been banned completely from his store.

Not only the loss of merchandise is costly. The necessity of additional preventive measures adds to the cost.

The merchant has added aerial detecting devices, hired more staff and has mirrors in his merchandise in a special way in effort to combat the situation.

One Belleville Plaza merchant said that since July 1969 he had encountered about 40 cases of shoplifting, mostly by teenagers in the 13-16-year-old bracket. He revealed that he never prosecutes in these cases but, depending on the attitude of the offender, he either calls the police or the parents.

This merchant estimated his yearly loss at between $4,000 and $5,000 and believed shoplifting was definitely on the increase.

"Strangely enough," he said, "shoplifting seems to be more prevalent among teenage girls rather than boys."

He attributes this to the fact that items such as cosmetics, jewelry and lingerie are easier to conceal than most items that would interest males.

Preventive measures taken by this merchant are centred around closer surveillance on the shop floor at all times and good service on the part of staff.

When referring to his experience as a store manager in Toronto, he said that while the Belleville situation is very bad, it is 10 times worse in Toronto. He explained that even though he did not press charges in most cases, police would still keep a record of the fact that offenders had been warned and would refer to this if they were caught the second time.

Some proprietors say they have not been bothered much by petty thievery. However this applies to merchants handling larger items such as appliances and furniture.

One such merchant reported only two incidents in the past year.

Large centres across Ontario have been plagued with the problem for some time and have engaged in diversified programs to combat it. Some, in co-operation with their police departments, have been more strict with first offenders and jail sentences have been handed out in some cases.

Others have launched educational programs through school systems and civic clubs.

Concern by Belleville civic officials, groups of merchants and citizens is becoming evident by an increase in co-operative action and in programs designed to inform on the consequences of petty thievery.

The reasons for those who indulge in this dangerous pastime are many and varied. The results are always the same for those caught and convicted. They obtain a criminal record that follows them for the rest of their lives and one which keeps cropping up in almost everything they do, authorities emphasize.

Jury Says Three Hired to Kill Jos. Yablonski

CLEVELAND (AP) — A federal grand jury says three men were hired to kill United Mine Workers official Joseph Yablonski, but has left open the question of who financed the alleged plot.

The grand jury which indicted the three Thursday on charges of conspiracy, reported that one of the men, Paul Gilly, 36, was in charge of a special fund from which the other two were paid.

The source of the fund was not mentioned.

Indicted with Gilly were Aubran Martin, 21, and Claude Vealey, 36.

The grand jury said Martin received $1,700 and Vealey $1,-800 cash, and had a $750 debt to Gilly cancelled.

All are from the Cleveland area. Each is held in lieu of $250,000 bond.

Lottery By City Possible

TORONTO (CP) — Municipalities will be able to qualify as charitable or organizations in order to hold lotteries for such projects as hospitals, Financial Affairs Minister Leslie Frost told the legislature Thursday in issuing a proposed plan for licensing and regulating lotteries.

Copies of the plan have been sent to municipalities with a request for comments on a proposal that they be given authority for licensing under a recent amendment to the Criminal Code which makes it possible to license certain lottery schemes.

The amendment became effective Jan. 1.

The plan proposes that municipal councils be given authority to license and regulate lotteries managed and conducted by charitable or religious organizations for charitable or religious purposes.

There will be three types of licences—for bingo games, raffles and bazaars.

Bingo will be licensed for a single occasion or for repeated occasions within a year. The licence will specify location, start and finish times and any special conditions imposed by council.

Total value of prizes for each bingo or raffle will be limited to $3,500 each, and for a bazaar to $100 for each prize. The cost of a chance at a bazaar is not to exceed 50 cents.

Unsold raffle tickets and counterfoils will be held for at least 90 days from the day of the draw.

Copies of licences will be sent to the local clerk, the minister of financial and commercial affairs and the provincial police gambling squad.

Regulations for games at agricultural fairs are still to be drafted.

Anyone wishing to stage a lottery in excess of $3,500 in prizes will apply to Mr. Rowntree's department, after receiving approval of the local council.

"No game of a type known as razzle dazzle, roll down, dice game, three-card monte, punch board or coin table shall be operated," Mr. Rowntree said.

Municipal councils will charge a fee to cover the costs of operation of its licencing authority.

Mr. Rowntree said it will be possible for a municipality to qualify as a charity for certain lottery purposes under his authority to designate a charitable or religious organization.

The organization must be "one which has as its prime purpose the raising of funds devoted to charitable or religious objects or purposes within the province . . . which performs services of public good without profit."

The minister indicated he would not speak of a municipal lottery for tax purposes.

Reaction Mixed to Parliamentary Committee on Constitution

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There has been mixed reaction, some of it indifferent, from provincial capitals to the establishment of a parliamentary committee to seek grass roots opinion on the question of updating the Canadian constitution.

The Commons Tuesday unanimously approved a government motion to establish the committee, to be made up of 30 members of Parliament and additional representatives appointed by the Senate.

While Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island termed it "a beneficial way of establishing another area of dialogue," Saskatchewan's Ross Thatcher said: "We don't think the constitution is a matter of particular importance."

Premier Robarts of Ontario said: "It is their committee, not mine, and how it functions is up to them. I doubt if we as a government will make representations to it—I believe the place for that is the federal-provincial conference."

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec did not comment directly on the proposed committee but a spokesman for his office said the premier favors such a move.

Mr. Bertrand said in a recent speech that, "there is no way a constitution could be imposed on us if it were not substantially accepted by the Quebec people."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia remarked: "It's a good thing Ottawa is getting a grass-roots view of something."

Although Mr. Bennett said he was not referring specifically to the constitutional issue, he accused Ottawa of being completely out of touch with the people and suggested the federal cabinet should hold meetings in various parts of the country.

Dalpide Premier Thatcher's assertion that the constitution is not of particular importance, he said that, "if a parliamentary committee comes to Saskatchewan we'll certainly welcome them and do all we can to assist them."

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta commented that the federal government "has not given the provinces any indication of changes they intend to make in constitutional discussions," but said he had asked suggestions of a change.

"At the present time we are very, very bogged down as far as making any progress in constitutional reform. . . ."

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland said he believes "it's necessary to know the grass-roots feeling" but that it is up to the public to express those opinions.

Kerr Likes Water Act If Own Job Unaffected

TORONTO (CP) — George Kerr, Ontario minister of energy and resource management, said Thursday the proposed Canada water act "can be of great benefit" if it does not interfere with the jurisdictions of provincial agencies.

"If we can work hand in hand and if it is recognized that the Ontario agency with jurisdiction is Ontario Water Resources Commission or a conservation authority, fine.

"But we don't want the work and programs of our agencies affected by higher legislation."

Mr. Kerr appeared at a news conference with J. J. Greene, federal minister of energy, mines and resources, after a day-long conference in which officials "went through the bill in detail."

"We indicated reservations and objections," he said. "The main point we tried to make was that we don't want the legislative authority of agencies like OWRC in any way inhibited or eroded by federal legislation."

Mr. Greene said the federal government is conferring with the provinces and the public in an attempt to improve the bill, which seeks to control pollution on a national basis.

"We hope to make the bill better than it is," he said. "We are prepared to make amendments as improvements are indicated."

Mr. Kerr said Mr. Greene had indicated that Ottawa is not interested in Ontario's inland waters where it finds provincial pollution-control programs acceptable, but is in concerned with inter-provincial and international waters.

Ontario has some reservations in this area because there are legal doubts as to the constitutional jurisdiction over sections of the Great Lakes which lie within provincial boundaries, and of James Bay where Quebec also can claim jurisdiction.

"We will not surrender jurisdiction over any waters in Ontario but we welcome federal participation in cleaning up any waters where Ottawa has or shares jurisdiction," he said.

Mr. Greene also met privately with Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle, discussing off-shore resources and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough on rail relocations in Niagara Falls.

Peace No Reason for Pride

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Vladimir Toumanoff, counsellor for political affairs at the United States embassy in Ottawa, said Thursday that even though the United States and Russia have "managed to avoid a third world war," it is something neither country should take pride in.

"There has been absolutely no co-operation between the two countries on the Vietnam war, the Middle East confrontation or for that matter the Nigeria-Biafra situation," he told members of the Women's Canadian Club of London.

Mr. Toumanoff said Llewellyn Thompson, former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, asked in a 1967 speech that the two countries co-operate in solving world problems of over-population, gaps between the rich and poor nations, production of food and science and technology.

"The Soviet Union not only didn't comment, but didn't criticize Mr. Thompson's remarks, either in the press or in an official statement," he said.

Senators Hear Professor

Cutting East Wind Whips Around 'Airy Heights of Platitude'

OTTAWA (CP) — A cutting east wind whipped through the special Senate committee on mass media Thursday with the prearranged purpose of displacing previous "windy nonsense" about Canadian newspapers, especially in the Maritimes.

Donald Cameron, 32, associate English professor at University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, stirred up frequent gusts of laughter with biting sarcasm directed against what he characterized as fallacies of the daily press in his home province and elsewhere.

He told the senators he came to help them climb down from "the airy heights of platitude where the enemy of Canada's media would like you to remain" and talk about life in the real world—as a newspaper customer would.

Judging from reports of previous sessions, he said, the committee has been subjected to "a great deal of windy nonsense" from newspaper editors and publishers, particularly Ralph Costello, publisher of the Saint John, N.B., Telegraph Journal.

Dr. Cameron, one of the editors of a new magazine, The Mysterious East, took issue with earlier testimony from Mr. Costello, and others responsible for New Brunswick's English-language newspapers, that they are independent and do not slant news coverage.

He cited examples of what he described as distorted news coverage and said: "This kind of rotten reporting is actually interfering with the development of the province." On behalf of people like K. C. Irving," N e w Brunswick industrialist who owns all five English-language dailies in the province.

Dr. Cameron also took a swing at owners of the Halifax Chronicle-Herald and the Brantford Expositor and editor Norman Smith of the Ottawa Journal for suggesting that a press council to deal with complaints against newspapers would be necessary. If a newspaper is no good, the public will not buy it, so let the public be the judge, was the theme.

The problem is, said Dr. Cameron, a good many in Fredericton have looked at the Fredericton Gleaner—affectionately nicknamed the Daily Wiener"—judged it, and consider it a dreadful newspaper.

"So what? No consequences will flow from that judgment. There isn't any provision for any consequences to follow. This committee is the first opportunity I can recall for any dissatisfied citizen to do anything meaningful at all about the media. . . ."

Committee lawyer Yves Fortier asked Dr. Cameron who he thought there is "a bad press" in New Brunswick.

Dr. Cameron said he believes it is because of monopoly ownership and the newspapers have become "fat and lazy."

Asked about coverage in New Brunswick of the committee's testimony about newspapers there, Dr. Cameron said he has the impression that references to Mr. Irving had been played down in comparison to coverage in newspapers of central Canada.

Newsmen Ask Senators to Help Set Standards

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of newspaper men asked the special Senate committee on the mass media Thursday to help work out a code of journalistic standards.

The journalists themselves had been unable to agree on what the standards should be, the committee was told.

The plea was made on behalf of the embryonic Canadian Society of Professional Journalists by Frank Drea of the Toronto Telegram, Martin Goodman and Rae Corelli of the Toronto Star and Jeff Carruthers of the Ottawa Journal.

The society, about eight months old, has about 80 members, the committee was told. It hopes to organize outward from Toronto and become a means of raising professional standards among journalists in the print and electronic media.

The committee was told that a code of standards should be established. Then other issues affecting the press — recruitment, taxes, group ownership— could be measured against the standards to see whether public policies and practices within the industry were helping or hindering attainment of the goals.

Entrance into a journalistic career should be regulated and discipline imposed on journalists on the basis of the standards, it was agreed in answer to questions.

The system of setting recruitment qualifications and exercising discipline would be comparable to systems employed by law and medical societies, Senator J. M. Macdonald (PC—Nova Scotia) suggested. Mr. Drea agreed.

Mr. Carruthers said establishing the standards would be "a very delicate issue." There would be argument, for example, about whether graduates of provincial community colleges would qualify for a journalistic career, or whether a university degree would be necessary.

Mr. Drea said the system could not exclude journalists with long experience. He said he might not qualify if a rule were enforced requiring a university background. Formal education did not necessarily make for a better journalist.

Mr. Corelli said the society, headquartered by the publishers, should establish an institute for research and education where journalists could attend workshops.

Senator J. Harper Prowse (L—Alberta) suggested that if the publishers paid for the operation, they might want to call the tune.

Mr. Drea said he thought journalists ought to pay for it. Mr. Corelli said that if the publishers paid it would be keeping it in the family, which would be preferable to accepting government money. After three or four years, when the system was established, journalists themselves could take over costs.

White Cane Club
Needs of Blind Better Understood

At the banquet meeting of the White Cane Club held at the Recreation Centre on Wednesday evening, Mayor Pat Benvenuto presided and welcomed members and escorts.

Vi. Wells introduced Carl Gilbert, a registered blind musician who provided the musical entertainment. The fine piano accordion numbers were enthusiastically received. The appreciation of the Club was extended by Daisy Dobson.

Mrs. Irene Gill read excerpts of the 25th CCB annual meeting held in London, Ontario. At this meeting Miss Madden, director of education voiced the hope that all young blind Canadians will be given every opportunity for a better standard of education.

Mr. Collins, 1st vice-president, reported on meetings of representatives of the CCB and CNIB with the Minister of National Health and Welfare last March. He believes that the government now has a better idea of the needs of blind Canadians.

It is felt that much experimental work is being done in Great Britain and the U.S.A. in aids for the blind. There are also exhibitions of equipment which would promote great help to future generations of the blind. Mrs. Gill's report will be displayed on blind in Canada at the present time.

In his report of Mrs. Maude Rollins, Gladys Seldon read the Community Committee report for January, included were several items of interest. June 1970 the Blind School for the Blind celebrates 100 years of service to the visually handicapped young people of the Atlantic provinces.

For the blind readers, a new public literature service Oneaids stock two points in Braille and large type for those who have difficulty in reading normal sized print.

Mr. Bill Hall announced that the CCB and CNIB will be holding their annual White Cane Week campaign in Belleville from February 1-7, 1970.

Vi Wells thanked the Kiwanis for a tasty lunch served by them.

Home and School News

BAYVIEW — HARRY L. CLARKE

"Are you concerned 'th day?" queried Mrs. E. S. March as she spoke to the members of the Bayview-Harry L. Clarke Home and School Association last night.

Mrs. March, president of the Hastings County Home and School Council, toured the early beginnings of Home and School in Ontario and, more particularly, in Oakville, Hastings County and Belleville. She highlighted the causes and concerns that brought parents and teachers together to form the recognized organized associations of the Home and School Federation. In closing, the speaker stated that there are still causes to be fought, concerns to be studied and questions to be answered and it is up to us as Home and School members to do something about it.

An interesting question and answer period followed during which a number of local problems were discussed and some suggestions were voiced as to possible actions that might be stimulated by the discussion. The role of the Home and School Council, especially as it applies to the Safety Board of Education was explained.

Mrs. A. J. Fort voiced the appreciation of the association to Mrs. March.

A film "Jamie, the Sibling" was shown. The film was introduced by Mrs. Fort who also chaired the discussion period following the film presentation. Mrs. March and Mrs. Dorothy Armstrong assisted during the discussion.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Bannister, the meeting was chaired by Mr. N. J. Haslett.

Mrs. R. B. Wicks convened the social hour at the close of the meeting.

Cornwall Woman Heads Labor Council

HEADS LABOR COUNCIL — Beth Davidson, a toll assessor for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, has been elected president of the 7,000-member Cornwall and District Labor Council. She says women shouldn't go out to work unless it's financially necessary, but if they do they should be paid on a par with men doing the same job.

— (CP Photo)

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — The newly elected Cornwall and District Labor Council president is a firm believer in equal pay for equal work and equal job opportunities for women.

This is no surprise, for the new president is a woman.

Beth Davidson is doing a man-sized job herself as a toll assessor for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority.

"I believe it to be the first woman to head a labor council in Canada," Miss Davidson said today by about 7,000 members.

"Any woman doing the same work as a man should be entitled to equal pay," Miss Davidson says. "We don't get equal pay because we haven't had to fight for our rights, or unions are not fighting for us."

However, despite her equal pay views, some problems, she concedes. An employer might favor a family man rather than a housewife looking for pin money, if jobs had a set rate of equal pay for both men and women.

"But any woman who has to support herself or family or who has to supplement the income of her husband should not be used for cheap labor."

Are women worth the same rate of pay as men?

"Absolutely," says Miss Davidson. "Why not? Women are as conscientious as men and perhaps a little more patient and thorough in some jobs. They are just as reliable and punctual as men. If not more so."

She contends women can handle white-collar jobs as well as men and are not offered the same opportunities.

"We could prove just as efficient in responsible jobs but it's hard to normally women have become more active in unions. In time, they will isolate themselves as first-rate employees in the eyes of employers."

However, Miss Davidson does believe that married women shouldn't join the work force unless it's financially necessary, especially if there are young children at home.

"If a husband is earning a decent salary, his wife should stay at home because we do have an unemployment problem across the nation. What is pin money for one working wife might be used better for another."

There are 2,518,000 women in Canada's work force. There are also 39,000 married women and 41,000 single women unemployed.

Born in Kitchener, Ont., Miss Davidson studied to toll assessor and compiles statistics for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority. She started working there after graduation in 1958 in Ottawa and was the first employee to be moved to the Cornwall building when it opened in 1959.

She said the major task ahead of her is dealing with unemployment in Cornwall.

Courtaulds (Canada) Ltd. laid off 630 workers late last year when it ended rayon-yarn-spinning production. The company later announced there would be further reductions in staff.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

CARMEL WI

The January meeting of Carmel WI was held at the home of Mrs. Seldon Holmes with 14 members and eight visitors present.

It was decided that babies' night would be held at the Belmont Restaurant on Feb. 17 at 6.30 p.m., returning to Mrs. H. Elliott's home.

Mrs. Royden Baker introduced Miss Janet Ross who gave the current events for 4-H work. She stated that everyone needs green and yellow vegetables every day. The girls also had an attractive display. Mrs. Trevelion and Cathy Embory received county honors at Achievement Day and the WI presented them with corn flower crystal water glasses.

Mrs. Ritz introduced Mrs. Albert Wallbridge who showed slides of her visit to see her daughter and son-in-law, the Rev. and Mrs. Frank Lemay who were living at Cross Lake. They arrived during the treaty celebration where they observed sports day, games and boat races. It is sometimes 56 to 60 degrees below zero in winter. The women cook on wood stoves and they trap near the village. The men build docks as a winter project.

The pictures were interesting and well presented. Mrs. Wallbridge was presented with a gift by Mrs. Baker.

VON Plans Annual Meet

At the recent meeting of the board of the Victorian Order of Nurses, held at the YWCA building, plans were made for the annual general meeting which is to be held at Education Hall, Belleville General Hospital on Feb. 9, at 8 p.m.

An especially interesting guest speaker at this time will be Dr. Andrew Malcolm of the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation, Toronto and his subject will be "Drugs and the Family". This being a most timely subject, the public is cordially invited.

Church Groups

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD

The January meeting of the Women's Guild of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held at the church on Thursday afternoon.

President Mrs. R. Jones welcomed all and opened the meeting. Mrs. G. Bennett led in devotions. Mrs. R. Kempster read the secretary's report, and thank-you notes from those who received gifts, cards or plants during the holiday season. Mrs. R. Mitchard gave an up to date treasurer's report.

Plans are underway for Antique Show and Sale for Sept. 12 and 13. The annual church banner will be on Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The Friendship Group served refreshments.

PERSONALS

Julia Hadley, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hadley, has returned home after a week's stay in Belleville General Hospital.

Harry Sine, Belleville RR 6 is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Congregational Meeting

MELROSE UNITED

The annual meeting of Melrose United Church was held Thursday evening, Jan. 15, 8 p.m.

Reports of the various organizations were received. Officers were elected with only a few changes. Resignations were received from Mrs. French and Mrs. Cassidy and Everett Stratton, two members of the choir, so the vacancies will be filled by George McCullough and Jack Macfarlane.

Mrs. Charles Allen was appointed to be responsible for music for the church services. They are Mrs. L. Wesse, Miss Pat Pearce and Newton Donaldson.

Sunny Danville at a previous meeting, had been engaged, to sing as caretaker duty for the congregation of Mrs. C. Milligan who had served for a number of years.

Some changes will be made in the body of stewards rest. Up to date acceptances of re appointee who was not present.

Further items of business will be dealt with at the official board meeting.

U.C.W. Meeting

ST. ANDREW'S UCW

MARMORA — Rev. Douglas Miller of St. Andrew's United Church conducted installation ceremonies for the new 1970-71 executive of the UCW recently: president, Mrs. Doug Vilneff; vice-president, Mrs. Walter Potts; secretary, Mrs. Lillian Walker; treasurer, Mrs. Ray Darrah; programming, Mrs. G. J. Meiklejohn and Mrs. Vaughn Glover; literature, Mrs. Sid Demorest; press and publicity, Mrs. James Cook. Committee chairmen were also named.

Members and visitors were welcomed to the first meeting by the new president, Mrs. Vilneff, who pointed out the challenge that lies before all, in the next decade, concluding with a thought provoking poem.

The devotional theme presented by Mrs. Douglas Miller was based on personal attitude towards the new year — is one prepared to face the problems as well as the pleasant aspects of 1970? Members took part in an act of personal rededication.

Special topic for the evening "Why a UCW?" was handled by Mrs. Murphy, who presented her ideas in dialogue fashion using several members as helpers.

Mrs. Vaughn Glover announced that the UCW have again become proud foster parents — this time of a five-year-old Brazilian girl, Jorginette Terra.

Business concluded with plans for a bake sale on February 13.

Year's Plans Previewed by YWCA President

TORONTO (CP) — "Any Y that takes in a frightened, pregnant 15-year old rather than a woman who just wants an inexpensive hotel is all right by me."

"Me" is Mrs. Philip J. Chadney, president of the YWCA of Canada. She made the comment during an interview about the Y's activities during 1970, its 120th anniversary year.

She says the Y's image as a bastion of Protestant piety may sometimes hinder it in its efforts to reach some of the people who need it most.

"I wonder if we are giving as much as we can to the people who need help most. The Y looks all clean and tidy, and this isn't what they have in mind. But I get the feeling that there are so many people who need help desperately.

Y's have taken in girls referred by the police and known to be on drugs.

"Our membership may have dropped, but the number of people using our facilities is about the same. The young people will come to boutiques and drop-in centres run by kids, but many of them wouldn't be caught dead with a Y membership."

Mrs. Harry Pearce, Wellington, is the Presbyterial president.

The opening session will be on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 7.30 p.m. The speaker for the evening will be Rev. T. Van Dusen Parsons, B.A., B.D., Chaplain at the Warkworth Institution. This is an open meeting and everyone is invited to attend.

The Thursday morning session opens with registration at 9.00 a.m. The theme speaker will be Rev. B. Garrett, B.A., B.D., director, Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation. The business session and election of officers will also be held on Thursday. Special music will be offered throughout the sessions.

Canadian Y was founded in 1870.

It is sponsoring a series of lectures in Toronto on youth, welfare, world relations and Canada's growth. Mrs. Chadney says the lectures are instead of a party.

There is a new symbol, too, designed for the centennial.

Annual Meeting of Belleville UCW to be Held in Napanee

The annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial United Church Women will be held at Grace United Church, Napanee, on Feb. 4 and 5. The theme will be "Peace - On God's Terms - Not Ours." Mrs. Harry Pearce, Wellington, is the Presbyterial president.

The opening session will be on Wednesday, Feb. 4 at 7.30 p.m. The speaker for the evening will be Rev. T. Van Dusen Parsons, B.A., B.D., Chaplain at the Warkworth Institution. This is an open meeting and everyone is invited to attend.

The Thursday morning session opens with registration at 9.00 a.m. The theme speaker will be Rev. B. Garrett, B.A., B.D., director, Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation. The business session and election of officers will also be held on Thursday. Special music will be offered throughout the sessions.

Napanee Resident 90 Years Old

NAPANEE — Mrs. Agnes Young was 90 years old on Thursday, Jan. 22. A resident of the Macdonald Nursing Home since late summer, she spent a few days with her son George and his wife, Mrs. Reid and her son Albert and his wife. Mrs. Young came from Crookston to spend her birthday and the weekend with her.

Mrs. Young has four living grandchildren, one great granddaughter Barbara, Mrs. Thorpe Holden, died a few years ago. She also has nine great grandchildren.

Trinity UCW Women Install New Officers

NAPANEE — Trinity United Church Women officers for 1970 are as follows: past president, Mrs. Jessie Lean; president, Mrs. Bruce Davis; vice - president, Mrs. Grant Huyck; recording secretary, Mrs. Catherine Kells; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Wilbert Ashworth.

Mrs. Charles Allen was appointed to be responsible for music for the church services. They are Mrs. L. Wesse, Miss Pat Pearce and Newton Donaldson.

Sunny Danville at a previous meeting, had been engaged, to sing as caretaker duty for the congregation of Mrs. C. Milligan who had served for a number of years.

Some changes will be made in the body of stewards rest. Up to date acceptances of re appointee who was not present.

Further items of business will be dealt with at the official board meeting.

Mrs. Douglas Miller and Mrs. Ray Darrah, installing officers in the afternoon and the other in the evening. Each unit is sub-divided into smaller units. All committee chairmen have been appointed also. The nominating committee consisted of Mrs. Carl Clark, Mrs. Wilber Goodman and Mrs. Wilbert Ashworth.

The officers were installed by the minister, Rev. O. Glen Taylor.

During the January meeting it was decided that, again this year, no bazaar would be held.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

MOUNT PLEASANT-RAWDON MESSENGERS

Mount Pleasant - Rawdon Messengers convened recently in the church hall with the leaders Mrs. Raymond McConnell, Mrs. Stanley Williams and Mrs. Wilbert Graff in charge.

Donnie Hubel presided and the devotional was presented by Mrs. Williams, Ian Hubel, John Knapton and Dean Graff.

Piano selections were played by Chris Bailey and Lynn Joslin and a reading was given by Terry Bailey. The study books were synopsized by Mrs. Graff and Mrs. McConnell.

The 1970 officers were installed as follows: president, Jill McAdam; 1st vice-president, Margaret Hoard; 2nd vice-president, Ian Hubel; secretary, Kathy Sharpe; treasurer, Linda Hoard and birthday secretary, DeAbie David.

SENIOR CITIZENS' CLUB

The first and third meetings of the Senior Citizens' Club No. 94 were held at the Recreation Centre with the president, Mrs. M. Doyle opening the meetings.

After a short business period at the first meeting, the club was entertained by Mr. Hoskins.

At the third meeting euchre was played. Winners were women: first, Mrs. M. Doyle; second, Mrs. Dunstater and third, Mrs. J. Doyle; men, first, Mr. Dimmille; second, Mr. Bedell and third, Mr. Edgar. The door prizes were won by Mrs. Flo Clarke and Mrs. H. Taylor.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Hanna, Mrs. Ford and the committee members.

One with Protruding Lower Lip Feels Self-conscious

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have a slight ly protruding lower lip and whenever I speak to anyone most people seem to imitate me. Even passers-by or anyone I happen to stare at will do the same thing. It tends to make me self-conscious.

Also, I look directly (a direct gaze) at people whenever they speak to me or I to them, which I am trying to overcome. Is there something I can do about this, or do I just have to "live with it"?

— Annoying.

Dear Annoying: We worry about these minor flaws of ours beyond all sense. Then we find that the observation our prim worry and disclosure the other fellow does not even know what we are talking about!!

Whatever the flaw — and these range from protruding lips, wrinkled jowls, large noses, and scarred skin, to things like crossed eyes — our friends grow accustomed to our faces. After a while they are not even aware of the faulty feature. So much for our self-conscious suspicions!

If your gaze is just too intense, turn it off. Get a little sympathy for the one who endures the penetration. Think of how the other person feels and you'll get it right.

Dear Doris: This girl is a compulsive liar. She'll make up lies about me and different people in our class at school. She also feels she is the most beautiful girl in our class person around and tells everyone this; but she really isn't.

She's going with this guy in our class and tells ever one she loves him and is going to marry him, but she told me she really didn't like him at all and would rather go with someone else.

She acts as though I'm her slave and there to do anything she wants. This is making things the crowd gave me and I've thought of quitting school. The reason I just haven't ignored her is because I think maybe I could help her but I don't know exactly what to do. When I try to avoid her she starts acting like a two-year-old, hitting me and pulling my hair.

— Driving Me Nuts.

Dear Nuts: Quitting school would be like cutting off your nose to spite your face. Your compulsive friend would really have succeeded in punishing you.

She has troubles and that's for sure; but they will take adult handling. Talk with your teacher and your mother; keep yourself thinking straight about her, avoid her liberately and gradually build up friendships with others around you.

Confidential to Still Trying: Many women simply never experience completed physical satisfaction all their lives long. Yet they are not frigid. The failure may have something to do with Puritan reserve or taboos established in childhood, and these are hard to shake.

More often, lack of understanding of the sex act is the hang-up. In your case there is strong love between you and your husband, and a willingness to be helpful. Im-

Ann Landers

Admission Charged At Wedding Dance

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It's obvious you are a big city gal born and bred a long way from small folks. Your comment on the money-raising weddings surprised me. Out here in St. Cloud, Minnesota — in fact, all over Stearns County — it's a common practice for a newly married couple to hold a public dance and charge admission. This makes a lot more sense than having a big reception and feeding everybody for nothing. It's a known fact that many a bride sets her wedding date according to the availability of the hall and her band. Many couples celebrate wedding anniversaries this way, too. It's a great way to entertain friends and make a little money at the same time. Almost every daily newspaper carries these announcements.

I'm enclosing a page from the St. Cloud Daily Times to prove it. — A.C. of S.C.

DEAR A.C.: The things I learn from my readers! I was fascinated to discover that these weddings and anniversary celebrations feature special events such as poultry auctions, prizes for hog calling, pushcart races for the best dressed. I note, too, that one couple advertised, "No admission charge if you bring your deer hunter's licence." Just to keep the record straight, I was born and raised in Sioux City, Iowa, which is 331 miles from St. Cloud.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife is scared to death of lightning. When she was a child, her cousin was struck and killed at a family outing. If it starts to storm when we are riding in the car she insists on getting off and hiding under a tree. Is this advisable or safe? — MARYLAND, WYOMING.

DEAR W.W.: You should insist that your wife stay in the car during an electrical storm. It's actually one of the safest places to be. In fact, I've never heard of a person in a car being struck by lightning. Has anyone?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read with interest your column about "The Ways To Keep A Male Interested." The man who made up the list knew his onions. Rule No. 3 was especially interesting to me. It was, "Don't call me. I'll call you."

Some time ago I met a girl I thought was the one for me. She was attractive, well educated, amiable, etc. Unfortunately, she turned out to be a pushover. On our third date we went to bed. After a month I was bored and decided to break it off. Well, Ann, you wouldn't believe the letters and the phone calls. She pestered me at the office, called me at home, tracked me down at my mother's place and even called me at work. She chased me so shamelessly, I couldn't possibly have an ounce of respect for her.

Please tell the girls that the so-called new morality is a man's gimmick. If a chick wants to go along with it, she should accept the consequences (like getting dumped) and let the guy off the hook gracefully. Keep men wanted a wife he can be proud of. — PHILADELPHIA.

DEAR PHIL: You sound like bad news to me but your letter is worth printing. Some girls need to be reminded that there are lots of heels running loose — disguised as men.

D.D.G.M. Visits Minerva Chapter O.E.S. 138

Mrs. Edna Buchanan of Warkworth, District Deputy Grand Matron of the Grand Chapter of Ontario O.E.S. visited Minerva Chapter 138 on her official visit Friday evening, Jan. 23.

The worthy matron Mrs. Kathleen Poole and worthy patron Arthur Clare welcomed guests from Trenton, Port Hope, Warkworth, Quinte, Marmora, Wellington and Solleville 52.

Mrs. Buchanan congratulated the officers on the capable manner in which they carried out their duties. She also brought a message on the theme "What does the new year mean to you?"

She was presented with a gift by Mrs. Pauline Clare, P.M. on behalf of the members of Minerva Chapter.

After the close, refreshments were served.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Chili Sauce Good Fondue Dip

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: Thank you for so kindly sending me the two booklet on fondue-ing. We sure like the sauces. We also like plain chili sauce as a dip.

We fondued a few times as a family of four and the kids think it is great fun. So when we had Boxing Day guests I was sure they'd remember their visit with us if we fondued cold turkey. They seemed to enjoy it. Then my daughter's drama club went tobogganing New Years night and they served them their first fondue party after. Nothing done by halves here, so I borrowed another pot for 12 (six to each pot).

We have done fillet of beef, lamb, cooked turkey, Gouda cheese, good old Canadian cheddar, cocktail weiners.

I've been reading how people think it is such an easy way to entertain — but they aren't mentioning the preparation eh? I bet I was three hours — getting ready for those 12. Tossed lettuce salad, sliced and buttered French bread, two dips and the batter and trimming and cutting lamb, turkey, cheese and weiners.

By the way — I got Canadian lamb from friends who raise sheep right in my own neighborhood. It is always tender no matter what cut and I have had it in many meals for guests who would never have touched lamb, and decided they liked it.

Children really enjoy fondue-ing and eat better than some of them normally would.

I find. So many we know are so "picky."

Happy New Year of the '70's from this frustrated cook who would like to make a resolution and try four new recipes a week. I made Dark Blonde Florida Fruit Cake on New Year's day and I just sliced a bit now. It is good. I left the pineapple very coarse and the cherries only in halves and didn't chop the pecans either. It's okay that way.

My husband is my big encouragement — he's game to eat most anything I try and enjoys variety. — Mildred Mick.

ANSWER: Thanks for your fondue discoveries. Since I gave here the two instalment column on it I have added other foods to the fondue-able list (cocktail sausages, battered cubed halibut and salmon and pork tenderloin) — but had not thought of your cooked turkey idea. Thank you.

Molly: "I can't feed myself."

Mother: "Yes you can. You're a big girl. You don't need help while you're eating. You're not a baby any more."

Molly doesn't want to be a baby — she just wants the special attention the baby seems to have taken from her. She will act more like a big girl if she is given a type of attention that is here alone, something the baby does not share.

School Course To Have Local Flavor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Educationists from the four Western provinces are trying to get more local flavor into history, civics and social studies courses in the public school system.

Representatives from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba have formed a special committee to study possible curriculum revisions aimed at improving courses and texts.

John Church, B.C. representative and director of professional development for the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said the committee believes Canadian schools rely too heavily on text-books from other nations.

And another problem is that curriculum-produced texts are usually put together in Eastern Canada and tend to be topheavy with material from that area, said Mr. Church.

"What we need is material with a B.C. flavor for B.C. schools," said Mr. Church. "One of the problems we face in B.C. schools is that little material in history and social studies actually relates to the world in which students live.

"There is nothing dealing with problems that exist in B.C. for students here to study. We have reached a stage where our students are tuned into the problems but the teachers aren't because they are forced to use material in the classroom that is not relevant."

Mr. Church said he expects the joint project to last four or five years. The idea is to get teachers and others in related fields involved in developing new approaches.

Ideally, the result would be courses of study that deal with the problems of today, as they exist locally."

Indian School Will Reopen

EDMONTON (CP) — A spokesman for Indian and Metis residents in the northern Alberta town of Lac la Biche said Thursday night that the Alberta Newstart dormitory school will open April 1.

"We were told the date by Martin O'Connell (Liberal MP for Scarborough East) in a telephone call that the school would definitely open by April 1," said Lawrence Spence in an interview.

Mr. Spence said Mr. O'Connell, parliamentary secretary to Jean Marchand, federal regional development minister, told William Erasmus—another member of the Lac la Biche group—of the government's plan.

"He didn't say anything else over the telephone or tell us any other details," Mr. Spence said.

Native representatives from the town were to meet Alberta government officials today to continue discussions on setting up a native development board in the area.

Alberta Newstart was shut down Dec. 31 after about 10 months of operation because of a federal decision to decrease funds for the federal-provincial program.

About two weeks ago 250 Indian and Metis—people of mixed Indian-white parentage—gained peaceful access to the school when granted permission to use it for two days of meetings.

The sit-in has continued and "about 85 have been involved" for the last few days," Mr. Spence said.

Negative Income Tax Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — A system of compensating Canadians whose incomes are below the minimum income figures used in tax returns was approved Thursday by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

Delegates to the CFA's annual meeting here adopted a negative income tax method that would guarantee persons with low incomes the minimum taxable amount by a payment that could be administered through an extension of the income tax structure.

The proposal is included in a brief the federation will submit to the Senate committee on poverty.

The brief also calls for action immediately to institute school lunch programs, school milk programs and food stamp plans.

The brief states: "We think it is absolutely ridiculous in this day and age, with our capacity to produce food far exceeding our markets, that everyone should not at an absolute minimum, be well fed."

The CFA brief says the advantages of a negative income tax system are that it does not rely on "two of the degrading features of our present welfare programs," supervision and means tests.

In other resolutions passed at the final session of the annual meeting, the CFA called for reductions in tariffs and quota restrictions on goods imported from potential Canadian markets. Tariffs on movement of beef cattle and hogs between the U.S. and Canada should also be abolished.

A series of resolutions that outline a national livestock policy were approved, including proposals for livestock market research, re-examination of livestock credit policies, creation of national beef marketing boards and an end to free movement of grain in the Prairie provinces.

The federation also made a plea that fines and sentences for cattle rustling be established, making it as serious an offence to steal cattle in Alberta as it now is to shoot moose out of season.

Thursday's resolutions will join those passed during the four-day meeting to be incorporated into a brief that will form the basis of federation presentations to the federal government and department of agriculture.

Belleville Woman A JP

The Law Not Totally A Man's World

It hasn't really been that long since Emily Pankhurst and her suffragettes shook their dainty fists at the unfairness of living in a man's world.

And women have continued to shake their fists down through the years when they felt they weren't getting a square deal.

Today women are in offices, drive buses and taxi cabs and even smoke Tparticles.

You can even find women in the courtroom.

Take Mrs. Dorothy Howell, for instance.

She is a justice of the peace for the Province of Ontario. And as if that isn't enough of a foothold in a man's world, she is the administrator of family and juvenile court, too.

Although she has held the position of justice of the peace for only three years, Mrs. Howell maintains that's long enough to sit back and analyze what has happened.

Shuffling the papers on her desk into neat piles, she pauses to reminisce about how she embarked on a career that shuttles her around the county and in and out of police stations.

"I was a legal secretary for several years after World War II, and I guess that was where I was first initiated into the inner workings of the court," remarked Mrs. Howell.

But marriage, and later children, came between my thoughts of a career.

"What forced me back into the working world was the death of my husband. It was then I realized I would have to take up some career, and I was hoping I could use my experience as a legal secretary."

As things turned out, there was a vacancy in Judge T. Y. Wills' office for a justice of the peace for Hastings county.

"I submitted my application, and was interviewed for the position. Later I was notified that I had been appointed," said Mrs. Howell.

How did she view her job?

Mrs. Howell remarked: "challenge never defeats me so easily."

Explaining that she took a course in preparation for her new duties, which was headed by the crown attorney in Kingston, she called what she learned "invaluable".

Mrs. Howell said "interest in the community means a great deal in a job like this. It demands that you be relatively well-known and care about people. This is very important."

The duties of the justice of the peace are vital and immediate.

For three weeks out of every month, the JP must be on 24-hour call, ready at a moment's notice to go wherever needed.

"The bulk of my work involves taking informations from the police, making bail bonds and issuing warrants to search and arrest. I also issue summonses and subpoena witnesses.

Just recently, her jurisdiction has been extended to the province, enlarged from the county limits.

Now, in addition to her responsibilities as justice of the peace, Mrs. Howell through a redistribution of duties, is also the administrator for the family and juvenile court.

"The former administrator took on many of my duties, and I, in turn, am responsible for fulfilling the responsibilities of the court clerk," remarked Mrs. Howell.

The family and juvenile court deals with family problems, such as the deserted wife, assault between husband and wife, and of course, juvenile delinquents.

"My work as clerk involves dealing with people concerning the information they supply about their case."

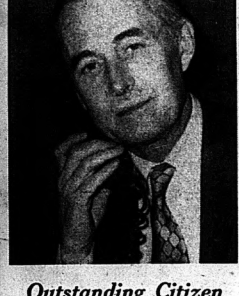
"I also arrange summonses for these individuals. But my job centres mainly on keeping things running smoothly for the judge."

"This means setting up the court docket or schedule of cases to be heard.

It is obvious that Mrs. Howell, J. P., enjoys her work.

She expresses her keen appreciation of the opportunity it has brought her, omitting her by-passes doing what she likes — working with people.

Although she has no reservations about her qualifications to do her job, Mrs. Howell admits that she is involved in a field normally reserved for men.



But it doesn't bother her a bit.

"That may have been the situation in the past, but it isn't necessarily so. Many things are now. I suppose many men feel that way, or have, but attitudes are changing," she added as she smiled.

The Lady and the Law

Framed by the County coat of arms in front of the Hastings courthouse, Justice of the Peace Mrs. Dorothy Howell pauses a moment before she enters to begin another day's work. Mrs. Howell was appointed three years ago.

Outstanding Citizen

Frank Murray, 1964's recipient of the Citizen of the Year Award, has thoughts and appraisals of the community in which he continues to take an active role.

Man-of-Year Sees City 'Sophisticated'

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

(Belleville today is a changing scene. As a prelude to the 1969 Citizen of the Year Award, The Intelligencer is interviewing award-winners of earlier years as a source of comment on that change.)

"The city to me has become a more sophisticated urban community than it used to be seven or eight years ago. Then it was a fairly small sort of city, but now I see it as the hub of fairly large industrial growth."

Those were the words of Frank Murray, manager of Radio Station CJBQ who has been active in the community for more than a decade.

Mr. Murray was the recipient of the 1964, Belleville Jaycee Citizen of the Year Award.

With his interest in Belleville and its various project and problems, Mr. Murray has developed a keen community appraisal.

"I hope it won't become too industrialized. I'd hate to see the beautiful countryside buried under factories."

However, Mr. Murray's respect for the more natural attributes of Belleville and its surrounding area should not be confused with a desire to halt industrial growth.

On the contrary, he believes that industrial growth is essential to a community like Belleville — but at a reasonable pace.

His one main concern is the safe-guarding of waters and natural resources in the area.

"We've got to absolutely guard our waterfront. Never again should we permit refuse and garbage to be dumped in our bay," he said.

"If (Belleville) is an exciting place to live in at the moment, it's exploding a little. Unfortunately some people get hurt a little with change."

He described his receipt of the Citizen of the Year Award as very "exciting".

He felt that in the past people have been prone to criticism rather than praise for what has been done.

Mr. Murray joined CJBQ in 1947 and then left for a short period of time. He returned to the radio station as assistant manager.

He became station manager 11 years ago. Since that time he has been an aldorman, a member of the Board of Control, Commission and a member of the Chamber of Commerce of which he is now first vice president.

He was part of almost every major drive for funds — the United Appeal, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, the original building fund for the Belleville General Hospital. He is also a member of the Rotary Club.

He has become heavily involved in broadcasting having president of the Central Canada Broadcasters Association in 1965, director of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters for the past four years, chairman of the board of directors of the Radio Sales Bureau in 1968 and chairman of the Committee for Promotion of Canadian Music in the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

With the change in the community over the past decade there also has been a change in tastes and interests when it comes to broadcasting.

"In the old days it was an entertainment media. Today it is also an information media, a companion to individuals rather than groups."

Mr. Murray commends the Belleville Jaycees on their work and hoped that the organization was swamped with entries for the 1969 Citizen of the Year.

"I think they really deserve our support," he said.

In Ameliasburg

A New Disposal Service

AMELIASBURG—The township's garbage service implemented by council at a special meeting this week commences the middle of February, township clerk William Nightingale announced yesterday.

The township's present arrangement with Herman Lucas of Belleville to continue pickups in the municipality ends February 16.

Contract for the service — a first for Ameliasburg — went to Quinte Sanitation Services of Belleville. Council accepted the second lowest bid tendered — $14,256.

The tender advertised by the township stimulated considerable interest and the clerk's office received 17 applications. The highest tender to provide the service on the basis of one pickup a week for the period of one year was $32,100.

Council agreed the collection service would be paid for by a special levy against all households and places of business. It's estimated the householder can expect to pay about $14, annually for the service.

Under the former arrangement with the private contractor the pickup service cost the individual householder 50 cent a week or $26. a year.

After the middle of February garbage collected will be deposited on township property on the third concession about one-and-a-half miles west of Highway 14, Previously Ameliasburg garbage went to Belleville city dump under a rental agreement of $500. annually.

The agreement does not obligate the contractor to remove heavy or junk items. Such disposal will be the responsibility of the householder or business operator.

Ameliasburg is the first township in Prince Edward County to adopt township-wide garbage-collection service.

Business Faces Complex Future Says Northern Electric President

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Business of the future must cope with greater expectations from workers, investors and the buying public, a top Canadian businessman predicted last night.

And business must successfully meet such demands, Vernon O. Marquez, president of Northern Electric and Canadian Industrial Management Association Quinte branch at Club Canara.

"As we enter the closing years of the 20th century, the managers of business institutions will encounter a highly critical environment in which the demands of their three electorates will be more consistently difficult to meet."

Mr. Marquez named employees, the buying public and the investing public as separate "electorates".

"Business is the one form of institution which must successfully solicite the continuous support of three distinct electorates in our society in order to remain in existence."

"Individual members of society may have the opportunity to cast their votes in all three of these social electorates," he said.

Mr. Marquez explained that the buying public has become more sophisticated and discerning and, because of its affluence, armed with greater discretionary power.

"The customer of the future will buy less and less from sheer necessity and more and more from individual choice," Mr. Marquez said.

Investors also were becoming more sophisticated and discriminating.

"The employee electorate, too, will be more demanding in the future. Physically healthier, better educated, less timid, more idealistic and insistent on securing personal satisfaction as well as financial remuneration, the interaction of the business institution with its employee electorate will present unprecedented opportunities for progress."

He added, though, that future workers could, "at the same time," increase the dangers and the penalties for failure to achieve an acceptable relationship.

"The increasing complexity of product and process technology and their rapid rate of change, the growing mechanization of business systems stemming from computer capabilities, have together tended to make business functions more complex, more specialized and more difficult to comprehend.

"Managers in the future will have to learn how to manage on the strength of highly specialized functional knowledge in the possession of others, and this will require a type of management skill which is quite new and which has not yet been developed to any great degree," he said.

"Managers in the 1970s will have to break new ground in learning how to deal with knowledge and the knowledge industries.

"Managers looking ahead will have to make judgments not only as to how much production capacity to provide but also make the more difficult prediction as to what new services, new products, new processes will be needed by their customers . . ."

"In a management environment in which more scientific aids to decision making will be available than ever before, there will, paradoxically, be a need for a higher proportion of intuitive decisions than in the past.

"Managers will find, if they have not already discovered it, that the least effective tool available to them in discharging their responsibilities as managers will be 'authority of position'."

"Managers will need to enlist the collaboration of wider segments of the business organization in the decision making process while still actively taking the responsibility of making the final decisions themselves."

He also suggested that the present conflict-orientated relationship with organized labor will need to be supplemented by "collaborative" relationships.

"We shall have to learn to think internationally. We might even speculate that in the next 10 years no industry of any significance will be able to prosper in Canada unless it is thinking, if not actually operating on an international scale."

Project Approved in Principle

Extensive Outdoor Education Program Could Become A Reality

An extensive outdoor education program may soon be a reality in Hastings county — ratepayers' pocketbooks permitting.

Hastings county board of education this week approved outdoor education in principle on a county-wide basis but hedged on the money aspect of the project.

Wheelchair county's 24,000 elementary and secondary students begin next year to move outdoors for a regular portion of their school instruction will depend on a budget-time decision on the availability of funds.

Monday night the teacher members of the outdoor education committee presented their brief on the subject to the board and called for expansion of the existing outdoor program now operating in some schools. The cost to begin phase one of their program in 1970 would be $24,800.

"Don't try to bring the whole world into the classroom," urged chairman K. S. Daley, assistant science head at Quinte Secondary School. "Take the children out into the world."

That, in essence, was the plan suggested in the 27-page brief. It, and a slide presentation, were prepared with the aid of a $150 grant from the Hastings County Home and School Council.

Outdoor education is designed to meet modern youth's demands for more relevance in the school curriculum.

"It is not a fad, a frill, or an extra," asserted Mr. Daley. "We propose the use of the outdoors as a laboratory to supplement classroom learning and as a means of teaching the whole 'out of our natural environment."

At present, outdoor education is included in the Grade 3 through 6 program in many elementary schools in the form of a one - day visit to a sugar bush or to Vandorwater Park. In the secondary schools it takes the form of an enrichment program for honor students during the last regular week of school in June.

Through their own fund - raising efforts in 1969, some elementary and secondary school grades were able to attend camp for a week of instruction by their regular teachers.

Most trustees were in favor of maintaining the present outdoor education program offered in conjunction with the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Donald Williams of Stirling instigated a motion, designed to protect the present program even if funds were not available for an extension. But, as a rider to his motion, carried unanimously, he added a recommendation for consideration of the committee's outdoor education scheme if money were available.

Admitting that he is prejudiced because he is a great believer in the value of camping and the acquisition of outdoor skills, Mr. Williams pondered whether "we have to be forced into pure recreation; whether we can go to the taxpayers and ask for their support."

"If we spend money like this, we're contributing to inflation," remarked trustee Macdonald Smith of Belleville. However, he later made the motion, also carried unanimously, to accept the report and hand it over to the budget committee for consideration.

Adding strength to the committee's appeal was a recommendation from director of education Eric Runacres, calling for inclusion of outdoor education in the list of educational priorities for this year.

Ald. Robin Jeffrey of Belleville, a member of the Moira River Conservation Authority, told the board the authority is "anxious for you to continue and extend the present program."

Mr. Daley said field study centres for outdoor education could be developed on Moira Conservation Authority and lands and forests properties at Plainfield, Moira Lake and Card Lake. Site development could be undertaken by vocational students as part of their construction courses.

The $24,800 budget allocation requested for this year would be used to hire an outdoor education co-ordinator, train personnel, purchase supplies and equipment, develop the sites and pay for transportation.

In the second phase of the program, outdoor education would be made available to 180 classes in the county — about one-half the total student enrolment. Cost of extending the program to this level would be $63,500 a year.

In the third and final phase, costing $102,000, each student in the county would be assured of one camping experience during his elementary school career and a second sometime during his time in high school.

Largest portion of the third phase ($50,000) budget would go to provide a co-ordinator and staff of three outdoor education teachers. Second largest portion ($36,000) would provide transportation. The remaining $15,000 a year would be spent on supplies, equipment and site maintenance.

At present, the money spent on outdoor education comes from the $18,000 a year allowance for trips and excursions, and from the principals' contingency funds.

No Curtain Calls For Stars' Cullen

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

What is a guy going to do when he scores three goals in the National Hockey League and doesn't get a single curtain call?

That was probably the question Ray Cullen of Minnesota North Stars was asking himself Thursday night as he trooped out of Boston Gardens, where the rafters still rang from the cheers for defenceman Bobby Orr and centre Phil Esposito.

The problem is, of course, was that Orr and Esposito managed the Minnesota forward by picking up four points each to continue their domination of the NHL's scoring race and lead Boston Bruins to a 6-5 victory.

Orr scored a goal, his 15th of the season, and set up three others in the first period to take his league-leading total to 72 points, while Esposito scored two goals and assisted on two others to bring his second-place total to 61 points, including 26 goals.

In the other scheduled games, Detroit Red Wings increased their fourth-place lead over Chicago Black Hawks to three points with a 4-3 victory over Philadelphia Flyers and St. Louis Blues defeated Los Angeles Kings 3-2.

The victory for the Bruins before 14,835 fans brought their unbeaten string over West Division clubs to 34 games.

Don Marcotte, Wayne Carleton and Ken Hodge got the other Boston goals, while Tom Williams and Danny Grant added single goals to Cullen's three.

The victory also moved the Bruins into a two-way tie for second place in the East with Montreal Canadiens. Both have 69 points, two less than New York Rangers.

Gordie Howe scored his 17th goal of the season before the 13,315 fans at Detroit. Frank Mahovlich, Garry Unger and Alex Delvecchio had the others. Gary Dornhoefer, Jean-Guy Gendron and Wayne Hillman replied for the Flyers.

It was the first goal in 223 games for Hillman, a defenceman who scored his last goal Oct. 23 1968.

Phil Goyette scored two goals for the Blues, who stretched their winning streak to 12 games over the Kings. Bill McCreary got the other St. Louis goal, while Bill Flett and Brian Campbell replied for Los Angeles.

The Rangers get a chance to increase their first-place lead in the East to four points tonight when they meet the Seals at Oakland in the only scheduled game.

Four More for Orr

Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins collected two goals and two assists Thursday night in Boston's 6-5 win over Minnesota North Stars to move into second place in National Hockey League scoring.

But the Boston star failed to gain ground on the leader, team-mate Bobby Orr, who also picked up four points on one goal and three assists.

Orr now has 15 goals and 57 assists. He has an 11-point lead on Esposito, whose 61 points include 26 goals and 35 assists.

Phil Goyette, in fourth place behind Walt Tkaczuk of New York Rangers, raised his goal-total to 20 and his points to 55, as St. Louis Blues nipped Los Angeles Kings 3-2.

Business First, Players Second

OTTAWA (CP) — Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, denied Thursday night that the reserve clause in NHL contracts constitutes an infringement on players' civil rights.

Speaking to 500 students at Carleton University during a taping of the syndicated television program Under Attack, Campbell conceded that the clause provides "a degree of control over a player's movements inside the league."

"But it's the player disapproves of the reserve clause, then he is always free to quit hockey," he said.

Campbell also denied that the league has ever "officially resisted in any way" efforts of players to organize for collective bargaining.

But he stressed he is opposed to any form of unionization of referees because he fears this might undermine the "absolute independence" required to maintain the integrity of officials.

Campbell said he does not regard the welfare of players as the paramount concern of the league.

"Our primary concern must be to operate the league on a successful business basis, and it should be recognized that this is essential if the interests of the players are to be properly protected," he said.

Campbell said he recognizes that professional hockey has diverted some potential students away from high school and university, but said he believes organized hockey has also served as a "poor man's university" for many young Canadians.

Asked why the league has not made the wearing of protective helmets compulsory, he said this step has not been taken because of opposition from the players themselves.

"The league is providing funds for research into this problem, but so far no helmet has been designed which is suitable for a continuous action game such as hockey," he said.

Asked whether he regards the National Hockey League as part of "the United States financial empire", Campbell said he would not object to that description but he argued that from Canada's standpoint the NHL represents "reciprocity of the highest order."

"The NHL yields net benefits to Canadians in excess of $10,000,000 a year," he said.

Campbell also denied a charge that the National Hockey League had not offered adequate encouragement for the development of minor league hockey in Canada.

"We would very much prefer to operate development teams in Canada rather than the United States and we have subsidized extensive experiments to this end in the principal cities of the country, but the sad fact is that the public simply will not support minor hockey."

Koufax Tops For Ten

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Koufax, who pitched with pain and precision during a career in which he fashioned a record four no-hitters, was named Baseball Athlete of the Decade Thursday in a poll taken by The Associated Press.

The Dodger left-hander, winner of the Cy Young Award as the best pitcher in the majors three times before he retired following the 1966 season, was the clear winner over three slugging stars—Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays and Hank Aaron.

Koufax received 225½ votes from sports writers and sports-casters participating in the poll. Mantle, New York Yankee' outfielder who also retired during the decade, was second with 154½. Mays finished third with 106½ and Aaron was fourth with 51½.

Koufax, who pitched the last several years with an arthritic condition that finally forced him to quit, sparkled in a career that spanned 12 seasons and saw him pitching for the Dodgers on two coasts, in Brooklyn and Los Angeles.

Frank J. Slaughnessy, the late president of the International League who saw such great pitchers as Christy Mathewson, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Walter Johnson, said of Koufax:

"He comes closer to being unhittable than any other pitcher I ever saw."

Sandy Koufax, former Los Angeles Dodgers' pitching ace named baseball player of the decade in the Associated Press poll, is pictured as he prepared to play a round of golf in Los Angeles.

Senior Phillips After Double

TORONTO (CP) — Al Phillips Sr. of Toronto Thursday night won the right to represent Ontario in the Canadian senior curling championship by defeating Carl Asmussen of Etobicoke 10-2 in a sudden-death playoff for the Ontario championship.

Phillips now hopes to become the first man to win two Canadian seniors curling championships in a row.

The final was never in doubt and Phillips held a 7-0 lead after the first five ends. Asmussen conceded after the eighth end of the scheduled 10-end game.

In their first meeting of the Ontario seniors competition Asmussen defeated Phillips 8-6.

Phillips entered the final by winning 7-6 over Lou Ross of Toronto.

Parliament Helped

New Canadian Novice Titlist

EDMONTON (CP) — A chunky blonde boy, lucky enough to be holidaying in Germany with his parents when the Russians rolled into Czechoslovakia in 1968, is Canada's 1970 novice men's figure-skating champion.

Seventeen-year-old Stan Bohonis, now living at St. of Toronto, impressed judges and spectators with a vital and imaginative program Thursday night during the third day of the Canadian championships.

He scored 4.9, 4.8, 4.4, 5.0 and 4.9 of a possible six for technical merit in his program—good for five firsts. For artistic impression, he was awarded 4.5, 4.8, 4.2, 5.1 and 5.0—also good for five firsts. His total points were 302.3.

Combined with a first place after compulsory figures Wednesday, his overall performance was an all-around best.

An interesting sidelight on his Canadian career is the fact that last December, thanks to a special act of Parliament, Bohonis was allowed to become a Canadian citizen after only 17 months residence.

Eligibility for national championships demands that a skater either have two years residence or be a Canadian.

A Grade 11 student—he said he was pleased with his performance—aided by intensive ballet training in his homeland.

His program was described by another professional as the most technically-difficult of the night and exceptional for a novice skater—powerful with an intrinsic grace.

Second-place Ted Barton of Vancouver scored a total of 455.7 points, well down from Bohonis. Glen LaFramboise of North Bay, was third with 444.3.

An unfortunate incident occurred early Thursday in junior men's practice.

Skip Groff, 17, touted as "the one-man mod squad" of the British Columbia team, was asked to withdraw from competition for "excessive rudeness" to an official.

Groff, who wears gold-bladed skates, had a heated exchange with an official about his music. He submitted a formal apology and agreed to abide by the referee's decision that he withdraw.

The senior women had a brief practice session late in the afternoon and, although all held back the showiest parts of their routines for actual competition, the promise of excellence was there.

Sentimental favorite Karen Magnussen of Vancouver, a 17-year-old who was 1968 Canadian champion, showed no signs of having been affected by leg problems last year.

She dropped out of the world championships last year when it was discovered she had developed "stress fractures." Her professional, Linda Brackmann, said they were caused by too much skating while the bone structure was still developing.

Kathy Lee Irwin, a Toronto contestant, appeared displeased with her practice session in the beginning but as she warmed up, began smiling.

A dark horse emerged Thursday. Nineteen-year-old Karen Grobbe, a Californian who retained her Canadian citizenship, is competing for the first time in a Canadian championship.

All-Stars' Spirit Willing But Legs Weak

by Maurice Switzer, Sports Editor

It's the type that is born in the streets; world champions such as Mickey Mantle or Charles Lisbon can usually smell it.

It certainly held true last night as the Quinte Leagues All - Stars just couldn't cope with the Ellis Juniors. Youth, a longer schedule and more ice time throughout the year all worked to the Junior B's advantage as they posted a 5-2 victory.

The all - star forwards, and often one, or both, defencemen were continually caught deep in their own end, leaving the goalie to circle the rampus against two or three junior attackers. Despite all-hockey nine goals, the all-star reminders, Dave Hicks, Ken Gostwicz and Bob Cook came through with solid efforts. Cook was particularly outstanding in the third period, holding the Juniors to two goals.

Offensively, the forward lines had several close calls around the Ellis goal that could easily have produced a few more tallies. The defence handed out some solid checks and produced one of the all-star goals, although their position play at times left something to be desired.

The Juniors took a 2-1 lead in the first period and added four more goals in the second, as the all-stars replied with one in each frame.

The third frame degenerated into a series of butts, fights, trips, slashes, bumps and elbows which could pass as good clean fun, since all the Ellis involved seemed to be enjoying themselves.

While bodychecking and the occasional fight are as much a part of hockey as skates and scoring, one or two of the older kiddies seemed to get a little carried away in the jovial atmosphere that prevailed.

Al "Bugs" Jackson had a hat trick to lead the Ellis scoring parade, Goaltender Reed Mallory each scored twice, with singles going to Duncan Cameron and Ted Waite.

Bob Ethier received star of a passing play with Larry Shea for team defencemen, who have failed to score a goal in their Ellis surge. They can take a lot of credit, however, for helping goalie Ron Jury post a highly respectable 4.25 goals against average, over the last four games.

Belleville continues to be the least penalized team in the league with 464 minutes, far behind Cobourg's 704 minute total.

A bus will be leaving the Belleville Arena at 2:45 p.m. Saturday for the game in Oshawa. Some seats are still available.

Shot-Stopper

Burly defenceman Bob Ethier of the Quinte League All-Stars falls to the ice to block a shot by Ellis Junior forward Ted Waite. The fast skating juniors took advantage of their speed to roll up a 5-2 victory in the Memorial Arena exhibition game last night.

Printers Hope String Snaps

The Belleville Ellis Juniors face the strongest challenge to their record four game undefeated streak, when they travel to Oshawa to take on the league - leading Crude-mets.

The Motor City rink has held all the friendly spread of a January vacation in Siberia for their Eastern Ontario Junior B League opposition, through the years.

Says Ellis coach Floyd Crawford, "I've only been with the club two years and we haven't beaten them in Oshawa, yet." Team manager Jim "Snipe" Matthews concurs, "I can't remember a Belleville team holding them in their home rink", says Matthews. "I'm not certain but I don't think they've lost at home this season."

A win by the Printers is hardly out of the question, however, after last Sunday's convincing 6-3 victory over Oshawa in Belleville Arena. The loss snapped a 15-game unbeaten string for the Crushmen.

Belleville's Mod Squad line of Terry Meagher, John McConnell and Doug Gibson (9) has connected for 16 goals in the last four games and could give the Oshawa defence a rough night.

Lethbridge Reed Mallory has been the big gun in the recent Belleville surge, counting eight goals and five assists to raise his season point total to 35. John McConnell has added 11 points in the same period, to move into sixth place in the league scoring standings, five points behind teammate Terry Meagher.

Meagher has four goals and four assists in the same number of games and trails scoring leaders Jim Rohmer and Colin Loudon by five points.

Defenceman Dalton Lambert's three assists are tops for team defencemen, who have failed to score a goal in their Ellis surge. They can take a lot of credit, however, for helping goalie Ron Jury post a highly respectable 4.25 goals against average, over the last four games.

Belleville continues to be the least penalized team in the league with 464 minutes, far behind Cobourg's 704 minute total.

A bus will be leaving the Belleville Arena at 2:45 p.m. Saturday for the game in Oshawa. Some seats are still available.

Play Begins in Quinte Mixed

Play began last night in the 8th annual Bay of Quinte Mixed bonspiel. Sixty - four rinks are entered in the competition from all over Ontario, including such centres as Toronto, Ottawa and Lindsay.

Today's play will be at CFB Trenton and the Trenton Country Club from 4 - 6 p.m. A dance will be held tonight at the South Side Men's Mess and tickets will be available at the door.

Competition will be for the Fox Cartage Trophy, presented to the winning rink, as well as the Alexander Vendieg Trophy, the Carling Bowl and the Lafferty - Smith Trophy in the consolation rounds.

Among the local entries will be the defending champion Gord Keech rink from CFB Trenton.

Competition will take place all day Saturday and Sunday at the three rinks, with the finals at 9 p.m. Sunday night in the CFB Trenton rink.

Nineteen rinks are entered from the Quinte Curling Club, which hosted the first - round action.

Who's Cleaning House?

Dr. F. "Corky" McCorquodale watches as Trenton skip Art King sweeps in front of a teammate's rock, in the opening round of the Quinte Mixed Bonspiel. Teams have been entered from as far away as Ottawa, Lindsay and Toronto.

Boosters Plan Bus Trips

Belleville Mo - Hawk fans will get a chance to see the team in action after its long lay-off, next Tuesday, against Kingston. A bus will be leaving from the arena at 6 p.m. on Feb. 3, for the game in the limestone city. Price for both the bus and admission to the game is $2.75.

The Mo-Hawks could move into a third - place tie with Oakville and Barrie by winning Tuesday's game. Belleville will also be looking to avenge four consecutive losses to the Aces.

Interested persons are asked to call 962-1350 or 962-2035 evenings.

Overtime Pays Off

The Bata Braves stretched their lead over third-place Sunderland to four points by taking a 6-4 overtime win from Newcastle, in Eastern Ontario Intermediate C. section last night.

Bill Dixon scored the winning goal at 1:43 of the first overtime period for Bata, and Dan Dixon added another at 8:33.

Newcastle had come from behind to tie the game at 4-4 with two goals late in the second period.

Dan Dixon scored twice for the Braves. Bill Dixon had his overtime winner and Doug Potts, Andy Faulkner and Bob Bartch scored the others.

Cunningham, Rickard, Rowe and Forsyth were the Newcastle marksmen. Bata's ne x t game is Sunday in Little Britain.

Ski Reports

The Bata Ski Club will be open this weekend from 10 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. The Alpine Ski School will be operating. Conditions are FAIR.

The Oak Hills Ski Club will be open Saturday and Sunday from 9.30 - 4.30 p.m. Skiing conditions are fair.

Ski Boots Are Top Gift

Belleville sporting goods dealers report that ski boots are the most popular gift item this season.

Ski boots are followed by ski poles, skis, ski clothing and ski bindings, in that order.

Most dealers report that sales are up over last year.

Overtime Hockey Ends Tie

Overtime hockey ended a tie in the Belleville Minor Hockey League Bantam game last night.

Ken Hicks scored the winning goal for the Bruins at 1:30 of the overtime period to give his team a 3-2 win over the Leafs.

Hicks' goal came on a pass from Dave Hicks.

Bruins' goalie Ron Jury was outstanding in the win.

Scoring for the Leafs were Bob Ethier and Ted Waite.

Omar Sharif Maybe A Modern Valentine

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Omar Sharif is a highly-paid international movie star. Some days good looks may cause the most heart throbs since Rudolph Valentino.

He has everything going for him, you might think, that a felow could ask.

Not quite.

Except that it would severely shock his fellows, says the 37-year-old Egyptian, he would give up films for a career in contract bridge.

"At the bridge table I feel I am the captain of my soul and the master of my fate," the star of Dr. Zhivago told an interviewer. "I find myself hoping the game will never end."

Sharif, who plays as much as he can between movie jobs, is known as a member of the Omar Sharif Bridge Circus. He and seven other foreign experts are playing top teams in big North American cities. One of their stops was in Winnipeg.

The entourage came to the United States fresh from an 88-rubber match against British experts in London for $1—$2.50 a point and side bets. Sharif and company pocketed about $20,000.

Sharif says bridge is an ideal spectator sport," more fun to watch than to play."

Spectators are admitted to his circus for $3 each.

"It's a fast moving game, much faster than golf," he says. "A decision must be made every three or four minutes and it takes more than that to play a hole of golf. As a spectator, you see all hands."

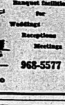
Guinea Is Seen On TV

NEW YORK (AP) — A color film report of an expedition into the jungles of New Guinea including visits with primitive tribes occupied an early NBC hour Thursday night.

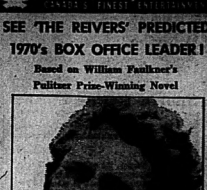


Lowell Thomas, in one of his rare TV appearances, served as narrator and did his best to make the audience believe the expedition was fraught with peril.

The jungle scen y was impressive and the natives, with sticks through their noses, were interesting. But it was hard to believe the party, led by an armed police patrol, was really in danger from people who hunt with wooden spears.

Thomas said the natives were cannibals. Maybe, but at another point the program reported that they lived primarily on green bananas.

Generally it was one of those real-life adventure tales and seemed a bit old-fashioned and overblown for current television. Even when Thomas was explaining how dangerous were the natives, they were grinning and performing for the cameras.



The hour did have what may be a television first: In many scenes the women appeared naked to the waist, covered only by strings of beads. It is debatable whether this changes the era of topless television, but it was sensible of the censors to avoid any Nice-Nelle cuts.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the most unusual of the articles or service you have to offer. If you have a large assortment of room for rent or personal services, be sure to mention the most unusual.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when they know exactly what you are offering. Always state...

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always include your address or telephone number. Don't make him hunt for it. If he does not have regular hours, give a hundred and one to have prospects phone you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can save money, ad in the event of results, and then you can cancel. Ads may be changed as often as you like.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and put yourself in the market for what you have to offer. Then write your ad with a good Classified Ad Writer.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already in the market for the type of goods or new merchandise. These people are in the mood to buy and if you are in the market to buy, be sure to read the Classified Ads. Be sure to read them carefully.

7—START AND THAT FAST to bring satisfaction to you, not through-out the ad, but throughout the community. Be sure that your ad is worded and do not contain misleading statements or exaggerations.

Toronto Star Asks Controls
Publishing Paper Exercise in Arbitrary Power

OTTAWA (CP) — Publication of a newspaper is an exercise in arbitrary power and the press should make itself accountable to the people in Canada, the Toronto Star said today.

The Star, Canada's largest daily with current circulation of almost 360,000, told the special senate committee on the mass media that Parliament should vigorously prod a "dangerously self-satisfied" press into establishing regional press councils.

The council would serve as independent tribunals, representing press and public, to which aggrieved members of the public could appeal against misuse of the economic, social and cultural power wielded by newspapers.

"Our society will either redress real grievances or it will fall as a society," The Star said in a written submission. "And some real grievances concern the press."

The Star also urged that any future change in the newspaper ownership, including any extension of group holdings, should be examined by the restrictive trade practices commission to see whether it conforms in the public interest.

The rule should be "No more new Brunswicks." The Star said, referring to an outright monopoly of the English-language press in the province by Beaverbrook K. C. Irving.

"Mr. Irving has in effect created a private empire of New Brunswick, complete with its own official press—print and broadcast," The Star said.

Control of both newspaper and broadcasting outlets by the same owner should be carefully limited, if not ruled out entirely, The Star said.

Dealing specifically with Toronto, The Star said that The Telegram, its evening competitor, should be required to relinquish control of CFTO television or else The Star and The Globe and Mail, Toronto morning paper, should also be granted TV outlets.

In a further recommendation, The Star urged a protest against treatment of the Canadian edition of Time magazine and Reader's Digest as equals of domestically-produced publications for advertising tax purposes.

The Star, publisher of the weekly magazine The Canadian, said the special privileges for the two United States-owned magazines should be withdrawn to remove "unfair competition."

In urging the establishment of press councils, which would be free of governmental involvement, The Star said most Canadian publishers try to discharge their responsibilities in a fair and reasonable way.

"But the arbitrary power is an inescapable fact of the business."

A publisher, through general directions to editors and often by personal decisions on specific events, decides what particular fraction of the total information available is actually published, The Star said.

"A newspaper can advance certain causes and ideas while ignoring, obscuring or discrediting others," the newspaper said.

"A publisher can . . . reward his friends and punish his foes with a force that is far beyond the capacity of the ordinary citizen who has no particular access to a communications medium.

"This is power, and it can be just as arbitrary as the publisher wants to make it," The Star said. "The only external restraint is that if its exercise is too blatantly obvious and offensive, the people may decline to buy the paper."

While overt exploitation of the publishing power has become rare in Canada, there is a more common and serious use of the power to stifle information.

The Star said the more serious fault is "failure to gather and report news of genuine import to the community out of deference to local notables, businessmen, officials or establishments.

"In short, the publishing power can be used to stifle enterprising and aggressive journalism, to the public's detriment."

The press in Canada is not bad, but it is dangerously self-satisfied—"notably unreceptive to criticism of itself, either from within or without." The Star said.

"When we consider that 90 of the 113 Canadian daily newspapers publish without any local competition—80 in one newspaper towns, two in each of five cities) have the same publisher—the need for an independent tribunal to which the public can appeal becomes obvious and imperative."

The Star suggested regional press councils on the British pattern for the Atlantic area, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia.

The councils should not be established by law, for fear of an appearance of state interference in news, but experiences in Britain and Canada suggest that the press will not undertake even this moderate form of collective self-discipline without vigorous prodding from Parliament."

Calling for a policy of examining each future change of newspaper ownership to safeguard the public interest, The Star referred particularly to the growth of newspaper groups.

Six groups control 50 daily newspapers and account for 52 per cent of total daily circulation in Canada—Southam Newspapers, FP Publications, Thomson Newspapers, the Desmarais group in Quebec, Armadale in Saskatchewan and K. C. Irving in New Brunswick.

Groups carry advantages, The Star said. Pooling of resources can raise the quality of individual newspapers, as illustrated in Southam dailies.

"Even where journalistic standards are not the paramount consideration—as in the Thomson newspapers chain—group ownership may be beneficial in certain places," notably in smaller communities where the choice is between a financially-sound, group-owned daily and a weak one or none at all.

Disadvantages include mediocre journalism when groups make financial gain the priority and the risk of concentrating publishing power in fewer hands.

In New Brunswick, "the potential abuse of press power to protect—if not openly to promote—the owner's other interests is too obvious to require laboring."

"Apart from that one utterly exceptional situation, we do not believe the inherent dangers of chain ownership justify any action to break up or reduce the size of existing Canadian newspaper chains."

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market advanced moderately in light mid-morning trading today only to ease to be interrupting a five-day decline.

The slump was touched off by weakness on Wall Street.

On index, industrials were up 47 to 178.68, weakness cut the 211.73, base metals .26 to 113.67 and golds .17 to 154.88.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 672,000 shares compared with 618,000 at the same time Thursday.

Advances outnumbered declines 140 to 94 with 191 issues unchanged.

Among oils, Home A rose 1½ to 24¾, Bow Valley ⅛ to 25¾, Great Plains ⅛ to 31 and Pacific Pete ⅛ to 38½.

Home Oil has a share-interest in Atlantic Richfield which said today it encountered oil on the Alaskan North Slope where a previous well was reported as a dry hole.

Asamera fell 1¼ to 16. The stock rose 3½ Thursday after Asamera said it encountered another oil-bearing zone in an already-discovered oil formation in Indonesia.

Dofasco gained ⅛ to 21¼ on annual earnings of $2.64 a share compared with $2.41 in the previous year.

Thursday, the market fell sharply in light trading after holding for most of the session with a small loss.

The loss was the fifth in a row for the market.

A steep decline on Wall Street appeared to be the influencing factor in Toronto's sharp downswing.

On index, industrials were down .39 to 178.21, golds 1.35 to 154.71, base metals .66 to 113.41 and western oils .49 to 209.28.

Volume was 2,495,000 shares compared with 2,928,000 Wednesday.

Losses outnumbered gains 353 to 143 with 257 issues unchanged.

Asamera jumped 3¾ to 17½ after it announced it had a group of which Asamera is member encountered oil in Indonesia.

Alcan gained ¼ to 27¼ after reporting annual earnings of $2.62 a share compared with $2.14 in the previous year.

Interprovincial Pipe picked up ⅜ to 27 on after the company increased its quarterly dividend to 10 cents from 7½ cents.

Canada and Dominion Sugar slipped ⅜ to 33¾ after reporting first-quarter earnings of $1.65 a share compared with $1.19 in the similar period last year.

Lawren Stewart Harris, Age 85, Group of Seven Member, Dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawren Stewart Harris, one of the last two surviving members of the famed Group of Seven Canadian artists, died Thursday at his home. He was 85.

He outlived by four months his wife, Bess, a top-ranked painter in her own right, who died Sept. 28.

Mr. Harris, who came to Vancouver in 1940, was born in Brantford, Ont., the son of Thomas Harris and Annie Stewart. His family was of the Massey-Harris farm implement manufacturers.

His most widely reproduced works include North Shore, Lake Superior, which now hangs in the National Gallery of Canada in Ottawa. Another is Shacks, which typifies the early period of his painting.

The famed painter's interest in art began early. As a youngster of eight he planned elaborate mass cards and sent them to relatives. At 12 he was taking weekly art lessons.

After graduating from the University of Toronto, he went to Germany to study art in 1908. In 1911 he became an illustrator with a New York magazine. He returned to Canada a year later, painting street scenes and mill houses in the slums and outskirts of Toronto.

There he helped form the Group of Seven, now only surviving member is A. Y. Jackson of Toronto. The other members of the group were J. E. H. MacDonald, Arthur Lismer, F. H. Varley, Frank Johnston and Franklin Carmichael.

The group, the most noted Canadian art body, was an informal association and did not exist in the sense of an organized society. Its members shunned established European techniques to develop their own distinctive Canadian style.

The group's first exhibit was at the Toronto art gallery in 1920 and critics labelled it "The Hot-Mush School."

A member of Parliament took particular exception to Mr. Harris' bleak northern landscapes and said they were a national menace because they would discourage immigration.

"We accepted the criticism as partly a compliment and we encouraged it," Mr. Harris said at one time. "Our work tried to exhibit the savage landscapes of Canada. We were painting this country in its own terms, painting it as Canadians saw it, and not as Europeans saw it."

The Group of Seven later took in younger painters, and by 1933 it was known as the Canadian Group of Painters. Mr. Harris became the first president and from 1944-1947 was president of the Federation of Canadian Artists.

In 1949 he moved here into sectored at the school of art. He encouraged many young artists and did much to bring the work of Emily Carr into Canadian dispute.

In October, 1948, the Toronto Art Gallery honored him with a major one-man exhibition, the first living artist so honored by the gallery. He received honorary doctor-of-law degrees from three Canadian universities and his exhibitions here and in Eastern Canada attracted record crowds.

Mr. Harris continued his search for new means of expression in art up to the time of his death at 85, an age when most men are satisfied to reflect on past accomplishments.

"My work has gone beyond abstractions," he said in a recent interview.

"There's no way of telling what the next step is. When I begin work today I have no idea what the finished product will look like until I'm finished."

An assistant, usually casual on a large scale, Mr. Harris worked in a large, bright den on the upper floor of his two-storey home near the University of British Columbia.

Expo Launching Pad For Drive for Trade

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts said Thursday his recent visit to Japan and Ontario's participation at Expo 70 in Osaka will be the launching pad for a major campaign to develop trade between that country and the province.

The premier, just back from a visit to Japan, Hong Kong and Hawaii, held a news conference he had been "breaking the way" for development of trade.

The question of the sale of Ontario's manufactured goods in Japan had been discussed and "we intend to follow up after Expo 70."

Japan claims a trade imbalance, but it is with Canada as a whole, not with Ontario, Mr. Robarts said. The Japanese buy huge quantities of raw materials in some other provinces but sell their manufactured goods in Ontario's urban centres.

He had assured Japanese businessmen interested in Ontario copper and nickel concentrates that provincial legislation requiring Canadian processing of ores mined here "is flexible and not absolute, and that Ontario will economically responsible the Canadian treatment requirement can be excused.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"
By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Three Big Meals Can Mean Trouble

Here is a man, corpulent and overfed. He is a fiftyish businessman who likes to "pack it away." He loosens his belt after his evening gorging, lights his cigar and says, "I guess I'll take a walk around the block to burn off all those calories." Around the block? Of course you know that it would take miles and miles of walking to neutralize an oversized intake of calories.

I tell such people that a good big meal puts an extra burden on the heart; increases its work about 20 per cent. Such a load, carried night after night, is bound to cause earlier deterioration of the heart and blood vessels.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've read somewhere that laboratory rats, fed five or six small meals a day, outlast and outlive those fed only three large meals daily. Anyone knows it's healthier not to overeat. But rats? What's that got to do with how us humans' react to large food intakes? — Mr. D.

Comment: Study of how animals react to diet and drugs gives us many clues about human reaction. However, if you'd like something more convincing, Mr. D., here are the results of a recent study made in the Institute of Human Nutrition in Prague, Czechoslovakia, by Dr. Pavel Fabry.

"He studied more than 1,100 men between the ages of 60 and 64. Eating five or six small meals a day rather than fewer larger ones, they had less heart trouble and coronary artery damage than heavy eaters who ate "three squares" daily.

* * *

For Mr. P.: Senile keratosis is what we call the hard crusty skin blemishes which often appear on the forearms of the face and hands. Usually they are first important, except as blemishes and cosmetic problems. But, occasionally they may become cancerous.

Therefore, any such wart-like growth that suddenly shows any change in color or size should be investigated. Whenever in doubt, the doctor can remove it by using the "electric needle." The process is called electrocoagulation, and can be performed in the doctor's office.

* * *

For Mrs. Y.: It is not true that ringworm is caused by a lack of vitamins. I doubt that swallowing all those vitamin pills will help. It is a fungus infection, and should be treated as such.

* * *

For Mrs. B.: I have received many letters similar to yours, asking if hypnosis is the answer to smoking. Usually my replies have been in the negative. Like dieting in the treatment of obesity, I believe that will power is the result of proper motivation is the best way to overcome the cigarette habit.

I have just been reading a report in the JAMA by Sheldon B. Cohen of Atlanta, Georgia, called "Hypnosis and Smoking." He reports on various results by investigators F. M. Moses, MD, treated 75 smokers by hypnosis. In follow-ups of 50 patients, approximately one - fourth reported total abstinence, one-half stopped smoking temporarily, and one - fourth had no change in smoking habit.

Dr. Cohn concludes: "With the aid of hypnosis some individuals may decrease or stop smoking. Available clinical evidence does not indicate that hypnosis achieves a rate of smoking cure different from spontaneous cure, aversion or other therapy techniques."

Bad Facts Hurt Good Cause

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It annoys me, out of a common sense of justice, when anyone argues in a good cause using bad facts. It hurts the argument and weakens the very doctrine it seeks to sustain.

For instance, a recent issue of "Nation's Business" magazine reproduced the old comment that factory workers in Russia have to labor six times longer than their U.S. counterparts to buy the same amounts of meat, eggs, milk, bread, sugar, cigarettes, and so forth.

This is true, but misleading and pointless. In the first place, it has nothing to do with the "evils" of communism. Many backward capitalist countries have as low a character, a standard of living, and there is no doubt that the average worker in Russia is far better off than he was a generation ago, or before the Revolution.

For another, the Russian government decides how much things shall cost, and which shall be cheap and which costly. Rents, for instance, which take up about one-third of U.S. workers' incomes, are absurdly low in Russia, often less than one-tenth of income.

All schooling is free, and so is medical care. There are large areas of expense for the American family which cost little, or nothing, in the Russian family. The Soviet government decides on such priorities.

There is no defence of the Russian system, which is manifestly inferior to ours in many ways, and whose standard of living is much lower — as it is almost everywhere in the world outside the U.S.

But economic facts alone prove little, one way or the other, of the virtues of a system. What is wrong with Russia is that it is tyrannical and repressive, not that the people have to work longer to buy a pack of cigarettes or a pound of beef.

I dare say that most of them prefer to pay a little more for their consumer goods, as long as they know that rents will not soar; or that a crippling illness will not leave them destitute. What they lose on the swings, they make up on the roundabouts.

Besides, the argument is weak, for even if Russia should increase its productivity and standard of living to match ours — which is not impossible, seeing what their technology has done in space — it would still be a terrible system for the human spirit to live under. Its aim is not so much to give tributes its goods, but how it monopolizes the most precious and irreplaceable commodity of personal freedom.

If we judge nations by their material index, and not by the moral thrust of their institutions, then in a peculiar way we are capitalizing in Marx, who used economic welfare as the main criterion. It is not our cost of beef that makes us better, but our freedom to beef.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For Saturday

Your birthday today: Consolidation of gains marks the coming year in your career. Personal creative activities settle to a workable marketing pattern, with time and resources permitting development of refinements and added details.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): It's nice to find backing, endorsement, encouragement. All are available now, according to your recent performance, and your willingness to ask. The latter half of the day is best for putting in an appreciated call.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Creative activities are helpful today. Any chance to pause and simply rest will open the door to novel, intuitive insight. Make friends where you have erred; patch up misunderstandings at almost any cost.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Much inside information is thrust upon you now, with no immediate chance to make use of any of it.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Get up early and make a good start for a full, productive day. Fill in details as you go and you need no review or backtracking. The evening is for entertaining or pursuing romantic developments.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): A sound proposal is around the corner about property, personal belongings. You needn't stay in the same precise spot for much longer. Find out other people live; accept an invitation, ask courteous questions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spend this average day in regular week-end routines. A lot of work have accumulated during the week; get them all settled and done with. Social activities go well in the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Your pleasures and luck depend on having somebody or your own or higher level of development share them with you. Traveling in pairs or groups can be tremendously interesting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Balance and economy seem within your reach this weekend. You will find good use for all the resources you can muster now, so get out and make the rounds looking for additional backing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): The unorthodox pays off for you today, depending on the quality of your productivity. Don't be the extra and make up for it with generous but selective quantity; you'll find the quality of your friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Historic matters touch lightly but significantly. Some old matter comes to life and gives you an example of what to do; it checks out well. Make the most of today's opportunities, and celebrate tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Chasing easy money, gullible people, short cuts to success go on around you all day. Be amused but not involved in these pastimes.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Take it easy today — perhaps fasting and meditation would be a good course to follow. The evening abruptly turns out to be social and pleasant. You have something new to think about by the time it is over.

Auto-safety Bill Questioned As Not Tailored for Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — There was support in the Commons Thursday for the government's proposed auto-safety bill but there was concern that it does not meet Canadian needs.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson, opening second-reading debate, said that 29 standards for safety will be set by regulations under the legislation and that if it is passed by March they would apply to 1971 models.

The bill would impose fines of up to $200,000 on manufacturers, distributors or importers who knowingly sell a defective car.

Percy Noble (PC — Grey-Bruce) said Canada was adopting standards already followed in the United States. He questioned whether these standards are adequate for Canadian driving conditions.

Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) said the bill is a step in the right direction but that it contains "many weaknesses and shortcomings."

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste—Abitibi) said his party favors the bill, but that he hopes more detailed information would be available when it is sent to the Commons transportation committee for further study.

Strongest criticism of the legislation came from Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) who said the fact that safety inspectors would be appointed by the transport minister at his discretion leaves it open to political skulduggery.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) also questioned whether the 29 standards are adequate for Canadian winter-driving conditions.

Mr. Jamieson said the standards apply to vehicles used on highways but will not include snowmobiles. They could, however, be included later.

The safety standards now proposed already are found in most U.S.-made cars. They include safety belts and non-protruding objects on car interiors.

Today, the Commons was to consider an amendment to the Canada Shipping Act that would require foreign shipowners to pay for all medical and hospital services provided in Canada to sailors employed on their vessels.

Legislation to make students loans easier to obtain was given third reading earlier Thursday, after a brief debate in which Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) said an increase in the number of student loans means that fewer students are able to pay their own way.

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, authorizes trust, loan and insurance companies as "approved" lenders. Only banks now are allowed to make the loans.

The measure also ends a requirement that loan applicants from abroad be required to declare their intention to remain in Canada after graduation. It authorizes loans of up to $300 a semester, and raises the loan limit for the 1970 and following loan year to $115,000,000. It was $100,000,000 in 1969, when $71,727,877 was lent.

Hees Takes Gentle Dig at PM Who Keeps His Eyes on Barbra

OTTAWA (CP) — Singer Barbra Streisand watched her escort at work in the Commons Thursday and was watched by him in turn.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who escorted her to the National Arts Centre Wednesday night, glanced up frequently at the gallery where Miss Streisand sat.

The only direct reference to the most glamorous of the prime minister's dates came from George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) and it was on opt one.

Mr. Hees smilingly asked Mr. Trudeau to answer a question "if he can take his eyes and mind off the visitor's gallery long enough to answer."

Mr. Trudeau usually freezes at remarks about his personal life but this time he responded with laughter and blushes.

In the gallery, Miss Streisand laughed and tapped the rail in appreciation.

She entered the gallery as the question period began at about 2 p.m. to a stir from those in surrounding seats.

She was accompanied by a woman identified by Mr. Trudeau's office only as Mrs. H. Cornelius, a New York friend. Miss Streisand wore a fur coat and jaunty fur hat.

Mr. Trudeau gave a smiling nod at the U.S. singer early in the 40-minute question period.

She and Mr. Trudeau left the House at about the same time, with Trudeau's aide and former football player Vic Chapman making a path for Miss Streisand through a crowd of visitors, reporters and photographers.

She went to his office and had coffee with him before leaving.

She denied a report that she spent the morning snowmobiling with Mr. Trudeau. It rained during the night and Ottawa's snow was slushy. Reporters also asked what she thought of Parliament.

She replied that she really couldn't say since she had never seen any Parliament before, "not even my own."

The couple stole the show Wednesday in attending the arts centre for Manitoba Night and a world premiere by the Royal Winnipeg Ballet of Brian Macdonald's Five over 13.

Keep Mobile

EDMONTON (CP) — Many farmers buy mobile homes rather than build homes on their property because a farmer can take his mobile home with him when he retires or wishes to move. Additionally, the construction costs of building a house are not recovered if the farmer wishes to sell his farm.

U.S. Rail Shutdown May Be Nation-wide

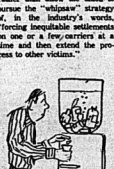
Strike Halts Some Lines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four unions went on strike against Union Pacific Railroad at midnight Friday night and industry spokesmen reacted quickly today with announcements they would carry through on threats to shut down all rail traffic in the United States.

Penn-Central, the largest U.S. rail carrier serving most of the Eastern Seaboard, announced in Philadelphia it would discontinue operations at 10 a.m. EST today unless the strike against Union Pacific ends before that time.

The company announced passenger trains which cannot reach their final terminals before 10 p.m. will be cancelled to avoid detention along the routes. Freight trains will be held in intermediate yards, the company said.

Other railways across the country had not announced specific times to cease operations, but industry spokesmen said shortly after pickets first appeared in three Midwest cities that all the carriers would shut down operations.



Union Pacific pickets first appeared in North Platte and Omaha, Neb., and Council Bluffs, Iowa, as members of four shop craft unions whose latest contract expired over a year ago walked off their jobs.

The National Railway Labor Conference announced plans for a news conference today in which industry spokesmen were expected to outline plans for the nationwide shutdown.

John P. Hiltz Jr., chief negotiator for the industry, said earlier today: "They will be shut down today at a time to be determined and announced."

The machinists, boilermakers, sheet metal workers and electricians unions planned to strike only the Union Pacific, which operates over 9,500 miles of track in 13 western states.

Railway officials here had said previously they will shut down the entire industry and lock out all union employees rather than allow the union to pursue the "whipsaw" strategy of, in the industry's words, "forcing inequitable settlements on one or a few carriers at a time and then extend the process to other victims."

Local Appeals Could Benefit

The possibility of lotteries being conducted in Belleville to help raise money for additional recreational facilities and also for the United Appeal, was suggested today.

Belleville Alderman Donald Soutter, chairman of the recreation and arena committee said a lottery for recreational facilities might be allowed under the proposed plan for licensing and regulating lotteries announced Thursday by Ontario Financial Affairs Minister Leslie Rowntree.

The announcement said that under the new legislation municipalities might be able to qualify as charitable organizations in order to hold lotteries for such purposes as hospitals.

The plan also proposes that municipal councils be given authority to license and regulate lotteries managed and conducted by charitable and religious organizations.

Magr. J. P. Sullivan, chairman of the Belleville United Community Services, admitted today that the possibility of a lottery to raise funds for his organization had been considered.

"It has been talked about" he said, "it would be a good objective".

However, he said the possibility of a community services lottery would be all part of any decision it comes to with city council.

Last week the community services appeared before council pointing out the need for money, and stating the organization had a deficit of approximately $18,000.

Masochism Not Warranted: Agnew

BALTIMORE (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew says his 25-day trip to Asia convinced him U.S. prestige is high and "it is time for the American people to stop eating themselves up over the few malcontented words of dissidents who don't know what is going on in the world."

Speaking to 1,000 friends and political supporters at a testimonial dinner Friday night, the vice-president said the trip reinforced his belief that "what we have in the United States is not a prime operating target for national masochism."

"The regard that the United States is held in the rest of the world is something that every American should have a chance to see, and something that I would hope more American conveyors of information would see fit to portray," he added.

Agnew took some swipes in his off-the-cuff speech at some 100 anti-war protesters who marched around in 32-degree temperature outside the hall before the dinner.

Agnew drew applause when he said of his visit to Vietnam: "You'd be darned proud to see the attitude of American troops in Vietnam — and the attitudes of the troops is not reflected in the attitudes of the people you saw outside this hall tonight."

Board, Teachers Stalled

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Metropolitan Toronto high school teachers says no agreement is in sight on a 1970 contract.

Ralph Conner, speaking in an interview after returning from negotiations with the six Metro school boards at Barrie, said no progress was made on the issues of wages and working conditions.

The 7,400 teachers, represented by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, have demanded a 33-per-cent salary increase for the 1970-71 academic year.

Bruce Bone, chairman of the Metro school board, said the boards have offered an increase of six per cent, made up of a three-per-cent wage increase and a three-per-cent increase in annual increments for experience.

El Salvador, Honduras Renew Border Strife

SAN SALVADOR (Reuters) — A state of emergency was in force today in El Salvador after a new round of incidents with neighboring Honduras.

The El Salvador government blamed Honduras for three incidents in the last two days. It said there had been two incursions into its territory and four Honduran warplanes had violated Salvadorean airspace Friday.

In July, what became known as the "soccer war" flared between the two Central American nations. The four days of fighting, in which 2,000 were believed killed, were precipitated by riots at World Cup soccer games.

The government said Friday night: "El Salvador holds the government of Honduras totally and absolutely responsible for the consequences of its conduct in what has occurred and what may occur."

Foreign Minister Francisco Jose Guerrero said peace talks in San Jose, Costa Rica, would continue despite the latest incidents.

Whites Told to Flee African State

MASERU (CP) — White residents of the black-ruled Southern African state of Lesotho began fleeing the country Friday night when Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan declared a state of emergency after being defeated in general elections.

Jonathan, a tribal chief, also clapped his chief rival in jail following the elections, the nation's first since it became independent of Britain in 1966.

Jonathan said in a radio broadcast that he had acted to protect individuals and maintain law and order.

Authorities advised whites to leave the country shortly before the prime minister suspended the constitution, clamped a dusk-to-dawn curfew on the capital and arrested the man who threatened to depose him, Ntsu Mokhehle.

As scores of whites headed for South Africa, authoritative sources in Cape Town reported that reinforcements had been sent to South African police posts on the border with Lesotho.

South Africa has been watching the election with particular interest. Jonathan's government has pursued a policy of cooperation with the republic. But Mokhehle, a socialist and a pan-Africanist, has demanded greater economic independence from South Africa and pledged to remove all South African civil servants from Lesotho.

Cyprus Terrorism Denounced by Both Sides

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — New outbreaks of terrorism on Cyprus this month underscore the difficulty of negotiating a permanent settlement among volatile factions in that eastern Mediterranean island.

United Nations officials are concerned the violence might accidentally lead to new clashes between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots and delay the eventual withdrawal of the UN peacekeeping force after six years.

Archbishop Makarios ordered a general police mobilization and other measures in an effort to crack down on terrorist attacks by members of the outlawed Greek-Cypriot National Front.

Both Makarios and Premier George Papadopoulos of Greece have denounced the National Front, asserting its activities irreparably harm the Cyprus cause.

Secretary-General U Thant voiced optimism Dec. 3 that a political solution could be achieved that could make withdrawal of the peacekeeping force possible.

The force is made up of 2,475 military personnel from Canada, Denmark, Finland, Ireland, Sweden and Britain, plus 175 civilian police supplied by Australia, Austria, Denmark and Sweden. Austria has supplied a field hospital and staff of 32.

Hope for an eventual political solution stems mainly from the intercommunal Greek-Turkish talks that began in June, 1968. While no basic differences have been resolved, the fact that the talks are continuing has been described as encouraging.

In addition for the first time since 1963 Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots participated jointly in two international conferences in Nicosia late last year.

Another encouraging factor is the apparent determination of Greece and Turkey to patch up their differences over Cyprus.

The island became independent of British rule Aug. 16, 1960. Its population is about 600,000, with the Turkish-Cypriots outnumbered about four to one.

OMB Reopens Case Monday

Northend Plaza Issue Once More Goes to Judgment

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Reportedly in the news for more than two years the controversial and much debated northend plaza issue hopefully will end in a short time next week.

On Monday, the long awaited Ontario Municipal Board re-hearing into the city's application for rezoning parcels of land for a proposed northend shopping plaza will get underway at the Bayridge Motel.

At the same time the OMB will review its decision of May last year approving Thurlow township's zoning bylaw which would allow construction of a shopping plaza in that municipality.

The city's submission into the city's zoning change request is a review of the OMB decision to grant March zoning against the municipal plans.

In its decision last March the OMB accepted the plea of objectors that the proposed plaza was premature.

The northend plaza proposal which would see Cambridge Leaseholds Ltd. spend approximately $3,000,000 on a 30-store complex was first in the news early in 1968.

Both the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board and city council approved but before construction could go ahead a zoning change was required.

The request for rezoning was forwarded in the Ontario Municipal Board early in the summer but OMB approval was stalled by an objection from Oshawa Wholesale and Towers Discount Department store just outside the city's western limits.

The OMB ruled the objection valid and a public hearing was scheduled for Nov. 4, 1968.

When the hearing date finally arrived solicitors for Oshawa Wholesale were granted an adjournment.

An early January date was then set for the hearing but this again was further adjourned until Feb. 4.

The hearing lasted for seven days with the OMB reserved was stalled by an objection from Oshawa Wholesale and Towers Discount Department store just outside the city's western limits.

The OMB ruled the objection valid and a public hearing was scheduled for Nov. 4, 1968.

When the hearing date finally arrived solicitors for Oshawa Wholesale were granted an adjournment.

An early January date was then set for the hearing but this again was further adjourned until Feb. 4.

The hearing lasted for seven days with the OMB reserved its decision.

Immediately there was a storm of protest against the OMB plaza ruling. A Citizens for Belleville Committee was formed a petition of more than 11,000 names asking for a re-versal of the decision.

After Cambridge Leaseholds agreed to pay costs involved the city entered an official appeal.

In the meantime Towers entered an appeal against the OMB decision approving the Thurlow township zoning bylaw.

Municipal Board chairman J. A. Kennedy ordered a re-hearing of the Belleville-Thurlow appeal to take place on October 27. As both issues were related, he directed a review of the Thurlow zoning by-law at the same time.

But before the October 27 date arrived the city received its urban renewal study report from Proctor and Redfern, Toronto consulting engineers and the city asked for a delay to allow study of the report.

The adjournment was agreed to by Oshawa Wholesale Ltd. and the Feb. 4 dates was set.

Since the original hearing on the northend plaza, a year, ago the city has annexed Thurlow township which included the commercial expansion and the Citizens for Belleville Committee, headed by Dunst Clement, feels that more than ever a new shopping centre is needed.

In a letter to the editor in The Intelligencer last week, Mr. Clement said his committee would be on hand at the re hearing to present a brief to the OMB.

Today, City Solicitor E. Goss Porter said he couldn't hazard a guess to how long next week's re-hearing might take.

Neither could he say in which order the city's rezoning request or the review of OMB decision on the Thurlow zoning bylaw would be taken.

Northern Electric Turns Down UAW Bid

The United Auto Workers Union Sunday got a bid to become certified as bargaining agent for shop workers at the Northern Electric plant in Belleville.

A vote held yesterday at the plant resulted in 437 ballots being cast for the Northern Electric Employees Association against 331 for the United Auto Workers.

The UAW needed 50 per cent of the eligible voters plus one, in the tabulation.

This is the first time the UAW has been certified to come under representatives for shop workers, but they already represent both shop and office employees at Northern.

At London, the UAW has two locals representing both shop and office workers.

No Tests

Can't Determine Stud Damage

Following studies conducted on roadways, the Ontario department of highways has estimated that studded tires cost dogmas $127,000,000 damage to Ontario highways in the next nine years.

But City Engineer Wilbur Purcell says it would be difficult to determine what damage studded tires could do to Belleville streets.

"We are not staffed or equipped to make tests," the engineer said.

Studies were launched by the highways department when unusual wear was noticed following the winter of 1967-68 and measurements made before and after last winter showed surface wear in wheel tracks caused by tire studs ranged up to a fifth of an inch in one season.

Highways Minister George Gomme said that from tests it was estimated that one inch of wheel wear will occur within two to five years on the more heavily travelled roads if the use of studs continues at the expected rate.

Wheel track wear of one inch would be the maximum that could be tolerated before resurfacing would have to be carried out the minister said.

He said wheel track ruts created driving hazards because they affect steering control, allow ponds of water and icy patches to develop to increase the risk of skidding, and studs destroy skid resistance of concrete pavement by grinding off the surface texture.

Mr. Purcell said he expected road damage from studded tires in built up areas would be different than open highways because of lower speeds and less volume of traffic.

The use of studded tires is permitted in Ontario from Oct. 1 to April 30.

According to the report the main reason for the popularity of studded tires, appears to be to achieve greater traction to negotiate driveways and local roads to and from cleared main highways. There are no accident statistics available to indicate whether cars with studded tires are involved in fewer accidents.

Lottery Possibilities

Ald. Soutter felt it might be too late for the first stage Quinte Action Centre proposal to benefit from any municipal lottery, but suggested this might be a logical possibility for the development of long range recreational facilities.

The Quinte Action Centre Committee has asked city council to take over construction of its proposed $200,000 small arena. The committee has already raised approximately $30,000 toward the arena.

However whether a lottery could be allowed to provide funds for recreational facilities is not clear as the announcement indicated there would be no approval for a municipal lottery for tax purposes.

But in the talk stage are additional recreational facilities in the city's east end, possibly on YMCA property and in the west end to complement the existing gymnasium at the Centennial Secondary School.

Another possibility under long range planning is the construction of civic marinas on sanitary land fill property on east Zwick's Island.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said today he had no ideas for a municipal lottery but expected council could be requested to consider lotteries by some local charitable organizations.

"It may be the answer to the United Appeal problem," he said.

The plan announced yesterday by Mr. Bowslaugh proposes that municipal councils be given authority to deal with three types of licenses for bingo games, raffles and bazaars.

Mr. Bowslaugh said it would be possible for a municipality to qualify as a charity for certain lottery purposes under his authority or to designate a charitable or religious organization to run a lottery.

Mayor Scott Director of Police Group

Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott has been elected a director of the six-man Association of Municipal Police Governing Authorities.

The annual meeting of the associations was held yesterday in Toronto. Judge Kirkpatrick of Kitchener was named president of the association. Other directors are Mayor Stanley Turchi of Hamilton, Mayor Scott and three other Ontario mayors.

May Need Wagon For Regional Jail

By TED FORDER
(Staff Reporter)

Centralization, amalgamation, streamlining or regionalization, call it what you will, in this technological age that administrative trends are moving growing around a complex central institution.

While benefits reaped from this streamlining of institutions and organizations are not always varied, so too are the problems encountered in implementing the new programs.

Replacing present Quinte Jails by a regional institution in Napanee by Dec. 1, 1970 precipitates many problems for law enforcement agencies.

One problem which must be solved if the new system is to work is transportation. Prisoners must be conveyed to and from court.

In Belleville, it will mean that the police and two officers for 90 minutes each time a trip is required, say from 10 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. Same 24 day of the Salvation Army Citadel.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank friends, relatives, neighbors for cards, flowers and words of sympathy during the illness and following the death of our father and grandfather. A special thank you to Mrs. Merry and Dr. John H. Bell, funeral director for their services and kindness. To Rev. Ernest Thain for his comforting words. Final thanks also to Mrs. Merry for the lovely solos. The kindness shown us will never be forgotten by the family, relatives and friends of the late Mrs. Pearl Wessels and family.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to friends, relatives and neighbors who kindly remembered me with flowers, cards, gifts and visits during my stay in the hospital and Dr. Crook. Also Rev. Ross Hall for his visits and to the staff of the CWL rooms for their kindness while I was a patient in Belleville hospital.

Arnold (Pete) Sargisson.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness, spiritual bouquets and floral tributes during the illness and following the bereavement of our husband and father, special thanks to Monsignor Lennon, Father Hall, Father D. E. Baker, Rev. J. Ferguson, Rev. Ross Hall, Dr. Crook, Dr. Bell, the staff of the CWL rooms, staff of Belleville hospital and the Cassidy funeral home.

Mrs. Edmund Cassidy and family.

We gently turn the pages
Over constantly we think of you,
Your memory is our keepsake
With God we left you
For He thought it best
Our hearts are sore and lonely
Our home is filled with pain
We miss you more than anyone
Will ever know
Your memory is our treasure
The days we spent together
Can never be taken away

Annual Skating Gala Puts Circus on Ice

By TED FORDER
Staff Reporter

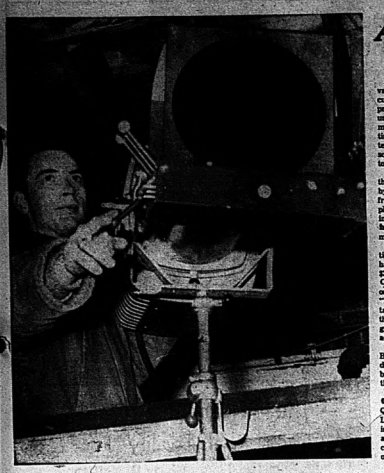
Belleville's annual ice extravaganza this year with a circus theme — is now being presented by the Quinte Figure Skating Club at the Memorial Arena. A premiere matinee got underway this afternoon with other showings scheduled for 8 p.m. today and tomorrow.

The show, entitled Under the Big Top features 18 acts by 170 members of all ages from four years up. It has been planned since last June with intensive practices and rehearsals during the past month.

"All work on this production has been voluntary which has kept the cost down to only $2,000," said Gord Hornsby, Canvas Cat Chairman. The club, one of the oldest in Canada, "has a tremendous amount of talent which will be wasted if the people of Belleville do not get out and support it," he added.

Club professionals Bonnie Boundy of Port Hope and Gordon Crossland of Toronto have been hard at work training the various acts.

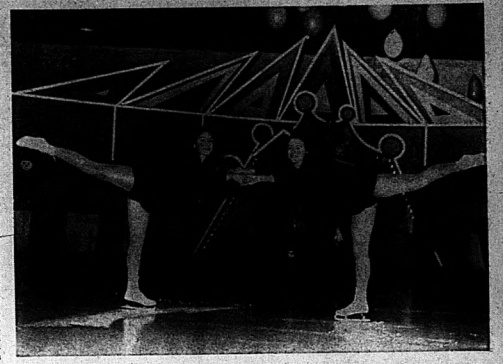
These include fairy tales of the Pied Piper, Cinderella, Queen of Hearts and the Three Little Pigs. A precision skating band, elephants and tigers as well as an act entitled Popcorn Balls are other features of the show.



The organ grinder and his monkey are there along with circus barkers and the traditional candy floss.

Color has been added to the various acts by scenery designed by Linda Mustard.

Ringmaster for this event is Ron Chapman who is also the stage Manager.



Skating star, Raymond Nasmith, 15, of the East York Figure Skating Club is also featured.

Many of the participants of this carnival took part in the sectional trials for the Canadian championships held in Trenton recently.

Light on the Subject

Putting glitter into ice show also calls for plenty of light. Technician Reg Edwards focuses giant spotlight this morning in preparation for today's ice show opening at Memorial Arena.

Warming Up With A Graceful Glide

There's nothing like a graceful glide to warm up for a gala ice show. Hornsby sisters — Kim, 12, Susan, 14, put finishing touches on their technique at Memorial Arena this morning before annual ice carnival gets underway for weekend presentations.

Struggle of Rival Groups Does Not Involve Loyalist

A struggle by two rival groups to organize Ontario's community college teachers which, in some centres, threatens to result in sit-ins accelerated recruitment campaigns and billboard advertisements, does not affect the teaching staff at Loyalist College.

The Rival groups are the Civil Service Association of Ontario and the Ontario Federation of Community College Faculty Associations.

Questioned this morning, William R. Campbell, president of the Loyalist Instructional Staff Association said: "None of these activities whatsoever is going on at Loyalist. This is a claim by the other group (OFCCFA) and we are in no way associated with it."

"We have aligned ourselves with the CSAO although we are not a part of it. We do not agree with the policies of the other group and therefore have nothing to do with it," he added.

The CSAO has an exclusive right under provincial law to represent these teachers because they are employed by a Crown agency. This right has been suspended by an injunction brought by the rival Federation.

If promised provincial Government legislation is introduced this spring, it will end the CSAO's exclusive right and will, in effect, give rights to whoever can show majority support by the teachers.

When this happens, a decision on an individual basis will be made by teachers at Loyalist as to which organization they wish to represent them, said Mr. Campbell.

Brotherhood Dinner for Belleville

St. Joseph's Catholic Church will host the seventh annual Brotherhood Dinner at the church's parish hall on Feb. 8.

The dinner is in recognition of Brotherhood Week and religious congregations participating are: Sons of Jacob Congregation, St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Eastminster United Church, Emmanuel Baptist Church, St. Margaret's - on - the - Hill Anglican Church, St. Columba Presbyterian Church and Holy Trinity Lutheran Church.

Guest speaker will be Rev. Matthew Meghan, a Redemptorist priest, who conducts his own television program in Hamilton and, in conjunction with a Lutheran minister, also conducts a radio hot line.

Father Meehan is a professor of communication at St. Augustine's seminary in Toronto and devotes his talents to ecumenism, particularly through this communication media.

He is a former missionary and former rector of St. Mary's College, Brockville.

Mrs. Bosley Will Rejoin Council

TWEED — Mrs. Amelia Bosley, has accepted an invitation to rejoin the Tweed Municipal Council, replacing Kenneth Thompson, who resigned his seat on the council late last year. Mrs. Bosley was a member of Tweed's all women council which attracted international attention during Canada's Centennial Year celebrations in 1967. She did not contest the last election, retiring from council at the end of 1968.

MURRAY ANGUS

A graduate of Moira Secondary School, Belleville, Murray Angus, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Angus, Goldsale Road was recently admitted to membership of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario. A special ceremony was held at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto. Mr. Angus who has been residing in Kitchener plans to move his family to Peterborough on March 1 where he has accepted a position.

TWEED — Under the auspices of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, skating tests in figures and dances were held this past week in Wellington. Skaters from Picton and Tweed participated.

The following skaters were successful: Dutch Waltz, Judy Brown, Rita Rivers, Anna Stroempl; Swing Dance, Deirdre Baldwin, Dianne Beech, Ann Foster; Willow Waltz, Nicole Goodfellow; Preliminary figure, Donna Rivers, Karen Rivers.

Next tests are planned for March in Tweed with skaters from Picton and Wellington participating.

The crest of the Tweed Kinsmen Skating Club is now on sale for $1.00 at the Tweed Arena, during the regular skating sessions on Thursdays and Saturdays.

Rally at Tweed

TWEED — Drivers taking part in the 1970 Canadian Winter Rally will pass visit to Tweed on Feb. 7-8 as the they journey from Toronto to Ottawa and return.

From 80 to 100 cars are expected to take part in the annual rally.

One of the official checkpoints will be Green Acres Restaurant on Highway 37, approximately 2½ miles north of Tweed.

The first vehicle is expected to arrive about 12 o'clock midnight, Feb. 7 and they will continue to arrive at 5 intervals approximately two minutes apart.

Trainees Learning New Skills

NAPANEE — Now that Christmas is behind them, the trainees at the Lennox and Addington County Rehabilitation Centre industries have turned their attention to entirely different projects. Until the Christmas vacation they had worked almost entirely on Christmas novelties and decorations, with a backlog of orders to fill after their successful sale.

When the workshop opened after Christmas it brought another trainee, a girl from Enterprise who comes three days a week.

Now the trainees are finishing and upholstering furniture. Mr. Pollard is experienced in both arts, and so is a valuable teacher. Many inquiries have been made by residents of the town and the area who have such work to be done.

The poodle which was made as an experiment has become very popular. Some of the girls are interested in embroidering cushion tops.

Now they have their eyes fixed on making stuffed animals. Friends have donated a monkey and a bunny which have not yet reached them.

The workshop door is always open for visitors.

Vietnam Lull

All of a sudden the news from Vietnam has tapered off — to the point where we might be lulled into thinking hostilities are over. Reinforcing this idea that the war could be moving toward a climax was the announcement from Saigon of further U.S. troop withdrawals.

Fifty thousand Americans were reported moving out as from Wednesday. They included marine pilots from Da Nang, along with their fighter-bombers.

Apart from this the only other apparent news of interest from Vietnam of late, ironically had to do with allegations of corruption. Inevitably there has been a denial of this by the authorities, but there are contradictions. For one thing, the U.S. authorities termed the withholding of certain stories as "editorial selections," which is just a polite way of admitting censorship does take place. More bluntly, a U.S. command statement said that material which would offend the host country (South Vietnam) cannot be used.

Then there was that story about the two U.S. government agents who infiltrated the Saigon pres corps. Someone decided this was not cricket, for they were withdrawn once their identity was known. Maybe this was more from embarrassment at being caught spying on their own side, than from design.

Perhaps it is too much to expect though that things will quieten down for long. It is not long since warnings were being sounded of renewed Communist infiltration in preparation for further attacks. The coming weeks likely will reveal whether the current lull carries some hope of permanence, or is merely the calm before another storm.

OWRC Aid

Assurance of planning and financial assistance for the extension of sewer and water services to Quinte district rural areas is an encouraging development.

Reaction to Ontario Water Resources Commission chairman D. J. Collin's offer has been generally favorable, involving as it does subsidy aid and administration of the work through locally-controlled area boards.

The Belleville discussions saw further reference to the need for area planning. Mayor J. Russell Scott mentioning the Belleville-Trenton area specifically — a point which won concurrence from R. A. Gomme, a planning administrator for the Department of Municipal Affairs.

For Belleville and its environs the meeting was further indication of this region's encouraging progress.

Life Is Good

When someone, in the language of the day, says: "Sometimes we do nothing more than bring people together at first, and after that you'll believe Belleville is beautiful" . . . and says it with a handsome smile, though he is crippled from a serious car accident some years ago — one is reminded that life is what you make it.

John Meyers is national campaign director of the Ability Fund (formerly the March of Dimes) and he revealed some interesting facts about the fund during a recent visit to Belleville. For instance, the total earnings by rehabilitated persons in competitive business amounts to some $3,000,000. The fund, moreover, operates 12 retraining centres for people in this category.

"We give them a second start," explained Mr. Meyers who rehabilitated himself after his accident.

Yes, life can be beautiful.

Barbra in Bytown

Prime Minister Trudeau may keep everyone guessing as to his matrimonial intentions, but in the process he continues to give this country a sparkling new image in the realm of social activity. There he was at the National Arts Centre, with Barbra Streisand of all people — the bachelor politician and the world famous star of Broadway. What a flutter they must have caused in staid old Ottawa. But then it's not Bytown anymore.

Flu Weather

Milder temperatures, such as we are experiencing these days, are a mixed blessing. Yes, this is the kind of weather when the flu bug strikes. Not a few are finding this out to their cost. Give us the good old zero stuff — then you know it is really winter, a fellow feels alive and flu germs take a back seat.

PC's Alfred Hales

Veteran MP Whistles 'Stop'—But It's Still 'Tax and Spend'

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA —You have to hand it to Alfred Dryden Hales, Conservative MP for Ontario's Wellington constituency.

Good old Al's been trying.

Half plenty of practice at it. Been an MP 13 years. Won six successive elections. Served the Commons Public Accounts Committee ever since former Prime Minister Diefenbaker led the Liberals back to power in 1963, and followed the parliamentary fashion of being a Diefenbaker Conservative after quitting the supposedly powerful Public Accounts Committee in charge of a member of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Dedicated. Plugger. Commands respect.

Everybody likes old Al — even the Liberals, whose sometimes wild-spending ways he has been striving to tame to these many years.

Nobody knows better than old Al what perfectly splendid opportunities the Liberals afford him to spear them as spendthrifts.

And nobody tries harder to bring the culprits to book.

But he never quite manages to lock them up.

Save, he catches them throwing your tax money around even faster than Finance Minister Ben Benson can think up a new ways of skimming you for it.

And who knows better than you how fast "Quick Buck Ben" works.

Nabbing the scoundrels long since has become so absolutely routine it is positively boring.

Alf uncoils that accusatory finger of his, year after year, and cries "Ah ha. Just look at the way the wasters are pouring it down the drain!"

Documents it, too, frequently with formal testimony.

But nothing more ever happens.

Simply because there is no follow - up.

Alf blows the whistle, and the great Ottawa government game of tax-and-spend goes gaily on just as if nobody were listening.

Or if they are, they seem to take it as an added incentive.

The whistle of appreciation of a fan who knows a great free - scoring performance when he sees it.

This session good old Alf is embarking with his Public Accounts Committee on Mission Impossible.

He's going to teach "Another CBC" — and, affectionately known by the multitudes who find aid and comfort on her sound-stages all over, a dollar.

Dressmaker.

The Old Pro in the Commons Committee League has been trying that for years, only to watch the cost of keeping "Mother CBC" go up and up and up to better than a current $100,000,000, all told, every 52 your expense.

Last session, this Pro of all parliamentary investigations, the Commons Broadcasting Committee, dug up a really crazy can of worms guaranteed you would think, to produce pleas for forgiveness and oaths to never again transgress.

That is what you think.

Turn back the parliamentary clock a year to when the committee was first formed, some of the Canada Council's imaginative grants bestowed out of the $150,000,000 a year money initially diverted to this cultural agency and the $50,000,000 currently given it by Parliament.

There was the question of sending off a delegation to the ararist Francois Dolrist to the Paris Sorbonne at $4,500 of public expense.

There was the business of flying Elsie Gritz, from New York to Vancouver again at public expense, to back a piano to hits with an axe and splash around a few plastic bags of cows' blood in the name of art.

And there was the handing over of $2,500 to the self-appointed "poet" so he could clown around in a dunce cap and beat a drum as "a serious contribution" as the Canada Council explained to the committee "to the self-awareness of the whole community of Vancouver."

There was more, much, much more of this hilarious nonsense — real chuckle-making stuff, if a bit of a pain in the public pocketbook.

But how funny, the Committee wondered, might it sound to the poor working stiff either eight hours a day, or, considerably fewer, the dentist opening his office at seven in the morning, the miner going down in a glider 20 floors above the street or almost any taxpayer wondering how to keep from "the Bandit" Benson at bay?

Not very.

But was the Canada Council concerned? Ask its new director and veteran member Peter Dwyer.

You have to keep your sense of humor, he says, "for if you do not have that kind of cause, you will never help people of quality."

Is anyone listening? Or caring? About Commons committees?

Good old Alf Hales must think so. Alf keeps trying. Harder than anyone.

Call of the Frontier

Before long, weekends once again will beckon Canadians to provincial parks across the land. Here in Ontario's far northwest, close to the border with Minnesota, a family enjoys a refreshing break. The scene is Middle Falls, some 40 miles west of Thunder Bay.

The 'Y'—an Elite Club Or A Real Facility For The People of Belleville?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Today all levels of society are more than ever conscious of projecting a "good image".

Political parties, religious denominations, commercial and industrial concerns, the professions etc., right on down to the individual, have all become "image conscious".

In this respect Belleville's YMCA is no exception. Currently undergoing a searching self-analysis, they hope, as a result, to present to the public a new program of community involvement geared to the times we live in.

Not so long ago, to many people, the "Y" was the place aspiring youngsters pounded heavy bags en route to winning the world's heavyweight championship.

If we believe the stories we hear now, the youngsters have given way to an elite business men's club whose membership list amid the vapors of the steam room is daily contemplation of their net worth accounts.

This may, or may not be true. I am an active member of the local "Y". I swim, exercise and do my particular thing which happens to be jogging and exercise.

These exercises are shared with a cross section of Belleville's population. My partners in puffing and panting, range from ministers, milkmen, postmen, policemen, salesmen, down to a retired "youngster" of 65.

Occasionally, I am joined in my middle-aged endeavours by the odd business man, who it appears, seems activated by the same motives as myself. It's funny how differences in social and working environment are reduced to mere imagination when you share a common objective.

The "sadistic" young director of physical training sees the same knobbly knees being supported by the minister and the bank manager. He hears the same groans and creaking of joints from the policeman and the professional and at the end of it all, the same salty sweat rolls from the brow of the tycoon that rolls from the brow of the technician.

In the three years that I have been a member of the Belleville "Y", I have heard from those who are not, that it is not worth joining because it has become "just a business man's club". Perhaps these elusive business men are members of other groups. I can honestly say that my experience at the "Y" has not shown any predominance of business men in relation to other members.

However, be this as it may, there is no doubt that many of Belleville's citizenry are firmly convinced that the "Y" is the playground of the wealthy, and it is up to the "Y" to once and for all convince the public that such is not the case.

Many criticisms may be levelled at the "Y", but perhaps of the many that are done the most emanate from its members. These are many and varied. Prime among them is the lack of a full-sized gymnasium. It is commendable to pay off a debt before incurring a further one, but in this instance, I feel the "Y" must take the plunge, even if it means going into the red, and provide an up-to-date gym.

The weight-lifting equipment and exercise machines need to be replaced. The table tennis table is meant for purposes other than standing soft drinks on. In fact, the table in question should be encouraged and provision should be made for access to it and for a room set aside for the purpose.

A long look should be taken at the very considerable number of programs an overburdened "Y" staff are expected to supervise. Those with insufficient support should be ruthlessly discarded. An over - emphasis on youth should be tempered with active programs for the not-so-young.

Perhaps the "Y" is guilty of too many committees, both in its local and national structure. It seems that too much has to be referred to this or that committee before anything even gets off the ground.

The concern appears locally to centre around the public's misconception of the "Y". OK. Then it is up to the "Y" to get to the public and say "What is wrong with us? How can we help you?" It is only by direct contact with the average Mr. and Mrs. Belleville that they are likely to find out where they are going wrong. Sitting on committees of prominent local citizens is not likely to overcome the suspicion, unfounded or otherwise, of the lower income groups.

The thing seems clear, that sooner or later, the "Y", along with all other recreational groups will have to get together to ensure that the city benefits from the combined talents available.

Many claim that $70.00 for a family membership is too much for the average family. Yet, where else, if you that such it is the case. Where you get such value for money? On a weekly basis for a family of four, it amounts to less than a $1.50.

At any rate, this is "my" view, so why not go down and have a look around, and, if you have the mind to, step into the secretary's office and see the desk. This way everybody learns something.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY.

Guy Fawkes and three co-conspirators were hanged in London 364 years ago today—in 1606—opposite the Parliament Buildings which they failed to blow up. The Gunpowder Plot got under way when James I announced stronger anti-discriminatory laws against Roman Catholics. The plot was suspected by the court when Catholic members of the House of Lords got warnings to stay out of the building. Fawkes was caught red-handed and tortured until he betrayed his friends.

Widening the Scope of the Church

Owen Sound Sun-Times

Much has been said in recent times about the material wealth of churches. Great stress has been laid on the need for these organizations to "get outside their buildings," to take the gospel, generally in practical form, to the people. The masses, it is recognized, will not enter church sanctuaries, at least for the present type of church services.

There have been those who have advocated sale of many church buildings, using the money both to employ other means to get the church's message to the people and to aid those who are less fortunate materially.

It is human nature to allow the pendulum of public opinion to swing from one extreme to the other. The middle, generally sensible course, is seldom reached until considerable trial and error.

This situation could pertain to the present day church situation. It could be that the Church will be made to suffer still further withdrawals in public acceptance due to an overzealous following of the advice of the critics.

There can be no doubt some church buildings should be sold, the money employed to serve the church's purpose in other ways. But this is where such churches no longer can serve the people. There are instances where one denomination has several large edifices within a few city blocks, none of them used to any great extent. Here doubt'ess amalgamation is advisable.

In large cities great, expensive churches stand in areas where people no longer live. They have no parish. Their property is highly valuable for other development. The money from their sale could be used to serve a real purpose in proclaiming, and, perhaps more important, making effective the Gospel.

And there are those churches where great wealth has been and still is being spent, without any worthwhile returns in humanity and spirituality.

The Church must get outside its walls. But the Church must still strive to bring people within, in its walls, if its effectiveness is to continue.

The United Church Observer recently remarked that "it is true that faith without works is dead and "it is also true that works without faith are ineffective."

The Church has suffered severely from the fact its lack of action has forced many of its best people to go outside its organization to find means of service to humanity. The Church, if it is to continue as an organization, cannot afford to suffer further such losses. Yet to take its activities, as well as its outreach, outside the general church influence will do that.

It would appear that the real need is for the Church at large to exercise a sensible control of material expenditures. For instance an aisle rug would be an asset in many churches, but it does not need to be a deep pile, costly installation.

The need is to make full use of facilities, disposing of unessentials, but above all reaching out to the masses both to assist them in material things and to win them into the Christian life.

Sixties Were Momentous Years For Roman Catholic Church

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — The 1960s were a momentous years for the Roman Catholic Church because traditional attitudes and organization underwent a radical transformation.

The decade, which included years of the most intense joy in the church's 2,000-year history, will probably be remembered as the era which brought the church from the 19th into the 20th century.

The years ago it was still normal for Roman Catholics to consider all Christians outside their own church as without hope of salvation. Jews were still officially regarded as the murderers of God, priests still celebrated the mass among uneducated people in Latin and Roman Catholics still regarded Communists as anti-Christs.

In 10 years, all this and more has been swept away—and the church is more open to the world at large than at any previous time.

The man who secured his place in history as the prime mover of the church's transformation was the late Pope John who came to the throne of St. Peter in 1959 wanting, as he said, "to open the windows."

The official church was then still firmly tied to its traditional organization and attitudes which had been jealously preserved during the 30-year reign of Pope Pius.

But hardly a year after his death, Pope John announced his decision to convoke an ecumenical council, with the aim of bringing up the church to the world and bringing it up to date. The council lasted with gaps from 1962 to 1965.

Among the council's side-effects was an unprecedented freedom in religious literature and information, and the first major breach in the wall of secrecy and reticence which had previously surrounded the Vatican.

A scholarly German Jesuit, the Augustin Cardinal Bea, appointed by Pope John to head a new secretariat for Christian unity, became the symbol of a new sense of brotherhood among Christians of different churches.

The series of historic meetings between the late Pope John took place between Pope John's successor Pope Paul and the heads of the Orthodox and Anglican churches—meetings which only a few years earlier would have been unthinkable.

A new era also opened in Roman Catholic relations with the Jews after the Vatican council formally exonerated them from the historic accusation of deicide. It culminated in 1969 when a pope for the first time officially received a member of the Israeli government, Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

Another major development was a thaw in Vatican relations with the Communist world. In 1963 Pope John received Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei. In 1966, Pope Paul received Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and, in 1967, Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny.

The Vatican has established diplomatic relations with 20 new countries since 1958. This year it is expected to exchange ambassadors for the first time with a Communist state—Yugoslavia.

Pope Paul has become the most travelled pope in history and has visited four continents — Europe, Asia, Africa, North America and South America.

Both Pope John and Pope Paul made themselves champions of the world's poor and promoters of social justice and economic development.

Their encyclicals on these themes have been received in developing countries, particularly in South America, as bases for demanding a better economic deal.

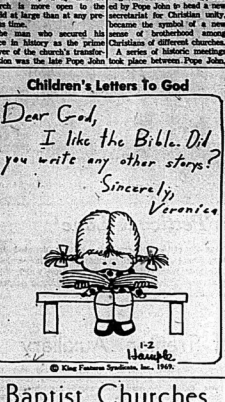
The decade has seen a widening of practical reforms in both the organization and rites of the church. Among these are the use of vernacular languages in the mass, the new Roman calendar from which many saints of dubious historical origins have been dropped, and reorganization of the church's central government on more efficient and international lines.

When Pius died there were 70 cardinals, of whom a large majority were Italian. Today there are more than 120, of whom more than two-thirds are foreign. The possibility of a future non-Italian pope now is a real one.

Monsignor Believes In Changes

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — Dr. M. A. MacLellan, who retires as president of St. Francis Xavier University here in June, says he labels himself neither a liberal nor a conservative in the Roman Catholic Church.

Dr. MacLellan, a monsignor, said he is a proponent of a changing church, one that's less rigid and more involved.



"I certainly believe in a changing church," he said in an interview. "Church is for the people—they are the church. I was pleased to see the Latin replaced by the vernacular liturgy."

The 63-year-old native of Cape Breton said it is desirable for a priest not to marry, but celibacy is not essential for his work in the church. He said he believes that eventually priests in certain areas will be allowed to marry.

He said he welcomes the participation of laymen in the mass and sacraments.

"The church is in process of change. I believe it is becoming less rigid. Laymen are playing increasingly important roles in the church—and they must if the church is to survive."

Miniskirts Still Predominant in Paris Showing

PARIS (Reuters) — Andre Courreges kept miniskirts in Paris couture Tuesday, but all other houses showing their summer collections dropped to mid-calf lengths.

The handwriting on the wall indicates that the incoming trend for the 70s is the long look which is gradually going to take over the next six months, completely outmoding all skirts above the knees by next fall.

Pierre Balmain, Nina Ricci and Ektro, the Brazilian designer, who all showed Tuesday, unanimously endorsed mid-calf skirts, with the average daytime length scaled around 15 inches from the floor.

The dominant silhouette here so far is an updated princess style, with waistline indicated by seaming or marked with a belt. The best balance for long skirts is a slightly raised waist, as Balmain shows it with inset cummerbands, wide belts or yokes. The short jacket also gets top priority, often evolved like a Spanish bullfighter's bolero at Balmain or Ektor's gaucho ensembles with cropped jacket teamed to wide-legged culottes.

Skirts make news with offbeat treatments as well as length. Pleating makes a big comeback — everywhere after years of straight skirts, and the bias cut revolves in everything from coats to formal fashions. Skirts are often split at the side or front to reveal a last fleeting glimpse of leg art.

Billowy Sleeves Popular in Summer Attire

NEW YORK (AP) — Oscar de la Renta introduced a summer couture collection Wednesday that seemed to float into his Seventh Avenue showroom on the billowy organza and organdy sleeves of the dresses.

De la Renta, one of the most consistently elegant of the American ready-to-wear designers, put the full, see-through sleeves on evening gowns, shirt-waist dresses and even on a few mid-length outfits.

The couture collection, which sells for $140 to $600, was in contrast with the less-expensive boutique line which he introduced Tuesday with what he called the midi-milkmaid look trimmed in rickrack.

For daytime wear, de la Renta showed crisp cottons and linens with a variety of trims around the necks and sleeves, but only a few featured rickrack. On some dresses, which were slit to the waist or midchest, the slit was trimmed with a demure grosgrain ribbon.

For evening and day wear the designer covered the models' chignons with snoods, a small crocheted hair covering, and looped grosgrain or leather ties around their neck.

Colorwise de la Renta showed more navy than black and ended the show in a big splash of printed long dresses, two of which had ballet tops and billowy pants, instead of skirts.

Down 'Petticoat Lane'

Mrs. W. Norman displays one of the articles of clothing donated to Petticoat Lane - - - Trenton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary's new shop which will open next Friday. Proceeds from the Murphy Street shop, which will sell nearly-new articles of all descriptions, will be used to purchase needed equipment for the hospital and its patients.

'Petticoat Lane' Shop

Project of Trenton Auxiliary

TRENTON — The members of the Auxiliary of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary have chosen their weapons — floor scrapers, paint brushes, wall paper and paste.

Subject of their interior decorating attack is Petticoat Lane, a "good-as-new" shop which is one of the auxiliary's major 1970 projects.

With renovations nearing completion after several weeks work, the process of stocking the shop is now under way and next Friday is the projected opening date.

Located on Murphy Street, in the store formerly occupied by Singer Sewing Centre, Petticoat Lane is designed to raise money to purchase needed equipment for Trenton Memorial Hospital and its patients.

Patterned after Belleville General Hospital Women's Auxiliary's Opportunity Shop, Petticoat Lane will be staffed by auxiliary members and volunteers and will sell "good-as-new" articles.

The Petticoat Lane committee welcomes donations of the following items in nearly-new condition: bedding, glassware, china, ornaments, cookware, household goods, furniture, toys and games, jewellery, all types of seasonal clothing, millinery, accessories, shoes and footwear for men, women and children of all ages.

Present plans call for the shop to be open from 2 to 4 Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons; from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday evenings and from 9.30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

Volunteers wishing to give a few hours weekly or semi-weekly to help staff the shop when it opens are asked to call Mrs. Hadley at 392-4392.

Friendly Service for Newcomers

OTTAWA (CP) —The three Fs — Face-to-Face Friendliness — characterize assistance with the Hi Neighbor Service, says Mildred Richardson, its executive vice-president.

A Calgary resident, Mrs. Richardson was in Ottawa recently for regional meetings of her organization.

"We call on new families who have moved into the cities or towns we're in, and we try to make them feel as welcome as possible," she said in an interview.

"Our service is Canada's very own. It started 14 years ago, and we now have 200 branches across the country with approximately 300 hostesses.

"A new family is usually presented with a folder containing a letter of welcome from the mayor and the president of the Chamber of Commerce.

It also contains information about local entertainment, recreational organizations, hospitals, schools and local businesses. No samples are offered at the initial meeting.

"We try to keep in close touch with the new families to see if we can orient them in any other way," Mrs. Richardson said. "On the average, our hostess will spend about half an hour on each call."

Later on, when the newcomer is more settled, the hostess will introduce her to the managers of local business firms in the present her with a welcoming gift.

The service, supported by businessmen in each locality doesn't go into an area unless invited by an organization such as the local Chamber of Commerce or board of trade.

It is not operating in the United States, but four branches are being opened in Australia.

Mrs. Richardson has been with the organization from the start. Her background in public relations in Toronto prior to her marriage made her a natural for the job, and she is current president of the World Hostess Association.

She says prospective hostesses have to be mature, motherly types "because many calls are made to young girls and, believe it or not, when they move to a new city, the person they miss most is their own mother."

She says that often a hostess will be asked for advice, like "Is the dress she should be hung, or how to cook a lamb roast, and younger hostesses feel better about asking for advice from an older woman."

Mrs. Richardson says the hostesses are often the first person New Canadians get to know, and they make many Canada's image. "Canadians have a worldwide reputation for friendliness."

No hostesses under the age of 35 are hired, and it has been a popular occupation for retired school teachers, nurses and newspaper women.

"They've always dealt with the public and they enjoy it." A hostess should have a car —the company supplies some —and be able to make about 35 calls a month. Her salary depends on the number of calls she makes, and Mrs. Richardson says it usually runs from $450 to $600 monthly.

TEA OR COFFEE?

"How come it's a nice cup of tea, but a good cup of coffee ?" — Beryle Pfizer.

* * *

"This pewter tea-pot has been in the family for centuries. Seems like it any way ! But I've a new tea service — and if you would care to have something as old as this — you are so welcome to it."

That's how we've come by such a lovely piece of pewter which belonged to an English family, and good friends of ours. This morning I'm polishing it again and find delight in its warm grey lustre which becomes brighter — the harder I polish.

As I do so, I think how tea, and beer was once sold, only, in pewter pots in Medieval England; how tea drinking changed British habits. For as it became more and more popular pewter lost out as the way for china teapots.

It seems pewter and tea never got along too well, due, we're told to a chemical reaction, and pewter is no longer of service. So important has tea become that workers rebel taking it from dispensers set up in offices and work shops, saying such service ruins "a nice cup of tea" which should be poured from a proper teapot.

I hold up the gleaming pewter teapot admiring its graceful form before placing back in its special place on the shelf it shares with other knick-knacks and books.

While I'm at it, I find myself, I might as well dust the entire shelf, since I'm in the mood, and proceed to take the books down, one at a time. This is fatal. For months I haven't opened a single volume. Now minutes — an hour goes by — as I leaf through pages long last seen.

Here is a book of Essays — one on Coffee Houses, and my eye catches the following words:

CLUB ACTIVITIES

ALPHA LAMBDA CHAPTER

The second January meeting of Alpha Lambda Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, was held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Peter Hodges, Village Drive, with the president, Mrs. G. Hill in the chair.

Among items discussed at the meeting were plans for a skating party to be held Saturday evening on the Bay of Quinte. Also, a number of service projects were decided upon. A nominating committee was chosen to bring in a slate of officers for 1970-71. A letter was read from the chapter's godchild in Guadaloupe, a pledge ritual will be held at the next meeting for two pledges.

Mrs. J. Morrow introduced the speaker for the evening, Mrs. Hodges who spoke on "Modelling With Papier Mache". Mrs. P. Kamphuis thanked Mrs. Hodges for an entertaining program.

The evening concluded with refreshments served by the hostess.

Japanese Imari Pattern Durable But Expensive

The popularity of patterns based on the Japanese Imari style, decorated in cobalt blue, rust-red and gold colours, Royal Crown Derby still makes "Traditional Imari", one of the most durable and expensive patterns available.

Although the present firm claims a history going back to 1750 there have been a number of significant changes in manufacturing, identification marks and firm name.

About 1770 a crown mark over a script "D" began to appear, reputedly because of royal patronage of the Derby Porcelain Works. This mark persisted in various forms at the same time that other Chinese, pseudo - Dresden, chinese, pseudo - Dresden, pseudo - Sevres, Bloor - Derby stamps, and other marks.

In 1848 the Bloor - Derby firm ceased operation but a number of the workmen continued to manufacture under various names; Lockyer and Co. Late Bloor, Derby Courtney late Bloor, and Stevenson Sharp and Co., King St. Derby.

In 1876 a Derby Crown Porcelain Company was organized including a number of members of the earlier firm. It used a mark consisting of a crown over a stylized intertwined logo that may be interpreted as a "D" and "D" combined or as a pseudo - Sevres mark.

In 1890 Queen Victoria ordered some china and appointed the company "Manufacturers of Porcelain to Her Majesty". The name became Royal Crown Derby retaining the Derby Crown mark with Royal Crown Derby printed in a semi-circle above. The word England was added below the mark about 1891 and changed to "Made in England" about 1921.

In 1932 the firm began adding marks to indicate the year of manufacture. These marks are listed in tables in most reference books on pottery and porcelain. In 1938 the firm started using Roman numerals to indicate year of manufacture. Provided you can decipher the Roman numeral and remember to add 37 to the result you can determine the date of manufacture in the second quarter of this century with some accuracy.

The pattern illustrated is now associated exclusively with Royal Crown Derby and seems to date to the present form from the reorganized firm of 1876.

Many examples of this pattern may be found bearing other manufacturers' marks or no marks at all. Decorators of Royal Crown Derby introduced personal variations of their own. Pieces made in different periods look alike at first glance. Closer inspection will reveal wide differences in detail making this a particularly interesting pattern to collect from a variety of periods and makers.

Successful Living

Foster Parent Tells How Child's Problem Resolved

By DORIS CLARK

"Timmy came to us just before Christmas, three years ago, a scared, little boy who had had five moves before his third birthday. He was so different from our own noisy children. Would we lend to mate up for all his wrongs and make him too dependent on us?

"It took months to get Timmy to start talking to us. When people came to visit he would cling to us, terrified as to whether a strange face meant another move. When I went shopping he would cry in fear that I might not come back.

"But gradually he became more sure of himself and more trusting of others. Last summer he even was able to leave us several mornings a week to attend Bible School. Now he is even looking forward to kindergarten.

"It gives us a wonderful feeling to see him running and playing noisily with the other children instead of standing forlorn on the sidelines.

"An easy job? Not always. But when he comes and says, 'I love you, Mom,' it makes up for all the frustrations and effort. Even more rewarding is a funny sort of way, is the fact that he now feels secure enough to tell me he doesn't like me when he gets mad at me.

"Will we miss him when the time comes for him to go? Of course! But this won't stop us from trying again with some other child.

"Being a foster parent usually means loving and losing, but in our hearts we know we have gained far more than we have lost." — Foster Mother, Hamilton CAS.

Dear Doris: How does one go about getting an appointment with a family counselor or social worker, as I notice you so often recommend in your column for problems in the family? — Needing Help.

Dear Needing: Help is as near as your telephone. Trained caseworkers are to be found on the staffs of family agencies, child care agencies and a number of welfare departments. In larger centres there are also a very few in private practice. They are there to help with people problems and await your call.

Friends Honor Octogenarian

TWEED — The 81st birthday of Mrs. Alice Reavie was celebrated at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Reavie, of Flinton, recently. Thirty-five guests included all of her family, a few grandchildren and great grandchildren, enjoyed a pot-luck dinner.

During the afternoon slides of her Scotch shortbread from this amount.) (6 with variations); repeated. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. on unbuttered baking sheets about 20 to 25 minutes. Remove as soon as they are barely tinged with gold. They should not be browned at all. Note: The Scottish people roll short bread in circles ¼" thick or press into 6 or 7" pans to ½" thickness and bake longer.

From November 1969)

Highly recommended.

½ cup sifted icing sugar

1 cup butter (room temperature; no substitutes)

1¾ cups sifted bread flour (no substitutes)

Into a beater bowl measure the icing sugar and butter and beat two minutes on "low". Pour in "instant" flour and beat one minute, scraping down sides with rubber spatula at halftime.

With hands shape into one-inch diameter balls and place two inches apart on two ungreased cookie sheets. Into each ball on one pan I pressed a whole unblanched almond. On the balls on the other pan I pressed my thumb deeply into centre to make depression. (When served this depression is filled with ½ tsp. red strawberry or raspberry jam or red currant jelly.) Bake at 275 deg. Fahr. ten to twelve minutes but watch them — they should not brown at all. Store in single layers, separated with wax paper, in cool place. Crisp and light the "best yet" shortbread.

Genuine Scotch Shortbread Recipe

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: May I have Christmas shortbread? Yours are different than the butter cookies I make. — Mrs. Wm. M., Livonia, Michigan.

ANSWER: We are always glad to hear from any readers of our paper in the United States. I am giving you two shortbread recipes that were most popular during the past Christmas season in Canada.

GENUINE SCOTCH SHORT-BREAD

1 lb. butter

4 cups sifted but not sifted all-purpose flour

½ cup unsifted icing or fruit sugar

Mix these three ingredients by hand in large bowl until of rolling-out consistency. Roll out to ¼ inch thickness on lightly - floured board. Edges of dough will crack, but patiently cook dough into a smooth round. Cut out with lightly floured cutter or various cutters. (I made 52 2¾"

Points for Parents

By MARY BEYSON

Father: "What are you doing up so late. Isn't Kathy home yet?"

Mother: "I don't know where Kathy went tonight. I worry about her when she's out so late, but she feels she's too grown-up to report to me every time she goes out."

Someone should know the whereabouts of all family members. Even grown-up children, if they're living at home, should be expected to inform parents of their plans.

Mother: "I think you should let us know where you will be when you're out for several hours, and approximately when you'll be coming home. I know you're old enough to make your plans, but I do worry about accidents."

Arctic Food Specialties Marketed by Selected Stores

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — If you're a gourmet, a gourmand or just a plain food lover, you owe it to yourself to try Canada's newest specialty foods.

They are smoked Arctic char, Arctic char fillet in aspic jelly, Arctic whitefish fillet steaks and Arctic char chowder being produced in an Eskimo settlement 200 miles north of Winnipeg.

The four specialties are being test marketed in selected stores across Canada to determine whether they can break into the lucrative gourmet food markets in the south.

A marketing agency is doing surveys and checking re-order patterns to see if consumers are interested. Unofficially, the product seems to be selling well.

Anne Andindsen, manager of Canadiana Gifts Ltd. in Edmonton, says she is stocking the foods and they seem to be selling well.

"They're marvellous foods for parties. I used them more and often over the Christmas season."

They sell for between $1 and $1.50 for about three ounces which is cheaper than caviar and more expensive than sardines.

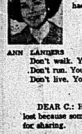
The foods are produced under supervision of the department of Indian affairs and northern development in a cannery at Rankin Inlet on the west coast of Hudson Bay.

The cannery is one of the federal government's "demonstration industries," which experiment to see what secondary industry could be developed in the north, and which provide employment for native people.

The cannery employs 25 Eskimos and runs for five months a year. Marketing is done under the Arctic Circle brand and Rose and Laflamme Ltd., the company which does the testing, says they could probably sell 24,000 cans of each of the foods a year.

The specialty foods program was started early in the 1960s with the first products including pickled muskrat, whale meat loaf and canned seal meat.

In 1969, 75,000 cans of the new brand were produced and about 30,000 cans of the Oolpik brand.



But there are problems.

The fish must go to the cannery as soon as it is caught, but this is difficult because northern travel routes are irregular and transportation costs are high.

Ann Landers

High School Senior Gives Bit of Philosophy

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a high school senior who doesn't know a lot about life, but from what I see and hear and read, I get the idea that just living today takes more courage than it did when there were less people in the world. We all need little bits of philosophy to hang on to. Here is something that helped me do things I would not have done if I hadn't had this little piece of paper in my wallet.

ANN LANDERS

Don't look. You might see.
Don't listen. You might hear.
Don't think. You might learn.
Don't make a decision. You might be wrong.
Don't walk. You might stumble.
Don't run. You might fall.
Don't live. You might die.

— CINCINNATI.

* * *

DEAR C.: Heaven knows how many opportunities were lost because someone didn't have the courage to try. Thanks for sharing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Dad and Mom have been separated a couple of times but they are back together. The early complaints were against Dad. Mom was sure he was seeing other women.

Now that Dad has grown up and is behaving better, Mom has gone off her rocker. She is having a telephone romance with some guy. She picks up the phone, dials a number, hangs up and waits a few seconds. Then she dials the same number again and hangs up. She does this three or four times in a row and stands by the phone and waits for someone to call her back. She will not let any of us kids near the phone when she is waiting, so I'm sure she has some sort of planned setup.

I don't know if Mom ever meets with this guy, but if it's who I think it is, Dad would knock his block off. He's supposed to be a family friend. Should I say something to Dad? I feel like a rat keeping quiet. — MY FATHER'S SON.

* * *

DEAR SON: If you feel like a rat keeping quiet, what do you think you'll feel like if you fink on your mother?

If something funny is going on, your Dad is bound to learn of it. My advice is to keep quiet. Then when the feathers hit the fan, and they will eventually, you will have no cause to feel guilty.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My boyfriend is with the U.S. Army in Vietnam. He left the States 96 days ago. Communications were perfect until five weeks ago. Suddenly the letters stopped coming. I haven't had a line from him in 35 days and I'm worried sick. My letters have not come back so I don't know if he has received them or not.

His parents live on the other coast and I've never met them. I don't want to alarm anyone by calling and asking if they have heard from him. Is there any way I can find out if he is all right? Please help me. I am frantic. — BETTY.

DEAR BETTY: Write to The Office of the Adjutant General of the United States Army, Washington, D.C. Give them your friend's name, rank, serial number and last address. Good luck.

Fewer Harness Bettors Wagered More

OTTAWA (CP) — Off-track betting and a labor strike at a big Quebec track dragged 1969 attendance at Canadian harness races below 1968 totals. But wagers on the pacers and trotters soared over 1968 figures by $7,- 602,834.

There were 6,996,329 bettors down from 6,404,714 in 1968, who laid down $344,977,323 at harness tracks. Bets totalled $337,- 374,548 in 1968.

Harness racing again proved more popular than thoroughbred racing, which is confined to Quebec, Ontario and the Western provinces. But the 6,- 582,939 fans who attended running horse tracks in 1969 bet $215,283,987, up $17,997,944 from the previous year.

The drop in trotting attendance has been explained by the growth of off - track betting houses and by a 26-day strike at Montreal's Blue Bonnets track. Only Alberta, Saskatchewan, Ontario and New Brunswick registered attendance increases.

Attendance and wager statistics are compiled by the federal agriculture department, which supervises racing in Canada.

The largest single day's wagering on harness horses occurred at Blue Bonnets June 8, when 18,063 patrons put up $859,716.

A record for all tracks was set at Toronto's Woodbine in the Queen's Plate, when $1,742,875 was wagered by 66,715 patrons. Harness-race betting by provinces, with the 1968 figures bracketed:

British Columbia $1,167,182 ($999,154); Alberta $6,094,345 ($4,894,239); Saskatchewan $1,- 172,999 ($710,899); Manitoba $2,836,894 ($2,990,361); Ontario $181,897,898 ($167,345,805); Quebec $138,894,236 ($148,343,788); New Brunswick $3,370,459 ($2,- 893,793); Nova Scotia $7,363,346 ($5,230).

Ranger Veterans Earn Their Pay

The old guys made it big for New York Rangers Tuesday night.

The Rangers, leaders of the Eastern Division of the National Hockey League, clipped Oakland Seals of the Western Division 3-1 before a sparse crowd of 8,612 Oakland fans.

And instead of it being the young hustlers who did the job for them, it was the old legs, but wise heads, of their veterans.

Goalie Terry Sawchuck even got into the action, picking up a rare assist on Ron Stewart's game-winner as well as safely handling 19 of the 20 shots the Seals fired at him.

Defencemen Arnie Brown got the other New York goal and Howie Menard scored for Oakland in the only scheduled game of the night.

The result pushed the Rangers to a four-point edge over second-place Boston Bruins in the East while the loss held the Seals deep in the western standings, only ahead of last-place Los Angeles Kings.

The schedule is almost full tonight with the Bruins at Montreal against the Canadiens, Toronto Maple Leafs at Minnesota against the North Stars, Detroit Red Wings in Los Angeles, Chicago Black Hawks against the Flyers in Philadelphia and St. Louis Blues playing the Penguins in Pittsburgh.

Sunday the Canadiens are in Philadelphia, Toronto is at Boston, Pittsburgh is in New York, Detroit is at Oakland and Minnesota plays at Chicago.

Friday's action saw Rangers against the run of the play since Stewart, a 37-year-old, 18-year NHL veteran, and Donnie Marshall, 37 and a 16-year veteran, were killing off a penalty to teammate Dave Balon.

Sawchuck, with the Seals all up and pressing for the go-ahead goal, saw an opening to Marshall down the middle and hit his veteran team-mate dead on. Marshall relayed again to Stewart alone and unhindered in the open and goalie Gary Smith had no chance on the setup.

Smith had 39 shots against him by New York.

Marshall and Stewart have spent most of their professional hockey lives killing off penalties and picking up the occasional break-away goal.

But assists have been few and far between for Sawchuck.

In his 26 NHL years, the 41-year-old netminder has managed only six assists, with the last coming during the 1965-66 season when he was toiling at Toronto.

And only in one season—1964- 65—did he manage two assists, also for Toronto.

In fact, it was only the fourth goalie-assisted goal of the season in the NHL—two belonging to Chicago's Tony Esposito and one to Jacques Plante of St. Louis.

Elsewhere in the league, the Red Wings still are concerned about the health of assistant general manager Bax Bastien, taken to hospital in Detroit Friday with what was termed "a suspected mild heart attack."

His condition is not regarded as critical, but a rest still was ordered by team physician, Dr. John Finley.

And in Toronto Mike Walton is back in the familiar doghouse and back on the bench after missing Friday's practice.

The independent-minded centre already is in New York and is leaving the ice and coach John McLellan immediately said "this is going to cost him."

But, even more serious for Walton, his position will be taken in tonight's game by Jim Harrison, a 22-year-old rookie, between wingers Brit Selby and Norm Ellis.

"Walton will be spotted—he'll be on the power play and spotted," said McLellan.

Skating Champions Made in Four Minutes

EDMONTON (CP) — "In a four-minute program, you have quite a bit of time. It doesn't seem like much to the public, but to a skater, it's an awful lot of time."

So says Karen Magnussen, 17, of Vancouver, who, along with 14 other hopefuls, will be trying to fill four minutes with jumps, spins, splits and, in general, beautiful skating.

The young women are competing for the Canadian Figure Skating Championships this weekend and for the right to represent Canada in North American and world competition.

Miss Magnussen is the leading contender for the title following the compulsory figures portion of the event, which was completed Friday. Second is club-mate Mary McCaffrey, 15.

Third is a light-haired dark horse, Karen Grobba, 18, who lives in California and skates out of Toronto's Granite club.

Although she has retained her Canadian citizenship, she has been competing in the United States and this is the first time she has skated against any of these women in competition.

The highlight of any championship appearance is free skating and the plans for this portion of the program are as varied as the lady competitors.

Cathy Lee Irwin, of Toronto, and Miss Magnussen are both highly valued.

Miss Irwin, a Dresden-doll- like skater from Toronto, is fourth in the figures, but free skating is considered exceptional.

In an interview Friday, she described her program.

"I've made some changes in it, but it is still the same basic program. I've worked hard on some technical aspects. The music is the same—I love it."

Miss Irwin said it is important that the skater has an affection for the music she must skate to. "If you don't have music you like, you can't express it the way it should be done."

She plans to include several double jumps in her program—double Axels, double Lutz and double loops as well as split jumps and spins.

Her program is planned with the audience in mind as well as for herself.

"Any skater, if she is going to do a performance, has to give something to the audience."

She'll be wearing a soft brown, chiffon costume and with her long blond hair and big eyes, she usually has the audience with her as soon as she skates out on the ice.

Miss Magnussen has planned a new program for this year's Canadian competition. She has changed her music. "The music I'm skating to this year is more mature music," she said.

This means the music has a strong beat and there is two slow parts in the portion selected. She thinks her whole performance is now more mature and stronger. The music, the theme from spartacus, reflects this better ability, she said.

Her program includes spins and jumps and variations on jumps. It also includes several combinations or sequence of jumps that lead from one into the other.

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — U.S. driving champion Mario Andretti put one of Ferrari's comeback cars out ahead of world title-holding Porschen in the starting field for the 24 Hours of Daytona endurance race with a record-shattering, 122.903-miles-an-hour qualifying run Friday. Vic Elford of Britain set the record at 122.245 mph. last year in a Porsche 908. The twice-around-the-clock marathon begins at 3 p.m. today.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A frail little Formula Vee race car hurtled end over end four times in the midst of 32 other cars Friday, seriously injuring the driver, Robert Cunningham of Revere, Mass. Cunningham was taken to hospital, where it was reported he had a broken left ankle and bad two toes on his left foot. He also had multiple bruises and cuts on his face, arms and legs. Cunningham's car suddenly bucked up against the concrete retaining wall and went end over end, scraping the wall on one side and brushing other contestants.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Plans are under way to bring all 14 National Hockey League teams to Winnipeg this fall for an invitational tournament, Meinhart Steinkopf, chairman of the Manitoba Centennial Corp., made the announcement at a news conference Friday. He said he already has spoken to NHL president Clarence Campbell on the proposal and there is a "75 per cent chance the idea will come off." The idea is an attempt to lighten the blow suffered when the 1970 world hockey tournament originally scheduled for Montreal and Winnipeg, was called off. The tournament went to Stockholm when Canada withdrew over a dispute involving use of professionals.

Mike Draper's three goals Friday powered the first-place Orillia Terriers to a 5-3 Ontario Hockey Association Senior series win over Barrie Flyers. The Terriers recorded their 25th victory in 33 starts in front of 1,400 fans at Barrie. Galt Hornets, the defending national senior champions, remained nine points behind the Terriers in second place by defeating the A's in Woodstock 3-1. Al Osborn and Gary Milroy scored the other Orillia goals while Mike Dubec scored twice and Ray Cyr once for the Flyers, who share fourth place with Kingston Aces. The game was held up in the final two minutes when the spectators, many of them from Orillia, started fighting. At Woodstock, before a crowd of 600, the Hornets won on goals by Ron Smith, Vance Millar and Billy Hway. Bob Ruthig scored the only goal for the losers, who suffered their 29th defeat of the season.

Hockey Canada Launches Cross - country Teach - in TORONTO (CP) — A four-man mobile coaching clinic, including former National Hockey League player Billy Harris, will visit Thompson, Man., 34 miles north of Winnipeg, next week, Hockey Canada president Charles Hay announced Friday.

The visit to the northern Manitoba community is the first step of Hockey Canada's long-range program for improving Canadian hockey skills and coaching techniques.

The mobile clinic, under the direction of Toronto's A. J. (Buck) Houle, Hockey Canada general manager, will counsel 700 players on 40 Thompson hockey teams. The travelling group also includes national team assistant coach Gary Aldcorn and trainer Rick Noonan.

"We propose to assist promising boys who wish to go to trade schools, rather than to universities," Hay said. "If there is a promising hockey player who requires educational assistance, we hope to be able to give him all the help which he needs."

Gurowka Rink Favored

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto rink skipped by Joe Gurowka of Dixie and another from Kingston, skipped by Jake Edwards, are touted as the ones to beat in the Ontario curling championship which begins Wednesday at Oshawa.

Gurowka is making his seventh appearance in 10 years at the provincial final and Edwards will be playing in his sixth Ontario championship.

The winner of the 18-rink, double-elimination tournament, which winds up Saturday, Feb. 7, will represent southern Ontario in the Canadian championship at Winnipeg March 2-6.

A representative for Northern Ontario will be declared at a separate tournament.

We Came Back!

TORONTO (CP) —Davis Cup competition will return to Canada after a five-year absence, the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association announced Friday.

Bob Bedard, newly-elected vice-president and chairman of the Davis Cup selection committee for the CLTA, said that Canada has been accepted to play in the north section of the American zone of the Davis Cup tie. This puts Canada in with entries from the Commonwealth, the Caribbean, Mexico and New Zealand.

Bedard from Lennonville, Que., and a former Davis Cup player, said that the first round, and possibly the second, will be held in Canada at a site yet to be determined.

The draw will be made in New York Monday by Davis Cup officials.

If you're a groundhog, chances are you won't be reading this.

Other readers are asked to co-operate and remind their neighborhood groundhog that Monday is THEIR day.

As every schoolboy knows, Feb. 2 marks the annual battle from their burrows of groundhogs around the world, spanning of course, that all groundhogs abide by the Gregorian calendar.

Unless he happens to pop his wee noggin upward into both barrels of a 12-gauge, Mr. Groundhog's sole worry Monday is whether or not his shadow is showing.

If it is, tradition has it, the groundhog gets six more weeks of sleep and we get six more weeks of winter. That could account for the fact that weekend groundhog hunting is such a popular Canadian weekend pastime.

If the woodchuck weathermen does decide to hang around, he'll see a varied assortment of goings-on his human cousins have been cooking up all winter.

SHADY CHARACTER

Members of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police have made a light-hearted contribution towards all the current hoopla about new impaired driving legislation.

The Picton OPP's have formed a hockey team called the "Paint Zero-eights," referring to the new "high point" for imbibing motorists.

This coming Friday evening, Feb. 6, the Paint Zero-eights will tangle with opponents who promise to perform like impaired skaters — the CKWS No-stars.

The provincial bobbies aren't out to throw the book at anyone but to put $1,000 into the Prince Edward County Retarded Children's Society coffers.

Clowns and bands will accompany the hockey mayhem, which gets under way at Picton Arena 8.30 Friday evening.

Belleville Mo-Hawk's reel a week-and-a-half layoff is a somewhat unhealthier condition than was originally anticipated.

Still only four points out of third place with eight games remaining in their regular schedule, the local senators will be without the services of defence standout Lou Kaszuski, when they travel to Kingston Tuesday night.

It was thought that Kaszuski's hairline snake fracture would be healed sooner, but the costly injury was reported to have required a cast this week.

Wayne Brown is also a doubtful starter and his recent concussion may prompt "Weiner" to don a helmet for the first time in his hockey career.

Local fans may be interested to know the fate of two opposition players who played the villain in recent weeks here.

Own Sound defenceman Wes Rydall, who was given a match penalty for deliberately swatting Mo-Hawk Ray Johnston across the forehead with his stick last Friday, has been suspended for the remainder of the season by the OHA brass.

Only his helmet allowed Johnston to escape the incident with a three-stitch gash.

And Kingston forward Rod Graham is sitting out a six-game suspension for shielding linesman Ted Hurst in the Aces' last appearance here.

The Mo-Hawk Booster Club will be running a bus to Kingston Tuesday night, leaving the Memorial Arena at 6.30.

Next weekend, Belleville's first winter carnival is offering a real mixed bag of sporting attractions for the Quinte area public.

Thursday's opening Carnival Queen contest at Centennial Secondary School loosely fits into the sporting category, but from Friday through Saturday, organizers are catering to just about anybody's sport palate.

Canadian Breweries is sponsoring a barrel rolling contest at 8 p.m. Friday, following a torchlight parade. Some of the contestants, let alone the torches, should have quite an after that event.

A snowmobile safari to Oak Hills Ski Club is an alternative for those who prefer less strenuous recreation, while a 9 p.m. Oakville - Belleville senior hockey game at the Memorial Arena is a natural for the more sedentary spectators.

Entrants in Saturday afternoon's Plaza tug-of-war can get their energy from a pancake breakfast. Contestants in the day-long fish derby can cap off a day's angling square dancing on skates.

A day of snowmobiling, curling, skating, and sleigh-riding wind up at Zwick's Island Sunday evening with a bonfire.

Depending on Monday's long-range forecast, the bonfire may double as a groundhog fry.

Trenton Midgets Threaten To End Imperials' Season

TRENTON — Their Trenton counterparts last night threatened Belleville's midget and peewee all-stars with a shortened minor hockey season.

The Trenton midgets took advantage of shaky goaltending to paste Belleville's Blake Imperials 11-6 in the first game of their best-of-three first-round OMHA playoff series.

Meanwhile Trenton peewees won their playoff opener by whipping Maurice Rollins all-stars 5-2.

Trenton midgets pounced on Blake Kerr goalie Eldon Matthews for a soft goal after only 13 seconds of play to set the pattern for their rout.

The Imperials trailed by a respectable 4-2 margin after the opening 10 minutes, but six Trenton shots beat net replacement Roger Lamoure in the second period as the hosts took a 10-3 lead into the final frame.

Linesmates Steve Keech, John Greyvelle and Dave Mc-Innis had a field day, accounting for nine of Trenton's 11 goals. Keech had Greyvelle a hat trick, and McInnis a single.

Steve Barkwell and defenceman Ron Ferguson also scored for the winners.

Russ Harrington and Dave Smith each scored twice, and Brian Cousins and Rick Meagher once for the Imperials, who outscored Trenton 3-1 in the final period with Matthews back in goal.

The Imperials enjoyed manpower advantages much of the roughly-played contest, with Trenton drawing 21 of 32 penalties.

Second game in the best-of-three series will be played Thursday night at 8.30 in Belleville's Memorial Arena. A third and deciding game would be played in Belleville Sunday, Feb. 15.

No game report was submitted for the peewee playoff opener. It was rumored Rick Barbeau and Eric Powell scored Belleville's goals.

Novices Falter In Third

Lack of staying power cost Mulroney Smarts Novice B's 4 5-3 loss to Wellington Friday night.

Goals by Gary Frederick and Brice McKinney gave the Bellerville novices a 2-1 lead into the second period, but three third - period Wellington goals altered that state of affairs.

Terry Greer and Ron Miller scored tallies for the winners, with Ricky Fisher second-ing for the other Wellington goal.

China Feared in 10 Years

Nixon Asks Missile Expansion to Offset Nuclear Blackmail

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has decided to tell Congress for a major expansion of the U.S. missile defence system in part to "virtually infallible" protection against the possibility of attack—or nuclear blackmail—by China a decade from now.

Nixon's announcement at a news conference Friday night rekindled rumblings of discontent from congressional opponents of anti-ballistic missile and expressions of support from those who successfully defended the program in bitter debate last summer.

Nixon said the United States must take steps now to handle a situation that may confront it in a decade.

Ten years from now, the Communist Chinese, for example, among others, may have a significant nuclear capability, he said. If relations with mainland China are not improved, he said, "it will be very important for the United States to have some kind of defence so that nuclear blackmail could not be used against the United States" or U.S. allies in Asia.

The first phase and proposed second phase together would cost an estimated $6,000,000,000 over several years. While first phase ABMs are to protect retaliatory missile sites, the second phase would defend U.S. cities.

Responding to questions at his first news conference of the year, Nixon also:

—Issued a new warning to North Vietnam against attacks that would jeopardize U.S. forces in South Vietnam.

—Said he would decide within 30 days on the Israeli request for more U.S. arms strengthen its security against its Arab enemies.

—Refused to disclose details of U.S. involvement in Laos, which has been questioned in the Senate, but said its activities there are solely for the purpose of seeing that the Laotian government . . . is not overwhelmed by the North Vietnamese and other Communist forces.

—Reported the U.S. has made considerable progress in getting the Nigerian government to accept relief supplies for its warravaged former Biafran territory.

—Expressed confidence Judge G. Harrold Carswell "will be approved by the Senate overwhelmingly" for service on the Supreme Court.

—Declared his new $200,000,000,000 budget for the fiscal year 1971, which will go to Congress Monday, "will be a major blow in stopping the inflationary psychology" and the government will be able to control inflation without recession.

On the ABM issue, Nixon said Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird will make public the details of the program in about 30 days.

He described the proposed second-phase ABM program as an "area defence," meaning a system designed and located for the protection of cities.

He added it would be "virtually infallible against that kind of potential attack, and, therefore, gives the United States a credible foreign policy in the Pacific area which it otherwise would not have."

Senator J. W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and a leading foe of ABM, said he regretted the president's decision but expected Congress to approve it.

Senator John C. Stennis (Dem. Miss.), chairman of the armed services committee and an ABM supporter, said he also expects approval by Congress.

The first phase ABM system, known as Safeguard, calls for two sites in Montana and North Dakota to protect bases of the latter - continental Minuteman ballistic missiles. Cost of this phase had been estimated at $2,300,000,000.

Also, Nixon said his goal is still to get U.S. ground combat forces out of Vietnam by the end of this year, but he declined to speculate on whether the goal would be met.

Drug Hearing Briefs Deplore 'Moralizing'

HALIFAX (CP) — There is a need for "trust in communication," one journalist said here Friday, the second day of hearings of the LeDain inquiry into the non-medical use of drugs.

He was telling the five-member commission—a sixth member, Marie Bertrand, was delayed in Montreal—something they heard frequently during two days and one night of slightly when unscheduled speakers took the floor.

Virtually all prepared briefs and impromptu addresses deplored the lack of "adequate and correct information" concerning marijuana and other similar drugs.

During a filmed discussion, several youths who got a start on a drop-in centre to aid those with drug problems said they were concerned about "rubbitive" literature on drug use and its tendency towards "moralizing."

Most parents "blow the whole scene" if a son or daughter admits to being "stoned" with drugs, one youth said. "They become emotional to the point where they are turning a blind eye" to their children's feelings about marijuana and other drugs.

Stories about junior high school students using drugs "some even start as low as grade four or five" were related during the audio-visual presentation.

Most of the youthful speakers during the hearings called for legalization of marihuana, arguing that such a step would bring "pure drugs" into their possession and eliminate worry about the possibility of being sold bad drugs.

The inquiry was told that marijuana currently being sold on the streets contained impurities and, one youth said:

"You don't know what you're getting. If you don't get the high you're after, you'll go to acid. . . .

Briefs supporting legalization of marijuana were submitted by Dr. Saul Silverman, a political scientist with the University of Prince Edward Island, Dr. Mark Segal, a pharmacologist from Dalhousie University and R. K. Siegel, of the University's psychopharmacology laboratory.

Dr. Silverman's support was conditional on the provision that such a step "take place in stages over a defined period of time," and full legalization would not take place if there were "significant and substantiated findings of dangers" not currently substantiated.

Mr. Siegel told of his studies on the effects of marijuana and concluded that the "psychedelic experience can be healthy and human."

The Nova Scotia welfare department took the opposite view of most speakers, urging that there be no change in laws against marijuana at this time.

The argument for legalization was "completely absurd" with information now being "too contradictory and inadequate to justify significant change."

Protects Injured Master

A German Shepherd dog keeps Red Cross attendants and passerby away from his injured master (top) after the youngster, Javier Valdez, was involved in a traffic accident in Mexico City Thursday night. The dog then attempted to drag his master away (below). The dog kept spectators away from the boy for 45 minutes, until it was finally roped and taken to a kennel.

U.S. Economy Speed-up Expected by Mid-1970

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says the United States economy, throttled down by anti-inflation speed, should be ready to accelerate a bit my mid-1970.

Nixon Friday predicted relatively slow economic growth in the next few months—with a chance of a rise in unemployment.

But continuing his policy of firm restraints on the budget and the money supply "holds out the best hope of keeping that risk low."

Just before release of the economic report to Congress, Nixon told a White House news conference his new budget will be "a major blow in stopping the inflationary psychology."

"We are now in a position, a critical position, in which the decisions made in the next month or two will determine whether we win this battle," Nixon said.

His report said "a moderately quicker pace later in the year would be consistent with continued progress in reducing the rate of inflation."

Nixon said ái the news conference tight money could bring a recession kind: "I think the time is coming wher monetary policies can be relaxed."

In addition to the danger of substantial unemployment, Nixon said, other situations to be avoided are a resurgence of inflation and a money squeeze so tight that already-ailing housing industry might be paralysed.

A balanced budget, he said, is the key weapon against all these. His budget going to Congress Money will call for spending $200,771,000,000, allowing for a surplus of $1,331,000,000 in the fiscal year starting next July 1.

A $1,500,000,000 surplus has been projected for the current budget year ending June 3.

Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers in their detailed report to Congress on the economy backed the president's policies. The voluntary wage and price guidelines tried under previous administrations haven't worked in the U.S. or elsewhere, they contended.

Nixon gave top priority to maintenance of a sound dollar.

A continually expanding economy was next.

Nixon estimated that the kind of policies he advocates will permit a moderate 5.5-per-cent increase in the gross national product—the measure of goods and services produced—to a total of about $985,000,000,000.

Public Servants Seek to Break Down Apathy

TORONTO (CP) — The Public Service Alliance of Canada now plans to tackle the problem of "public apathy about the lot of public servants."

The phrase was used Friday in an interview by James Wylie, the alliance's national vice-president, as the second national convention of the alliance drew to a close. He suggested the organization will be working hard in coming months to win support from a variety of members of Parliament.

Alliance delegates spent most of the five-day convention in debate over constitutional amendments and had no time to discuss from the floor resolutions concerning collective bargaining and pensions.

The feeling, however, was that internal conflicts have been settled in favor of the present federal balance within the organization. The central executive now will concentrate on negotiating with the federal government for changes in the legislation under which the alliance functions as a bargaining agent.

Two new members were added to the executive in the voting which wound up the convention. Andrew Stewart, president of the agriculture component, and Rene Prud'homme, an official of the Montreal local of the Economic Security Employees' Association, were selected as third and fourth vice-presidents at annual salaries of $19,000.

Claude Edwards was re-elected as alliance president, opposed only by A. J. Stewart of the Supply and Services union.

William Doherty and Mr. Wylie were returned as first and second vice-presidents. Mr. Doherty needed two ballots to shake off the challenge of Kenneth Green, national secretary National Defence Employees.

Mr. Green, a leader of the opposition against a central union, dropped out of the competition for second vice-president and Mr. Wylie, former defence employees' leader, secured the post on the second ballot. The four vice-presidencies were contested by 14 candidates.

Elected as regional members of the national board of directors were Roy Firth of Gander, Nfld.; Denis Blanchet, Montreal; Pick Albertson, Kingston, Ont.; Clint Hornby, Gypsumville, Man. and William Gale of Vancouver.

Delegates also accepted a finance committee report which recommended, among other things, a 51-a-month dues increase to $2.50 and creation of a strike fund.

The fund, which will collect $664,500 in 1972, is seen as a step towards strengthening the executive in its dealings with the government. Mr. Edwards warned during the convention that strikes will be necessary if the government is unresponsive to requests that public service legislation be opened up to permit bargaining on a much wider range of issues.

Polar Bears Now On Hunting List

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Northwest Territories council Friday gave formal approval to a bill allowing the limited sport hunting of polar bear.

Although details have not been completed, the first hunts will be conducted this spring in the Resolute Bay and Sachs Harbor areas of the high Arctic. Yellowknife is 650 miles north of Edmonton.

Only Eskimos have been permitted to hunt polar bear but the legislation allows Eskimo hunters to sell their polar bear permits to sports hunters. A quota system, already in effect, will be retained.

The territorial government envisages Eskimo settlements establishing an outfitting system, by which they would charge sports hunters for accommodation, guiding and other services.

Duncan Pryde, the elected councillor who first introduced the polar bear hunting idea several years ago, has said an Eskimo hunter could make $1,800 hunt. During 1967-68, the average return to an Eskimo for one bear hide was $157.

The legislation gives the Eskimo hunter the choice of selling his permit to a sports hunter or retaining it and keeping the bear for his personal use.

Besides the Eskimo permit fee—yet to be determined—fare, accommodation and guiding, the non - Canadian hunter will have to pay a licence fee of $250.

Fee for Canadians not living in the territories will be $150 and $50 for a territorial resident.

The bill, given the assent of Territorial Commissioner Stuart Hodgson as he closed the 41st session of council, also extends buffalo hunting privileges to persons living outside the territories.

The government proposes that in the fall, Indian outfitters will conduct buffalo hunts near Fort Smith on the N.W.T.-Alberta border, about 175 miles south of Yellowknife.

Licence fees will be $150 for non-Canadians, $75 for residents of the provinces and the Yukon territory and $25 for a N.W.T. resident.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"But I thought stocks were always supposed to go UP!"

Canada Expects Mafia Influx

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada is "bracing for an influx of Mafia from the United States," Deputy Solicitor-General Ernest Cote said Friday.

Mr. Cote, here to address a meeting of the John Howard Society, said in an interview this is partly because the "U.S. government is cracking down on the beatherhood."

A new $40,000,000 computerized information centre in Ottawa will help police keep up with the excellent lines of communication maintained by the criminal element, he said.

Quebec Lottery Starts March 14

MONTREAL (CP)—The first draw in Quebec's new provincial lottery will be held March 14 with 160 prizes totalling $250,000, it was announced Friday.

Maurice Custeau, chairman of the three-man agency set up by the government to run the lottery, told a news conference Quebec hopes to make a profit of between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 from the scheme.

Grand prize will be $125,000 with second and third prizes of $50,000 and $25,000 respectively. There will also be two prizes of $5,000, five of $1,000, 50 of $500 and 100 of $10.

Tickets for the draw will cost $2 and may be obtained at Quebec banks and credit unions or by mailing coupons from newspapers, Mr. Custeau said.

Called Loto-Quebec, the lottery will take over the Montreal "voluntary tax" scheme which operated from April, 1968. The Montreal plan was ruled illegal by the Supreme Court of Canada late last year as the Quebec government prepared legislation for a provincially-run plan allowed by amendments to the Criminal Code.

Outstanding contributions to the Montreal plan will be included in the first draw of the new lottery unless contributors demand their money back, Mr. Custeau said.

Federal law prohibits advertisement of the plan outside Quebec, he added, "but if people outside Quebec send in their contributions we'll accept their money and they will be eligible to win."

The corporation also plans other schemes.

"We plan weekly draws an quarterly lotteries as well in the near future," Mr. Custeau said.

"The quarterly draw—"to give some competition to the Irish Hospitals Sweepstake which is netting millions of dollars annually, from the province"—will take place during important events such as Quebec winter carnival, Quebec Derby of the Lac St. Jean marathon swim, he said.

Asked whether winners will have their gains taxed, Mr. Custeau replied:

"The question has not been raised yet."

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best"
Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your ad with what you are offering for sale. Be sure to tell enough about it to offer. If you have an appointment to show the article, specify for sale, start your ad with "FOR SALE".

2—Be CLEAR. Modern compact homes beautifully and completely furnished. Almost new. Many extras. Attractive. Ideal for newlyweds.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader. Don't use "cute" words. Don't try to get "smart" and clever. Don't use abbreviations. If you use them, you may be misunderstood. Don't be afraid of using enough words. Don't hesitate then to have prospective buyers call.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTRACTION in any ad is the lowest price. Be honest in your statements. Don't misrepresent.

You can step your ad in the record all day long but it won't pay off for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position, and ask yourself what you would like to know about the article if you were going to buy it. Then put that information in your ad.

6—DON'T FORGET to tell the reader how to contact you. Be sure to include your telephone number. Check A to Z to see if you have left out anything important. Then call 962-9171 and ask for Classified. Ads Taken From Home

Police Would Still 'Keep An Eye' MP Says During Pardon Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Police detectives "keep an eye" on people with criminal records, the Commons was told Friday.

"History simply cannot be rewritten," Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) told the House during debate at a bill under which former convicts could obtain an official pardon.

"Newspapers still exist, memories still exist, and police forces still have memories. Detectives know who have records and keep an eye on them."

Knowledge of the criminal background of someone on parole is available to the RCMP in his community, said Mr. Howard.

"I know of two or three instances where individuals have in effect been hounded—not in the direct sense of being awakened every morning at 4 o'clock, but hounded because of being watched and questions being asked about them."

The bill under consideration aims at removing what Solicitor-General George McIlraith described as the "apparently unjustified consequences" of a criminal record for someone who has rehabilitated himself.

Under its provisions, the convicted person may apply for a pardon five years after completion of his sentence. The national parole board would study the request and make a recommendation for or against the pardon.

If a pardon should be granted, records of the criminal proceedings would be sealed and turned over to a central RCMP authority, to be opened again only in "certain limited conditions."

The grant of a pardon doesn't necessarily solve all the problems faced by an ex-convict, said Mr. McIlraith. But it represents the "closest approach" to such a solution.

Mr. Howard said that the bill, though generally acceptable, is "a piece-meal" approach. "If anything, it is a bit behind the public concerns in these matters.

"For some time now the ice has been broken in terms of greater industrial and social acceptance of persons who have been convicted of criminal offences."

Gordon Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka) criticized the bill for not requiring a change in the question, "Have you ever been convicted of a criminal offence," which appears on employment application forms and some other types of document.

Any such question should be made to carry at the end the qualifying words — — — for which a pardon was not granted," he suggested.

Mr. McIlraith said the question has been dropped by administrative action from some forms in the federal administration.

Mr. Aiken also said the bill should contain a clause amending the Juvenile Delinquents Act to make clear that all records of juvenile delinquents, after they have reached age 16, should be "expunged, sealed and not reopened."

The records in some juvenile courts are improperly made available to police, the Conservative member charged.

The debate on second reading of the bill will be resumed at a later date.

In other business Friday the House gave second reading to a bill to bring the Quarantine Act up to date—it hasn't had an overhaul since 1962—and a bill to amend the Canada Shipping Act.

Under the proposed amendment foreign ships would no longer be charged a standard tonnage fee for medical care of seamen who take sick in Canada. Most shipping lines now have medical insurance schemes.

"I wish you'd make me stay home every night like most other wives do."

"Tell me again how it's all over between you and Jack Davis."

Tax Talks

No Hard Bargains

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson will have a round-table discussion with provincial treasurers in Quebec Monday and Tuesday of current and prospective new taxes.

But officials here expect no hard bargains to be reached.

Mr. Benson and the 10 provincial ministers plan a series of conferences in future months to expand their annual meetings on the country's economic outlook.

The Quebec meeting happens to fall in the middle of the old city's winter carnival, but Mr. Benson himself has said the meeting will be no carnival.

Two main subjects are on the agenda for the closed sessions. They are the prospect for revenues and expenditures by all governments under the existing tax system, and the federal government's plan for sweeping and fundamental changes in the Income Tax Act.

The ministers last met here in December, when Ontario Treasurer Charles MacNaughton took broad exception to the proposals in Mr. Benson's white paper on tax changes, issued last Nov. 7.

Ottawa says the tax plan would produce about the same amount of federal revenues as now in its initial year, but by the fifth year of operation it would yield the government $630,000,000 more than the present tax system.

Mr. MacNaughton said Ontario's computers indicate the increase would be about $1,600,000,000 after the fifth year and that the rate at which federal revenues would grow as the country expands would be even faster than at present.

Mr. MacNaughton and other provincial ministers called for revision of some of the main features of the Benson tax plan —including the proposal to eliminate and tax capital gains in common stock holdings even if the profits are not taken by selling the stock.

A federal official said Friday the Ottawa delegation to the Quebec meeting will have some data and arguments to support its plan, but it isn't likely that any firm agreements will be reached to change Ottawa's proposals yet.

Mr. Benson has said repeatedly his tax plan is so far only a collection of proposals and the federal government is willing to listen to alternatives.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Normal Children Lose Aggression

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 18-month-old is a problem. On numerous occasions we have caught him biting other children. This causes altercations with our neighbors. Any suggestions? — Mrs. T.

dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 15 - month - old daughter can't play with other children. She is always hitting them. Is there any cure? — Mrs. T.

Comment: Chances are that your infants did their first practising in biting your own cheeks when they were around 3 years old. Perhaps teething was the original reason. Sometimes tiredness and short temper contributes to the urge.

As children grow older (between ages 1 and 2) they occasionally extend the sphere of this habit. They bite other kids in the neighborhood. Sometimes it is a friendly gesture; more often because they are unfriendly or angry.

Invariably, happy and outgoing children soon lose this form of aggression. So don't bite back "to teach them" they are being bad. That only compounds a passing problem.

However, if a 3-year-old, for example, keeps on biting other children for no apparent reason, then perhaps his own parents are being too bossy themselves. He takes it out on others. Perhaps he is also jealous and resentful.

As I said, don't bite back. Sometimes only a psychiatrist can tell whether its the child or the parent who is to blame.

For Mr. B.: I believe there is a growing place for the specialty known as "geriatrics" — for the care of the elderly. People are living longer because of the increase in life expectancy in infancy and childhood.

According to a recent estimate by the U. S. Administration on Aging, by the year 1990, one in every 10 Americans will be 65 or over. In 1900 there were only three million people over 65. By 1990 there will be 27 million Americans over 65.

In less than 25 years, geriatricians will have their hands full caring for those of advanced years. . . .

For Mrs. C.: There seems to be some evidence that intense use of the eyes in study may cause or increase nearsightedness. Not all doctors agree that excessive eye work has any bearing on myopia (nearsightedness).

Nevertheless, a recent study on 100 students in each of the seventh, eighth and ninth (by Dr. Edwin B. Dunphy, MD and associates) showed that those with normal vision frequently became myopic after years of continuous study. And those already myopic showed an increase in this vision deficiency.

It was also found that myopia is more common among graduate students than among unselected populations of young men. This seems to bear out the truth of the classic representation of the bright young man as the one who invariably wears glasses.

In a movie you rarely see the "student" without glasses.

For Mrs. Y.: Your baby has much company. According to a recent note in "Today's Health Magazine," babies often fall from cribs, beds or other furniture. And "often" means very frequently, according to Dr. Harvey Kravitz of Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago.

"In a study of 536 infants under 1-year-old, nearly 48 per cent of the babies had such falls." . . .

Bouncing Babies is sometimes an apt description.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 1

Your birthday today: A year opens of rather smooth, consistent progress. Your skill at negotiation is tested and improves with practice. People not included in your program pose a challenge, bring much to support your ventures once you meet their problems.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The pursuit of novelty, a fresh path in a strange place should appeal to you now. Put further any financial arrangements early in the day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let your partner do most of the deciding this Sunday. However, don't be shy about think where it leads before you plunge into local strife.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make sure you miss nothing of the news and details of your community's doing this Sunday, morning. If possible, outdoor activity is most preferable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sitting at home would be the least helpful thing to do today. Express faith in yourself and your future by active participation in the affairs of the community.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep your activities light and simple; concentrate mostly on social activities, entertainment. Keep the evening pleasant and serene. Reflect on your blessings and prophesy accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There ought to be several rainbow-colored reasons this Sunday, so make the rounds early.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ingenuity and liability are tested today. There is something to discover in places and relationships you have not given much attention lately. . .

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22): Changing situations tax your resources and patience as the day progresses. Take the time and trouble to clear up confusing details for others so they waste no time or effort.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This Sunday is apt to bring out the more extrovert qualities in you. Make the most of it: share your hobbies and favorite pastimes with others of like interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. - Jan. 19): Check to be sure your friends know what you are planning, then put new schemes into motion. Get an early start if you must make an unaccustomed journey. The action of the day continues well into the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Faraway places and people attract your attention and among them possibly some serious and very profitable business can begin. Close observation of other people brings much improvement in your own.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good news and invitations are likely to be available and help potential for future business. Ambitious projects come to your attention. Keep moving; you have a great deal of territory to cover this Sunday.

For February 2

Your birthday today: This year could require dramatic adjustments in your work and habits. You earn the chance to share with highly skilled or scholarly people, so that your own progress is profitably speeded up. Romantic interests are subject to vivid episodes of stress and unexpected reward.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): People returning from far places bring you something to become enlightened about. If you can get the day off from work, shared interests with artistic and cultural friends are extraordinarily worthwhile.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your confidence in your future is rewarded early. Friendships are strengthened, new ones formed. The afternoon is not for serious business — save yourself the chore of re-doing it all later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): People and their pets create awkward circumstances; keep a sense of humor. Your mate, best friends have strong ideas of what to do now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your patience in making indirect career maneuvers this morning pays off; then let matters settle. Cash is easier to raise now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fresh interests bring with them new people, some of future importance in your life. Check your public image, coiffure, clothing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Settle all important issues early. In the later hours take care not to revive plans as yet. Survey your home and its immediate surroundings. List features which you can change for the better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Ideas and schemes you dismissed as impractical or premature now have better possibilities — take another look. Friends and relatives of about your own age have cheerful news.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep the peace between yourself and co-workers. Decisions deferred overnight give fruitful action an extra chance to guide you to better results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Buying on credit is today's strongest temptation. Take your share of group activity. Press for career advancement in the morning, but focus on routine in the afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Your luck is not of the best today, so play it safe in all departments. Take a break in the afternoon — if you can't, then concentrate on details.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Set a higher value on your services. Add a self-improvement program for future progress. Pursue your studies vigorously after a lighter - than - usual evening meal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Younger people are more cooperative today than your own age group. This morning's beginnings bring their greatest results three months from now.

Light Trading During Week

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock-markets were lower for the second consecutive week, dropping sharply in light trading this week.

Markets have fallen in three of the last four weeks, the only advance being slight.

Losses occurred in all five sessions this week, the steepest coming Monday.

Plunging United States markets seemed to be the reason for the weakness in Canada.

Observers said American markets continued to show disappointment in President Nixon's State of the Union address last week which gave no indication when easing of the present tight money situation could be expected.

A relaxation on money conditions in the U.S. would lead to a similar move in Canada.

Tight money and high interest rates—the Canadian federal government's attempts at controlling inflation—have had a dulling effect on investment since last June when they began to take hold.

Observers also said many investors in Canada and the United States appear to be concerned with Nixon's budget and economic messages due Monday.

This week's sell-off may be a clue to what investors expect, said one observer.

"As long as the New York market keeps falling, all you can do is stand aside and watch," a Toronto broker said. "A lot of investors are just waiting."

In its quarterly publication, the Toronto Dominion Bank economic research department said it sees 1970 "a somewhat painful year for the Canadian economy."

The publication said it was unlikely that there will be an early relaxation of the "very restrictive" monetary policy in the United States at least until the middle of the year.

It said that "it is doubtful whether Canada can pursue—or wants to pursue—a substantially easier monetary policy than the United States."

Artist Can't See Own Exhibit

OTTAWA (CP) — "But I'm Jackson Beardy . . . I'm supposed to be here," the Manitoba Indian artist said over and over to the doorman at the National Arts Centre.

"I have an exhibition here," he insisted as he stood with his wife and eight-month-old daughter outside the centre, where some of his paintings were on display before a glittering crowd of diplomats, government representatives and prominent members of the social establishment.

But Jackson Beardy could not produce the required pass ticket and was refused entry to his own exhibition.

Mr. Beardy said he tried to talk the arts centre staff into paging some of the Manitoba representatives inside, to get someone who could vouch for his identity. He was unsuccessful.

After hearing of the Wednesday mishap, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier and Deputy Minister James Richardson made a special trip to the arts centre Thursday to welcome the Beardy family to Ottawa.

Acres Ltd. Acquires Traders Finance

TORONTO (CP) — Acres Ltd. of Toronto announced Friday that it has acquired control of Canadian General Securities Ltd., a holding company which controls Traders Group Ltd., a finance company with assets of more than $250,000,000.

Acres, an engineering and financial consulting firm, has assets of about $10,000,000, but in addition manages about $200,000,000 as agents for others.

Both companies are Canadian-owned.

Key to the takeover was agreement with D. W. Naylor, executive vice-president of Traders Group and president of Canadian General, and from the A. E. Naylor estate, for purchase of 138,529 of the Canadian General class B shares. This represents 46 per cent of outstanding shares.

This purchase was for $5,-600,000 cash, half payable now and the balance in a year.

Acres officials put a final price tag on the complete deal at about $46,000,000.

To carry out the deal, Acres will ask shareholders at the Feb. 17 general meeting to approve an increase in common shares to 2,500,000 from 1,-000,000 and the creation of a new class of preference shares.

Traders Group, in addition to its financial activities, operates a general insurance business; owns a steel fabricating company; has substantial interest in Cadillac Development Corp., a real estate company operating in the Toronto area; and is the second largest shareholder in Guaranty Trust Co. of Canada.
